his name. It was an exciting campaign. Party spirit was never more bitter. Two hundred and sixty electoral votes were cast. Andrew Jackson received ninety-nine; John Quincy Adams, eighty-four; William H. Crawford, forty-one; Henry Clay, thirty-seven. As there was no choice by the people, the question went to the house of representatives. Mr. Clay gave the vote of Kentucky to Mr. Adams, and he was elected.

Mr, Adams was, to a very remarkable degree, abstemious and temperate in his habits; always rising early, and taking much exercise. When at his home in Quiney, he has been known to walk, before breakfast, seven miles to Boston. In Washington, it was said that he was the first man up in the city, lighting his own fire and applying himself to work in his library often long before dawn.

On the 4th of March, 1829, Mr. Adams retired from the presidency, and was succeeded by Andrew Jackson. John C. Calhoun was elected vice president. The slavery question now began to assume portentous magnitude. Mr. Adams returned to Quincy, and to his studies, which he pursued with unabated zeal. But he was not long permitted to remain in retirement. In November, 1830, he was elected representative to congress. For seventeen years, until his death, he occupied the post as representative, ever ready to do brave battle for freedom, and winning the title of "the old man eloquent." Upon taking his seat in the house, he announced that he should hold lrimself bound to no party. He was usually the first in his place in the morning, and the last to leave his seat in the evening. Not a measure could be brought forward and escape his scrutiny. The battle which Mr. Adams fought almost singly, against the proslavery party in the government, was sublime in its moral daring and heroism. For persisting in presenting petitions for the abolition of slavery, he was threatened with i dictment by the grand jury, with expulsion from the house, and also with assassination, but no threats could intimidate him and his final triumph was complete.

On the 21st of February, 1848, he rose on the floor of congress, with a paper in his hand, to address the speaker. Suddenly he fell, again stricken by paralysis, and was eaught in the arms of those around him. For a time he was senseless, as he was conveyed to the sofa in the rotunda. With reviving consciousness, he opened his eyes, looked calmly around and said: "This is the end of earth;" then, after a moment's pause, he added, "I am content." These were the last words of the sixth president.

NDREW JACKSON, the seventh president of the United States, was born in Waxhaw settlement, N. C., March 15, 1767, a few days after his father's death. His parents were from Ireland, and took up their abode in Waxhaw settlement, where they lived in deepest poverty.

Andrew, or Andy, as he was universally called, grew up a very rough, rude, turbulent boy. His features were coarse, his form ungainly; and there was but very little in his character, made visible, which was attractive.

When only thirteen years old he joined the volunteers of Carolina against the British invasion. In 1781, he and his brother Robert were captured and imprisoned for a time at Camden. A British officer ordered him to brush his mud-spattered boots. "I am a prisoner of war, not your servant," was the reply of the dauntless boy. The brute drew his sword, and aimed a desperate blow at the head of the helpless young prisoner. Andrew raised his hand, and thus recived two fearful gashes—one on the haud and the other upon the head. The officer then turned to his brother Robert with the same demand. He also refused, and received a blow from the keen-edged saber, which quite disabled him, and which probably soon after caused his death. They suffered much other ill-treatment, and were finally stricken with the small-pox. Their mother was successful in obtaining their exchange, and took her sick boys home. After a long illness Andrew recovered, and the death of his mother soon left him entirely friendless.

Andrew supported himself in various ways, such as working at the saddler's trade, teaching school and clerking in a general store, until 1784, when he entered a law office at Salisbury, N. C. In 1788, he was appointed solicitor for the western district of North Carolina, of which Tennessee was then a part. This involved many long and tedious journeys amid dangers of every kind, but Andrew Jackson never knew fear.

In 1791, Jackson was married to a woman who supposed herself divorced from her former husband. Great was the surprise of both parties, two years later, to find that the conditions of the divorce had just been definitely settled by the first husband. The marriage ceremony was performed a second time, but the occurrence was often used by his enemies to bring Mr. Jackson into disfavor. During these years he worked hard at his profession, and frequently had one or more due on hand, one of which, when he killed Dickinson, was especially disgraceful.

In January, 1796, the territory of Tennessee then containing nearly 80,000 inhabitants, the people met in convention at Knoxville to frame a constitution. Five were sent from each of the eleven counties. Andrew Jackson was one of the delegates. The new state was entitled to but one member in the national house of representatives. Andrew Jackson was chosen that member. Mounting his horse he rode to Philadelphia, where congress then held its sessions—a distance of about 800 miles.

Jackson was an earnest advocate of the democratic party. Jefferson was his idol. He admired Bonaparte, loved France and hated England. As Jackson took his seat, Gen. Washington, whose second term of office was then expiring, delivered his last speech to congress. A committee drew up a complimentary address in reply. Andrew Jackson did not approve of the address, and was one of the twelve who voted against it. He was not willing to say that Gen. Washington's administration had been "wise, firm and patriotic."

Jackson was elected to the United States senate in 1797, but soon resigned. Soon after he was chosen judge of the supreme court of his state, which position he held for six years.

When the war of 1812 with Great Britain commenced, Madison occupied the presidential Aaron Burr sent word to the president that there was an unknown man in the west. Andrew Jackson, who would do credit to a commission if one were conferred upon him. Just at that time Gen. Jackson offered his services and those of 2,500 volunteers. offer was accepted, and the troops were assembled at Nashville. As the British were hourly expected to make an attack upon New Orleans, where Gen. Wilkinson was in command, he was ordered to descend the river with 1,500 troops to aid Wilkinson. The expedition reached Natchez, and after a delay of several weeks there, the men were ordered back to their homes. But the energy Gen. Jackson had displayed, and his entire devotion to the comfort of his soldiers, won him golden opinions; and he became the most popular man in the state. It was in this expedition that his toughness gave him the rickname of "Old Hickory."

MARTIN VAN BUREN.

Soon after this, while attempting to horsewhip Col. Thomas H. Benton, for a remark that gentleman made about his taking a part as second in a duel, in which a younger brother of Benton's was engaged, he received two severe pistol wounds. While he was lingering upon a bed of suffering news came that the Indians, who had combined under Tecumseh from Florida to the lakes, to exterminate the white settlers, were committing the most awful ravages. Decisive action became neces-Gen. Jackson, with his fractured bone just beginning to heal, his arm in a sling, and unable to mount his horse without assistance, gave his amazing energies to the raising of an army to rendevous at Fayettesville, Ala.

The Creek Indians had established a strong fort on one of the bends of the Tallapoosa river, near the center of Alabama, about fifty miles below Fort Strother. With an army of 2,000 men, Gen. Jackson traversed the pathless wilderness in a march of eleven days. He reached their fort, called Tohopeka or Horseshoe, on the 27th of March, 1814. of the river inclosed 100 acres of tangled forest and wild ravine. Across the narrow neck the Indians had constructed a formidable breastwork of logs and brush. Here 900 warriors, with an ample supply of arms, were assembled. The fort was stormed. The fight was utterly desperate. Not an Indian would accept of quarter. When bleeding and dying, they would fight those who endeavored to spare their lives. From ten in the morning until dark, the battle raged. The carnage was awful and revolting. Some threw themselves into the river; but the unerring bullet struck their heads as they swam. Nearly every one of the 900 warriors was killed. This closing of the Creek war enabled us to concentrate all our militia upon the British, who were the allies of the Indians. No man of less resolute will than Gen. Jackson could have conducted this Indian campaign to so successful an issue. Immediately he was appointed major-general.

Late in August, with an army of 2,000 men, on a rushing march, Gen. Jackson went to Mobile. A British fleet came from Pensacola, landed a force upon the beach, anchored near the little fort, and from both ship and shore commenced a furious assault. The battle was long and doubtful. At length one of the ships was blown up and the rest retired.

Garrisoning Mobile, Jackson moved his troops to New Orleans, and the battle of New Orleans, which soon ensued, was in reality a very ardnous campaign. Here his troops, which numbered about 4,000 men, won a signal victory over the British army of about 9,000. His loss was but thirteen, while the loss of the British was 2,600.

The name of Gen. Jackson soon began to be mentioned in connection with the presidency, but, in 1824, he was defeated by Mr. Adams. He was, however, successful in the election of 1828, and was re-elected for a second term in 1832. In 1829, he met with the most terrible affliction of his life in the death of his wife. At the expiration of his two terms of office he retired to the Hermitage, where he died June 8, 1845. The last years of Jackson's life were that of a devoted christian man.

ARTIN VAN BUREN, the eighth president of the United States, was born at Kinderhook, N. Y., December 5, 1782. He died at the same place, July 24, 1862, and his body rests in the cemetery at Kinderhook. Above it is a plain granite shaft fifteen feet high, bearing a simple inscription about half way up on the face. The lot is unfenced, unbordered or unbounded by shrub or flower. His ancestors, as his name indicates, were of Dutch origin, and were among the earliest emigrants from Holland to the banks of the Hudson. was a farmer, residing in the old town of Kinderhook. His mother, also of Dutch lineage, was a woman of superior intelligence and exemplary piety. At the age of fourteen, he had finished his academic studies in his native village, and commenced the study of law. As he had not a collegiate education seven years of study in a law office were required of him before he could be admitted to the bar. Inspired with a lofty ambition, and conscious of his powers, he pursued his studies with indefatigable industry, After spending six years in an office in his native village, he went to the city of New York, and prosecuted his studies for the seventh year.

In 1803, Van Buren, then twenty-one years of age, commenced the practice of law in his native village. The great conflict between the federal and republican parties was then at its height. Van Buren was in cordial sympathy with Jefferson, and earnestly and eloquently espoused the cause of state rights; though at that time the federal party held the supremacy both in his town and state. success and increasing reputation led him after six years of practice, to remove to Hudson. the county seat of his county. Here he spent seven years, constantly gaining strength by contending in the courts with some of the ablest men who have adorned the bar of his state.

Just before leaving Kinderhook for Hudson, Mr. Van Buren married a lady alike distinguished for beauty and accomplishments. After twelve short years she sank into the grave, the victim of consumption, leaving her husband and four sons to weep over her loss. In 1812, when thirty years of age, he was chosen to the state senate, and gave his strenuous support to Mr. Madison's administration. In 1815, he was appointed attorney general, and the next year moved to Albany, the capital of the state.

While he was acknowledged as one of the most prominent leaders of the democratic party, he had the moral courage to avow that true democracy did not require that "universal suffrage" which admits the vile, the degraded, the ignorant, to the right of governing the state. In true consistency with his democratic principles, he contended that, while the path leading to the privilege of voting should be open to every man without distinction, no one should be invested with that sacred prerogative, unless he were in some degree qualified for it by intelligence, virtue and some property interests in the welfare of the state.

In 1821 he was elected a member of the United States senate, and in the same year he took a seat in the convention to revise the constitution of his native state. His course in this convention secured the approval of men of all parties. In the senate of the United States, he rose at once to a conspicuous position as an active and useful legislator. 1827, John Quincy Adams being then in the presidential chair, Mr. Van Buren was reelected to the senate. He had been, from the beginning, a determined opposer to the administration, adopting the state rights view in opposition to what was deemed the federal proclivities of Mr. Adams.

Soon after this, in 1828, he was chosen governor of the state of New York, and accordingly resigned his seat in the senate. Probably no one in the United States contributed so much towards ejecting John Q. Adams from the presidential chair, and placing in it Andrew Jackson, as did Martin Van Buren. Whether entitled to the reputation or not, he certainly was regarded throughout the United States as one of the most skillful, sagacious and cunning politicians. It was supposed that no one knew so well as he how to touch the secret springs of action; how to pull all the wires to put his machinery in motion; and how to organize a political army which would, secretly and stealthily, accomplish the most gigantic results. By these powers it is said that he outwitted Mr. Adams, Mr. Clay, Mr. Webster, and secured results which few thought then could be accomplished.

When Andrew Jackson was elected president, he appointed Mr. Van Buren secretary of state. This position he resigned in 1831, and was immediately appointed minister to England, where he went the same autumn. The senate, however, when it met, refused to ratify the nomination, and he returned home, apparently untroubled; was nominated vice president in the place of Calhoun, at the reelection of President Jackson; and with smiles for all and frowns for none, he took his place at the head of that senate which had refused to confirm his nomination as ambassador. His rejection by the senate aroused all the zeal of President Jackson in behalf of his repudiated favorite; and this, probably more than any other cause, secured his elevation to the chair of the chief executive. On the 20th of May, 1836. Van Buren received the democratic nomination to succeed Gen. Jackson as president of the United States. He was elected by a handsome majority, to the delight of the retiring president.

His administration was filled with exciting events. The insurrection in Canada, which threatened to involve this country in war with England, the agitation of the slavery question, and finally the great commercial panic which spread over the country, all were trials to his wisdom. The financial distress was attributed to the management of the democratic party, and brought the president into such disfavor that he failed of re-election. With the exception of being nominated for the presidency by the free soil democrats, in 1848, Mr. Van Buren lived quietly upon his estate until his death.

He had ever been a prudent man, of frugal habits, and, living within his income, had now fortunately a competency for his declining years. It was on the 4th of March, 1841, that Mr. Van Buren retired from the presidency. From his fine estate at Lindenwald, he still exerted a powerful influence upon the politics of the country. From this time until his death, on the 24th of July, 1862, at the age of eighty years, he resided at Lindenwald, a gentleman of leisure, of culture and of wealth; enjoying in a healthy old age, probably far more happiness than he had before experienced amid the stormy scenes of his active life.

ALLIAM HENRY HARRISON, the ninth president of the United States; was born at Berkeley, Va., Feb. 9, 1773. His father, Benjamin Harrison, was in comparatively opulent circumstances, and was one of the most distinguished men of his day. He was an intimate friend of George Washington, was early elected a member of the continental congress, and was conspicuous among the patriots of Virginia in resisting the encroachments of the British crown. In the celebrated congress of 1775, Benjamin Harrison and John Hancock were both candidates for the office of speaker.

Mr. Harrison was subsequently chosen governor of Virginia, and was twice re-elected.

Having received a thorough commonschool education, William Henry Harrison entered Hampden Sidney college, where he graduated with honor soon after the death of his father. He then repaired to Philadelphia to study medicine under the instructions of Dr. Rush and the guardianship of Robert Morris, both of whom were, with his father, signers of the Declaration of Independence.

Upon the outbreak of the Indian troubles, and notwithstanding the remonstrances of his friends, he abandoned his medical studies and entered the army, having obtained a commission of ensign from President Washington. He was then but nineteen years old. From that time he passed gradually upward in rank until he became aid to Gen. Wayne, after whose death he resigned his commission. He was then appointed secretary of the Northwestern territory. This territory was then entitled to but one member in congress, and Capt. Harrison was chosen to fill that position.

In the spring of 1800 the Northwestern territory was divided by congress into two portions. The eastern portion, comprising the region now embraced in the state of Ohio, was called "The Territory northwest of the Ohio." The western portion, which included what is now called Indiana, Illinois, and Wisconsin, was called the "Indiana territory." William Henry Harrison, then twenty-seven years of age, was appointed, by John Adams, governor of the Indiana territory, and immediately after, also governor of upper Louisi-He was thus ruler over almost as extensive a realm as any sovereign upon the globe. He was superintendent of Indian affairs, and was invested with powers nearly dictatorial over the now rapidly increasing white population. The ability and fidelity with which he discharged these responsible duties may be inferred from the fact that he was four times appointed to this office-first by John Adams, twice by Thomas Jefferson and afterward by President Madison.

When he began his administration there were but three white settlements in that almost boundless region, now crowded with cities and resounding with all the tumult of wealth and traffic. One of these settlements was on the Ohio, nearly opposite Louisville; one at Vincennes, on the Wabash, and the third a French settlement.

The vast wilderness over which Gov. Harrison reigned was filled with many tribes of About the year 1806, two extraordinary men, twin brothers, of the Shawnee tribe, rose among them. One of these was called Tecumseh, or "The Crouching Panther;" the other, Olliwacheca, or "The Prophet." Tecumseh was not only an Indian warrior, but a man of great sagacity, farreaching foresight and indomitable perseverance in any enterprise in which he might engage. He was inspired with the highest enthusiasm, and had long regarded with dread and with hatred the encroachments of the whites upon the hunting grounds of his fathers. His brother, the Prophet, was an orator, who could sway the feelings of the untutored Indian as the gale tossed the tree-tops beneath which they dwelt.

Gov. Harrison made many attempts to conciliate the Indians, but at last the war came, and at Tippecanoe the Indians were routed with great slaughter. October 28, 1812, his army began its march. When near the Prophet's town three Indians of rank made their appearance and inquired why Gov. Harrison was approaching them in so hostile an attitude. After a short conference, arrangements were made for a meeting the next day, to agree upon terms of peace. But Gov. Harrison was too well acquainted with the Indian character to be deceived by such protestations. Selecting a favorable spot for his night's encampment, he took every precaution against surprise. His troops were posted in a hollow square, and slept upon their arms. troops threw themselves upon the ground for rest; but every man had his accoutrements on, his loaded musket by his side, and his bayonet fixed. The wakeful governor, between

In the darkness, the Indians had crept as near as possible, and just then, with a savage yell, rushed with all the desperation which superstition and passion most highly inflamed could give, upon the left flank of the little army. The savages had been amply provided with guns and ammunition by the English. war-whoop was accompanied by a shower of The camp-fires were instantly extinguished, as the light aided the Indians in their With hideous yells, the Indian bands rushed on, not doubting a speedy and entire victory. But Gen. Harrison's troops stood as immovable as the rocks around them until day dawned; they then made a simultaneous charge with the bayonet, and swept everything before them, and completely routed the foe. Gov. Harrison now had all his energies tasked to the utmost. The Pritish, descending from the Canadas, were of themselves a very formidable force; but with their savage allies, rushing like wolves from the forest, searching out every remote farm house, burning, plundering, scalping, torturing, the wide frontier was plunged into a state of consternation which even the most vivid imagination can but faintly conceive. Gen. Hull had made the ignominious surrender of his forces at Detroit. Under these despairing circumstances, Gov. Harrison was appointed by President Madison commander-in-chief of the Northwestern army, with orders to retake Detroit, and to protect the frontiers.

Harrison won the love of his soldiers by always sharing with them their fatigue. His whole baggage, while pursuing the foe up the Thames, was carried in a valise; and his bedding consisted of a single blanket lashed over his saddle. Thirty-five British officers, his prisoners of war, supped with him after the battle. The only fare he could give them was beef roasted before the fire, without bread or salt.

In 1816, Gen. Harrison was chosen a member of the national house of representatives to represent the district of Ohio. In congress he proved an active member, and, whenever he spoke, it was with force of reason and power of eloquence, which arrested the attention of all the members.

In 1819, Harrison was elected to the senate of Ohio; and in 1824, as one of the presidential electors of that state, he gave his vote for Henry Clay. The same year he was chosen to the United States senate.

In 1836, the friends of Gen. Harrison brought him forward as a candidate for the presidency against Van Buren, but he was defeated. At the close of Mr. Van Buren's term, he was re-nominated by his party, and Harrison was unanimously nominated by the whigs, with John Tyler for the vice presidency. The contest was very animated. Gen. Jackson gave all his influence to prevent Harrison's election; but his triumph was signal.

The cabinet which he formed, with Daniel Webster at its head as secretary of state, was one of the most brilliant with which any president had ever been surrounded. In the midst of these bright and joyous prospects, Gen. Harrison was seized by a pleurisy-fever, and, after a few days of violent sickness, died on the 4th of April; just one month after his inauguration as president of the United States.

With the exception, perhaps, of the death of George Washington, the demise of no president of the United States, down to this time, had created a deeper thrill of sympathy throughout the country than that of President Harrison. North and south, his obsequies were observed with unaffected sorrow, and men of all parties seemed to forget differences of opinion in doing honor to the memory of the dead.

OHN TYLER, the tenth president of the United States, was born in Charles City county, Va., March 29, 1790. At the early age of twelve, John entered William and Mary college and graduated with much honor when but seventeen years old. He devoted himself with great assiduity to the study of law, partly with his father and partly with Edmund Randolph, one of the most distinguished lawyers of Virginia.

At nineteen years of age, he commenced the practice of law. His success was rapid and astonishing. It is said that three months had not elapsed ere there was scarcely a case on the docket of the court in which he was not retained. When but twenty-one years of age, he was almost unanimously elected to a seat in the state legislature. He connected himself with the democratic party, and warmly advocated the measures of Jefferson and Madison. For five successive years he was elected to the legislature, receiving nearly the unanimous vote of his county.

When but twenty-six years of age, he was elected a member of congress. Here he acted earnestly and ably with the democratic party, opposing a national bank, internal improvements by the general government, a protective tariff, and advocating a strict construction of the constitution, and the most careful vigilance over state rights. His labors in congress were so arduous that before the close of his second term he found it necessary to resign and retire to his estate in Charles City county, to recruit his health. He, however, soon after consented to take his seat in the state legislature, where his influence was powerful in promoting public works of great utility. He was then chosen by a very large majority of votes, governor of his native state. His administration was signally a successful one, and his popularity secured his re-election.

crazed man, then represented Virginia in the senate of the United States. A portion of the democratic party was displeased with Mr. Randolph's wayward course, and brought forward John Tyler as his opponent, and Tyler was the victor. In accordance with his professions, upon taking his seat in the senate, he joined the ranks of the opposition. opposed the tariff; he spoke against and voted against the bank as unconstitutional; he strenuously opposed all restrictions upon slavery, resisting all projects of internal improvements by the general government, and avowed his sympathy with Mr. Calhoun's view of nullification; he declared that Gen. Jackson, by his opposition to the nullifiers, had abandoned the principles of the democratic party. Such was Mr. Tyler's record in congress - a record in perfect accordance with the principles which he had always avowed.

Returning to Virginia, he resumed the practice of his profession. There was a split in the democratic party. His friends still regarded him as a true Jeffersonian, gave him a dinner, and showered compliments upon him. He had now attained the age of forty-six. Soon after this he removed to Williamsburg, for the better education of his children; and he again took his seat in the legislature of Virginia.

By the southern whigs, he was sent to the national convention at Harrisburg to nominate a president in 1839. The majority of votes were given to Gen. Harrison, a genuine whig, much to the disappointment of the south, who wished for Henry Clay. To conciliate the southern whigs and to secure their vote, the convention then nominated John Tyler for vice president. Thus it happened that a whig president and, in reality, a democratic vice president were chosen.

In 1841, Mr. Tyler was inaugurated vice John Randolph, a brilliant, erratic, half- president of the United States. In one short month from that time Pres. Harrison died, and Mr. Tyler thus found himself, to his own surprise and that of the whole nation, an occupant of the presidential chair. This was a new test of the stability of our institutions, as it was the first time in the history of our country that such an event had occurred. Mr. Tyler was at home in Williamsburg when he received the unexpected tidings of the death of Pres. Harrison. He hastened to Washington, and on the 6th of April was inaugurated to the high and responsible office. Gen. Harrison had selected a whig cabinet. Should he retain them, and thus surround himself with counselors whose views were antagonistic to his own? or, on the other hand, should be turn against the party which had elected him and select a cabinet in harmony with himself, and which would oppose all those views which the whigs deemed essential to the public welfare? This was his fearful dilemma, and so he invited the cabinet which Pres. Harrison had selected to retain their seats.

The whigs carried through congress a bill for the incorporation of a fiscal bank of the United States. The president, after ten days' delay, returned it with his veto. He suggested, however, that he would approve of a bill drawn up upon such a plan as lie proposed Such a bill was accordingly prepared, and privately submitted to him. He gave it his approval. It was passed without alteration, and he sent it back with his veto. Here commenced the open rupture. It is said that Mr. Tyler was provoked to this measure by a published letter from the Hon. John M. Botts, a distinguished Virginia whig, who severely touched the pride of the president.

The opposition now exultingly received the president into their arms. The party which elected him denounced him bitterly. All the members of his cabinet, excepting Mr. Webster, resigned. The whigs of congress, both the senate and the house, held a meeting and issued an address to the people of the United States, proclaiming that all political alliances between the whigs and Pres. Tyler were at an end.

Still the president attempted to conciliate. He appointed a new cabinet of distinguished whigs and conservatives, carefully leaving out all strong party men. Mr. Webster soon found it necessary to resign, forced out by the pressure of his whig friends. Thus the four years of Mr. Tylor's unfortunate administration passed sadly away. More and more, however, he brought himself into sympathy with his old friends, the democrats, until, at the close of his term, he gave his whole influence to the support of Mr. Polk, the democratic candidate for his successor.

On the 4th of March, 1845, he retired from office, to the regret of neither party, and probably to his own unspeakable relief. His first wife, Miss Letitia Christian, died in Washington, in 1842; and in June, 1844, Pres. Tyler was again married, at New York, to Miss Julia Gardiner, a young lady of many personal and intellectual accomplishments.

The remainder of his days Mr. Tyler passed mainly in retirement at his beautiful home—Sherwood Forest, Charles City county, Va. A polished gentleman in his manners, richly furnished with information from books and experience in the world, and possessing brilliant powers of conversation, his family circle was the scene of unusual attractions. With sufficient means for the exercise of a generous hospitality, he might have enjoyed a screne old age with the few friends who gathered around him, were it not for the storms of civil war which his own principles and policy had helped to introduce.

When the great rebellion rose, which the state rights and nullifying doctrines of John C. Calhoun had inaugurated, Pres. Tyler renounced his allegiance to the United States, and joined the confederates. He was chosen a member of their congress; and while engaged in active measures to destroy, by force of arms, the government over which he had once presided, he was taken sick and soon died.

AMES KNOX POLK, the eleventh president of the United States, was born in Mecklenburg county, N. C., November 2, 1795. His parents were Samuel and Jane (Knex) Polk, the former a son of Col. Thomas Polk, who located at the above place, as one of the first pioneers, in 1735.

In the year 1806, with his wife and children, and soon after followed by most of the members of the Polk family, Samuel Polk emigrated some two or three hundred miles further west, to the rich valley of the Duck river, Tenn. Here, in the midst of the wilderness, in a region which was subsequently called Maury county, they reared their log huts, and established their homes. In the hard toil of a new farm in the wilderness, James K. Polk spent the early years of his childhood and youth. His father, adding the pursuit of a surveyor to that of a farmer, gradually increased in wealth until he became one of the leading men of the region.

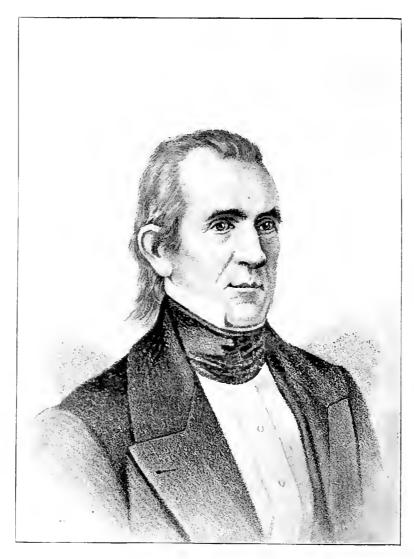

Very early in life, James developed a taste for reading and expressed the strongest desire to obtain a liberal education. His mother's training had made him methodical in his habits, had taught him punctuality and industry, and had inspired him with lofty principles of morality. His health was frail; and his father, fearing that he might not be able to endure a sedentary life, got a situation for him behind the counter, hoping to fit him for commercial pursuits. He remained in this uncongenial occupation but a few weeks, when at his earnest solicitation his father removed him, and made arrangements for him to prosecute his studies. Soon after he sent him to Murfreesboro academy. In the autumn of 1815 he entered the sophomore class in the university of North Carolina, at Chapel Hill. He graduated in 1818, with the highest honors, being deemed the best scholar of his class, both in mathematics and classics. He was then twenty-three years of age. Mr. Polk's health was at this time much impaired by the assiduity with which he had prosecuted his studies. After a short season of relaxation he went to Nashville, Tenn., and entered the office of Felix Grundy, to study law. Here Mr. Polk renewed his acquaintance with Andrew Jackson, who resided on his plantation, the Hermitage, but a few miles from Nashville.

James K. Polk was a popular public speaker, and was constantly called upon to address the meetings of his party friends. His skill as a speaker was such that he was popularly called the Napoleon of the stump. He was a man of unblemished morals, genial and courteous in his bearing, and with that sympathetic nature in the joys and griefs of others which ever gave him troops of friends. In 1823, Mr. Polk was elected to the legislature of Tennessee. Here he gave his strong influence toward the election of his friend, Mr. Jackson, to the presidency of the United States.

In January, 1824, Mr. Polk married Miss Sarah Childress, of Rutherford county, Tenn. His bride was altogether worthy of him —a lady of beauty and culture. In the fall of 1825, Mr. Polk was chosen a member of congress. The satisfaction which he gave to his constituents may be inferred from the fact, that for fourteen successive years, until 1839, he was continued in that office. He then voluntarily withdrew, only that he might accept the gubernatorial chair of Tennessee. In congress he was a laborious member, a frequent and popular speaker. He was always in his seat, always courteous; and whenever he spoke it was always to the point, and without any ambitious rhetorical display.

During five sessions of congress, Mr. Polk was speaker of the house. Strong passions were aroused, and stormy scenes were witnessed; but Mr. Polk performed his arduous duties to a very general satisfaction, and a unanimous vote of thanks to him was passed by the house as he withdrew on the 4th of March, 1839.

On the 14th of October, 1839, he took the oath of office as governor of Tennessee at In 1841, his term of office ex-Nashville. pired, and he was again the candidate of the democratic party, but was defeated. On the 4th of March, 1845, Mr. Polk was inaugurated president of the United States. The verdict of the country in favor of the annexation of Texas exerted its influence upon congress; and the last act of the administration of President Tyler was to affix his signature to a joint resolution of congress, passed on the 3d of March, approving of the annexation of Texas to the American Union. As Mexico still claimed Texas as one of her provinces, the Mexican minister, Almonte, immediately demanded his passports and left the country, declaring the act of annexation to be an act hostile to Mexico.

In his message, President Polk urged that Texas should immediately, by act of congress, be received into the Union on the same footing with the other states. In the meantime, Gen. Taylor was sent with an army into Texas to hold the country. He was sent first to Nueces, which the Mexicans said was the western boundary of Texas. Then he was sent nearly two hundred miles further west, to the Rio Grande, where he erected batteries which commanded the Mexican city of Matamoras, which was situated on the western banks.

The anticipated collision soon took place, and war was declared against Mexico by President Polk. The war was pushed forward by Mr. Polk's administration with great vigor. Gen. Taylor, whose army was first called one of "observation," then of "occupation," then of "invasion," was sent forward to Monterey. The feeble Mexicans, in every encounter, were hopelessly and awfully slaughtered. It was by the ingenuity of Mr. Polk's administration that the war was brought on.

"To the victors belong the spoils." Mexico was prostrate before us. Her capital was in our hands. We now consented to peace upon the condition that Mexico should surrender to us, in addition to Texas, all of New Mexico, and all of Upper and Lower California. This new demand embraced, exclusive of Texas, 800,000 square miles. This was an extent of territory equal to nine states of the size of New York. Thus slavery was securing eighteen majestic states to be added to the Union. In the prosecution of this war we expended 20,000 lives and more than $100,000,000.

On the 3d of March, 1849, Mr. Polk retired from office, having served one term. The next day was Sunday. On the 5th, Gen. Taylor was inaugurated as his successor. Polk rode to the capitol in the same carrriage with Gen. Taylor; and the same evening, with Mrs. Polk, he commenced his return to Tennessee. He was then but fifty-four years of age. He had ever been strictly temperate in all his habits and his health was good. an ample fortune, a choice library, a cultivated mind, and domestic ties of the dearest nature, it seemed as though long years of tranquility and happiness were before him. But the cholera -the awful scourge-was then sweeping up the valley of the Mississippi. This he contracted, and died on the 15th of June, 1849. in the fifty-fourth year of his age.

ACHARY TAYLOR, twelfth president of the United States, was born on the 24th of November, 1784, in Orange county, Va. His father, Colonel Taylor, was a Virginian of note, and a distinguished patriot and soldier of the Revolution. When Zachary was an infant, his father, with his wife and two children, emigrated to Kentucky, where he settled, a few miles from Louisville. In this frontier home young Zachary could enjoy but few social and educational advantages. When six years of age he attended a common school, and was then regarded as à bright, active boy, rather remarkable for bluntness and decision of character. He was strong, fearless and self-reliant, and manifested a strong desire to enter the army to fight the Indians who were ravaging the frontiers.

In 1808, his father succeeded in obtaining for him the commission of lietenant in the United States army; and he joined the troops which were stationed at New Orleans under Gen. Wilkinson. Soon after this he married Miss Margaret Smith, a young lady from one of the first families of Maryland.

Immediately after the declaration of war with England, in 1812, Capt. Taylor (for he had then been promoted to that rank) was put in command of Fort Harrison, on the Wabash, about fifty miles above Vincennes. This fort had been built in the wilderness by Gen. Harrison, on his march to Tippecanoe. It was one of the first points of attack by the Indians, led by Tecumseh. Its garrison consisted of a broken company of infantry numbering fifty men, many of whom were sick. Early in the autumn of 1812, the Indians, stealthily, and in large numbers, moved upon the fort. Their approach was first indicated by the murder of two soldiers just outside of the stockade. Capt. Taylor made every possible preparation to meet the anticipated as-

On the 4th of September, a band of forty painted and plumed savages came to the fort, waving a white flag, and informed Capt. Taylor that in the morning their chief would come to have a talk with him. It was evident that their object was merely to ascertain the state of things at the fort, and Capt. Taylor, well versed in the wiles of the savages, kept them at a distance. The sun went down: the savages disappeared, the garrison slept upon their arms. One hour before midnight the war-whoop burst from a thousand lips in the forest around, followed by the discharge of musketry, and the rush of the foe. Every man, sick and well, sprang to his post. Every man knew that defeat was not merely death, but in case of capture, death by the most agonizing and prolonged torture. The savages succeeded in setting fire to one of the block-Until six o'clock in the morning, this awful conflict continued. The savages then, baffled at every point, and gnashing their teeth with rage, retired. Capt. Taylor, for this gallant defense, was promoted to the rank of major by brevet.

Until the close of the war, Major Taylor was placed in such situations that he saw but little more of active service. He was sent far away into the depths of the wilderness, to Fort Crawford, on Fox river, which empties into Green bay. Gradually he rose to the rank of colonel. In the Black Hawk war, which resulted in the capture of that renowned chieftain, Col. Taylor took a subordinate but a brave and efficient part. For twenty-four years Col. Taylor was engaged in the defense of the frontiers, in scenes so remote, and in employments so obscure, that his name was unknown beyond the limits of his own immediate acquaintance. In the year 1836, he was sent to Florida to compel the Seminole Indians to vacate that region and retire beyond the Mississippi, as their chiefs, by treaty, had promised they should do. The services rendered here secured Col. Taylor the high appreciation of the government; and as a reward. he was elevated to the rank of brigadier-general by brevet; and soon after, in May, 1838, was appointed to the chief command of the United States troops in Florida. After two years of such wearisome employment, Gen. Taylor obtained, at his own request, a change of command, and was stationed over the department of the southwest. This field embraced Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama and Establishing his headquarters at Georgia. Fort Jesup, in Louisiana, he removed his family to a plantation which he purchased near Baton Rouge. Here he remained for five years, buried, as it were, from the world, but faithfully discharging every duty imposed upon him.

In 1846 Gen. Taylor was sent to guard the land between the Nueces and Rio Grande, the latter river being the boundary of Texas, which was then claimed by the United States. Soon the war with Mexico was brought on, and at Palo Alto and Resaca de la Palma, Gen. Taylor won brilliant victories over the Mex-The rank of major-general by brevet was then conferred upon Gen. Taylor among his troops the sobriquet of "Old Rough and Ready."

The tidings of the brilliant victory of Buena Vista spread the wildest enthusiasm over the country. The whig party decided to take advantage of this wonderful popularity in bringing forward the unpolished, uncultured, honest soldier as their candidate for the presidency. Gen. Taylor was astonished at the announcement, and for a time would not listen to it; declaring that he was not at all qualified for such an office. So little interest had he taken in politics that, for forty years, he had not cast a vote.

Gen. Taylor was not an eloquent speaker nor a fine writer. His friends took possession of him, and prepared such few communications as it was needful should be presented to the public. The popularity of the successful warrior swept the land. He was triumphantly elected over two opposing candidates-Gen. Cass and ex-Pres. Martin Van Buren. Though he selected an excellent cabinet, the good old man found himself in a very uncongenial position, and was, at times, sorely perplexed and harassed. His mental sufferings were very severe, and probably tended to has-The proslavery party was ten his death. pushing its claims with tireless energy; expeditions were fitting out to capture Cuba; California was pleading for admission to the Union, while slavery stood at the door to bar her out. Gen. Taylor found the political conflicts in Washington to be far more trying to the nerves than battles with Mexicans or Indians.

In the midst of all these troubles, Gen. Taylor, after he had occupied the presidential chair but little over a year, took cold, and after a brief sickness, of but little over five days, died on the 9th of July, 1850. His last words were; "I am not afraid to die. I am ready. I have endeavored to do my duty." He died universally respected and beloved.

Gen. Scott, who was thoroughly acquainted with Gen. Taylor, gave the following graphic and truthful description of his character: "With a good store of common sense, Gen. Taylor's mind had not been enlarged and refreshed by reading, or much converse with the world. Rigidity of ideas was the consequence. The frontiers and small military posts had been his home. Hence he was quite ignorant for his rank, and quite bigoted in his ignorance. His simplicity was child-like and with innumerable prejudices, amusing and incorrigible, well suited to the tender age. Thus, if a man, however, respectable, chanced to wear a coat of an unusual color, or his hat a little on one side of his head; or an officer to leave a corner of his handkerchief dangling from an outside pocket—in any such case, this critic held the offender to be a coxcomb (perhaps something worse), whom he would not, to use his oft repeated phase, "touch with a pair of tongs."

ILLARD FILLMORE, thirteenth president of the United States, was born at Summer Hill, Cayuga county, N. Y., on the 7th of Janu-His father was a farmer, and, ary, 1800. owing to misfortune, in humble circumstances. Of his mother, the daughter of Dr. Abiathar Millard, of Pittsfield, Mass., it has been said that she possessed an intellect of very high order, united with much personal loveliness, sweetness of disposition, graceful manners and exquisite sensibilities. She died in 1831; having lived to see her son a young man of distinguished promise, though she was not permitted to witness the high dignity which he finally attained.

In consequence of the secluded home and limited means of his father, Millard enjoyed but slender advantages for education in his early years. The sacred influences of home had taught him to revere the Bible, and had laid the foundations of an upright character. When fourteen years of age his father sent him some hundred miles from home, to the then wilds of Livingston county, to learn the trade of a clothier. Near the mill there was a small village, where some enterprising man had commenced the collection of a village library. This proved an inestimable blessing to young Fillmore. His evenings were spent in reading. Soon every leisure moment was occupied with books. His thirst for knowledge became insatiate, and the selections which he made were continually more elevating and instructive. He read history, biography, oratory, and thus gradually there was enkindled in his heart a desire to be something more than a mere worker with his hands; and he was becoming, almost unknown to himself, a well informed, educated man.

The young clothier had now attained the age of nineteen years, and was of fine personal appearance and of gentlemanly demeanor. It so happened that there was a gentleman in the neighborhood of ample pecuniary means and of benevolence-Judge Walter Woodwho was struck with the preposessing appearance of young Fillmore. He made his acquaintance, and was so much impressed with his ability and attainments that he advised him to abandon his trade and devote himself to the study of law. The young man replied that he had no means of his own, no friends to help him, and that his previous education had been very imperfect. But Judge Wood had so much confidence in him that he kindly offered to take him into his own office, and to loan him such money as he needed. Most gratefully the generous offer was accepted.

In 1823, when twenty-three years of age, he was admitted to the court of common pleas. He then went to the village of Aurora, and commenced the practice of law. In this secluded, peaceful region, his practice, of course, was limited, and there was no opportunity for a sudden rise in fortune or in fame. Here, in the year 1826, he married a lady of great meral worth, and one capable of adorning any station she might be called to fill—Miss Abigail Powers.

His elevation of character, his untiring industry, his legal acquirements, and his skill as an advocate, gradually attracted attention; and he was invited to enter into partnership. under highly advantageous circumstances, with an elder member of the bar in Buffalo. before removing to Buffalo, in 1829, he took his seat in the house of assembly, of the state of New York, as a representative from Erie county. Though he had never taken a very active part in politics, his vote and his sympathies were with the whig party. The state was then democratic, and he found himself in a helpless minority in the legislature, still the testimony comes from all parties, that his courtesy, ability, and integrity, won, to a very unusual degree, the respect of his associates.

In the autumn of 1832, he was elected to a seat in the United States congress. He entered that troubled arena in some of the most tumultuous hours of our national history. The great conflict respecting the national bank and the removal of the deposits was then raging.

His term of two years closed, and he returned to his profession, which he pursued with increasing reputation and success. After a lapse of two years he again became a candidate for congress; was re-elected, and took his seat in 1837. His past experience as a representative gave him strength and confidence. The first term of service in congress to any man can be but little more than an introduction. He was now prepared for active duty. Fillmore was now a man of wide repute, and his popularity filled the state, and in the year 1847 he was elected comptroller of the state.

Fillmore had attained the age of fortyseven years. His labors at the bar, in the legislature, in congress, and as comptroller, had given him very considerable fame. whigs were casting about to find suitable candidates for president and vice president at the approaching election. Far away, on the waters of the Rio Grande, there was a rough old soldier, who had fought successful battles with the Mexicans, which had caused his name to be proclaimed in trumpet-tones all over the land. But it was necessary to associate with him, on the same ticket, some man of reputation as a statesman. Under the influence of these considerations, the names of Zachary Taylor and Millard Fillmore became the rallying cry of the whigs, as their candidates for president and vice president. whig ticket was signally triumphant. On the 4th of March, 1849, Gen. Taylor was inaugurated president, and Millard Fillmore vice president, of the United States.

On the 9th of July, 1850, Pres. Taylor, but one year and four months after his inauguration, was suddenly taken sick and died. By the constitution, Vice Pres. Fillmore thus became president. He appointed a very able cabinet, of which the illustrious Daniel Webster was secretary of state.

Fillmore had very serious difficulties to contend with, since the opposition had a majorty in both house. He did everything in his power to conciliate the south; but the proslavery party in the south felt the inadequacy of all measures of transient conciliation. The population of the free states was so rapidly increasing over that of the slave states that it was inevitable that the power of the government should soon pass into the hands of the free states. The famous compromise measures were adopted under Fillmore's administration, and the Japan expedition was sent out. On the 4th of March, 1853, Fillmore, having served one term, retired.

In 1856, Fillmore was nominated for the presidency by the "know nothing" party but was beaten by Mr. Buchanan. After that Fillmore lived in retirement. During the terrible conflict of civil war he was mostly silent. It was generally supposed that his sympathies were rather with those who were endeavoring to overthrow our institutions. He lived to a ripe old age, and died in Buffalo, N. Y., March 8, 1874.

RANKLIN PIERCE, the fourteenth president of the United States, was born in Hillsborough, N. H., November 23, 1804. Franklin was a very bright and handsome boy, generous, warm-hearted and brave. He won alike the love of old and The boys on the play ground loved His teachers loved him. The neighbors looked upon him with pride and affection. He was by instinct a gentleman; always speaking kind words, doing kind deeds, with a peculiar unstudied tact which taught him what was agreeable. Without developing any precocity of genius, or any unnatural devotion to books, he was a good scholar; in body, in mind, in affections, a finely developed boy.

When sixteen years of age, in the year 1820, he entered Bowdoin college at Brunswick, Maine. He was one of the most popular young men in the college. The purity of his moral character, the unvarying courtesy of his demeanor, his rank as a scholar, and genial nature, rendered him a universal favorite. There was something very peculiarly winning in his address, and it was evidently not in the slightest degree studied; it was the simple outgushing of his own magnanimous and loving nature.

Upon graduating, in the year 1824, Franklin Pierce commenced the study of law in the office of Judge Woodbury, one of the most distinguished lawyers of the state, and a man of great private worth. The eminent social qualities of the young lawyer, his father's promince as a public man, and the brilliant political career into which Judge Woodbury was entering, all tended to entice Mr. Pierce into the fascinating, yet perilous, path of political life. With all the ardor of his nature he espoused the cause of Gen. Jackson for the presidency. He commenced the practice of law in Hillsborough, and was soon elected to represent the town in the state legislature. Here he served for four years. The last two years he was chosen speaker of the house by a very large vote.

In 1833, at the age of twenty-nine, he was elected a member of congress. Without taking an active part in debates, he was faithful and laborious in duty, and ever rising in the estimation of those with whom he was associ-In 1837, being then but thirty-three years of age, he was elected to the senate of the United States, taking his seat just as Mr. Van Buren commenced his administration. He was the youngest member in the senate. In the year 1834 he married Miss Jane Means Appleton, a lady of rare beauty and accomplishments, and one admirably fitted to adorn every station with which her husband was honored. Of the three sons who were born to them, all now sleep with their parents in the grave.

In the year 1838, Mr. Pierce, with growing fame and increasing business as a lawyer, took up his residence in Concord, the capital of New Hampshire. President Polk, upon his accession to office, appointed Mr. Pierce attorney-general of the United States; but the offer was declined in consequence of numerous professional engagements at home and the precarious state of Mrs. Pierce's health. He also about the same time declined the nomination for governor by the democratic party. The war with Mexico called Mr. Pierce to the army. Receiving the appointment of brigadier-general, he embarked with a portion of his troops at Newport, R. I., on the 27th of May, 1847. He took an important part in this war, proving himself a brave and true soldier.

When Gen. Pierce reached his home in his native state he was received enthusiastically by the advocates of the Mexican war, and coldly by its opponents. He resumed the practice of his profession, very frequently taking an active part in political questions, giving his cordial support to the pro-slavery wing of the democratic party. The compromise measures met cordially with his approval; and he strenuously advocated the enforcement of the infamous fugitive-slave law, which so shocked the religious sensibilities of the north. He thus became distinguished as a "northern man with southern principles." The strong partisans of slavery in the south consequently regarded him as a man whom they could safely trust in office to carry out their plans.

On the 12th of June, 1852, the democratic convention met in Baltimore to nominate a candidate for the presidency. For four days they continued in session, and in thirty-five ballotings no one had obtained a two-thirds vote. Not a vote thus far had been thrown for Gen. Pierce. Then the Virginia delega-There were tion brought forward his name. fourteen more ballotings, during which Gen. Pierce constantly gained strength, until, at the forty-ninth ballot, he received 282 votes, and all other candidates eleven. Gen. Winfield Scott was the whig candidate. Gen. Pierce was chosen with great unanimity. Only four states—Vermout, Massachusetts, Kentucky and Tennessee—cast their electoral votes against him. Gen. Franklin Pierce was therefore inaugurated president of the United States on the 4th of March, 1853.

His administration proved one of the most stormy our country had ever experienced. The controversy between slavery and freedom was then approaching its culminating point. It became evident that there was an "irrepressible conflict" between them, and that the nation could not long exist "half slave and half free." President Pierce, during the whole of his administration, did everything he could to conciliate the south; but it was all in vain. The conflict every year grew more and more violent, and threats of the dissolution of the Union were borne to the north on every southern breeze.

On the 4th of March, 1857, President Pierce retired to his home in Concord. Of three children, two had died, and his only surviving child had been killed before his eyes by a railroad accident; and his wife, one of the most estimable and accomplished of ladies, was rapidly sinking in consumption. The hour of dreadful gloom soon came, and he was left alone in the world without wife or child.

Such was the condition of affairs when Pres. Pierce approached the close of his four years' term of office. The north had become The antithoroughly alienated from him. slavery sentiment, goaded by great outrages, had been rapidly increasing; all the intellectual ability and social worth of Pres. When the terrible rebellion broke forth, which divided our country into two parties, Mr. Pierce remained steadfast in the principles which he had always cherished and gave his sympathies to that pro-slavery party with which he had ever been allied. He declined to do anything, either by voice or pen, to strengthen the hand of the national government. He continued to reside in Concord until the time of his death, which occurred in October, 1869. He was one of the most genial and social of men, an honored communicant of the Episcopal church, and one of the kindest of neighbors. Generous to a fault, he contributed liberally for the alleviation of suffering and want, and many of his townspeople were often gladdened by his material bounty.

AMES BUCHANAN, the fifteenth president of the United States, was born in Franklin county, Pa., on the 23d of April, 1791. His father was a native of the north of Ireland; a poor man, who had emigrated in 1783, with little property save his own strong arms. Five years afterward he married Elizabeth Spear, the daughter of a respectable farmer, and, with his young bride, plunged into the wilderness, staked his claim, reared his log but, opened a clearing with his ax, and settled down to perform his obscure part in the drama of life. In this secluded home, where James was born, he remained for eight years, enjoying but few social or intellectual advantages. When James was eight years of age his father removed to the village of Mercersburg, where his son was placed at school, and commenced a course of study in English, Latin and Greek. His progress was rapid, and at the age of fourteen he entered Dickenson college at Carlisle. Here he developed remarkable talent, and took his stand among the first scholars of the institution. His application to study was intense, and yet his native powers enabled him to master the most abstruse subjects with facility. In the year 1809, he graduated with the highest honors of his class. He was then eighteen years of age; tall and graceful, vigorous in health, fond of athletic sport, an unerring shot, and enlivened with an exuberant flow of animal spirits. He immediately commenced the study of law in the city of Lancaster, and was admitted to the bar in 1812, when he was but twenty-one years of age. Very rapidly he rose in his profession, and at once took undisputed stand with the ablest lawyers of the state. When but twenty-six years of age, unaided by counsel, he successfully defended before the state senate one of the judges of the state, who was tried upon articles of impeachment. At the age of thirty it was generally admitted that he stood at the head of the bar.

In 1820 he reluctantly consented to run as a candidate for congress. He was elected, and for ten years he remained a member of the lower house. During the vacations of congress, he occasionally tried some important case. In 1831 he retire! altogether from the toils of his profession, having acquired an ample fortune.

Gen. Jackson, upon his elevation to the presidency, appointed Mr. Buchanan minister The duties of his mission he perto Russia. formed with ability which gave satisfaction to all parties. Upon his return. in 1833, he was elected to a seat in the United States senate. He there met, as his associates, Webster, Clay, Wright and Calhoun. He advocated the measures proposed by Pres. Jackson, of making reprisals against France, to enforce the payment of our claims against that country; and defended the course of the president in his unprecedented and wholesale removal from office of those who were not supporters of his administration. Upon this question he was brought into direct collision with Henry Clay. He also, with voice and vote, advocated expunging from the journal of the senate the vote of censure against Gen. Jackson for removing the deposits. Earnestly he opposed the abolition of slavery in the District of Columbia, and urged the prohibition of the circulation of anti-slavery documents by the United States mail.

Upon Mr. Polk's accession to the presidency, Mr. Buchanan became secretary of state, and as such took his share of the responsibility in the conduct of the Mexican war. Mr. Polk assumed that crossing the Nueces by the American troops into the disputed territory was not wrong, but for the Mexicans to cross the Rio Grande into that territory was a declaration of war. Mr. Buchanan identified himself thoroughly with the party devoted to the perpetuation and extension of slavery, and brought all the energies of his mind to bear against the Wilmot Proviso. He gave his approval of the compromise measures of 1850, which included the fugitive slave law. Mr. Pierce, upon his election to the presidency, honored Mr. Buchanan with the mission to England.

In the year 1856, a national democratic convention nominated Mr. Buchanan for the presidency. The political conflict was one of the most severe in which our country has ever engaged. All the friends of slavery were on one side; all the advocates of its restriction and final abolition on the other. Mr. Fremont, the candidate of the enemies of slavery, received 114 electoral votes. Mr. Buchanan received 174, and was elected. The popular vote stood 1,341,264 for Fremont, 1,838,160 for Buchanan. On March 4, 1857, Mr. Buchanan was inaugurated. Mr. Buchanan was far advanced in life. Only four years were wanting to fill up his three score years and His own friends—those with whom he had been allied in political principles and action for years—were seeking the destruction of the government, that they might rear upon the ruins of our free institutions a nation whose corner stone should be human slavery. In this emergency, Mr. Buchanan was hopelessly bewildered. He could not, with his long avowed principles, consistently oppose the state-rights party in their assumptions. As president of the United States, bound by his oath faithfully to administer the laws, he could not, without perjury of the grossest kind, unite with those endeavoring to overthrow the republic. He therefore did nothing. Mr. Buchanan's sympathy with the pro-slavery party was such, that he had been willing to offer them far more than they had ventured to All the south had professed to ask of the north was non-interference with the subiect of slavery. Mr. Buchanan had been ready to offer them the active co-operation of the government to defend and extend the in-As the storm increased in violence, the slave holders claiming the right to secede, and Mr. Buchanan avowing that congress had no power to prevent it, one of the most pitiable exhibitions of governmental imbecility was exhibited the world has ever seen. declared that congress had no power to enforce its laws in any state which had withdrawn, or which was attempting to withdraw from the Union. This was not the doctrine of Andrew Jackson, when, with his hand upon his sword "The Union must and hilt, he exclaimed: shall be preserved."

South Carolina seceded in December, 1850, nearly three months before the inauguration of Pres. Lincoln. Mr. Buchanan looked on in listless despair. The rebel flag was raised in Charleston; Fort Sumter was besieged; our forts, navy yards and arsenals were seized; our depots of military stores were plundered; and our custom houses and post offices were appropriated by the rebels. The energy of the rebels, and the imbecility of our executive, were alike marvelous. The nation looked on in agony, waiting for the slow weeks to glide away and close the administration, so terrible in its weakness. At length the long looked for hour of deliverance came, when Abraham Lincoln was to receive the scepter.

The administration of President Buchanan was certainly the most calamitous our country has experienced. His best friends cannot recall it with pleasure. And still more deplorable it is for his fame, that in that dreadful conflict which rolled its billows of flame and blood over our whole land, no word came from his lips to indicate his wish that our country's banner should triumph over the flag of the rebellion. He died at his Wheatland retreat, June 1, 1868.

BRAHAM LINCOLN, the sixteeeth president of the United States, was born in Hardin county, Ky., February 12, 1809. About the year 1780, a man by the name of Abraham Lincoln left Virginia with his family and moved into the then wilds of Kentucky. Only two years after this emigration, still a young man, while working one day in a field, he was stealthily approached by an Indian and shot dead. widow was left in extreme poverty with five fittle children, three boys and two girls, Thomas, the youngest of the boys, was four years of age at his father's death. Thomas was the father of Abraham Lincoln, the president of the United States, whose name must henceforth forever be enrolled with the most prominent in the annals of our world.

When twenty-eight years of age Thomas Lincoln built a log cabin of his own, and married Nancy Hanks, the daughter of another family of poor Kentucky emigrants, who had also come from Virginia. Their second child was Abraham Lincoln. The mother of Abraham was a noble woman, gentle, loving, pensive; created to adorn a palace, doomed to toil and pine, and die in a hovel. "All that I am, or hope to be," exclaims the grateful son, "I owe to my angel mother."

He also became an eager reader. The books he could obtain were few; but these he read and re-read until they were almost committed to memory. As the years rolled on, the lot of this lowly family was the usual lot of humanity. There were joys and griefs, weddings and funerals. Abraham's sister, Sarah, to whom he was tenderly attached, was married when a child of but fourteen years of age, The family was gradually and soon died. Thomas Lincoln sold out his scattered. squatter's claim in 1830, and emigrated to Macon county, Ill. Abraham Lincoln was then twenty-one years of age. With vigorous hands he aided his father in rearing another log cabin. Abraham worked diligently at this until he saw the family comfortably settled, and their small lot of inclosed prairie planted with corn, when he announced to his father his intention to leave home, and to go out into the world and seek his fortune. Little did he or his friends imagine how brilliant that fortune was to be. He saw the value of education and was intensely earnest to improve his mind to the utmost of his power. He saw the ruin which ardent spirits were causing, and became strictly temperate; refusing to allow a drop of intoxicating liquor to pass his lips. And he had read in God's word, "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain;" and a profane expression he was never heard to utter. Religion he revered. morals were pure, and he was uncontaminated by a single vice.

ABRAḤAM LINCOLN.

Young Abraham worked for a time as a hired laborer among the farmers. went to Springfield, where he was employed in building a large flat-boat. In this he took a herd of swine, floated them down the Sangamon to the Illinois, and thence by the Mississippi to New Orleans. In this adventure his employers were so well pleased, that upon his return they placed a store and mill under his care. In 1832, at the outbreak of the Black Hawk war, he enlisted and was chosen captain of a company. He returned to Sangamon county, and although only twenty-three years of age, was a candidate for the legislature, but was defeated. He soon afterward received from Andrew Jackson the appointment of postmaster of New Salem. His only postoffice was his hat. All the letters he received he carried there ready to deliver to those he chanced to meet. He studied surveying and soon made this his business. In 1834 he again became a candidate for the legislature, and was elected. Mr. Stuart, of Springfield, advised him to study law. He walked from New Salem to Springfield, borrowed of Mr. Stuart a load of books, carried them back and began his legal studies. When the legislature assembled he trudged on foot with his pack on his back 100 miles to Vandalia, then the capital. In 1836 he was re-elected to the legislature. Here it was he first met Stephen A. Douglas. In 1839 he removed to Springfield and began the practice of law. His success with the jury was so great that he was soon engaged in almost every noted case in the circuit.

In 1854 the great discussion began between Mr. Lincoln and Mr. Douglas, on the slavery question. In the organization of the republican party in Illinois, in 1856, he took an active part, and at once became one of the leaders in that party. Mr. Lincoln's speeches in opposition to Senator Douglas in the contest in 1858 for a seat in the senate, form a most notable part of his history. The issue was on the slavery question, and he took the broad ground of the Declaration of Independence, that all men are created equal. Mr. Lincoln was defeated in this contest, but won a far higher prize—the presidency.

The great republican convention met at Chicago on the 16th of June, 1860. The delegates and strangers who crowded the city amounted to 25,000. An immense building, called "The Wigwam," was reared to accommodate the convention. There were eleven candidates for whom votes were cast. William H. Seward, a man whose fame as a statesman had long filled the land, was the most prominent. It was generally supposed he would be the nominee. Abraham Lincoln, however, received the nomination on the third ballot. Little did he then dream of the weary years of toil and care, and the bloody death, to which that nomination doomed him; and as little did he dream that he was to render services to his country which would fix upon him the eyes of the whole civilized world, and which would give him a place in the affections of his countrymen, second only, if second, to that of Washington.

Election day came and Mr. Lincoln received 180 electoral votes out of 203 cast, and was, therefore, constitutionally elected president of the United States. The tirade of abuse that was poured upon this good and merciful man, especially by the slaveholders, was greater than upon any other man ever elected to this high position. In February, 1861, Mr. Lincoln started for Washington, stopping in all the large cities on his way, making speeches. The whole journey was fraught with much danger. Many of the southern states had already seceded, and several attempts at assassination were afterward brought to light. A gang in Baltimore had arranged, upon his arrival, to "get up a row," and in the confusion to make sure of his death with revolvers and hand grenades. A detective unraveled the plot. A secret and special train was provided to take him from Harrisburg, through Baltimore, at an unexpected hour of the night. The train started at halfpast ten; and to prevent any possible communication on the part of the secessionists with their confederate gang in Baltimore, as soon as the train had started the telegraph wires were cut. Mr. Lincoln reached Washington in safety and was inaugurated, although great anxiety was felt by all loyal people.

In the selection of his cabinet Mr. Lincoln gave to Mr. Seward the department of state, and to other prominent opponents before the convention he gave important positions.

During no other administration have the duties devolving upon the president been so manifold, and the responsibilities so great, as those which fell to the lot of President Lincoln. Knowing this, and feeling his own weakness and inability to meet, and in his own strength to cope with the difficulties, he early learned to seek Divine wisdom and guidance in determining his plans, and Divine comfort in all his trials, both personal and national. to his own estimate of himself, Mr. Lincoln was one of the most courageous of men. went directly into the rebel capital just as the retreating foe was leaving, with no guard but a few sailors. From the time he had left Springfield, in 1861, however, plans had been made for his assassination, and he at last fell a victim to one of them. April 14, 1865, he, with General Grant, was urgently invited to attend Ford's theater. It was announced that they would be present. Gen. Grant, however, left the city. Pres. Lincoln, feeling, with his characteristic kindliness of heart, that it would be a disappointment if he should fail them, very reluctantly consented to go. While listening to the play an actor by the name of John Wilkes Booth entered, the box where the president and family were seated, and fired a bullet into his brains. He died the next morning at seven o'clock, and now, if never before, the nation was plunged into the deepest mourning, and truly mourned the 'country's loss."

NDREW JOHNSON, the seventeenth president of the United States, was born December 29, 1808, in Raleigh, N. C. When Andrew was five years of age, his father accidentally lost his life while heroically endeavoring to save a friend from drowning. Until ten years of age, Andrew was a ragged boy about the streets, supported by the labor of his mother, who obtained her living with her own hands. then, having never attended a school one day, and being unable either to read or write, was apprenticed to a tailor in his native town. gentleman was in the habit of going to the tailor's shop occasionally and reading to the boys at work there. He often read from the speeches of distinguished British statesmen. Andrew, who was endowed with a mind of more than ordinary native ability, became much interested in these speeches; his ambition was roused, and he was inspired with a strong desire to learn to read. He accordingly applied himself to the alphabet, and, with the assistance of some of his fellow-workmen, learned his letters. He then called upon the gentleman to borrow the book of speeches. The owner, pleased with his zeal, not only gave him the book, but assisted him in learning to combine the letters into words. such difficulties he pressed onward laboriously, spending usually ten or twelve hours at work in the shop, and then robbing himself of rest and recreation to devote such time as he could to reading.

ANDREW JOHNSON.

He went to Tennessee in 1826 and located at Greenville, where he married a young lady who possessed some education. Under her instructions he learned to write and cipher. He became prominent in the village debating society, and a favorite with the students of Greenville college. In 1828 he organized a workingman's party, which elected him alderman, and in 1830 elected him mayor, which position he held three years. He now began to take a lively interest in political affairs, identifying himself with the working classes to which he belonged. In 1835 he was elected a member of the house of representatives of Tennessee. He was then just twenty-seven years of age. He became a very active member of the legislature, gave his adhesion to the democratic party, and in 1840 "stumped the state," advocating Martin Van Buren's claims to the presidency in opposition to those of Gen. Harrison. In this campaign he acquired much readiness as a speaker, and extended and increased his reputation.

In 1841 he was elected state senator; in 1843 he was elected a member of congress, and by successive elections held that important post for ten years. In 1853 he was elected governor of Tennessee, and was re-elected in 1855. In all these responsible positions he discharged his duties with distinguished ability and proved himself the friend of the working classes. In 1857 Mr. Johnson was elected a United States senator.

Years before, in 1845, he had warmly advocated the annexation of Texas, stating however, as his reason, that he thought this annexation would probably prove "to be the gateway out of which the sable sons of Africa are to pass from bondage to freedom, and become merged in a population congenial to themselves." In 1850 he also supported the compromise measures, the two essential features of which were, that the white people of the territories should be permitted to decide for themselves whether they would enslave the colored people or not, and that the free states of the north should return to the south persons who attempted to escape from slavery.

Mr. Johnson was never ashamed of his lowly origin; on the contrary he often took pride in avowing that he owed his distinction to his own exertions. "Sir," said he on the floor of the senate, "I do not forget that I am a mechanic; neither do I forget that Adam was a tailor and sewed fig leaves, and that our Savior was the son of a carpenter."

In the Charleston-Baltimore convention of 1860, he was the choice of the Tennessee democrats for the presidency. In 1861, when the purpose of the southern democracy became apparent, he took a decided stand in favor of the Union, and held "slavery must be held subordinate to the Union at whatever cost." He returned to Tennessee, and repeatedly imperiled his own life to protect the Unionists of Tennessee. Tennessee having seceded from the Union, President Lincoln, on March 4, 1862, appointed him military governor of the state, and he established the most stringent military rule. His numerous proclamations attracted wide attention. In 1864 he was elected vice president of the United States, and upon the death of Mr. Lincoln, April 15, 1865, became president. In a speech two days later he said: "The American people must be taught, if they do not already feel, that treason is a crime and must be punished; that the government will not always bear with its enemies; that it is strong not only to protect, but to punish. * * The people must understand that it (treason) is the blackest of crimes and will surely be punished." Yet his whole administration, the history of which is so well known, was in utter inconsistency with, and the most violent opposition to, the principles laid down in that speech.

In his loose policy of reconstruction and general amnesty he was opposed by congress; and he characterized congress as a new rebellion, and lawlessly defied it in everything possible to the utmost. In the beginning of 1868, on account of "high crimes and misdemeanors," the principal of which was the removal of Secretary Stanton, in violation of the Tenure of Office act, articles of impeachment were preferred against him, and the trial began March 23.

It was very tedious, continuing for nearly three months. A test article of the impeachment was at length submitted to the court for its action. It was certain that as the court voted upon that article, so would it vote upon all. Thirty-four voices pronounced the president guilty. As a two-thirds vote was necessary to his condemnation, he was pronounced acquitted, notwithstanding the great majority against him. The change of one vote from the not guilty side would have sustained the impeachment.

The president for the remainder of his term was but little regarded. He continued, though impotently, his conflict with congress. His own party did not think it expedient to renominate him for the presidency. The bullet of the assassin introduced him to the president's chair. Notwithstanding this, never was there presented to a man a better opportunity to immortalize his name and win the gratitude of a nation. He failed utterly. retired to his home in Greenville, Tenn., taking no very active part in politics until 1875. On January 26, after an exciting struggle, he was chosed by the legislature of Tennessee United States senator in the forty-fourth congress; and took his seat in that body at the special session convened by President Grant on the 5th of March. On the 27th of July, 1875, the ex-president made a visit to his daughter's home, near Carter Station, Tenn. When he started on his journey he was apparently in his usual vigorous health, but on reaching the residence of his child the following day was stricken with paralysis, rendering him unconscious. He rallied occasionally, but finally passed away at 2 A. M., July 31, aged sixty-seven years. He was buried at Greenville, on the 3d of August, 1875.

LYSSES S. GRANT, the eighteenth president of the United States, was born on the 29th of April, 1822, of christian parents, in a humble home, at Point Pleasant, Va., on the banks of the Ohio. Shortly after his father moved to Georgetown, Brown county, Ohio. In this remote frontier hamlet, Ulysses received a common school education. At the age of seventeen, in the year 1839, he entered the Military academy at West Point. Here he was regarded as a solid, sensible young man of fair abillties, and of sturdy, honest character. He took respectable rank as a scholar. In June, 1843, he graduated, about the middle- in his class, and was sent as lieutenant of infantry to one of the distant military posts in the Missouri territory. Two years he passed in these dreary solitudes, watching the vagabond and exasperating Indians.

The war with Mexico came. Lieut. Grant was sent with his regiment to Corpus Christi. His first battle was at Palo Alto. There was no chance here for the exhibition of either skill or heroism, nor at Resaca de la Palma, his second battle. At the battle of Monterey, his third engagement, it is said that he performed a signal service of daring and skillful horsemanship. His brigade had exhausted its ammunition. A messenger must be sent for more, along a route exposed to the bullets of the foe. Lieut. Grant, adopting an expedient learned of the Indians, grasped the mane of his horse, and hanging upon one side of the animal, ran the gauntlet in entire safety. From Monterey he was sent, with the Fourth infantry, to aid Gen. Scott, at the siege of Vera Cruz. In preparation for the march to the city of Mexico, he was appointed quartermaster of his regiment. At the battle of Molino del Rey, he was promoted to a first lieutenancy, and was brevetted captain at Chapultepec.

At the close of the Mexican war, Capt. Grant returned with his regiment to New York, and was again sent to one of the military posts on the frontier. The discovery of gold in California causing an immense tide of emigration to flow to the Pacific shores, Capt. Grant was sent, with a battalion, to Fort Dallas, in Oregon, for the protection of the interests of the emigrants. Life was wearisome in those wilds. Capt. Grant resigned his commission and returned to the states; and having married, entered upon the cultivation of a small farm near St. Louis. Mo. had but little skill as a farmer. Finding his toil not remunerative, he turned to mercantile life, entering into the leather business, with a younger brother at Galena, Ill. This was in the year 1860. As the tidings of the rebels firing on Fort Sumter reached the ears of Capt. Grant in his counting room, he said-"Uncle Sam has educated me for the army; though I have served him through one war, I do not feel that I have yet repaid the debt. I am still ready to discharge my obligations. I shall therefore buckle on my sword and see Uncle Sam through this war, too."

He went into the streets, raised a company of volunteers, and led them, as their captain, to Springfield, the capital of the state, where their services were offered to Gov. Yates. The governor, impressed by the zeal and straightforward executive ability of Capt. Grant, gave him a desk in his office, to assist in the volunteer organization that was being formed in the state in behalf of the government. On the 15th of June, 1861, Capt. Grant received a commission as colonel of the Twenty-first regiment of Illinois volunteers. His merits as a West Point graduate, who had served for fifteen years in the regular army, were such that he was soon promoted to the rank of brigadier general and was placed in command at Cairo. The rebels raised their flag at Paducah, near the mouth of the Tennessee river. Scarcely had its folds appeared ere Gen. Grant was there. The rebels fled. Their banner fell, and the stars and stripes were unfurled in its stead.

At Belmont, a few days later, he surprised and routed the rebels, then at Fort Henry won another victory. Then came the brilliant fight at Fort Donelson. The nation was electrified by the victory, and the brave leader of the boys in blue was immediately made a major general, and the military district of Tennessee was assigned to him.

Like all great captains, Gen. Grant knew well how to secure the results of a victory. He immediately pushed on to the enemy's lines. Then came the terrible battles of Pittsburg Landing, Corinth, and the siege of Vicksburg, where Gen. Pemberton made an unconditional surrender of the city with over 30,000 men and 172 cannon. The fall of Vicksburg was by far the most severe blow which the rebels had thus far encountered, and opened up the Mississippi from Cario to the gulf.

Gen. Grant was next ordered to co-operate with Gen. Banks in a movement upon Texas, and proceeded to New Orleans, where he was thrown from his horse and received severe injuries, from which he was laid up for months. He then rushed to the aid of Gens. Rosecrans and Thomas at Chattanooga, and by a wonderful series of strategtic and technical measures put the Union army in fighting condition. Then followed the bloody battles of Chattanooga, Lookout Mountain and Missionary Ridge, in which the rebels were routed with great loss. This won for him unbounded praise in the north. On the 4th of February, 1864, congress revived the grade of lieutenant general, and the rank was conferred on Gen. Grant. He repaired to Washington to receive his credentials and enter upon the duties of his new office.

Gen. Grant decided as soon as he took charge of the army to concentrate the widely dispersed national troops for an attack on Richmond, the nominal capital of the rebellion, and endeavor there to destroy the rebel armies which would be promptly assembled from all quarters for its defense. The whole continent seemed to tremble under the tramp of these majestic armies, rushing to the decisive battle-field. Steamers were crowded with troops; railway trains were burdened with closely packed thousands. His plans were comprehensive and involved a series of campaigns, which were executed with remarkable energy and ability, and were consummated at the surrender of Lee, April 9, 1865.

The war was ended. The Union was saved. The almost unanimous voice of the nation declared Gen. Grant to be the most prominent instrument in its salvation. The eminent services he had thus rendered the country brought him conspicuously forward as the republican candidate for the presidential chair. At the republican convention held at Chicago, May 21, 1868, he was unanimously nominated for the presidency, and at the autumn election received a majority of the popular vote, and 214 out of 294 electoral votes. The national convention of the republican party which met at Philadelphia on the 5th of June, 1872, placed Gen. Grant in nomination for a second term by a unanimous vote. The selection was emphatically endorsed by the people five months later, 292 electoral votes being cast for him.

Soon after the close of his second term, Gen. Grant started upon his famous trip around the world. He visited almost every country of the civilized world, and was everywhere received with such ovations and demonstrations of respect and honor, private, as well as public and official, as were never before bestowed upon any citizen of the United States.

He was the most prominent candidate before the republican national convention in 1880 for a renomination for president. went to New York and embarked in the brokerage business under the firm name of Grant & Ward. The latter proved a villain, wrecked Grant's fortune, and for larceny was sent to the penitentiary. The general was attacked with cancer in the throat, but suffered in his stoic-like manner, never complaining. He was re-instated general of the army and retired by congress. The cancer soon finished its deadly work, and July 23, 1885, the nation went in mourning over the death of the illustrious general.

UTHERFORD B. HAYES, the nine-teenth president of the United States, was born in Delaware, Ohio, October 4. 1852, almost three months after the death of his father, Rutherford Hayes. His ancestry, an both the paternal and maternal sides, was of the most honorable character. It can be traced, it is said, as far back as 1280, when Hayes and Rutherford were two Scottish chieftains, fighting side by side with Baliol, William Wallace and Robert Bruce. Both families belonged to the nobility, owned extensive estates, and had a large following.

RUTHERFORD B HAYES

Misfortune overtaking the family, George Haves left Scotland in 1680, and settled in His son George was born Windsor, Conn. in Windsor, and remained there during his Daniel Haves, son of the latter, married Sarah Lee, and lived from the time of his marriage until his death in Simsbury, Conn. Ezekiel, son of Daniel, was born in 1724, and was a manufacturer of scythes at Bradford, Conn. Rutherford Hayes. son of Ezekiel and grandfather of President Hayes, was born in New Haven, in August, 1756. He was a farmer, blacksmith and tavern-keeper. emigrated to Vermont at an unknown date, settling in Brattleboro, where he established a Here his son, Rutherford Hayes, the father of President Hayes, was born. He was married, in September, 1813, to Sophia Birchard, of Wilmington, Vt., whose ancestors emigrated thither from Connecticut, they having been among the wealthiest and best families of Norwich. Her ancestry on the male side are traced back to 1635, to John Birchard, one of the principal founders of Norwich. Both of her grandfathers were soldiers in the Revolutionary war.

The father of President Hayes was an industrious, frugal and open-hearted man. He was of a mechanical turn, and could mend a plow, knit a stocking, or do almost anything else that he chose to undertake. He was a member of the church, active in all the benevolent enterprises of the town, and conducted his business on christian principles. After the close of the war of 1812, for reasons inexplicable to his neighbors, he resolved to emigrate to Ohio.

The journey from Vermont to Ohio in that day, when there were no canals, steamers, nor railways, was a very serious affair. A tour of inspection was first made, occupying four months. Mr. Hayes determined to move to Delaware, where the family arrived in 1817.

He died July 22, 1822, a victim of malarial fever, less than three months before the birth of the son, of whom we now write. Mrs. Hayes, in her sore bereavement, found the support she so much needed in her brother Sardis, who had been a member of the household from the day of its departure from Vermont, and in an orphan girl whom she had adopted some time before as an act of charity.

Mrs. Hayes at this period was very weak, and the subject of this sketch was so feeble at birth that he was not expected to live beyond a month or two at most. As the months went by he grew weaker and weaker, so that the neighbors were in the habit of inquiring from time to time "if Mrs. Hayes" baby died last night." On one occasion a neighbor, who was on familiar terms with the family, after alluding to the boy's big head, and the mother's assiduous care of him, said in a bantering way, "That's right! Stick to him. You have got him along so far, and I shouldn't wonder if he would really come to something yet."

"You need not laugh," said Mrs. Hayes. "You wait and see. You can't tell but I shall make him president of the United States yet." The boy lived in spite of the universal predictions of his speedy death; and when, in 1825, his older brother was drowned, he became, if possible, still dearer to his mother.

The boy was seven years old before he went to school. His education, however, was not neglected. He probably learned as much from his mother and sister as he would have done at school. His sports were almost wholly within doors, his playmates being his sister and her associates. His uncle Sardis Birchard took the deepest interest in his education; and as the boy's health had improved, and he was making good progress in his studies, he proposed to send him to college. His preparation commenced with a tutor at home; but he was afterward sent for one year to a professor in the Wesleyan university, in Middletown, Conn. He entered Kenyon college in 1838, at the age of sixteen, and was graduated at the head of his class in 1842.

Immediately after his graduation he began the study of law in the office of Thomas Sparrow, Esq., in Columbus. Finding his opportunities for study in Columbus somewhat limited, he determined to enter the law school at Cambridge, Mass., where he remained two years. In 1845, after graduating at the law school, he was admitted to the bar at Marietta, Ohio, and shortly afterward went into practice as an attorney-at-law with Ralph P. Buckland, of Fremont. Here he remained three years, acquiring but a limited practice, and apparently unambitious of distinction in his profession.

In 1849 he moved to Cincinnati, where his ambition found a new stimulus. Two events, occurring at this period, had a powerful influence upon his subsequent life. One of these was his marriage with Miss Lucy Ware Webb, daughter of Dr. James Webb, of Chillicothe; the other was his introduction to the Cincinnati Literary club, a body embracing among its members such men as Chief Justice Salmon P. Chase, Gen. John Pope, Gov. Edward F. Noyes, and many others hardly less distinguished in after life. The marriage was a fortunate one in every respect, as everybody knows. Not one of all the wives of our presidents was more universally admired, reverenced and beloved than was Mrs. Hayes, and no one did more than she to reflect honor upon American womanhood. The Literary club brought Mr. Haves into constant association with young men of high character and noble aims, and lured him to display the qualities so long hidden by his bashfulness and extreme modesty.

In 1856 he was nominated to the office of judge of the court of common pleas; but he declined to accept the nomination. Two years later, the office of city solicitor becoming vacant, the city council elected him for the unexpired term.

In 1861, when the rebellion broke out, he was at the zenith of his professional life. His rank at the bar was among the first. But the news of the attack on Fort Sumter found him eager to take up arms for the defense of his beloved country.

His military record was bright and illustrious. In October, 1861, he was made lieutenant-colonel, and August, 1862, promoted colonel of the Seventy-ninth Ohio regiment, but he refused to leave his old comrades and go among strangers. Subsequently, however, he was made colonel of his old regiment. At the battle of South Mountain he received a wound, and while faint and bleeding displayed courage and fortitude that won admiration from all.

Col. Hayes was detached from his regiment, after his recovery, to act as brigadier-general, and placed in command of the celebrated Kanawha division, and for gallant and meritorious services in the battles of Winchester, Fisher's Hill and Cedar Creek, he was promoted brigadier-general. He was also brevetted majorgeneral "for gallant and distinguished services during the campaigns of 1864 in West Virginia." In the course of his arduous services four horses were shot from under him, and he was wounded four times.

In 1864, Gen. Hayes was elected to congress, from the Second Ohio district, which had long been democratic. He was not present during the campaign, and after his election was importuned to resign his commission in the army; but he finally declared: "I shall never come to Washington until I can come by the way of Richmond." He was re-elected in 1866.

In 1867, Gen. Hayes was elected governor of Ohio over Hon. Allen G. Thurman, a popular democrat. In 1869 was re-elected over George H. Pendleton. He was elected governor for the third term in 1875.

In 1876 he was the standard-bearer of the republican party in the presidential contest, and, after a hard, long contest, was chosen president, and was inaugurated Monday, March 5, 1875.

He served one full term of four years, then retired to his peaceful home, where he expired January 17, 1893.

AMES A. GARFIELD, twentieth president of the United States, was born November 19, 1831, in the woods of Orange, Cuyahoga county, Ohio. His parents were Abram and Eliza (Ballou) Garfield, both of New England ancestry, and from families well known in the early history of that section of our country, but had moved to the Western Reserve, in Ohio, early in its settlement.

The house in which James A. was born was about 20x30 feet, built of logs, with the spaces between the logs filled with clay. His father was a hard-working farmer, and he soon had his fields cleared, an orchard planted, and a log barn built. The household comprised the father and mother and their four children—Mehetabel, Thomas, Mary and James. In May, 1823, the father, from a cold contracted in helping to put out a forest fire, died. At this time James was about eighteen months old, and Thomas about ten years old. He now lives in Michigan, and the two sisters live in Solon, Ohio, near their birth-place.

The early educational advantages young Garfield enjoyed were very limited, yet he made the most of them. He labored at farm work for others, did carpenter work, chopped wood, or did anything that would bring in a few dollars. Nor was Gen. Garfield ever ashamed of his origin, and he never forgot the friends of his struggling childhood, youth and manhood, neither did they ever forget him. When in the highest seats of honor, the humblest friend of his boyhood was as kindly greeted as ever.

The highest ambition of young Garfield until he was about sixteen years old was to be a captain of a vessel on Lake Erie. anxious to go aboard a vessel, which his mother strongly opposed. She finally consented to his going to Cleveland, with the understanding, however, that he should try to obtain some other kind of employment. walked all the way to Cleveland. making many applications for work, and trying to get aboard a lake vessel, and not meeting with success, he engaged as a driver for his cousin, Amos Letcher, on the Ohio & Pennsylvania canal. He remained at this work but a short time when he went home, and attended the seminary at Chester for about three years, when he entered Hiram and the Eclectic institute, teaching a few terms of school in the meantime, and doing other work. This school was started by the Disciples of Christ in 1850, of which church he was then a member. He became janitor and bell-ringer in order to help pay his way. He then became both teacher and pupil. In the fall of 1854, he entered Williams college, from which he graduated in 1856, taking one of the highest honors of his class. He afterward returned to Hiram college as its president. Noah Porter, president of Yale college, says of him in reference to his religion:

"President Garfield was more than a man of strong moral and religious convictions. His whole history, from boyhood to the last shows that duty to man and to God, and devotion to Christ and life and faith and spiritual commission were controlling springs of his being, and to a more than usual degree."

Mr. Garfield was united in marriage with Miss Lucretia Rudolph, November 11, 1858, who proved herself worthy as the wife of one whom all the world loved and mourned. To them were born seven children, five of whom are still living, four boys and one girl.

Mr. Garfield made his first political speeches in 1856, in Hiram and the neighboring villages, and three years later he began to speak at county mass meetings, and became the favorite speaker wherever he was. ing this year he was elected to the Ohio senate. He also began to study law at Cleveland, and in 1861 was admitted to the bar. The great rebellion broke out in the early part of this year, and Mr. Garfield at once resolved to fight as he had talked, and enlisted to defend the old flag. He received his commission as lieutenant-colonel of the Forty-second regiment of Ohio volunteer infantry, August 14, 1861. He was immediately put into active service, and before he had ever seen a gun fired in action, was placed in command of four regiments of infantry and eight companies of cavalry, charged with the work of driving out of his native state the officer (Humphrey Marshall) reputed to be the ablest of those, not educated to war, whom Kentucky had given to This work was bravely and the rebellion. speedily accomplished, although against great odds. President Lincoln, on his success, commissioned him brigadier general, January 10, 1862; and as "he had been the youngest man in the Ohio senate two years before, so now he was the youngest general in the army." He was with Gen. Buell's army at Shiloh, in its operations around Corinth and its march through Alabama. He was then detailed as a member of the general court-martial for the trial of Fitz-John Porter. He was then ordered to report to Gen. Rosecrans, and was assigned to the chief of staff. The military history of Gen. Garfield closed with his brilliant services at Chickamauga, where he won the stars of the major-general.

Without an effort on his part Gen. Garfield was elected to congress in the fall of 1862 from the Nineteenth district of Ohio. section of Ohio had been represented in congress for sixty years mainly by two men-Elisha Whittlesey and Joshua R. Giddings. It was not without a struggle that he resigned his place in the army. At the time he entered congress he was the youngest member in that body. Here he remained by successive reelections until he was elected president in 1880. Of his labors in congress Senator Hoar says: "Since the year 1864 you cannot think of a question which has been debated in congress, or discussed before a tribunal of the American people, in regard to which you will not find, if you wish instruction, the argument on one side stated, in almost every instance, better than by anybody else, in some speech made in the house of representatives or on the hustings by Mr. Garfield."

Upon January 14, 1880, Gen. Garfield was elected to the United States senate, and on the 8th of June, of the same year, was nominated as the candidate of his party for president at the great Chicago convention. elected in the following November, and on March 4, 1881, was inaugurated. no administration ever opened its existence under brighter auspices than that of President Garfield, and every day it grew in favor with the people, and by the first of July he had completed all the initiatory and preliminary work of his administration and was preparing to leave the city to meet his friends at Williams college. While on his way and at the depot, in company with Secretary Blaine, a man stepped behind him, drew a revolver, and fired directly at his back. The president

I., on the seashore, where he had been taken shortly previous. The murderer was tried, found guilty and executed, in one year after he committed the foul deed.

HESTER A. ARTHUR, twenty-first president of the United States, was born in Franklin county, Vermont, on the fifth of October, 1830, and is the eldest of a family of two sons and five daughters. His father was the Rev. Dr. William Arthur, a Baptist clergyman, who emigrated to this country from the county Antrim, Ireland, in his eighteenth year, and died in 1875, in Newtonville, near Albany, N. Y., after a long and successful ministry.

Young Arthur was educated at Umon college, Schenectady, N. Y., where he excelled in all his studies. After his graduation, he taught school in Vermont for two years, and at the expiration of that time went to New York, with $500 in his pocket, and entered the office of ex-Judge E. D. Culver, as student. After being admited to the bar he formed a partnership with his intimate friend and roommate, Henry D. Gardiner, with the intention of practicing in the west, and for three months they roamed about in the western states in search of an eligible site, but in the end returned to New York, where they entered upon a successful career almost from the start.

Gen. Arthur soon afterward married the daughter of Lieut. Herndon, of the United States navy, who was lost at sea. Congress voted a gold medal to his widow in recognition of the bravery he displayed on that occasion. Mrs. Arthur died shortly before Mr. Arthur's nomination to the vice presidency, leaving two children.

Gen. Arthur obtained considerable legal celebrity in his first great case, the famous Lemmon suit, brought to recover possession of eight slaves who had been declared free by Judge Paine, of the superior court of New York city. It was in 1852 that Jonathan Lemmon, of Virginia, went to New York with his slaves, intending to ship them to Texas, when they were discovered and freed. judge decided that they could not be held by the owner under the Fugitive Slave law. howl of rage went up from the south, and the Virginia legislature authorized the attorney general of that state to assist in an appeal. William M. Evarts and Chester A. Arthur were employed to represent the people, and they won their case, which then went to the supreme court of the United States. Charles O'Conor here espoused the cause of the slaveholders, but he too, was beaten by Messrs. Evarts and Arthur, and a long step was taken toward the emanicipation of the black race.

Another great service was rendered by Gen. Arthur in the same cause in 1856. Lizzie Jennings, a respectable colored woman, was put off a Fourth avenue car with violence after she had paid her fare. Gen. Arthursued on her behalf, and secured a verdict of $500 damages. The next day the company issued an order to admit colored persons to ride on their cars, and the other car companies quickly followed their example. Before that the Sixth avenue company ran a few special cars for colored persons and the other lines refused to let them ride at all.

Gen. Arthur was a delegate to the convention at Saratoga that founded the republican party. Previous to the war he was judge-advocate of the Second brigade of the state of New York, and Governor Morgan, of that state, appointed him engineer-in-chief of his staff. In 1861, he was made inspector general, and soon afterward became quartermaster general. In each of these offices he rendered great service to the government during the war. At the end of Gov. Morgan's term he resumed the practice of the law, forming a partnership with Mr. Ransom, and then Mr. Phelps, the district attorney of New York, was added to the firm. The legal practice of this well known firm was very large and lucrative; each of the gentlemen composing it was an able lawyer, and possessed a splendid local reputation, if not indeed one of national extent.

Arthur was appointed collector of the port of New York by President Grant, November 21, 1872, to succeed Thomas Murphy, and held the office until July 20, 1878, when he was succeeded by Collector Merritt. Mr. Arthur was nominated on the presidential ticket, with Gen. James A. Garfield, at the famous national republican convention held at This was perhaps the Chicago in June, 1880. greatest political convention that ever assembled on the continent. It was composed of the leading politicians of the republican party, all able men, and all stood firm and fought vigorously and with signal tenacity for their respective candidates that were before the convention for the nomination. Finally Gen. Garfield received the nomination for president and Gen. Arthur for vice president. The campaign which followed was one of the most animated known in the history of our country. Gen. Hancock, the standard-bearer of the democratic party, was a popular man, and his party made a valiant fight for his election.

Finally the election came and the country's choice was Garfield and Arthur. They were inaugurated March 4, 1881, as president and vice-president. A few months only had passed ere the newly chosen president was the victim of the assassin's bullet. The remarkable patience that Garfield manifested during those hours and weeks, and even months, of the most terrible suffering man has often been called upon to endure, was seemingly more than human. It was certainly God-like. During all this period of deepest anxiety Mr. Arthur's every move was watched, and be it said to his credit, that his every action displayed only an earnest desire that the suffering Garfield might recover, to serve the remainder of the term he had so auspiciously begun. Not a selfish feeling was manifested in deed or look of this man, even though the most honored position in the world was at any moment likely to fall to him.

At last God in his mercy relieved President Garfield from further suffering. Then it became the duty of the vice president to assume the responsibilities of the high office, and he took the oath in New York, September 20, 1881. The position was an embarrassing one to him, made doubly so from the facts that all eves were on him, anxious to know what he would do, what policy he would pursue, and whom he would select as advisers. The duties of the office had been greatly neglected during the president's long illness, and many important measures were to be immediately decided by him; and still farther to embarrass him he did not fail to realize under what circumstances he became president, and knew the feelings of many on this point. Under these trying circumstances President Arthur took the reins of the government in his own hands; and as embarrassing as was the condition of afiairs, he happily surprised the nation, actign so wisely that but few criticised his administration. He served until the close of his administration, March 4, 1885, and was a popular candidate before his party for a second term. His name was ably presented before the convention at Chicago, and was received with great favor, and doubtless out for the personal popularity of one of the opposing candidates, he would have been selected as the standard-bearer of his party for another campaign. He retired to private life carrying with him the best wishes of the American people, whom he had served in a manner satisfactory to them and Although not a man with credit to himself. of the transcendent ability possessed by the lamented Garfield, Mr. Arthur was able for the emergency he was so unexpectedly called to fill, and was a worthy successor to his chief.

TEPHEN GROVER CLEVELAND, the twenty-second and twenty-fourth president of the United States, was born in 1837, in the town of Caldwell, Essex county, N. J., and in a little twoand-a-half story white house which is still standing, characteristically to mark the humble birth-place of one of America's great men in striking contrast with the old world, where all men high in office must be high in origin, and born in the cradle of wealth. When three years of age, his father, who was a Presbyterian minister with a large family, and a small salary, moved by the way of the Hudson river and Erie canal to Fayetteville in search of an increased income and a larger field of work. Fayetteville was then the most straggling of country villages, about five miles from Pompey Hill, where Gov. Seymour was born. At the last mentioned place young Grover commenced going to school in the "good old-fashioned way," and presumably distinguished himself after the manner of all village boys in doing the things he ought not to do. Such is the distinguishing trait of all village geniuses and independent thinkers. When he arrived at the age of fourteen years he had outgrown the capacity of the village school and expressed a most emphatic desire to be sent to an acad-To this his father decidedly objected. Academies in those days cost money; besides, his father wanted him to become self-supporting by the quickest possible means, and this at that time in Fayetteville seemed to be a position in a country store, where his father, with the large family on his hands, had considerable influence. Grover was to be paid $50 for his services the first year, and if he proved trustworthy he was to receive $100 the second year. Here the lad commenced his career as a salesman, and in two years he had earned so good a reputation for trustworthiness that his employers desired to retain him longer.

But instead of remaining with this firm in Fayetteville, he went with the family in their removal to Clinton, where he had an opportunity of attending a high school. industriously pursued his studies until the family removed with him to a point on Black river known as the Holland Patent, a village of 500 or 600 people, fifteen miles north of Utica, N. Y. At this place his father died, after preaching but three Sundays. This event broke up the family, and Grover set out for New York city to accept, at a small salary, the position of "under-teacher" in an asylum He taught faithfully for two for the blind. years, and although he obtained a good reputation in this capacity, he concluded that teaching was not his calling for life, and, reversing the traditional order, he left the city to seek his fortune, instead of going to a city. He first thought of going to Cleveland, Ohio, as there was some charm in that name for him; but before proceeding to that place he went to Buffalo to ask advice of his uncle, Lewis F. Allan, a noted stock breeder of that place. After a long consultation, his uncle offered him a place temporarily as assistant herdkeeper at $50 a year, while he could "look around." One day afterward he boldly walked into the office of Rogers, Bowers & Rogers, of Buffalo, and told them what he wanted. A number of young men were already engaged in the office, but Grover's persistency won, and he was finally permitted to come as an office boy and have the use of the law library for the nominal sum of $3 or $4 a week. Out of this he had to pay for his board and washing. walk to and from his uncle's was a long and rugged one; and, although the first winter was a memorably severe one, yet he was nevertheless prompt and regular. On the first day of his service there, his senior employer threw down a copy of Blackstone before him with a bang that made the dust fly, saying, "That's where they all begin." A titter ran around the little circle of clerks and students, as they thought that was enough to scare young Grover out of his plans; but in due time he mastered that cumbersome volume. Then, as ever afterward, however, Mr. Cleveland exhibited a talent for executiveness rather than for chasing principles through all their metaphysical possibilities. "Let us quit talking and go and do it," was practically his motto.

The first public office to which Mr. Cleveland was elected was that of sheriff of Erie county, N. Y., in which Buffalo is situated; and in such capacity it fell to his duty to inflict capital punishment upon two criminals. In 1881 he was elected mayor of the city of Buffalo on the democratic ticket, with especial reference to the bringing about certain reforms in the administration of the municipal affairs of that city. In this office, as well as that of sheriff, his performance of duty has generally been considered fair, with possibly a few exceptions, which were ferreted out and magnified during his last presidential campaign. The editorial manager or the New York Sun afterward very highly commended Mr. Cleveland's administration as mayor of Buffalo, and thereupon recommended him for governor of the Empire state. To the latter office he was elected in 1882, and his administration of the affairs of state was generally satisfactory. The mistakes he made, if any, were made very public throughout the nation after he was nominated for president of the United States. For this high office he was nominated July 11, 1884, by the national democratic convention at Chicago, when other competitors were Thomas F. Bayard, Roswell P. Flower, Thomas A. Hendricks, Benjamin F. Butler, Allen G. Thurman, etc.; and he was elected by the people by a majority of about a thousand over the brilliant and long-tried James G. Blaine. President Cleveland resigned his office as governer of New York in January, 1885, in order to prepare for his duties as the chief executive of the United States, in which capacity his term commenced at noon on the 4th of March, 1885.

In November, 1892, Mr. Cleveland was reelected to the presidency by the democratic party, the candidate of the republican party being their ex-chief, Benjamin Harrison, a sketch of whom follows this. The popular vote on this occasion stood: Cleveland, 5,556-562; Harrison, 5, 162, 874; the electoral vote was 277 for Cleveland, and 145 for Harrison. During the early part of his first administration, Mr. Cleveland was married to Miss Frances Folsom, of Buffalo, N. Y., and in October, 1891, a daughter, Ruth, came to bless the union, and a second daughter, Esther, was born in July, 1893. The first act of Mr. Cleveland, on taking his seat for his second term, was to convene congress in extra session for the purpose of repealing the Sherman silver bill, and accordingly that body met September 4, 1893, and both houses being democratic, the bill, in accordance with the recommendation of the president, was unconditionally repealed. The special feature, however, of the second administration of Grover Cleveland was the repeal of the McKinley tariff bill by congress and the substitution of the bill reported by Wılliam L. Wilson, of West Virginia, as chairman of the ways and means committee of the house of representatives, which bill, being concurred in, with sundry amendments, by the senate, was finally passed and went into effect in the latter part of 1894, materially reducing the duties on imports.

He subsequently paid for this with his life, being hung October 13, 1660. His descendants came to America, and the next of the family that appears in history is Benjamin Harrison, of Virginia, greatgrandfather of the subject of this sketch, and after whom he was named. Benjamin Harrison was a member of the continental congress during the years 1774-5-6, and was one of the original signers of the Declaration of Independence. He was three times elected governor of Virginia.

Gen. William Henry Harrison, the son of the distinguished patriot of the Revolution, after a successful career as a soldier during the war of 1812, and with a clean record as governor of the Northwestern territory, was elected president of the United States in 1840. His career was cut short by death in one month after his inauguration.

President Benjamin Harrison was born at North Bend, Hamilton county, Ohio, August His life up to the time of his grad-20, 1833. uation by the Miami university, at Oxford, Ohio, was the uneventful one of a country lad of a family of small means. His father was able to give him a good education, and nothing more. He became engaged while at college to the daughter of Dr. Scott, principal of a female school at Oxford. After graduating, he determined to enter upon the study of the He went to Cincinnati and there read law for two years. At the expiration of that time young Harrison received the only inheritance of his life; his aunt, dying, left him a lot valued at $800. He regarded this legacy as a fortune, and decided to get married at once, take this money and go to some eastern town and begin the practice of law. He sold his lot, and with the money in his pocket, he started out with his young wife to fight for a place in the world. He decided to go to Indianapolis, which was even at that time a town of promise. He met with slight encouragement at first, making scarcely anything the He worked diligently, applying first year. himself closely to his calling, built up an extensive practice and took a leading rank in the He is the father of two legal profession. children.

In 1860 Mr. Harrison was nominated for the position of supreme court reporter, and then began his experience as a stump speaker. He canvassed the state thoroughly, and was elected by a handsome majority. In 1862 he raised the Seventeenth Indiana infantry, and was chosen its colonel. His regiment was composed of the rawest of material, but Col. Harrison employed all his time at first mastering military tactics and drilling his men; when he therefore came to move toward the east with Sherman his regiment was one of the best drilled and organized in the army. At Resaca he especially distinguished himself, and for his bravery at Peachtree Creek he was made a brigadier general, Gen. Hooker speaking of him in the most complimentary terms.

During the absence of Gen. Harrison in the field the supreme court declared the office of the supreme court reporter vacant, and another person was elected to the position. From the time of leaving Indiana with his regiment until the fall of 1864 he had taken no leave of absence, but having been nominated that year for the same office, he got a thirty-day leave of absence, and during that time made a brilliant canvass of the state, and was elected for another term. He then started to rejoin Sherman, but on the way was stricken down with scarlet fever, and after a most trying siege made his way to the front in time to participate in the closing incidents of the war.

In 1868 Gen. Harrison declined a re-election as reporter, and resumed the practice of law. In 1876 he was a candidate for governor. Although defeated, the brilliant campaign he made won for him a national reputation, and he was much sought, especially in the east, to In 1880, as usual, he took make speeches. an active part in the campaign, and was elected to the United States senate. Here he served six years, and was known as one of the ablest men, best lawyers and strongest debaters in that body. With the expiration of his senatorial term he returned to the practice of his profession, becoming the head of one of the strongest firms in the state of Indiana.

The political campaign of 1888 was one of the most memorable in the history of our country. The convention, which assembled in Chicago in June and named Mr. Harrison as the chief standard bearer of the republican party, was great in every particular, and on this account, and the attitude it assumed upon the vital questions of the day, chief among which was the tariff, awoke a deep interest in the campaign throughout the nation. Shortly after the nomination delegations began to visit Mr. Harrison at Indianapolis, his home. This movement became popular, and from all sections of the country societies, clubs and delegations journeyed thither to pay their respects to the distinguished statesman. The popularity of these was greatly increased on account of the remarkable speeches made by Mr. He spoke daily all through the Harrison. summer and autumn to these visiting delegations, and so varied, masterly and eloquent were his speeches that they at once placed him in the foremost rank of American orators and statesmen. On account of his eloquence as a speaker and his power as a debater, he was called upon at an uncommonly early age to take part in the discussion of the great questions that then began to agitate the country. He was an uncompromising anti-slavery man, and was matched against some of the most eminent democratic speakers of his state. No man who felt the touch of his blade desired to be pitted with him again. With all his eloquence as an orator he never spoke for oratorical effect, but his words always went like bullets to the mark. He is purely American in his ideas and is a splendid type of the American statesman. Gifted with quick perception, a logical mind and a ready tongue, he is one of the most distinguished impromptu speakers in the nation. Original in thought. precise in logic, terse in statement, yet withal faultless in eloquence, he is recognized as the sound statesman and brilliant orator of the day. His term of office as president of the United States expired on March 4, 1893, when he surrendered the high position to Stephen Grover Cleveland, allusion to which fact is made on a preceding page.

WILLIAM McKINLEY

ILLIAM McKINLEY, the twentyfourth president, and twice governor of Ohio, is one of the most distinguished politicians of his state and His ancestry lived in western Pennnation. sylvania, his father, William McKinley, who died recently at the age of eighty-five years, having been born on a farm in Pine township, Mercer county, that state—a farm which was recently and may be to-day in the possession of the Rose family, which is related to Mr. Mc-Kinley, and of which ex-Mayor W. G. Rose, of Cleveland, Ohio, is a member. William Mc-Kinley, Sr., was in the iron business all his life, as was also his father before him.

William McKinley, Jr., was born at Niles, Trumbull county, Ohio, January 29, 1843. He was educated in the common schools, in the academy at Poland, Ohio, and in the fall of 1860 he entered Allegheny college at Meadville, Pa., with the view of taking a full college course; but owing to sickness he was obliged to return home before the winter came on. During the winter of 1860-61 he taught a district school, and intended to return to Allegheny college, but in April, 1861, Fort Sumter was fired upon by the rebels, and the spirit of patriotism in young McKinley's heart was so strong that he enlisted in company E, Twenty-third Ohio volunteer infantry, with which he marched and fought in the ranks for His regiment was with fourteen months. Rosecrans and McClellan in Virginia and West Virginia. His first battle was that of Carnifax Ferry. After this he joined the army of the Potomac and fought with McClellan. Subsequently Private McKinley was promoted, first to second lieutenant, September, 24, 1862; then to first lieutenant, February 7, 1863, and then to captain, July 25, 1864. Then he served on the staff of Gen. R. B. Hayes and was afterward detailed to act as assistant adjutant-general on the staff of Gen. George Crook. He was with Sheridan in the Shenandoah valley, in the battles of Winchester, Cedar Creek, Fisher's Hill, Opequan, Kernstown, Cloyd Mountain and Berryville. For meritorious conduct he was brevetted major by President Lincoln, and after Gen. Crook's capture, in Maryland, he served on the staff of Maj.-Gen. Hancock, and later on that of Gen. S. S. Carroll, commander of the veteran reserve corps at Washington, D. C. He was present at the surrender of Gen. Lee, April 9, 1865, was with his regiment all through its campaigns and battles, and was mustered out of service July 26, 1865, having been in the army four years and one month.

Returning to Ohio, Maj. McKinley studied law with Hon, Charles S. Glidden and David Wilson, of Mahoning county, and then attended the law school at Albany, N. Y. In 1867 he was admitted to the bar, and in May of that year located in Canton, Ohio, where he formed a law partnership with Judge Belden, practicing in that relationship for two years. In 1869 he was elected on the republican ticket prosecuting attorney of Stark county, notwithstanding that county was democratic usually by a reliable majority, but in 1871 he was defeated for re-election by an adverse majority of forty-five. In 1876 he ran for congress, and, to the surprise of the older politicians, was elected and was then continuously in congress from his district (notwithstanding several gerrymanders made for the sake of defeating him) for fourteen consecutive years, with the exception of a part of his fourth term, when he was unseated by a democratic majority in congress and his place given to his competitor. He was a candidate for re-election to congress in 1890, but on account of fictitious alarm awakened by his political enemies as to the result, or the probable result, of the "McKinley tariff bill," which went into effect about October 1, 1890, a little more than one month before the election, he was defeated, the majority against him and in favor of his competitor, Lieut.-Gov. Warwick, being 303 votes. The year before the counties composing this district, which had been most outrageously gerrymandered for the sake of accomplishing his defeat, gave a majority to James E. Campbell for governor of 2,900. But while this defeat retired him from congress it at the same time made him governor in 1891, when he was elected over his opponent by a plurality of 21,511. In 1893 he was again elected governor by the phenomenal plurality of 80,995, his opponent this time being the Hon. Lawrence T. Neal.

While in congress Maj. McKinley was a member of the committee on revision of laws, the judiciary committee, the committee on expenditures in the post office department, and the committee on rules. Upon the nomination of Gen. Garfield for the presidency, Mr. McKinley took his place on the committee on ways and means, with which he served for the rest of his time in congress. It was while he was chairman of this committee that he framed the "McKinley Bill" which still bears its name, and provided for a high rate of duty on an immense number of articles imported from foreign countries, but made sugar free. Its purpose was to reduce the national revenue and to increase protection.

The work involved in the preparation of this bill is almost inconceivable. It contained thousands of items and covered nearly every interest in the country. For four weeks, while the house was in session, Mr. McKinley was almost constantly upon his feet answering numberless questions, meeting objections and giving information. With the exception of two minor amendments the bill passed exactly as it came from the hands of the committee, and its passage was the signal for a conflict which few statesmen in the history of free government could have withstood. It was assaulted as no other law has ever been assaulted in this generation and for a time even republican leaders had misgivings.

The indomitable courage and unbounded faith of Mr. McKinley during this trying period alone seemed to hold the republican party together. He never wavered for an instant. With a fervor born of conviction, he had thrown his ambitions, his hopes, almost his very life, into the cause he represented. Its defeat was his defeat; its triumph his triumph. the apparent defeat of his cause in 1890, and again in 1892, he arose courageous, steadfast, hopeful. Others might change, others might doubt, others might modify their views, but he stood firm for a protective tariff—for the American producer against the foreign producer. He accepted with true American spirit the popular verdict and challenged the interpretation put upon it by political opponents. took an appeal to the people and in two years from the crushing defeat of 1892 he led the republican hosts to the greatest victory and the most stupendous change in the popular vote of a country ever recorded. The tide turned; the result of the free trade policy was apparent, the object lesson was received, noted and the decision reversed.

In 1884 Maj. McKinley was a delegate at large to the republican national convention which nominated Hon. James G. Blaine. In 1888 he was again a delegate at large to the republican national convention, and this time was in favor of the Hon. John Sherman for the party's candidate, but the complications then were numerous and difficult of solution, because of Mr. Blaine's refusal to be again the nominee. Many thought the nomination of Maj. McKinley would solve all problems and harmonize all factions, but in spite of all arguments and all persuasions he remained true to his state and to himself by steadfastly refusing to permit his name to be used as a presidential candidate. Again, in 1892, Maj. McKinley was a delegate at large to the Minneapolis convention which renominated President Harrison, and in this convention, in spite of all remonstrances that he could make, he received within a fraction of as many votes as were given to the idol of the republican party, James G. Blaine, the latter receiving 1825-6 votes, while McKinley received 1821-6 votes. Presdent Harrison was, however, renominated, only to be defeated by Grover Cleveland.

In his political campaigns he has manifested brilliant qualities as an orator. It is probably true that more people have heard him discuss political questions than have ever listened to any other campaign speaker in the United States. Thousands of people assemble to hear him; he always commands the rapt attention of his hearers, and he frequently elicits at least hearty applause.

His great tour in the fall of 1894 is probably without a parallel in the history of the United States. Everywhere thousands greeted him. For more than eight weeks he averaged seven speeches a day, and it is estimated that during that time 2,000,000 people listened to him. It is altogether likely that the secret of his power over an audience lies in his sincerity, as he employs no adventitious methods and is not amusing, his simple and single aim being apparently to convince by argument fairly and squarely.

The preliminary canvass or campaign of 1896, which resulted in the nomination of Mr. McKinley for the presidency, was remarkable in many ways, but in no respect more so than in the unanimity of public sentiment which made it possible to predict with almost absolute certainty weeks before the convention the selection of the champion of protection and a sound financial policy as the candidate. His choice as the representative of the party best fitted to be entrusted with the administration of national affairs was a natural sequence—the resuit of sentiment that had been engendered during the four years previous, and yet it had every characteristic of spontaneity. The increasing favor with which he was regarded by the voters of the country was, until a few months before the convention, a steady, rapid, but withal a natural growth, and the almost universal endorsement of his candidacy, which came a short time before the St. Louis convention, must be attributed in a great measure to the desire of the American people to return to an idea and a policy which a majority of the citizens of the United States came to regard as absolutely indispensable to individual and national prosperity of which the distinguished Ohioan stood as the recognized exponent. The national republican convention convened in the city of St. Louis, Mo., June 16, 1896, and upon the first ballot Mr. McKinley was nominated with the greatest enthusiasm, receiving 6613 of the 700 ballots cast.

In many respects the campaign of 1896 was one of the most remarkable presidential contests in the history of the nation, but the outcome, as foreshadowed for weeks before the election, resulted in the triumph of Mr. Mc-Kinley over the brilliant and popular young Nebraskian, William J. Bryan, a man of distinguished ability, whose uncompromising advocacy of the free and unlimited coinage of silver and hostility to the American idea of protection made him a formidable opponent. Mr. McKinley entered upon the discharge of his high official functions on the 4th day of March, 1897, with the unbounded confidence of his political party and the American people, and thus far he has steadily and courageously followed the lines mapped out by the platform upon which he was nominated. And his administration in ability and wisdom gives every promise of comparing favorably with those of the distinguished men who have preceded him in the high office of the presidency.

President McKinley was married January 25, 1871, to Miss Ida Saxton, who is an accomplished lady and daughter of James A. Saxton, of Canton, Ohio. They have had born to them two children, both of whom died in infancy. In religion President McKinley and his wife are Methodists, as were his father and mother. His grandfather, however, was a Presbyterian, and was a member of the Lisbon Presbyterian church from 1822 to 1836, during the pastorate of Rev. Dr. Vallandigham, father of Clement L. Vallandigham. As already stated President McKinley's father died recently at the age of eighty-five, but his mother is still living.

"There is probably not a more stalwart and sturdy figure to-day before the American people than William McKinley. The story of his life is not only instructive but interesting; it is the history of an American for Americans; its activity is so interwoven in the life of the republic during his career of the past thirty years that political friends and foes may read it with profit and learn an important lesson."

GOVERNORS OF OHIO.

GOVERNORS OF OHIO.

RTHUR ST. CLAIR, one of the most noted characters of our early colonial days, was a native of Scotland, being born at Edinburg in 1735. Becoming a surgeon in the British army, he subsequently crossed the Atlantic with his regiment and thenceforward was identified with the history of this country until the day of his Serving as a lieutenant with Wolfe in the memorable campaign against Quebec, St. Clair won sufficient reputation to obtain appointment as commander of Fort Ligonier, Pa., where a large tract of land was granted to him. During the Revolutionary war he espoused the colonial cause, and before its close had risen to the rank of major-general. In 1875 he was elected a delegate to the Continental congress and afterward became its president. After the passage of the ordinance of 1787, St. Clair was appointed first military governor of the Northwest territory, which then embraced the territory now comprised within the boundaries of the present state of Ohio, with headquarters at Fort Washington, now Cincinnati. In 1791 he undertook an expedition against the northwestern Indians, which resulted in the great disaster known in western history as "St Clair's defeat." On November 4 the Indians surprised and routed his whole force of about 1,400 regulars and militia, in what is now

Darke county, Ohio, killing over 900 men and capturing his artillery and camp equipage. Gen. St. Clair held the office of territorial governor until 1802, when he was removed by President Jefferson. He returned to Ligonier, Pa., poor, aged and infirm. The state granted him an annuity which enabled him to pass the last years of his life in comfort. He died near Greensburgh, Pa., August 31, 1818, leaving a family of one son and three daughters.

HARLES WILLING BYRD, who was secretary of the Northwest territory, and who succeeded Gov. St. Clair as governor, on the removal of the latter from office, was born in Virginia, received a liberal education and settled in Ohio. it is not practicable to find fully authentic material for a full biography of Gov. Byrd, it may be of interest to recite briefly the reasons for the removal of Gov. St. Clair, which are of course the reasons for Mr. Byrd becoming governor of the territory. St. Clair's government was very unpopular, and when the people became desirous of forming a state government in 1801, and found themselves unable to secure a majority of the legislature, they sent Thomas Worthington to congress to obtain if possible a law under which a convention could be called to consider the expediency of forming a state, and framing a constitution therefor. This convention met in Chillicothe in November, 1802, voted to form a state government and adopted a constitution, all this notwithstanding the fact that the territory did not then contain the 60,000 inhabitants required at that time.

But this was a small difficulty compared with the prohibition in the ordinance of 1787 against slavery in the territory of the northwest. This clause tended to prevent immigration to Ohio from Virginia and other southern states; and the attempt was made to so frame a constitution for the new state that slavery in a somewhat modified form could be established. When this clause was proposed it was discovered by the opponents of slavery that on the morrow there would be a majority of one in its favor, and thus, if it were adopted, the curse of slavery would be fixed upon the state. Judge Ephraim Cutler, of Washington county, a delegate to the convention, and a son of one of the principal framers of the ordinance of 1787, was lying sick in bed, when this situation was revealed, and Gen. Putnam, hastening to his bedside, urged him to reach the convention hall at the earliest practicable moment the next morning. Judge Cutler having next day reached the hall, made an impassioned appeal to the delegates in opposition to the proposed action of the convention, and won over the one delegate necessary to save the state from the blighting curse of slavery.

Gov. St. Clair and his friends looked upon the convention as little short of revolutionary, the governor taking strong grounds against the formation of a state government, before the convention began the labors of the day. Their utter disregard of this advice filled him with irritation, and in the bitterness of his heart he declared, in the hearing of unfriendly listeners, that he no longer had confidence in republican institutions, and that in his opinion, without some stronger form of government, anarchy seemed inevitable. These remarks were quickly reported to President Thomas Jefferson, who immediately removed St. Clair from his office, and the secretary of the territory, Charles W. Byrd, became acting governor, serving until the state government was formed under the constitution, which, as framed by the convention, was declared by that convention, without having been submitted to the people for their ratification, to be the fundamental law of the land. After the expiration of his brief term as governor of the Northwest territory, Gov. Byrd was appointed by President Jefferson United States judge for the district of Ohio.

DWARD TIFFIN, first governor of Ohio upon the organization of the state, in 1803, was a native of England, born in the city of Carlisle on the 19th day of June, 1766. After coming to the United States he studied medicine, located at Charlestown, W. Va., in 1784, and in 1789 received his degree from the university of Pennsylvania. In the year last named he was united in marriage with Mary Worthington, sister of Gov. Thomas Worthington, and in 1790 united with the Methodist church, of which he soon afterward became a local In 1796 Mr. Tiffin settled at Chillipreacher. cothe. Ohio, where he preached and practiced medicine, and was instrumental in organizing a number of local congregations in that part of the state. The same year he was elected to the legislature of the Northwest territory, became speaker of that body, and in 1802 was chosen president of the convention that formed the state constitution. He proved to be a potential factor in political affairs, and in 1803 was elected first governor of the state under the constitution. He was re-elected in 1805, and proved a most capable chief executive, but resigned in 1807 to become United States senator, having been elected to the latter body as successor to his brother-in-law, Hon. Thomas Worthington. Gov. Tiffin's senatorial career was cut short on account of the death of his wife, by reason of which he resigned in March, 1809, and for a time lived a retired life. Subsequently he married again, and afterward was elected to the lower house of the state legislature, in which he served two terms as speaker.

At the expiration of his legislative experience, Gov. Tiffin resumed the practice of medicine at Chillicothe, and in 1812 was appointed by President Madison commissioner of the general land office, having been the first person to fill that position. On assuming his official functions he removed to the national capital and organized the system that has obtained in the land office until the present time; in 1814 he was instrumental in having the papers of his office removed to Virginia, thus saving them from destruction when the public buildings in Washington were burned by the British. Becoming dissatisfied with residing in Washington and wishing to return west, Gov. Tiffin succeeded in exchanging his position for that of surveyor of public lands northwest of the Ohio river, held by Josiah Meigs, the change being sanctioned by the president and senate, and he discharged the duties of the latter position until July, 1829, receiving while on his deathbed an order from President Jackson to deliver the office to a successor. During his long period of public service, Gov. Tiffin maintained most scrupulously his ministerial relations, and preached the gospel whenever occasion would admit. He was on familiar terms with Gen. Washington, who always spoke of him in terms of praise, and he will always be remembered as one of the leading spirits in the formative period of Ohio's history. His death occurred at Chillicothe on the 9th day of August, 1829.

MOMAS KIRKER, who succeeded Edward Tiffin as governor of Ohio, is one of the few governors of the state of whom but little can be learned. In 1807 there was a remarkable contest for the governorship of the state. The two opposing candidates were Return Jonathan Meigs and Nathaniel Massie. The former received a majority of the votes, and therefore, so far as the people were concerned, was elected governor of the state. The general assembly, however, declared him to be ineligible to the office, on the ground that he was not a resident of the state, and as Mr. Massie had not received a sufficient number of votes, he had not been elected governor, and the election was therefore entirely void. Hon. Kirker bing then speaker of the state senate, became acting governor by virtue of his office as speaker, when Gov. Edward Tiffin resigned his office in order to take his seat in the United States senate. Gov. Kirker remained in the office of governor until after the election, in 1808, of Samuel Huntington, who had been elected by the people. At the time of serving as governor he was a resident of Adams county, and he served in the general assembly of the state for twenty-five years.

AMUEL HUNTINGTON, the second governor elected by the people of Ohio, was born at Norwich, Conn., in 1765, and graduated at Yale college in 1785. He adopted the profession of law, in 1795 married a lady of his own name, and attended strictly to the duties of his profession in the town of his birth until the year 1800, when he resolved to visit that western country which was then attracting to it so many residents of the New England states. First stopping at Youngstown, Ohio, he from there went to Marietta, where he spent the summer, and in the fall of that year returned to Norwich. The following spring, taking his wife and children in an Ohio wagon (then so called), they arrived, after weeks of toilsome travel, at Cleveland, then a settlement of doubtful name as a healthy abode, as they found that many who had preceded them had vacated the cabins they had first built and had removed to the higher ground back of the town to escape the sickness so prevalent near the lake. He erected a strongly-built house, as attacks by drunken and riotous Indians were not uncommon. Mr. Huntington soon entered upon public life. Gen. Saint Clair appointed him second in command of a regiment of Trumbull county militia, and he was shortly afterward elevated to the position of presiding judge in the first court in that part of the territory. In 1802 he was a member of the constitutional convention, and by that body appointed state senator from Trumbull county, the name then borne by the territory now known as the northeastern portion of the state and which at present is divided into six counties. For some time he was speaker or president of the state senate, and by the legislature elected to a seat on the supreme bench. When Michigan was organized as a territory Judge Huntington was offered the position of judge of the district court of that territory, but this he declined, as well as other important offices which were pressed upon him. The prevailing unhealthiness of Cleveland finally induced him to remove his residence to Newburg, where he erected a grist-mill, then a very important construction and advantageous to the settlers. In 1809 he purchased a mill, located on the eastern shore of Grand river, between Painesville and the lake, and erected a mansioncommodious, and, for those days, rather imposing in its style of architecture. This house remains to attest by its position the good taste of him who built it. A conflict of authority arose between the legislative and judicial departments of the state while Judge Huntington was on the supreme bench. The legislature passed a law conferring certain rights upon justices of the peace which the judges of the supreme court declared to be unconstitutional. Thereupon the whole house filed articles of impeachment against the judges, but in the midst of this confusion the people of Ohio had elected Judge Huntington governor of the state. He, having resigned, was therefore not brought to trial, and it being impossible to obtain twothirds of the legislative vote against the other two judges, they consequently escaped conviction. Nothing of particular moment occurred the term he held office, but his prominence prevented his retiring to private life. In 1812 he was, during the second war with Great Britain, a member of the Ohio legislature. The destruction of life and property by the Indians during that year was such that Gov. Huntington, having with Gen. Cass visited Washington to represent to the authorities there the condition of affairs in Ohio, was appointed district paymaster, with the rank of colonel, and returned to the camp of Gen. Harrison with a supply of funds in the shape of government drafts. He remained for many months in the army and until peace was declared, when he returned to his home, where he subsequently lived peacefully until 1817, during which year he died a comparatively young man, being but fifty-two years old. His character for strict integrity, great executive ability and accomplished scholarship was second to that of no other governor.

ETURN JONATHAN MEIGS, who succeeded Samuel Huntington in the gubernatorial chair, was born in Middletown, Conn., in March, 1765, the son of Return J. Meigs, a distinguished American soldier, whose name is inseparably connected with the war of American independence. Gov. Meigs was graduated from Yale college in 1785, after which he studied law and began the practice of the same at Marietta, Ohio, at which place his father had previously settled. He entered the army at the breaking out of the Indian war, and was sent on a commission to the British commander at Detroit, by Gen. St. Clair, in 1790, and later took part in a number of battles with the savages. He rose rapidly in his profession, and in 1803-4 was chief justice of the Ohio supreme court; later he had charge of the Saint Charles circuit in Louisiana until 1806, with the brevet rank of lieutenant-colonel in the United States army, being also judge of the supreme court of said district during the years of 1805 and 1806. Mr. Meigs was further honored, in 1807, by being appointed judge of the United States district court of Michigan, in which capacity he continued until 1808, when he was elected to the United States senate from Ohio. honorable distinction acquired by Mr. Meigs as a jurist was not dimmed by his senatorial experience, and his record in the national legislature is replete with duty ably and conscientiously performed. He served in the senate from January, 1809, till May, 1810.

In October, 1807, Mr. Meigs was the democratic candidate for governor of Ohio, and after the election, which went in his favor by a decided majority, his competitor, Nathaniel Massie, contested the same on the ground that Meigs had not been a resident of the state for the four years next preceding the election, as provided by the constitution. The general assembly, in joint convention, decided that Meigs was not entitled to the office, but it does not appear that his competitor was allowed to assume the same; Thomas Kirker, acting governor, continued to discharge the duties of the office until December, 1808, when Samuel Huntington was inaugurated as his immediate successor.

In 1810 Mr. Meigs was again a candidate for governor, and at the ensuing election was victorious, defeating his competitor by a He was triumphantly relarge majority. elected in 1812 and filled the office with distinguished ability during the trying years of the last war with England, his services in behalf of the national government throughout that struggle being far greater than those of any other governor, and of such a patriotic character as to elicit the warmest praise from the president and others high in authority. He assisted in the organization of the state militia, garrisoned the forts on the border, thus securing safety to the exposed settlements, and did much toward strengthening the army under Gen. Harrison. Near the expiration of his gubernatorial term, in 1814, Gov. Meigs resigned to accept the appointment of postmaster-general in the cabinet of President Madison, to fill the place made vacant by the death of Gideon Granger; he continued in office under President Monroe until 1823, in December of which year he retired from active life and spent the remainder of his days at his home in Marietta, dving March 29, 1825.

THNIEL LOOKER, the fourth governor of Ohio, was born in the state of New York in 1757. He was a private soldier in the Revolutionary war, going into the army from his native state, and serving through the war. He was a man of humble origin and a farmer most of his life. In 1784, having received a land warrant for his services during the war of the Revolution, he crossed the Alleghany mountains, and located his land in what was then the wilderness of the territory northwest of the Ohio river, within the limits of the future state of the same name. Upon this grant he erected his cabin and began the labor of clearing his farm, as did other pioneers of his day. Upon the organization of the state he was elected a member of the lower house of the general assembly, and by increasing his knowledge and acquaintanceship with the people of the new state, he so rose in popular favor and esteem as to be elected to the senate. Of this body he eventually became president, and by virtue of holding this office, when Gov. Return J. Meigs resigned, in 1814, to accept the position of postmaster-general in the cabinet of President Madison, became governor of He served eight months, and afterward was a candidate before the people for election to the office of govenor, but was defeated by his opponent, Thomas Worthington. Looker afterward returned to his farm, where he lived respected by all for his unusual intelligence, his clear logical mind, and his pleasing disposition. But little else is known of Gov. Looker, except that he died unmarried.

THOMAS WORTHINGTON, fourth elected governor of Ohio, was born near Charlestown, Va., July 16, 1773. He received a liberal education, but when a young man went to sea and continued before the mast for three years—from 1790 to 1703. In 1707 he became a resident of Ross county, Ohio, served as a member of the territorial legislature in 1799-1801, and was chosen delegate to the state constitutional convention in the year 1802. He was elected to the United States senate as a democrat immediately after the adoption of the state constitution and served in that body from October 17, 1803, till March 7, 1807; was again chosen to fill the unexpired term caused by the resignation of Return J. Meigs, Jr., and served from January 8, 1811, until his resignation in 1814. Mr. Worthington was elected governor of Ohio in 1814 and served till 1818—having been chosen his own successor in 1816. After the expiration of his second gubernatorial term Gov. Worthington became canal commissioner, which position he held till his death. He was a public-spirited man and to him is the great commonwealth not a little indebted for much of its development and prosperity.

To Gov. Worthington belongs the unique distinction of being the only Ohio governor ever arrested and started to jail for debt. In 1815 or 1816, Gov. Worthington contracted with Judge Jarvis Pike to grub and chop the timber off the present state-house square. The governor was a non-resident of Franklin county, residing at Chillicothe. Some misunderstanding arose as to the payment of Judge Pike for his labors, whereupon he sued a capias from the court of Squire King, and had the governor arrested and marched off to jail. He was not locked up, however, the matter having been amicably adjusted. Gov. Worthington departed this life in the city of New York, June 20, 1827.

THAN ALLEN BROWN, seventh governor and the fifth elected by the people of Ohio, was born on the shores of Long Island Sound in Fairfield county, Conn., July 4, 1766, and died at Indianapolis, Ind., February 24, 1852. His father, Roger Brown, was an intelligent farmer of wealth, who, to secure the advantages of a liberal education for his children, employed a teacher of good ability to instruct them at home. Under such tuition Ethan's quickness of apprehension and extraordinary memory enabled him to acquire a knowledge of the Latin, Greek and French languages not inferior to that of most college graduates of the present day. Having determined to adopt the profession of a lawyer, he then procured the necessary books and began the study of law at home, at the same time assisting in the labors of his father's farm. After thus acquiring some legal knowledge he went to New York city and entered the law office of Alexander Hamilton, who, as a lawyer and statesman, had achieved at that time a national reputation. Here he soon won the esteem and friendship of Mr. Hamilton, while also he was brought into contact with others of the ablest men of the day, and, mingling with the most refined and cultivated society of the city, his mind was developed and stimulated and he acquired the elegance and polish of manners for which he was remarkable in after-life. Diverted from the study of law at this time, he engaged in business, by which he obtained very considerable property, but subsequently he again entered upon his neglected study, and in 1802 he was admitted to practice. urged by love of adventure and a desire to see the principal portion of that state which, in that year, had qualified for admission into the Union, he, with a cousin, Capt. John Brown, started on horseback and followed the Indian trails from east to west through middle and western Pennsylvania until they reached Brownsville on the Monongahela river. ing brought a considerable sum of money with them they here purchased two flat-bottomed boats, loaded them with flour, and placing crews upon them started for New Orleans, which city they reached in safety, but not being able to sell their cargoes to advantage they shipped the flour to Liverpool, England, and took passage themselves in the same vessel. Having disposed of their flour at good prices, they returned to America, landing at Baltimore the same year. Then his father, wishing to secure a large tract of western land, eventually to make it his home, he empowered his son to select and purchase the same, which he proceeded to do, locating it near the present town of Rising Sun, Ind., that locality having attracted his attention on his flat-boat trip to New Orleans. Hither his father removed from Connecticut, in 1814, when that part of the Northwest territory which subsequently became Indiana was canvassing delegates to hold a territorial convention.

Ten years subsequently, however, and after securing the land mentioned, Ethan Allen Brown began the practice of law in Cincinnati, where he soon took a prominent position in the profession and secured a large income for his professional services. In 1810 he was chosen by the Ohio legislature a judge of the supreme court of the state, a position he held with distinguished ability during the eight following years, and in 1818 was elected governor of the state. His administration is marked for the prosecution and completion of important internal improvements, among the chief of which may be mentioned that important work, the "Ohio canal," and which was nicknamed "Brown's Folly," In 1820 he was re-elected, and in 1821 elected to the United States senate and served one term with distinction. he was appointed minister to Brazil, remaining in that country four years and giving general satisfaction, when he resigned and came home. A few months later, at the urgent request of President Andrew Jackson, he accepted the position of commissioner of public lands, held the office two years, and then retired finally from public life. Gov. Brown never married, and the close of his life was spent among his relatives at Rising Sun. After reaching the age of eighty-two years, with not more than a week's sickness during all the years of his long life, he died suddenly while attending a democratic convention at Indianapolis, and was buried at Rising Sun, near the grave of his venerated father, leaving an enduring record of a useful and well-spent life.

LLEN TRIMBLE, who filled out the unexpired term of Ethan Allen Brown as governor of Ohio, and also served as governor by election from 1827 to 1830, was born in Augusta county, Va., March 24, 1783. He was the son of Capt. James Trimble, who removed in 1784 to Lexington, Ky., and who died in that state about the year 1804. Later Allen Trimble came to Ohio, settling in the county of Highland, where he served in various official positions, including those of clerk of the courts and recording secretary, filling the last two offices for a period of about seven years. He took part in the war of 1812 as commander of a regiment of mounted troops under Gen. William Henry Harrison, and in 1816 was chosen a member of the state legislature. Subsequently, from 1817 to 1826, he served as state senator, and was also speaker of the house for several terms. In 1821 he was appointed governor, and, as already stated, was elected to the office in 1826, and discharged the duties of the position in an eminently satisfactory manner until 1830. In 1846, Gov. Trimble was chosen president of the state board of agriculture, being the first man honored with that office, and served as such until 1848. While governor he was untiring in promoting the cause of education in Ohio, and the present excellent public school system is indebted to him for much of its efficiency; he also encouraged manufacturing and did much toward improving the penal institutions of the state. Politically Gov. Trimble was a federalist; his death occurred at Hillsborough, Ohio, February 2, 1870.

EREMIAH MORROW, sixth governor elected under the state constitution, was born in Gettysburg, Pa., October 6, 1771. In early manhood he removed to the Northwest territory and in 1802 was chosen delegate to the convention that framed the constitution of Ohio. Politically he was an ardent democrat, and in 1803 was elected a representative in the congress of the United States, in which body he served for a period of ten years. He did much toward promoting legislation in behalf of the western section of the United States, and for some time was chairman of the committee on public lands. In 1814 he was commissioner to treat with the Indians west of the Miami river, and from 1813 till 1819 served with distinction in the United States senate. In 1822 Mr. Morrow was elected governor of Ohio and served as such until 1826, having been re-elected in 1824. From 1826 to 1828 he was state senator, later became canal commissioner, and for some time served as president of the Little Miami Railroad company. In 1841 he was again elected to represent his district in the national house of representatives, in which capacity he served a single term. Gov. Morrow left the impress of his character on the commonwealth and his is among the many illustrious names which have given Ohio so prominent a position among her sister states; his death occurred in the county of Warren, on the 22nd day of March, 1852.

UNCAN McARTHUR, distinguished as a soldier and statesman, and governor of Ohio from 1831 to 1832, was a native of the state of New York, born in the county of Dutchess, on the 14th day of June, 1772. When he was a mere lad his parents emigrated to the western part of Pennsylvania, and at the age of eighteen he volunteered in Gen. Harmar's expedition against the Miami Indians, in which he distinguished himself by many acts of bravery. Subsequently he acted as scout in the warfare with the Indians in Ohio and Kentucky, and after the cessation of hostilities, in 1794, settled near Chillicothe, Ohio, where he became the possessor of large tracts of real estate. For some years after settling in Ohio Gov. McArthur followed the profession of civil engineer, later he became interested in political matters and in 1805 was elected to the lower house of the Ohio legislature. In 1808 he was appointed major-general of the territorial militia, and at the beginning of the war of 1812 was commissioned colonel of the First Ohio volunteers. He was second in command at Detroit, when that ill-fated post was surrendered to the British by Gen. Hull, and it is stated that so great was his chagrin and anger at the capitulation that he tore off his epaulettes and broke his sword in a fit of indigna-Gov. McArthur was commissioned brigadier-general in 1813, and upon the resignation of Gen. William Henry Harrison the year following, he succeeded to the command of the western army. He planned the conquest of Canada, crossed the Saint Clair river in 1814 with a strong force, and after considerable manuvering returned to Detroit by way of Saint Thomas, and discharged his force at Sandwich the latter part of the aforesaid year. In the meantime, 1813, he had been elected by the democrats to a seat in the congress of the United States, but declined to leave the army, remaining with the command until honorably discharged June 15, 1815. On leaving the army Gov. McArthur was returned to the state legislature, and during the years 1816-17 served as commissioner to negotiate treaties with the Indians, by which their lands in Ohio were ceded to the general government in 1818. From 1817 to 1819 he was again a member of the lower house of the legislature, of which he was made speaker, and in 1822 was elected to congress on the democratic ticket and served as a member of that body from December 1, 1823, till March, 1825. In 1830 he was elected governor of Ohio, which position he filled very acceptably for one term, and in 1832 was again a candidate for congress, but lost the election by a single ballot.

The record of Gov. McArthur, both military and civil, is without a blemish, and he will ever be remembered as one of the leading soldiers and officers of the great commonwealth of Ohio. While governor he suffered severe injuries from an accident, and never entirely recovered from the effects of the same. He died near Chillicothe, on the 28th day of April, 1839.

OBERT LUCAS, the immediate successor of Duncan McArthur, was born in Shepherdstown, Va., April 1,1781, and was a direct descendant of William Penn, the founder of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania. His father bore a distinguished part in the war of the Revolution, serving thoughout that struggle as captain in the American army, and was a trusted friend of Gen. Washington. Robert Lucas spent his youthful years in his native state, and about the beginning of the present century removed to Ohio, where in due time he became majorgeneral of the state militia. Subsequently he was commissioned captain in the Ninteenth United States infantry, and in February, 1813, became lieutenant-colonel of the same, serving as such until June of the same year, when he resigned. Immediately after leaving the government service Mr. Lucas was made brigadiergeneral of Ohio militia, and as such served from July, 1813, till the following September, in defense of the frontier. In 1814 he was elected to the Ohio legislature, in the deliberations of which he took a prominent part, and in 1832 presided over the democratic national convention which nominated Andrew Jackson for a second term. In 1832 General Lucas was elected governor of Ohio, was re-elected in 1834, and in 1838 was made first territorial governor of Iowa, at which time the now state of that name was erected into a territory, including Minnesota and the Dakotas, and December 28, 1846, as a state. He was a man of marked ability, possessing great energy, and was noted as a man of strong impulses and strict integrity. He died February 7, 1853, in Iowa City, at the advanced age of nearly seventy-two years.

OSEPH VANCE, governor of Ohio for one term, 1837-38, was a native of Pennsylvania, born March 21, 1781, in the county of Washington, of Scotch-Irish descent. While quite young he was taken by his parents to Kentucky, where he grew to manhood, after which he removed to Ohio, locating at Urbana, where he became a successful merchant and married Miss Mary Lemen, of that city. Subsequently he turned his attention to farming and stock raising, in which he also met with success and financial profit, in the meantime becoming conversant with public affairs. Gov. Vance, becoming quite popular, was elected to and served in the legislature in 1812-16, and in 1822 was elected to the congress of the United States, in which be served by successive re-elections until Originally Gov. Vance was a March, 1835. democrat, and as such was elected to the aforesaid offices, but later he became a whig, which party sent him to congress in 1842. He served through two terms, during one of them as chairman of the committee on claims. the meantime, 1836, he was elected governor, and as chief executive of the commonwealth his record will compare favorably with those of his illustrious predecessors and successors. He was a delegate to the whig national convention of 1848, and while attending the constitutional convention of 1850 was stricken with paralysis, from which he suffered extremely until his death, August 24, 1852, near the city of Urbana.

ILSON SHANNON, the eleventh governor of Ohio whom the people elected, was born February 24, 1803, in Belmont county, and was the first white child born in Mount Olivet township, that county. He was also the first governor of Ohio who was a native of the state. parents crossed the Alleghanv mountains from Pennsylvania and settled in Belmont county, Ohio, in 1802. In January of the next year the father of the future governor, whose name was George Shannon, and who had settled on a farm, upon his arrival in that county went out hunting. Late in the day, while returning home, he lost his way, became bewildered and wandered round and round, finally sitting down by a large maple tree and freezing to death. His tracks were plainly visible next morning in the deep snow that had fallen during the night.

Upon the farm his father had selected young Wilson Shannon was reared. fifteen years old he attended the Ohio university at Athens, remaining one year, and for two years afterward was a student at the Transylvania university at Lexington, Ky. Returning home, he began the study of law in the office of Charles Hammond and David Jennings, completing his studies with them in Saint Clairsville, which town became the county seat. There he practiced for eight years. In 1832 he was the democratic nominee for congress, but was defeated by a small majority. In 1834 he was elected prosecuting attorney, and was so assiduous in the performance of his duties that his party elected him governor of the state in 1838 by a majority of At the close of his first term he was again a candidate, but was defeated by his opponent, Thomas Corwin, the whig candidate, who was opposed to slavery, while Gov. Shannon, together with the entire democratic party, favored it. The most remarkable thing about this election was that the democratic candidate for president carried the state by about 25,000 majority. Gov. Shannon then returned to Belmont county to the practice of the law. In 1842 he was again elected governor of the state over Gov. Corwin, both of whom during the campaign had thoroughly canvassed the entire state, as they had done in 1840.

In the spring of 1843 President Tyler offered Gov. Shannon the appointment of minister to Mexico, which he accepted, resigning his governorship and going to the city of Mexico, where he remained two years, when he was compelled to return home, because Mexico, on account of difficulties between the two countries over the annexation of Texas to the Union, severed all diplomatic relations with the United States. After being then engaged for several years in the practice of the law, Gov. Shannon was elected to congress by a majority of 1,300. In congress, by the manner in which he performed his duties, he attracted the attention of President Pierce, and was appointed territorial governor of Kansas, the most difficult position he had tried to fill. The contest on the soil of Kansas was more bitter and persistent than anywhere in the country, both pro-slavery and anti-slavery partisans being determined to carry out their own views in that state. It was therefore impossible for any man to preserve peace within her borders, especially as the weight of the administration at Washington was in favor of the pro-slavery party. Shannon, therefore, after fourteen months as governor in Kansas, was superseded by John W. Geary, who gave but little better satisfaction than had Gov. Shannon. The following year Gov. Shannon removed his family to Lecompton, Kans., the capital, and began the practice of the law in that turbulent state. His reputation soon gained for him a very large and profitable practice, as there was much litigation under the pre-emption laws of the United States.

When Kansas was admitted to the Union, Topeka became the capital, Lecompton rapidly declined, and Gov. Shannon removed his office and residence to Lawrence, where he resided until his death, highly regarded by all who knew him as having been a faithful public servant, and as a most conscientious man. His death occurred in September, 1877.

MOMAS CORWIN, the twelfth governor of Ohio elected by the people, was born in Bourbon county, Ky., July 29, 1794. In 1798 his father, Matthias Corwin, who subsequently became a judge, removed to what afterward became Lebanon, Warren county, Ohio, and there, in a log school-house, taught by a school teacher named Dunlevy, young Corwin obtained what was then considered a thorough English education. When he was seventeen years old he drove a wagon-load of provisions for the army to the headquarters of Gen. Harrison, and this event had a potential influence upon his subsequent career. In 1817, after having studied law one year, he was admitted to practice, and in March, 1818, was elected prosecuting attorney of his county. In 1822 he was elected to the legislature, having become by this time a well-read lawyer and a fluent speaker. turning to his law practice he was again elected prosecuting attorney. In 1829 he was again elected to the Ohio legislature, and the following year to congress on the whig ticket. By subsequent re-elections he was kept in congress for ten years. In 1840 he was elected governor of Ohio, serving one term. In 1845 he was elected to the United States senate, and discharged his duties there with great ability and faithfulness until 1850. It is on his attitude while in this body that his memory will be perpetuated to posterity, for he showed the greatest courage imaginable, and took the true ground in reference to the war with Mexico, which is now generally recognized as a wholly unnecessary and unwarranted war, begun without proper authority from congress, and solely for the purpose of conquest, in order that slavery might be extended into free territory. His speech against that war was bold, patriotic and high-toned, and it is probable that had he subsequently been consistent in the attitude he then assumed his party would have made him its candidate for the presidency in 1852, but he became an advocate of the Wilmot proviso, which by many is believed to have sealed his political career, so far as national promotion is concerned. For his action, however, in connection with this proviso, he was appointed, by President Fillmore, secretary of the United States treasury, a position which he held until 1852, when he resigned, and returned to private life among the hills of Warren county.

Not long afterward he opened a law office in Cincinnati, and was again elected to congress in 1858 and 1860. By President Lincoln he was appointed minister to Mexico, and on April 11, 1861, he embarked for Vera Cruz, whence he went to the city of Mexico, where he served his country efficiently until the close of the war, returning to the United States in April, 1865, opening a law office in Washington, D. C., but had no more than settled down to practice there than he was stricken with apoplexy, and died after an illness of three days.

While he was in congress he never rose to speak unless he had something to say; hence he always commanded the attention of that branch in which he was serving. His greatness in oratory is beyond question, his patriotism no one ever doubted, and in his private life, from boyhood until his death, every one recognized the integrity and purity of his character, which, during his whole public career, took on the form of the highest sense of honor, and through which he always maintained his reputation among his countrymen.

November 13, 1822, he married Miss Sarah Ross, a sister of Hon. Thomas R. Ross, who served three terms in congress. By his marriage he had no children, so that he left nothing to his country but his labor therefor and his great and his everlasting fame.

HOMAS WELLES BARTLEY, who succeeded Gov. Wilson Shannon as governor of Ohio, upon that gentleman's resignation, as mentioned in his life above inserted, was born February 11, 1812, at the home of his parents, in Jefferson county, Ohio. His ancestry emigrated from Northumberland county, England, in 1724, and settled in Londoun county, Va., but subsequently removed to Fayette county, Pa., where his father, Mordecai Bartley, was born. His mother was Elizabeth Welles, and Gov. Bartley was named Thomas Welles, from her father, Thomas Welles, of Brownsville, Pa. Having received a liberal education under his father's care and guidance, and having graduated with the degree of bachelor of arts from Washington & Jefferson college, a Presbyterian institution of learning located at Washington Pa., and founded in 1802, Mr. Bartley studied law in Washington, D. C., and was licensed to practice at Mansfield, Ohio, in 1834. The following year he had conferred upon him by his alma mater the henorary degree of master of arts. Having taken a high position at the bar he was elected attorney-general of Ohio and served as such four years; being afterward appointed United States district attorney, he served in that position also four years. Subsequently he was elected to the lower house of the general assembly of the state, served therein one term, and was then elected to the state senate, in which he served four years. While president of the senate of Ohio, in 1844, he became governor of the state, through the resignation of Gov. Shannon, who had been appointed, by President Tyler, minister to Mexico, and he administered the affairs of the office until he was succeeded therein by his father, Mordecai Bartley, in December of that year.

In 1851 he was elected judge of the supreme court of the state, served two terms in this high position, and then resumed the practice of the law, in Cincinnati, continuing there, thus engaged, for several years, when, owing to the ill health of his family, he removed, in 1869, to Washington, D. C., where he followed his profession until his death.

Gov. Bartley was a sound attorney, a faithful public official, a wise judge and a most courteous gentleman, and his removal to the capital of the nation placed him in a field where he enjoyed full scope for the exercise of his powers, untrammeled by local politics, for in that city, where the people have no vote, politics does not enter into their business and their profession as it does elsewhere in the United States. Gov. Bartley is well remembered by many of the leading men of the state.

ORDECAI BARTLEY, who succeeded his son Thomas W. Bartley as governor, was born in Fayette county, Pa., December 16, 1783. He was reared to manhood on his father's farm, attended school at intervals during his minority, and in 1809 moved to Ohio. He tendered his services to the government in the war of 1812, served as captain and adjutant under Gen. William Henry Harrison, and on leaving the army settled, in 1814, in Richland county, where he remained until his removal to the city of Mansfield in 1834. For some years Mr. Bartley was engaged in mercantile pursuits in Mansfield, but previous to locating there, had served as a member of the Ohio state senate, to which he was elected in 1817. In 1818 he was chosen, by the legislature, registrar of the land office of Virginia Military school-lands, which position he held until 1823, when he resigned in order to take his seat in the congress of the United States, to which he had been elected in the meantime. He served in congress until March, 1831, and in 1844 was elected, on the whig ticket, governor of the state, the functions of which office he discharged in a very creditable manner until 1846, declining a renomination and retiring to private life. After the nomination by the whigs for governor of Mordecai Bartley, the democrats in their convention, in the same year, came within one or two votes of placing his son Thomas once again in the field as his opponent. Gov. Bartley was very decided in his opposition to the Mexican war, but when the president issued a call for troops, he promptly responded and superintended the organization of the Ohio forces in person. Politically Gov. Bartley affiliated with the whigs until the disruption of that party, after which he espoused the cause of the republican party. He died in the city of Mansfield October 10, 1770.

ILLIAM BEBB, lawyer and judge, the fourteenth governor elected by the people of Ohio, was born in Hamilton county, Ohio, in 1804, and died at his home in Rock River county, Ill.,

October 23, 1873. His father emigrated from Wales, Great Britian, in 1795, and first located in the Keystone state. Traveling across the mountains to the valley of the Miami on foot, he purchased in the neighborhood of North Bend an extensive tract of land, returned to Pennsylvania and married Miss Robert, to whom he had been engaged in Wales, and, with his bride, riding in a suitable conveyance, again crossed the mountains and settled on his land in what was then but a wilderness. He was a man of sound judgment, and, in common with many of his countrymen, of a joyous and ever hopeful disposition. His wife was a lady of culture and refinement, and her home in the valley of the Miami, with few neighbors except the wild, unshorn, and half-naked savages, was a great change from her previous life. There were of course no schools there to send her children to, and this was a matter of grave concern to the parents of our subject, who was in consequence taught to read at home. those years the Western Spy, then published in Cincinnati, and distributed by a private postrider, was taken by his father, and William read with avidity its contents, especially the achievements of Napoleon Bonaparte. education advanced no further until a peripatetic schoolmaster, passing that way, stopped and opened a school in the neighborhood, and under him our subject studied English, Latin and mathematics, working in vacation on his When twenty years old he himfather's farm self opened a school at North Bend and resided in the home of Gen. Harrison. In this employment he remained a year, during which he married Miss Shuck, the daughter of a wealthy German resident of the village. Soon afterward he began the study of law while continuing his school, and as a teacher was eminently successful, and his school attracted pupils from the most distinguished families of Cincinnati.

In 1831 he rode to Columbus on horseback, where the supreme court judges examined him and placed him in the practice of the state. He then removed to Hamilton, Butler county, and opened a law office, where he continued quietly and in successful practice fourteen years. During this period he took an active interest in political affairs, and advocated during his first (called the "Hard Cider") campaign, the claims of Gen. Harrison, and no less distinguished himself during that "Tippecanoe and Tyler, too, "campaign, in which the persons indicated were successful, and the whigs in 1840, for the first time, succeeded in electing their candi-Six years afterward he was elected governor of the state, and the war with Mexico placed him, as the governor of Ohio, in a very trying position. As a whig he did not personally favor that war, and this feeling was greatly entertained by the party who made him their leader in the state, but he felt that the question was not one of party but of cordial support of the general government, and his earnest recognition of this fact eventually overcame the danger that had followed President Polk's proclamation of war. His term of office (1846-48) was distinguished by good money, free schools, great activity in the construction of railroads and turnpikes; the arts and industry generally were well revived, and high prosperity characterized the whole state.

In 1844 Gov. Bebb purchased 5,000 acres of land in Rock River county, Ill., of which the location was delightful and the soil rich; 500 acres were wooded and constituted a natural park, while the remainder was pasture of the best quality, with a stream of water fed by perpetual springs. No man of moderate ambition could desire the possession of a more magnificent portion of the earth's surface. Three years after making this purchase he removed to it, taking with him fine horses, and a number of the choicest breeds of cattle, and entered upon the cultivation of this fine property. Five years afterward he visited Great Britain and the continent of Europe. In the birth-place of his father he found many desirous to immigrate to America, and encouraging the enterprise a company was formed and a tract of 100,000 acres purchased for them in east Tennessee, where he agreed to preside over their arrangements in the settlement of this land. In 1856 a party of the colonists arrived on the land and Gov. Bebb resided with them until the war of the Rebellion began, when he left the state with his family. The emigrants, discouraged by the strong proslavery sentiment, scattered and settled in various parts of the northern states.

On the inauguration of President Lincoln Gov. Bebb was appointed examiner in the pension department at Washington, and held this position until 1866, when he returned to his farm in Illinois and the peaceful pursuits of agriculture. His scale of farming was the cultivation of 2,000 acres in a season, while another 1,000 formed his cattle pasture. took an active part in the election of Gen. EABURY FORD, the fifteenth governor of Ohio elected by the people, was born in Cheshire, Conn., in 1802.

John Ford, his father, was a native of New England, but of Scotch descent, while his mother, Esther Cook, was of English Puritan ancestry. She was a sister of Nabbie Cook, the wife of Peter Hitchcock, the first In 1805, John Ford chief justice of Ohio. explored the Western Reserve in search of lands and a home in the west, purchasing 2,000 acres in what is now the township of Burton, Geauga county, Ohio, and removing to this land in the fall of 1807. Seabury was then but five years old, but even then gave indications of superior intelligence. He prepared for college at the academy in Burton, entering Yale college in 1821, in company with another young Ohioan, named D. Witter, they two being the first young men from Ohio to enter Yale. Graduating from Yale in 1825, he then began the study of the law in the office of Simon W. Phelps, of Painesville, completing his course in the office of his uncle, Judge Peter Hitchcock, in 1827. Being admitted to practice he opened an office in Burton, and grew rapidly in popular favor. He was always interested in military affairs, in agricultural pursuits and in politics, and was in 1835 elected by the whigs to the legislature from Geauga county. Being twice re-elected, he served three terms, during the latter term acting as speaker of the lower house. In 1841 he was elected to the state senate from Cuyahoga and Geauga counties, and remained a member of that body until 1844, when he was again elected to the lower house. In 1846 he was again elected to the senate and was chosen speaker of that body. In 1848 he was elected governor by a small majority, retiring at the close of his term to his home in Burton, much broken in health. On the Sunday after reaching his home he was stricken with paralysis, from which he never recovered.

During twenty years of his life he was an honored member of the Congregational church, and was always a highly respected citizen. As a representative of the people he was faithful to their interests, and was possessed of the most rigid integrity. A private letter, published in a Cleveland, Ohio, paper, said of him, in 1839, that he was one of the most useful men in the legislature and that in a few years he had saved the state millions of dollars.

September 10, 1828, he married Miss Harriet E. Cook, a daughter of John Cook, of Burton, by whom he had five children, three of whom reached mature age, as follows: Seabury C., George H., and Robert N. Gov. Ford died May 8, 1855.

EUBEN WOOD, the successor of Seabury Ford, was born in Rutland county, Vt., in the year 1792. He was reared to manhood in his native state, served with distinction in the war of 1812 as captain of a company of Vermont volunteers, and afterward studied law and began the practice of his profession in Cleveland, Ohio. From 1825 till 1828 Mr. Wood served in the state senate; in 1830 was appointed president-judge of the Third district, and in 1833 was elected associate judge of the state supreme court, which office he held until 1845.

In 1848 Mr. Wood was the democratic nominee for the governorship, to which office he was elected by a handsome majority, and with such ability and satisfaction did he discharge his official functions that in 1850 he was chosen his own successor, being the first governor under the new constitution. Gov. Wood was prominently spoken of in 1852 as an available presidential candidate, but the party, while admitting his fitness for the high position, finally united upon Franklin Pierce. In addition to the honorable positions above mentioned, Gov. Wood served eighteen months as United States consul at Valparaiso, Chili, resigning at the end of that time and retiring to private life. The death of this eminent jurist and statesman occurred in Rockport, Cuyahoga county, Ohio, October 2nd, 1864, in his seventy-second year.

ILLIAM MEDILL, the seventeenth governor of Ohio elected by the people, was born in New Castle county, Del., in 1801. He graduated from Delaware college in 1825, and studied law with Judge Black, of New Castle city. Removing to Lancaster, Ohio, in 1830, he began there the practice of the law, being regularly admitted to the bar by the supreme court in 1832. In 1835 he was elected to the lower house of the general assembly from Fairfield county, and served several years with great ability. In 1838 he was elected to congress from the counties of Fairfield, Perry, Morgan and Hocking, and was re-elected in 1840, serving to the satisfaction of his constituents. In 1845 he was appointed by President Polk second assistant postmaster-general, performing his duties with marked ability. The same year he was appointed commissioner of Indian affairs, and as such commissioner introduced many needed reforms. Indeed, he was one of the few men holding office under the government of the United States who have treated the unfortunate sons of the forest with any semblance of justice. Both these offices he held during President Polk's administration, at its close returning to Ohio and resuming the practice of the law. In 1849 he was elected a member of the constitutional convention that gave us the present constitution of the state of Ohio, serving with impartial ability as presiding officer of that body. In 1851 he was elected lieutenant-governor, and in 1853 as the second governor under the new constitution. In 1857 he was appointed by President Buchanan first controller of the United States treasury, holding that office until March 4, 1861, when he retired to private life in Lancaster, Ohio, holding no office afterward.

Gov. Medill was a man of great ability, a true patriot, of spotless character, a faithful friend and an incorruptible public servant. He never married, and died at his residence in Lancaster, Ohio, September 2, 1865.

*ALMON P. CHASE, the eighteenth governor of Ohio elected by the people, was born at Cornish, N. H., January 13, 1808. His father, Ithaman Chase, was descended from English ancestry, while his mother was of Scotch extraction. Ithaman Chase was a farmer, was a brother of the celebrated Bishop Philander Chase, and died when his son, Salmon P., was vet a lad. In 1815 his father removed his family to Keene, Cheshire county, N. H., where young Salmon received a good common-school edu-Bishop Chase, having removed to Ohio, invited his young nephew to the state, and in Worthington, Franklin county, he pursued his studies preparatory to entering college, becoming a student at Dartmouth in 1825, and graduating in 1826. He then went to Washington, D. C., where for some time he taught a classical school, which did not prove For this reason he made applicasuccessful. tion to an uncle of his, in the United States senate, to secure for him a position in one of the government offices, but was met with the reply from that uncle that he had already ruined two young men in that way, and did not intend to ruin another. Young Chase then secured the patronage of Henry Clay, Samuel L. Southard and William Wirt, who placed their sons under his tuition, and he in the meantime studied law with William Wirt.

In 1830, having been admitted to the bar, he settled down in Cincinnati to the practice of the law, but meeting for some years with indifferent success, he spent his leisure time in revising the statutes of Ohio, and introduced his compilation with a brief historical sketch of the state. This work, known as Chase's Statutes, in three octavo volumes, proved of great service to the profession, and its sale was so great a success that his reputation as a lawyer of ability was at once established.

In 1834 he became solicitor of the branch bank of the United States in the city of Cincinnati, and soon afterward of one of the city banks, and in 1837 he distinguished himself by defending a negro woman who had been brought by her master to Ohio, and who had escaped from his possession. This gave him considerable prominence as an abolitionist, and by some it was thought he had ruined his prospects, especially when he enhanced that reputation in the defense of James G. Birney, whose newspaper, the Philanthropist, had been destroyed by the friends of slavery. Mr. Chase had always looked upon things from the moral standpoint, believed ever in freedom, and that if Christ died for any man he died for all men, and hence Mr. Chase was always the friend of man. The position he took in the defense of slaves who had escaped to or were brought to free soil, was that by that act alone, even under the constitution of the United States, they obtained their freedom.

In 1846 Mr. Chase, in the supreme court of the United States, defended Van Zandt (who was the original of John Van Trompe, in "Uncle Tom's Cabin"), who was prosecuted for harboring fugitive slaves, taking the ground, as before, that, even though the constitution contained a provision for the return of such fugitives, no legislative power on the subject had been granted to congress, and that therefore the power to devise legislation thereon was left to the states themselves. The bold statements and forcible arguments of Mr. Chase in his management of such cases, alarmed the southern states, and ultimately led to the enactment of the fugitive slave law in 1850, as a portion of the compromise measures of that period.

In 1841 Mr. Chase united with others opposed to the further extension of slavery, in a convention for which he was the principal writer of the address to the people on that subject. He also wrote the platform for the liberty party when it nominated James G. Birney as its candidate for the presidency. In 1842 he projected a convention of the same party in Cincinnati, the result of which was the passage of a resolution declaring the urgent necessity for the organization of a party committed to the denationalization of slavery. In 1848 Mr. Chase presided over the Buffalo free soil convention, which nominated Martin Van Buren and Charles Francis Adams for president and vice-president. On the 22d of February, 1849. Mr. Chase was elected to the United States senate by a coalition of democrats and free soilers, who had declared slavery to be an evil, but when the Baltimore convention in 1852 approved of the compromise measures of 1850 he withdrew from their ranks, and advocated the formation of an independent democratic party, which should oppose the extension of slavery. In 1855 Mr. Chase was elected governor of Ohio by the newly organized republican party by a majority of 15,651 over Gov. Medill, and in 1857 he was elected governor, the second time, over Henry B. Payne.

At the national republican convention in 1860 Mr. Chase received on the first ballot forty-nine votes, in a total of 375, and immediately withdrew his name. By President Lincoln he was appointed secretary of the treasury of the United States, holding this position until July, 1864, when he resigned. His management of the nation's finance was marked with consummate ability, and contributed largely to the success of the government in its efforts to suppress the Rebellion. In November, 1864, he was nominated by President Lincoln as chief justice of the United States, to succeed Chief Justice Taney, who had then recently died, and he filled this great office until his death.

In 1868 he permitted his name to go before the democratic national convention as a candidate for the presidency, but received only four votes out of 663, Horatio Seymour of New York securing the nomination. The most valuabe public service rendered the nation by Mr. Chase, as secretary of the treasury, was the origination by him of the bill under which, in 1863, state and private banks became national banks, and under which the government of the United States became responsible for the circulation of national bank notes, the government being secured by a deposit of bonds equal in amount to the proposed circulation, plus ten per cent. While this law was at first opposed by many public men, yet in time it won its way into their judgment long before Mr. Chase's death, and he had the satisfaction of realizing that its advantages were such that the people of the United States were more greatly benefited by this than by any previous monetary measure, as under it the money of the banks was made equally valuble in all parts of the United States.

Mr. Chase was married three times, and of six children born to him, two accomplished daughters survived him at his death, which occurred of paralysis, May 7, 1873.

ILLIAM DENNISON, JR., nineteenth governor of Ohio, was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, November 23, 1815. His father and mother emigrated from New Jersey to Ohio, settled in the Miami valley about 1805, gave their son a liberal education, and he graduated from Miami university in 1835 with high honors in political science, belles lettres and history. After his graduation he became a law student in the office of Nathaniel C. Pendleton, father of Hon. George H. Pendleton, and was admitted to the bar in 1840. The same year he married a daughter of William Neil, of Columbus, to which city he removed and applied himself with energy and diligence to the practice of the law. In 1848 he was elected to the Ohio senate as a whig for the district composed of Franklin and Delaware counties. that time the slavery question was a prominent one in politics, men taking positive positions on one side or the other, and a desperate struggle was made throughout the state for the control of the general assembly. After failing by a small adverse majority to be elected president of the senate he was appointed to a leading position on a committe having in charge the revisal of the statutes, which had become in the opinion of most of the people a disgrace to the state, especially those laws which prohibited black men and mulattoes from gaining a permanent residence within the state, and from testifying in courts against white persons. Mr. Dennison warmly advocated the repeal of these laws, and with complete success. was equally opposed to the extension of slavery, with its blighting effects, into new territory.

From 1850 to 1852 he was engaged in the practice of the law, and in the latter year, as a presidential elector, he cast his vote for Gen. Winfield Scott. From this time on for some years he took great interest in the subject of railroads in the west, and was elected president of the Columbus & Xenia Railroad company, and was very active as a director of all railroads entering Columbus. In 1856 he was a delegate to the republican national convention at Pittsburg, and voted for Gen. John

C. Fremont for president. In 1859 he was elected governor of Ohio by the republican party, and in his first message to the general assembly took the position that "The federal Union exists by solemn compact voluntarily entered into by the people of each state and thus they became the United States of America, e pluribus unum, and this being so, no state can claim the right to secede from or violate that compact."

When the war was begun he exerted all the authority of his office to aid the general government to suppress the Rebellion, and as the first war governor of Ohio his name will go down to posterity as one of the most patriotic of men. When Gov. Magoffin, of Kentucky, telegraphed to President Lincoln that Kentucky would furnish no troops for such a wicked purpose as the subduing of the sister southern states, Gov. Dennison telegraphed that if Kentucky would not fill her quota, Ohio would fill it for her, and in less than two weeks, under the influence of her patriotic governor, Ohio raised enough soldiers to fill the quota of three states, and it was not long before the attention of the entire country was directed to Ohio as the leading state in the suppression of the Rebellion, a position which she proudly maintained all through the war. The people of West Virginia owe to Gov. Dennison the fact of their separate existence as a state, the story of which is well known and too long for publication here.

At first Gov. Dennison opposed Sec. Chase's national banking system, but as its beneficial effects became apparent he gave it his unqualified support, and it is well known that Ohio took the lead in the establishment of national banks, a system of banking which, among its other features, has done much to cement the union of the states since the war. After his term of office as governor had expired he became a favorite speaker in defense of the Union.

As a delegate to the national republican convention, in 1864, he did much to secure the renomination of Abraham Lincoln, and succeeded Montgomery Blair as postmaster-general, but resigned his office when President Johnson had defined his "policy." For several years after this Gov. Dennison lived in retirement, but was called on by President Grant, in 1875, to act as one of the commissioners of the District of Columbia, a position which he filled until 1878.

By his marriage to Miss Neil he became the father of three children, the first-born dying in infancy, and the others being named Neil and Elizabeth. He died June 15, 1882, respected by all people as an able, patriotic and good man.

AVID TOD, Ohio's twentieth elected governor, was born in Youngstown, Mahoning county, February 21, 1805, received a good literary education, and after studying for the legal profession was admitted to the bar in the year 1827. He practiced about fifteen years at Warren, where his talents soon won him recognition among the leading lawyers of the northeastern part of the state, and while a resident of Warren was elected, in 1838, a member of the state senate. Gov. Tod soon took high rank as a successful politician, made a brilliant canvass for Martin Van Buren in 1840, and in 1844 was nominated for governor, but was defeated by a small majority. One of the issues of the gubernatorial campaign of 1844 was "hard" and "soft" money, the democrats representing the former and the whigs the latter. In a speech David Tod, the democratic candidate, said that sooner than adopt "soft" or paper money, it would be better to go back to the Spartan idea of finance and coin money from pot-metal. His opponents seized upon this expression, dubbed him "pot-metal" Tod, and insisted that he was really in favor of coining pot-metal into currency. Medallions of Mr. Tod about the size of a silver dollar were struck off by his opponents by the thousands, being composed of pot-metal and circulated throughout the The "pot-metal" cry doubtless had much to do in bringing about his defeat by a slender margin, showing that small things are often effective in political campaigns, if the people happen to be in the humor to be influenced by them, which not infrequently happens to be the case. In 1847 he was appointed, by President Polk, minister to Brazil, and represented his government until 1852, when he returned to the United States and took an active part in the campaign which resulted in the election of Franklin Pierce to the presidency. In 1860 he was chosen delegate to the Charleston convention, of which he was made vice-president, and after the withdrawal of the southern wing of the democratic party, presided over that body until its adjournment. Upon the breaking out of the Civil war, Gov. Tod was earnest in his advocacy of a compromise between the north and south, but with the commencement of hostilities he became a firm supporter of the Union and did much to arouse enthusiasm in the prosecution of the In 1861 he was the republican nominee for governor, and at the ensuing election defeated his competitor by an overwhelming majority of 55,000 votes. He proved a very popular and capable executive, and during his term of two years, greatly aided the national administration.

OHN BROUGH, the twenty-first governor of Ohio elected by the people of the state, was born at Marietta, Ohio, September 17, 1811. His father, John Brough, was a companion and friend of Blennerhassett, both coming to the United States in the same ship in 1806. They remained in close friendship for many years, but Mr. Brough was not connected with the unfortunate complications between Blennerhassett and Aaron Burr. John Brough died in 1822, leaving his wife with five children, and with but small means of support.

John Brough, who became governor of Ohio, was sent to learn the trade of printer in the office of the Athens Mirror before he was four-After a few months he entered the Ohio university at Athens, reciting with his class in the day time, and setting type mornings and evenings to support himself. He was a good compositor and also a good student, and was distinguished for his skill in athletic games. Having completed his education at the university he began the study of law, but soon afterward went to Petersburg, Va., to edit a newspaper. Returning to Marietta, Ohio, in 1831, he became proprietor of the Washington county Republican, a democratic paper, which he condueted until 1833, when he sold out, and in partnership with his brother, Charles H., purchased the Olio Eagle, published at Lancaster, Ohio, and while he was a strong partisan. yet he had no patience for any kind of underhand work in either party. In 1835 he was elected clerk of the Ohio senate, and retained this position until 1838. He was chosen representative from Fairfield and Hocking counties in 1838, and the next year he was chosen by the legislature to fill the office of auditor of state. To this latter office he was again elected and served six years.' Many evils then existed in the finances of the state, but, notwithstanding much opposition and many embarrassments, he succeeded in finding remedies therefor, and the pecuniary affairs of the state were placed on a solid foundation. ports he made upon the state's financial system are among the ablest and most valuable of our state papers.

During his second term as auditor of state he purchased the Phœnix, a newspaper in Cincinnati, changed its name to the Enquirer and placed it in charge of his brother, Charles H., and at the close of that term removed to Cincinnati, opened a law office and wrote editorials for his paper. He also became a powerful and effective public speaker, and while he was becoming a distinguished leader in the democratic party he was also becoming with equal rapidity thoroughly disgusted with party politics. In 1848 he retired from partisan strife, sold one-half interest in the Enquirer. and devoted his attention to railroads. Being elected president of the Madison & Indiana Railroad company, he removed to Madison, Ind., but later, at the invitation of one of his friends, Stillman Witt, of Cleveland, Ohio, he accepted the presidency of the Bellefontaine Railroad company, which, under his management, became one of the leading railroads of the country. In 1861 he removed to Cleveland, and during the first two years of the war was untiring in his efforts to serve the government by the prompt transportation of troops to the front.

In 1863, that portion of the democrats of Ohio that was opposed to the further prosecution of the war nominated C. L. Vallandigham for governor of the state, and Stillman Witt, having urged Mr. Brough to take an active part in politics, generously offering to perform the duties of the president of the railroad, and permit Mr. Brough to draw the salary, Mr. Brough was at length nominated by the republican party as its candidate in opposition to Vallandigham. The result of the election was that Mr. Brough was elected by a majority of 101,099, the total vote being 471,643. It was at the suggestion of Gov. Brough that an extra force of 100,000 men was raised to aid Gen. Grant in his arduous campaign of 1864, Ohio's quota of this 100,000 being 30,000.

Within ten days Ohio raised 38,000 men, the result being due largely to Gov. Brough's energetic action, which called out the warmest commendation from both President Lincoln and Gen. Grant.

While Gov. Brough lived to see the war brought to a successful close, yet he died before the close of his term, on August 29, 1865. He was of the honest men in politics, just in all his motives and acts. Though not a member of any church, yet he took a deep interest in religion and died in the hope of an eternal life. Gov. Brough was twice married—first to Miss Acsah P. Pruden, of Athens, Ohio, who died in 1838 at the age of twenty-five years, and second, to Miss Caroline A. Nelson, of Columbus, Ohio, whom he married in 1843 at Lewiston, Pa. By this latter marriage he had two sons and two daughters.

HARLES ANDERSON was put in nomination as lieutenant-governor of Ohio on the ticket in 1863, with John Brough for governor and elected. The death of the latter transferred Col. Anderson to the office of governor in August of the same year.

Charles Anderson was born June 1, 1814, at the residence of his father, called Soldiers' Retreat, or Fort Nelson, near the falls of the Ohio, and which locality is about nine miles from the city of Louisville, Ky. His father, Col. Richard Clough Anderson, a gentleman of high character, who was an aid-de-camp to Lafayette, removed to Soldiers' Retreat from Virginia in 1793, and there, in the capacity of surveyor-general of the Virginia military land grant, made his residence three years before Kentucky was recognized as a territory. His mother was a relative of Chief-Justice Marshall, and his eldest brother, Richard Clough Anderson, represented his district in congress, was the first United States minister to the republic of Columbia and commissioner in congress at Panama. Robert Anderson, another brother of Gov. Anderson, was the Major Anderson commanding Fort Sumter in April, 1861.

Charles Anderson graduated from Miami university at Oxford, Ohio, in 1833, began the study of law in Louisville in his twentieth year in the office of Pirtle & Anderson, and in 1835 was admitted to practice. He then went to Davton, Ohio, and September 16th married Miss Eliza I. Brown, a young lady of that place. He remained a resident of Dayton, Ohio, varying his professional engagement by working the farm during the following ten years, having in that time been elected prosecuting attorney of the county, and in 1844 was elected to the state senate. His vote in this body in favor of bills to give to the colored men the privilege of testifying in court caused him the enmity of all the pro-slavery element among his constituency, but of this he took no notice. He resolved that at the close of his term he would recuperate his health by a protracted sea voyage, and, descending to New Orleans, he took a vessel for Havana, and there took passage on a vessel bound for Europe, and with much advantage to his health returned by the way of Paris and Liverpool. in Cincinnati, he entered into a law partnership with Rufus King, Esq., and for eleven vears practiced his profession. Then his original love of farming still influencing his life, he went to Texas in 1859, and found the people greatly excited on account of the political condition of the country. Demagogues had advocated dissolution of the Union there as elsewhere, and the establishment of a new southern states' government of a monarchical form, its foundation-stone human slavery, and under the protectorate of Great Britain, to which people their cotton would be exchanged for goods of British manufacture exclusively. He soon saw that this treasonable project had taken deep root among the ignorant masses of the south. There was no term that had been uttered that could be more opprobrious than abolitionist, and his well-known love of freedom prompting him to boldly address the people, he did so at a great gathering at San Antonio November 20, 1860, advocating, in the most stirring and patriotic language, the perpetuity of the national Union. Though the recipient subsequently of letters threatening his life, he continued to reside in San Antonio in spite of the forty-day resident act passed by the Confederate congress at Montgomery, Ala., and was therefore confined as a political prisoner in the guard-tent of Maclin's battery of artillery. By the assistance of two persons, who subsequently were maltreated for so assisting him, he escaped to the north. It was not reasonable to suppose that Mr. Anderson, born in Kentucky, and from infancy surrounded by and breathing the atmosphere of slavery, could have regarded that institution as it was looked upon by the millions who had not been similarly situated. Hence the original idea of the war, restoring the Union as it was, caused him to offer his services to Gov. Tod, and he was appointed colonel of the Ninetv-third Ohio regiment, in command of which brave body of men he was seriously wounded in the battle of Stone River. After his term of service as lieutenant-governor and governor of Ohio lie removed to a large iron estate on the Cumberland river, in Lyon county, Ky., where he spent the remainder of his life.

ACOB DOLSON COX, the twenty-second governor of Ohio elected by the people, was born in Montreal, Canada, October 27, 1828, to which city his parents, who were natives of the United States, and who were then residents of New York, had gone for a temporary purpose, Mr. Cox being a master builder, and having in charge in Montreal the erection of the frame work, roofing, etc., of the church of Notre Dame. The following year they returned to New York, where were spent the childhood days of the subject of this sketch. In 1846 he entered Oberlin college, from which he graduated in 1851, and in 1852 he removed to Warren, Ohio, where for three years he was superintendent of the high school. In the meantime he studied law and was admitted to the bar, and in 1859 he he was elected, from the Trumbull and Mahoning district, to the legislature, where throughout his term he was regarded as a "radical," not only on account of the section of the state from which he came, but also on account of his har ing married the daughter of President Finney of Oblerlin college. He took his seat in the senate on the first Monday in January, 1860.

After the enactment of the fugitive slave law of 1850 the state of Ohio passed a law providing penalties for carrying free blacks out of the state without first having recourse to judical proceedings. The democrats in the legislature earnestly desired to repeal this law, and Mr. Cox, as chairman of the judiciary committee, made a minority report against its repeal, to which report the support of the entire republican party was given. While Mr. Cox was not in favor of any unnecessarily harsh measures to grieve the southern states, yet he was always uncomprisingly in favor of supporting the government in its efforts to suppress the Rebellion. Ten days after President Lincoln's first call for troops, Mr. Cox was commissioned, by Gov. Dennison, a brigadier-general of Ohio volunteers for the three months' service, and placed in command of Camp Jackson, which was established for the reception of troops. A larger camp being necessary, President Lincoln commissioned him brigadier-general of volunteers, and with the assistance of Gen. Rosecrans he laid out Camp Dennison. On the 6th of July, 1861, he was ordered by Gen. McClellan to take a position at the south of the Great Kanawha, whence he drove the rebels under Gen. Wise out of the valley of that river, and took and repaired the bridge at Gauley, and other bridges; and it is owing to the success of these early military maneuvers that West Virginia became an independent state. In August, 1862, he was assigned to the army of Virginia under Gen. Pope, and when Gen. Reno fell succeeded to his command, that of the Ninth corps, which he commanded at the battle of Antietam, in which battle his troops so distinguished themselves that he was appointed to a full majorgeneralship. On April 16, 1863, Gen. Cox was in command of the district of Ohio, and also of a division of the Twenty-third army corps, with headquarters at Knoxville, Tenn. In the Atlanta campaign he led the Third division of the Twenty-third army corps, and in the engagement at Columbus had entire command, as he had also at Franklin, November 30, where he felt the full force of Hood's attack. On reaching Nashville Gen. Thomas assumed command of the army, Gen. Schofield of the Twenty-third corps, and Gen. Cox of his division—his division in this battle capturing an important rebel position and eight pieces of cannon. In January, 1865, Gen. Cox, with his division, performed important service in North Carolina, aiding in the capture of Kingston, and then he united his forces with Sherman's army. Gen. Cox had charge of the details connected with the surrender of Gen. Johnston's soldiers. In July, 1865, he was placed in command of the district of Ohio, and while in charge of the discharge of Ohio soldiers was elected governor of the state, and was inaugurated January 15, 1866. Throughout the war Gen. Cox was steadily promoted, and won golden opinions from all patriots, but after the close of the struggle he supported President Johnson's "policy," which gave great dissatisfaction to loyal people. 1869 President Grant appointed him secretary of the interior, which position he resigned after a few months, and returned to Cincinnati, where he was appointed receiver of the Toledo, Wabash & Western railroad, and resided temporarily at Toledo, where, in 1875, he was elected to congress from the Sixth dis-He was appointed a member of the Potter committee, which investigated the manner in which the presidential election of 1876 had been conducted in the "disputed states," South Carolina, Florida and Louisiana. sequently he removed to Cincinnati, where he died.

UTHERFORD B. HAYES.—For a sketch of the life of Rutherford B. Hayes, the twenty-third governor of Ohio elected by the people and elected to succeed himself, and also elected to succeed William Allen, the reader is referred to that portion of this work which is devoted to the lives of the presidents of the United States.

DWARD FOLLANSBEE NOYES, twenty-fourth governor of Ohio elected by the people, was born in Haverhill, Mass., October 3, 1832. His parents, Theodore and Hannah Noyes, both died before he was three years old, and he was reared by his grandparents, Edward and Hannah Stevens, who resided at East Kingston, Rockingham county, N. H. His grandfather Stevens having died, he was taken when twelve years of age by his guardian, Joseph Hoyt, of Newton, N. H. For two years he worked on his guardian's farm in summer and attended schools in winter, and at fourteen he was apprenticed to the printer's trade in the office of the Morning Star at Dover, N. H., the organ of the Free Will Baptist church. In this office he remained four years. Though his apprenticeship required him to remain until he was twenty-one, vet his employer released him at eighteen, in order that he might secure an education. He prepared himself for college at the academy at Kingston, N. H., and entered Dartmouth college in 1853, graduating at that institution in 1857. In the winter of his senior year he began to read law in the office of Stickney & Tuck at Exeter, N. H., and before leaving Dartmouth he had become really an abolitionist. Being a good speaker, he was appointed by the republican state executive committee of New Hampshire to traverse the state in the interest of Gen. John C. Fremont for the presidency. The next winter he entered the law office of Tilden, Raridan & Curwen, and attended lectures on law at the Cincinnati Law school during the winter of 1857-58, being admitted to the bar during the latter year, and not long afterward established himself in a profitable practice. Giving attention to the political crises then impending, he became convinced that secession, if accomplished, would finally disrupt the Union, and on the 8th of July, 1861, converted his law office into a recruiting station, and was commissioned major of the Thirty-ninth regiment Ohio volunteer infantry. On August 20, 1861, the Twenty-seventh and the Thirty-ninth regiments were transferred from the eastern to the western army, the latter being officered as follows: John Groesbeck, colonel; A. W. Gilbert, lieut.-colonel, and, as stated above, Edward F. Noves, major. Early in 1862 this latter regiment joined the army of the Mississippi, then commanded by Gen. Pope, and took part in the capture of New Madrid and Island No. 10. From that time until Gen. Pope was assigned to the command of the Potomac, Maj. Noves was on that general's staff, and when the colonel and lieutenant-colonel of the Thirty-ninth, as named above, resigned, Maj. Noves was commissioned colonel, and took command of his regiment in October. 1862. In 1864 his regiment was one of those composing the First division of the Seventeenth army corps, and on July 4, of that year, took part in the assault on Ruff's Mill, in which he was shot in the leg, which had to be amputated on the field of battle. The operation not proving successful, the colonel was taken to Cincinnati, and operated on by Dr. W. H. Mussey, and in the following October he reported for duty to Gen. Hooker, who assigned him to the command of Camp Dennison. Upon the recommendation of Gen, Sherman he was promoted to the full rank of brigadier.

He was soon afterward elected city solicitor of Cincinnati, and in 1871 was elected governor of Ohio by a majority of 20,000, while at the election of 1873, when he was again a candidate, he was defeated by an adverse majority of Soo. In the presidential campaign of 1876 he was an active participant, and was later appointed by his old friend, President Hayes, minister to France. He remained in Paris four years, in the meantime, however, making an extensive tour through the countries along the Mediterranean sea for the purpose of investigating the condition of the laboring classes, making an able report to the government. He resigned in 1881 and resumed his law practice in Cincinnati. He was very enthusiastic and cheerful in his disposition, and kindly in his manner. In February, 1863, on a leave of absence, he married Miss Margaret W. Proctor, at Kingston, N. H., with whom he became acquainted while in the academy in his youthful days. He died September 4, 1890, nearly fifty-eight years of age.

ILLIAM ALLEN, twenty-fifth governor of Ohio elected by the people, was born in Edenton, Chowan county, N. C., in 1807. His parents both died within a few months of each other before he was one year old, and he was cared for by an only sister, who soon afterward removed with her husband to Lynchburg, Va., taking young William with her. This sister was the wife of an itinerant Methodist minister and the mother of Hon. Allen G. Thurman. She was a very superior woman, and was well fitted for the task of rearing two of Ohio's distinguished statesmen, whose names are given About 1821 Mrs. Thurman, with her husband and family, removed to Chillicothe, Ohio, leaving her brother to attend an academy at Lynchburg, Va., but he rejoined her two years later, and attended the academy in Chillicothe, and later read law in the office of Edward King, the most gifted son of Rufus King, of Revolutionary fame, and a popular statesman for many years. Having been admitted to the bar in his twentieth year, he became a partner of his preceptor, and early in his career manifested that forensic ability to which he was mainly indebted for his success. This, together with his tall, commanding figure and powerful, penetrating voice, attracted people to him, the latter giving him the name of the "Ohio Gong," and all together secured his nomination to congress, he being elected by the democrats in 1832, in a whig district, by a majority of one vote. While he was the youngest man in the Twenty-third congress, yet he was recognized as a leading orator, taking part in the most important discussions in that body.

In January, 1837, on what was called "Saint Jackson's Day," at a supper given in Columbus, Ohio, he made a speech which unexpectedly led to his election to the United States senate, to succeed Hon. Thomas Ewing.

He remained in the senate twelve years, or until 1849, during which time he was at the full measure of his powers.

In 1845 Senator Allen married Mrs. Effic (McArthur) Coons, a daughter of ex-Gov. Mc-Arthur, who had been, in 1830, elected governor of Ohio. She inherited from her father the old homestead, "Fruit Hill" farm, upon which Gov. Allen resided with his only daughter, Mrs. Scott, his wife having died in Washington soon after the birth of her daughter. In August, 1873, Mr. Allen was elected governor of Ohio, being the only man on the democratic ticket not defeated. As governor he recommended the reduction of taxation and economy in state affairs. He was the first democratic governor of Ohio after the war, and though his administration gave general satisfaction, he was defeated with the rest of the democratic ticket in 1875. It has been said of him that he originated the political catch-word, "Fiftyfour forty, or fight," in reference to the boundary question between the United States and the British dominions, from which position the democratic party so ignominiously Gov. Allen died at Fruit Hill backed down. farm in 1879. He was a man of high character, cordial manners, and above all political chicanery of every kind, and his name will long be an honored one in American history.

ernor of Ohio, succeeding to the office by the election of Gov. R. B. Hayes to the presidency of the United States, taking possession of the office in February States, taking possession of the office in February, 1877, was born December 14, 1832, on the estate of Lord Dufferin in the north of Ireland. Of Lord Dufferin it may perhaps be permissible, parenthetically, to remark that as governor-general of Canada, in 1874, he made a remarkable report on the loyalty of the people of Canada to the British government, which appeared to him so "wholesome and satisfactory." This estate of Lord Dufferin was in Down county, Ireland. When Mr. Young was twelve years old his parents brought him to this country, and he was educated in the common schools of New York city. When he was sixteen years old he enlisted in the regular army, serving in all ten years. At the expiration of his enlistment he visited the home of his parents, in the northern part of Pennsylvania, on one of the upper tributaries of the Susquehanna river, where he engaged in the business of country merchant until 1859, when he removed to Cincinnati, and took charge of the house of refuge, a youths' reformatory institution, which position he retained until the breaking out of the war of the Rebellion. Having, while in the regular army, spent several years among the people of the south, he knew that they had determined upon war, and in March, 1861, he wrote to Gen. Scott, whom he personally knew, offering to assist in organizing volunteers for the defense of the government. Gen. Scott thanked him for his loyalty, but expressed his incredulity as to the southern people entertaining any such purpose.

In August, 1861, Mr. Young was commissioned a captain in Gen. Fremont's body guard, serving in that capacity until the following January, when that organization was disbanded by Gen. Halleck. For some months afterward Capt. Young was engaged in editing a democratic paper in Sidney, Ohio, in which he severely condemned the indecision manifested in the conduct of the war. In August, 1862. he was appointed to raise a company for the One Hundred and Eighteenth regiment Ohio volunteer infantry, and became the first major of the regiment. In February, 1863, he was promoted to lientenant-colonel, and commanded his regiment in the Tennessee campaign. In April, 1864, he was commissioned colonel of his regiment and served as such until the 4th of September following, when he was honorably discharged on account of physical disability resulting from his services and exposures in the field. At the battle of Resaca, Ga., Col. Young led the first charge on the enemy's works, the severity of the contest being indicated by the fact that he lost 116 men out of 270 engaged. For this and other acts of bravery the president brevetted him brigadier-general of volunteers, March, 13, 1865.

Upon leaving the service he engaged in the study of law, and was admitted to the bar in April, 1865, being in the same month appointed assistant city auditor of Cincinnati. In October, 1865, he was elected to the Ohio house of representatives for Hamilton county, and in December, 1868, was appointed, by President Johnson, supervisor of internal revenue for the southern district of Ohio. This position he resigned at the end of one year. For some time afterward he was engaged in the purchase and sale of real estate, and in 1871 was the only republican elected to the state senate from Hamilton county. In 1873 he formed a law partnership with Gen. H. B. Banning and Jacob McGarry, and in 1875 he was elected lieutenant-governor. Upon the resignation of Gov. Haves he became governor, serving the remainder of the term. In 1878 he was elected to congress by the republicans of the second district, and died July 19, 1888, thoroughly admired for his integrity of character and manliness.

ICHARD M. BISHOP, the twenty-sixth governor of Ohio, was born November 4, 1812, in Fleming county, Ky. His parents, who were of German and English lineage, removed from Virginia in 180c. They were members of the regular Baptist church, of which he also became a member in 1828.

At this time the Baptist churches in Kentucky were greatly excited in consequence of the criticisms made by Mr. Campbell, and his co-laborers, upon the religious corruption of the age. This excitement continued to increase in the immediate neighborhood of the Bishop family until 1832, when they and others were excluded from the Baptist church on account of "Campbellite heresy." Since then Mr. Bishop has been associated with the church of the Disciples or Christians. Mr. Bishop began his business career in Fleming county, Ky., at the age of seventeen, and before he was twenty-one he became a partner in the store which he had entered as a From 1838 to 1841 he was engaged with his brother in the pork business, which proved unfortunate in consequence of the sudden depression in prices, and the failure of the Mississippi banks, in which state they sold largely. They were compelled to suspend, but this temporary embarrassment did not discourage him, for he soon resumed business in the same place, where he continued until 1847. He then removed to Mount Sterling, Kentucky, where he established a branch house, his brother remaining at the old stand. he removed to Cincinnati and commenced the wholesale grocery business under the style of Bishop, Wells & Co. This firm continued until 1855, when the business was reorganized and conducted under the firm name of R. M. Bishop & Co. The firm was composed of himself and three sons, and at one time did the largest business in the city, the sales amounting in some years to nearly $5,000,-000. In April, 1857, he was nominated for council in the Second ward and was elected by a large majority. At the end of the second year he was elected presiding officer. 1859 he was elected mayor of Cincinnati by a handsome majority, holding the same office until 1861, when he declined the renomination tendered him by each of the political parties. In January, 1860, when the Union was threatened by the leaders of the Rebellion, the legislatures of Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky and Tennessee visited Cincinnati to encourage each other to stand by the old flag. grand reception given them at Pike's opera house, Mayor Bishop delivered an address of welcome amid a storm of applause. September ensuing his Royal Highness, the Prince of Wales, visited Cincinnati at the invitation of the mayor and received from him a cordial welcome. In February, 1861, when President Lincoln was passing on his way to his inauguration through Cincinnati, he was received in a speech by the mayor. his administration the laws were rigidly enforced, of which the Sunday ordinance, and those against gambling houses, were notable examples. Liquor selling and various other forms of Sabbath desecration were in the main suppressed. He inaugurated, amid much opposition, most important reforms in the management of the city prison, work-house and the police.

Mr. Bishop has become widely known for his liberality and devotion to the Christian church. From 1859 to 1867 he was president of the Ohio State Missionary society, and was the successor of the late Dr. Alexander Campbell in the presidency of the general Christian Missionary conference, which office he held until 1875. He was president of the board of curators of Kentucky university from its organization until 1880, when he declined a reelection; he was also one of the curators of Bethany college; also for many years trustee of the McMicken university. He was director of the First National bank for many years, and of several other business enterprises, as well as philanthropic institutions. He was a member of the Ohio state constitutional convention held in 1873 and 1874, and was president of the great national commercial convention held in Baltimore in 1871. He was one of the prime movers in that great enterprise, the Southern railway, the building of which he so successfully managed, having been a trustee from the beginning, and the laborious work of obtaining charters for the road is largely his.

In 1877 he was elected governor of Ohio by a majority of nearly 23,000 over the dominant party, and served two years with entire satisfaction to all parties. His first annual message was well received and complimented by the press generally. Upon his return to Cincinnati he was given a cordial and enthusiastic reception at Lytle hall, where a large number of ladies and gentlemen had assembled to welcome him home. Since the expiration of his term as governor he has been urged by his friends to accept the nomination for various important offices, but always declined.

Few men in the state can point to so many substantial benefits conferred upon society as the results of their single labors. Prompt decision, constant industry, sound judgment, and a desire to benefit his fellow-men, are his chief characteristics.

HARLES FOSTER, twenty-seventh governor of Ohio elected by the people, was born in Seneca county, Ohio, April 12, 1828. His parents, Charles W. Foster and wife, the latter of whom was a daughter of John Crocker, were from Massachusetts, reaching Seneca county, Ohio, in 1827.

Charles Foster received only a commonschool education, and went to Rome, now Fostoria, Ohio, when he was fourteen years old, where he was compelled to take charge of his father's store, and thus failed to secure a liberal education, which his father intended he should receive, and for which he had prepared himself at the Norwalk seminary. His success in the management of the store was very marked, and he soon became sole manager. The town of Fostoria, named from the Foster family, was the result of the consolidation of Rome and Risdon, which lay but a mile or two In 1870 Mr. Foster was induced to accept the nomination for congress at the hands of the republicans of his district, and he was elected by a majority of 776 over Hon. E. F. Dickinson. In 1872 he was again elected to congress by a majority of 726 over Rush R. Sloane. In 1874 he was elected by a majority of 159 over Hon. George E. Sency, and in 1876 he was elected by a majority of 271. In 1878, the democratic party having secured a majority of the state legislature, in order to defeat Mr. Foster most outrageously gerrymandered his district, and he was defeated by a majority of 1,255. In 1879 he was elected governor of Ohio over Hon. Thomas Ewing, by a plurality of 17,129, and in 1881 he was again elected, by a plurality of 24,309, over John W. Buchwalter.

Upon the death of the secretary of the United States treasury, William Windom, Mr. Foster was appointed his successor by President Harrison, February 27, 1891, and served until the close of the Harrison administration, March 4, 1893. The successful adjustment of the four and one-half per cent. loan was one of the notable events of his first year's administration of the treasury department of the government. Of the $50,869,200 of the four and one-half per cent. bonds, July 1, 1891, $25,364,500 were presented for continuance at two per cent., the rest being called in for redemption. No other financial officer of the general government has ever negotiated a public loan at so low rate of interest. Since retiring from the national treasury, Mr. Foster has been engaged in arranging his own financial affairs, which were thrown into confusion, while he was in public office by those whom he had trusted.

EORGE HOADLY, who was the twenty-eighth governor of Ohio, was born in New Haven, Conn., July 31, He is the only son of George and Mary Ann (Woolsey) Hoadly. Mary Ann Woolsey was a daughter of William Walton and Elizabeth (Dwight) Woolsey of New York, and she was a great-granddaughter of Jonathan Edwards, the famous New England theologian. She was a niece of President Dwight of Yale college, and the eldest daughter in a family containing among its members President Woolsey of Yalc college. Theodore Winthrop was her nephew and Sarah Woolsey, known in literature as "Susan Coolidge," her niece. George Hoadly, Sr., was at one time mayor of New Haven, Conn., removed in 1830 to Cleveland, Ohio, and resided there the remainder of his life, serving as mayor of that city five terms, from 1832 to 1837, and again one term, 1846-47.

George Hoadly, the subject of this sketch, received his preliminary education in Cleveland, and when fourteen years old was sent to the Western Reserve college at Hudson, Ohio, where he was graduated in 1844. He then spent one year in the Harvard law school under the tuition of Judge Story and Prof. Simon Greenleaf, and after studied a year with Charles C. Convers, of Zanesville, Ohio, then removed to Cincinnati and entered the office of Chase & Ball as a student. admitted to practice in 1847 and in 1849 became a member of the firm of Chase, Ball & Hoadly, the senior member of which was Salmon P. Chase. In 1851 he was elected judge of the supreme court of Cincinnati, and in 1853 formed a co-partnership with Edward Mills.

In 1855-56 he was city solicitor of Cincinnati, and in 1859 succeeded Judge W. Y. Gholson as judge of the new superior court, holding this office until 1866, when he resigned, in order to form the firm of Hoadly, Jackson & Johnson. He was a member of the constitutional convention of 1873-74, and served as chairman of the committee on municipal corporations. For eighteen years he was professor in the law school at Cincinnati, trustee of the university, and of the Cincinnati museum. He was one of the counsel in behalf of the board of education in its famous case of resistance to the attempt to compel Bible reading in the public schools, in which the victory was with the board.

Originally a democrat, he left that party and became a republican on the question of slavery, but during the campaign of 1876 supported Tilden as against Hayes. In 1877 he appeared as counsel before the electoral commission and argued in favor of the democratic electors from Florida and Oregon. In 1880 he was temporary chairman of the democratic national convention which nominated W. S. Hancock for president. In 1883 he was elected governor of Ohio, and in March, 1887, he removed to New York city, became the head of a law firm there, and has resided there ever since.

In 1851 he married Mary Burnet Perry, third daughter of Capt. Samuel Perry, one of the earliest settlers of Cincinnati. He and his wife have had three children, viz: George, Laura and Edward Mills.

OSEPH BENSON FORAKER, ex-governor of Ohio and United States senator, elect, was born near Rainsborough, Highland county, Ohio, July 5, 1846. His parents, who are still living, represent the agricultural class of the population of this country, and upon their farm he spent his earlier years.

When the war of the Rebellion broke out young Foraker enlisted in company A, Eightyninth regiment Ohio volunteer infantry, being then but sixteen years of age. With this regiment he served until after the fall of Atlanta, at which time, by successive promotions, he had risen to the rank of first lieutenant. mediately after the fall of Atlanta he was detailed for service in the signal corps as a signal officer on the staff of Maj.-Gen. Slocum, commanding the left wing of the army of After the marches through Georgia and the Carolinas he was promoted brevet captain of United States volunteers, and assigned to duty as aid-de-camp on the staff of Gen. Slocum, holding this position until he was mustered out of service at the close of the war.

Returning home and resuming his studies, he graduated from Cornell university, Ithaca, N. Y., in 1869. To gain time lost while in the service of his country in the army he read law while attending the university, and was admitted to the bar in Cincinnati, October 14, 1869, and he at once began in that city the practice of his profession. He was married October 4, 1870, to Miss Bulia Bundy, a daughter of Hon. H. S. Bundy, of Wellston, Ohio, and they have five children, two sons and three daughters.

In April, 1879, he was elected judge of the superior court of Cincinnati, Ohio, and held this position until May 1, 1882, when he resigned on account of ill health. Recovering his health he resumed the practice of the law in Cincinnati, and in 1883 was nominated for governor of Ohio, but was defeated by his opponent, Judge George Hoadly. In 1884 he was a delegate to the national convention of the republicans which met in Chicago, and as chairman of the Ohio delegation, placed Hon.

John Sherman in nomination before the convention for the presidency. In 1885 he was again a candidate for governor of Ohio, and this time was elected, defeating his former opponent, Judge Hoadly, and in 1887 he was re-elected governor of the state. In 1888 he was again a delegate to the republican national convention and was again chairman of the Ohio delegation, placing Hon. John Sherman again in nomination before the convention for the presidency of the United States. In 1889 he was again nominated for governor of Ohio, but through the persistent cry of "third termism" he was defeated by James E. Campbell.

In January, 1892, he was a candidate for United States senator, receiving thirty-eight votes, but was defeated by Senator John Sher-That year he was a delegate at large to the national republican convention, which met at Minneapolis, serving in that body as chairman of the committee on resolutions. state convention held at Zanesville, May 28, 1895, unanimously endorsed him as the republican candidate for United States senator to succeed Hon. Calvin S. Brice, whose term of office expired March 4, 1897, and at the November election, 1895, a republican legislature was chosen by a majority of nearly 100,-000, which was practically instructed by the people to elect Mr. Foraker to the position named above. In obedience to these instructions the legislature of the state on January 14, 1896, elected Mr. Foraker United States senator from Ohio, for six years from March 4, 1897, by a majority, on joint ballot, of eighty-five, the majority in the senate being twenty-three, and in the house of representatives being sixty-two, the entire legislative majority being, as stated, eighty-five. Mr. Foraker is, therefore, the people's choice for this high position, in which it is confidently predicted he will confer honor on his native state, even as he has had honor conferred upon him.

In his speech accepting the office Mr. Foraker used the following language:

"I go there (to the United States senate) as a republican. I belong to that party. believe in that party. I believe in its past; I believe in its present; I believe in its future. I believe it the most acceptable agency we can command in the administration of national affairs. I believe it is better calculated than any other political organization to contribute to the strength, power, dignity, happiness and glory of the American people." After speaking in favor of American marine interests and of the construction of the Nicaragua canal he then referred to financial questions as follows: "I believe in bi-metallism. lieve the world made a mistake when it demonetized silver. I sincerely hope some safe way may be found for the restoration of silver to its rightful place alongside of gold as a money of ultimate redemption. I shall favor every measure calculated in my judgment to bring about that result, subject always, however, to the condition that it provides for the maintenance of the parity of the two metals."

AMES EDWIN CAMPBELL, ex-governor of Ohio, was born in Middletown, Ohio, July 7, 1843. He is a son of Dr. Andrew and Laura P. (Reynolds) Campbell, the former of Scotch and the latter of English descent. John P. Reynolds, the father of Mrs. Laura P. Campbell, was at one time a publisher of the state of New York, but later a resident of Madison, Oliio. The Revnolds family came originally from Devonshire, England. Jonathan Reynolds emigrated from Plympton Earl, in that country, in 1645, to America, taking up his residence near Plympton, in the colony of Massachusetts bay, and from Jonathan Reynolds Mr. Campbell is of the sixth generation. By another branch of his family on his mother's side he is a descendant of John Parker, who commanded the American troops at the battle of Lexington, the first battle of the American Revolution. Both his grandfathers were in the war of 1812.

Upon reaching his maturity Mr. Campbell began reading law. In the summer of 1863 he became a master's mate on the gunboats Elk and Naiad, and took part in several engagements, but on account of ill health he was discharged at the end of one year's services. During the winter of 1864-65 he was a law student in the office of Doty & Gunckel at Middletown, Ohio, and was admitted to the bar in 1865. Beginning practice in 1867, he was elected prosecuting attorney of Butler county in 1875 and again in 1877. In 1879 he was defeated for the state senate by twelve votes. Up to 1872 he was a republican, but then voted for Greeley, and has since acted with the democrats. He was elected to the Forty-eighth, Forty-ninth and Fiftieth congresses, and in 1889 was elected governor of Ohio. In 1891 he was again a candidate, but was defeated by Maj. McKinley. In 1895 he was the third time a candidate, but was defeated by the present incumbent of the office, Hon. Asa S. Bushnell, by a plurality of 92,622 votes.

On January 4, 1870, Mr. Campbell was married to Miss Libbie Owens, a daughter of Job E. and Mary A. (Price) Owens, the former of whom was a native of Wales, and the latter of Welsh descent.

ILLIAM McKINLEY, who succeeded James E. Campbell in the gubernatorial chair, and who served out a well-administered term of office, on retiring filled a higher position in the esteem of the people of Ohio than he had ever before enjoyed, and this measure of esteem was also supplemented by that of the people of the nation at large, who, in November, 1896, elected him chief magistrate of the United States. In that portion of this volume devoted to the biographies of our presidents, that of Mr. Mc-Kinley is given in full, and to it the attention of the reader is respectfully invited.

SAS. BUSHNELL, governor of Ohio at the present time, is, without doubt and without qualification, one of the ablest men in the state. In many respects his career has been an exceptional one. His education and training have been those of a practical man of affairs, and to-day, at the age of sixty-two, having been born at Rome, Oneida county, N. Y., in 1834, he is one of the most clear-headed business men in the country.

At the age of eleven he left his home in the Empire state, to begin his career in the Buckeye state, reaching Cincinnati in 1845, where he spent six years in the public schools, paying his own expenses by working out of school hours and in vacation seasons. At the end of the six years spent in Cincinnati he removed, in 1851, to Springfield, Ohio, in which city he has since lived and in which city he has acquired a princely fortune. His first three years in the "Champion City" were spent as a dry-goods clerk, during which time he became a thoroughly practical bookkeeper, and at their expiration he was given a position as bookkeeper with the old and well-known water-wheel firm of Leffel, Cook & Blakeney, which was even then doing an extensive busi-This position he retained until 1857, when he formed a partnership with Dr. John Ludlow in the drug business, a partnership which lasted ten years, or until 1867. only break in the continuity of his labors here was while he was engaged as captain of company E, One Hundred and Fifty-second Ohio volunteer infantry, in 1864, in the Shenandoah valley. Here his bravery and his kindly manner won for him the admiration of and made him very popular among his fellow-soldiers of the entire regiment. While he was in the army he was somewhat slight in build and light in weight, and he was not much given to physical exercise, while at the present time he is unusually active and weighs fully 200 pounds.

In 1867 Capt. Bushnell purchased an interest in the large manufacturing firm of what is now known as the Warder, Bushnell & Glessner Co., of which the late Benjamin F. Warder was then the head, and of which the junior member was J. J. Glessner, now a prominent capitalist of Chicago. And it is in connection with this concern, which Mr. Bushnell has so long and so successfully managed, that he has made the fortune which he to-day possesses.

Hon. Asa S. Bushnell has long been closely identified with the republican party in Ohio, though his attempt to become governor of the state was the first he ever made to secure pub-He became chairman of the republic office. lican state executive committee in 1885, and from 1886 to 1890 he served the state as quartermaster-general, having been appointed by Gov. Foraker, who was largely instrumental in securing for him the nomination for governor in 1895, at Zanesville. In the fall of 1888 he was assaulted in the streets of Springfield by political enemies, and through that assault came near losing his life. This assault still remains a mystery, and no one has been brought to punishment. He was chosen as a delegate at large to the republican national convention which met at Minneapolis in 1892, and which nominated President Harrison for re-election, and on November 2, 1895, he was elected governor of Ohio by a plurality of 92,622, over Hon. James E. Campbell, the democratic candidate, this plurality being the largest ever given to a governor with the exception of that given Gov. John Brough, during the progress of the Civil war, when the soldiers at the front voted almost unanimously for Brough as against Vallandigham. He was inaugurated governor on January 13, 1896.

In the affairs of the Grand Army of the Republic, Gov. Bushnell has long been a prominent participant, being a member of Mitchell post, of Springfield, Ohio. He is also an ardent Free Mason. Among other of Gov. Bushnell's benefactions may be mentioned the Ohio Masonic Home, which was in all probability preserved to Springfield by his unsolicited contribution of $10,000, at a time, too, when he was not a Mason.

Dr. John Ludlow, with whom Mr. Bushnell, as a young man, found employment, had at that time a pretty daughter named Ellen, and these two young people were eventually married. Several children blessed the union, three of whom survive, as follows: Mrs. J. F. McGrew, Mrs. H. C. Dimond, and John Ludlow Bushnell, the latter of whom graduated with honors from Princeton in 1894. Mrs. Bushnell is an ideal woman in every relation. While she is a society woman, yet she is not so in the ordinary sense of the phrase, her principal strength lying in her domestic qualities. Her two daughters are as happily married as is she herself. Mrs. McGrew is the wife of one of Springfield's most promising young attorneys, and is the mother of two children, Ellen and Fanny, while Mrs. Dimond is the wife of a prominent young physician and also the mother of two children, Asa Bushnell and Douglas Marquand Dimond.

Brief reference can be made to the inaugural address of Gov. Bushnell. Among other things he commended was the proposition of home rule or local option in matters pertaining to taxation-which means that counties should provide their own systems of taxation for their necessary expenses; that double taxation should be avoided, and that such taxation as is necessary should be distributed as to lighten the burden of government, and so as to retain and attract capital to the state. He also favored a purchasing board for state institutions, and the providing of some means by which the state could supply employment to such of its prisoners as are now compelled to remain perpetually He also favored the limitation by statute of local indebtedness to ten per cent of the tax duplicate, and in closing said: "Time only can tell how much or how little I shall merit your commendation, but it will be my constant aim and purpose to serve you as faithfully and as wisely as there is light given me to show the path of right, and I shall ever remember that I am the servant of the people."

PORTAGE AND SUMMIT COUNTIES.

ON. GEORGE W. CROUSE, mannfacturer, was born at Tallmadge, Ohio, November 23, 1832, the son of George and Margaret H. (Robinson)

Crouse. His grandfather, who was of German descent, was killed in battle, fighting for American independence. The maternal line is of Irish extraction, the ancestry emigrating from the north of Ireland.

George W. Crouse was one of a family of ten children, his father being a hard-working His early years were spent on the farm, attending the common district school in the winter months, until he was seventeen years of age, when he was enabled to secure a position as teacher in a school, and taught five successive winter terms. He had become very proficient in mathematics, and in November, 1855, Mr. Sisler, a friendly neighbor, having been elected county treasurer, offered him a position as deputy treasurer in his office His peculiar fitness and diligent, at Akron. conscientious performance of his duties made him many warm friends, and in addition to his duties as deputy treasurer he was made deputy county auditor; in 1858 he was elected county auditor, and re-elected in 1860. A short time prior to the expiration of his second term a vacancy occurred in the treasurer's office, whereupon the county commissioner appointed him treasurer.

The A. & G. Railway (now the Erie) having been completed to Akron, Mr. Crouse accepted a position as its agent at Akron, doing this work in addition to his work as treasurer. In 1863 C. Aultman & Co., of Cauton, determined to build a branch factory at Akron, and Mr. Crouse was tendered the financial management of the enterprise, which he accepted, and with J. R. Buchtel erected the large manufacturing establishment known as the Buckeye works, he wholly attending to the financial management. This was the initial manufacturing establishment of Akron, and to Mr. Crouse's ability as a manager of men, his sagacity and promptness in the discharge of his many duties, is largely due the success of the Buckeye Mower and Reaper works, one of the largest in the land. a stock company was formed, he being made secretary and treasurer, continuing as such until 1885, when he became its president, continuing as such up to the present time. The Buckeye Mower and Reaper works have made over 200,000 machines, and was one of the factors that contributed largely to the success of the Union arms in the Civil war, supplying the place of the young men that went out in the defense of the flag by its labor-saving machinery.

In politics Mr. Crouse has always been an active republican, and as chairman of the county central committee, and other positions influential in and one of the leaders in the party. In 1872 he was elected county commissioner, serving one term. He was a member of the city council of Akron and served as its president; as a member and president of the board of education, he has always taken a deep interest in educational matters, and is one of the trustees of Buchtel College, and the donor to the college of the gymnasium that bears his name, "Crouse Gymnasium." In 1885 he was elected to the state senate and served with honor one term. In 1886 he was elected to represent the Akron district in the Fiftieth In that congress he served on the committee on commerce and the committee on war claims, that grew out of the war of the His marked business capacity and experience specially fitted him to this laborious and delicate duty, and he brought to its performance the painstaking fidelity that has marked his business career, making him a most useful member of that body.

In 1863, and for a number of years following, he was secretary of what was known as the Akron Board of Trade, an informal organization of the best citizens to encourage the location of manufacturing in this thriving, busy city. He has assisted directly as stockholder or indirectly with his influence, the Whitman & Barnes Manufacturing company, the Akron Rubber works, the Thomas Phillips Company Paper Mill, the Akron Iron Company, Woolen & Felt Company, the Diamond Match works, the stove works, the Selle Gear works, and various other successful enterprises, which have received an impetus from the organizing and clear-sighted business ability of Mr. Crouse. In 1870 he assisted in organizing the Bank of Akron, and from that time until 1889 he was its president.

October 18, 1859, Mr. Crouse married Martha K., daughter of Edward and Clementine (Kingsley) Parsons, of Brimfield, Ohio. This union has brought them five children. Mrs. Crouse is a lady that exerts a strong home influence quietly and without ostentation, commanding the highest regard of those with whom she may be thrown in contact, and devoted to the happiness and best interests of her family, and dispensing the liberal hospitalities of their home.

It has been by no fortuitous circumstances that Mr. Crouse has reached his honorable position, but the result of assiduous attention to duties, strict integrity in all business relations, an ability to control and command the respect of his fellow citizens, kindness to, and consideration for, the large number of men in his employ, a public speaker able to command by his presence and familiarity with questions of public interest the respectful attention of any audience, generous and affable, ever having in view the best interests and advancement of mankind, he has ever been ready to respond to all demands that charity makes upon him, having been a liberal contributor to the erection of every church and charitable enterprise in his city, and he is held in the highest regard by his fellow-countrymen, and the declining years of his life will bear rich fruit for the benefit of mankind.

RANK ADAMS, one of the oldest, and who, for years, was one of the most prominent business men of Akron, Ohio, and one whose early connection with the industries of the city has aided in making it what it is to-day, was born in Windsor county, Vt., July 5, 1819, a son of Benjamin and Betsey (Crowley) Adams, who were natives of Massachusetts, but were taken in early child-hood, by their parents, to Vermont, where their marriage took place. Some years after marriage, Benjamin Adams brought his family to Ohio and settled in Akron, about 1838, where his death occurred November 22, 1849, and that of his widow about twenty years later.

Frank Adams received a very good common-school education and early developed a talent for business. He was about eighteen years of age when he accompanied his parents to Akron, and with them he remained until he had about attained his majority, when he entered the employ of his brother-in-law, Samuel Manning, who was engaged in map publishing, and two years later formed a partnership with him in the same business, under the firm name of Manning & Co. A year later a Mr. Eggleston bought out the interest of Mr. Manning, and the style of the firm was changed to Adams & Eggleston.

In March, 1849, Mr. Adams was appointed postmaster at Akron by President Zachary Taylor, and filled the office with great ability and to the satisfaction of the public until May, 1853, when, for political reasons, he was removed, the rule with political parties at that day being "To the victor belong the spoils." Mr. Adams then engaged as a dealer in hats, etc., which he profitably conducted until burned out, April 30, 1855. He next engaged in the manufacture of sewer pipe, later became president of the Akron Sewer Pipe company, and continued in this line of business until 1886, when he retired. Mr. Adams was a member of the Akron board of trade, was president of the Akron Water Works company, and was financially and officially connected with many of the industrial enterprises of the city.

During the dark period of the war of the late Rebellion, Mr. Adams was a firm friend of the Union, was a member of the Middlebury (Summit county) Military committee, was treasurer of the Soldiers' Relief Fund, and also contributed liberally of his own means in assisting the government to maintain the integrity of its flag.

Mr. Adams was first married January 21, 1846, to Miss Sarah Hyde Gale, but this lady was called away January 11, 1863, leaving two daughters—now Mrs. Julia Latham and Mrs. Mary Perkins. The second marriage of Mr. Adams was solemnized September 12, 1863, with Mrs. Janetta L. Murphy, and this happy union has been blessed, also, with two children—Frank H., now cashier of the First National Bank of Akron, and Zella M.

The long identity of Mr. Adams with the business, industrial and financial institutions of Akron has made his name a household word, and there is now probably no man living who has taken a deeper interest in the material development, and religious, moral and educational progress of the city than he. His name stands without a blemish or reproach, his business integrity has never been in the slightest degree put to question, and "None knew him but to love him; none knew him but to praise," will be quoted in his memory when the time shall have come for him to join "the universal caravan," which, in the course of nature, it must, but which, it is the heartfelt prayer of all who know his worth, will be deferred for many a long year yet to come.

ILLIAM HENRY ADAMS, of Akron, may well be classed as among the leading liverymen of northeastern Ohio. He was born in Manchester, Summit county, July 15, 1848, the fifth of a family of six children who blessed the union of Daniel and Mary (Shook) Adams, natives of Pennsylvania, who settled in Summit county, Ohio, prior to 1830, and was nominated for the office of county recorder, was triumphantly elected in November, and assumed the duties of the office September 7, 1897, when he relinquished his contracting and building operations.

The marriage of Mr. Alling took place in 1867 to Emilie A. Carter, a native of Brimfield, Portage county, Ohio, and a daughter of Horatio L. and Julia A. (Lyon) Carter, natives of Massachusetts, and this marriage has been blessed with six children, viz: Julia M., Walter C., Ruth W., Fannie M., Mary E. and Edwin L. The Alling family stand very high in the social circles of Tallmadge township, and individually Mr. Alling is highly esteemed for his personal merits. As a soldier he did his full duty, as a republican he has been faithful and active, and as a citizen he stands without reproach.

EORGE L. ALLEN, one of the old soldiers of the Civil war and a respected citizen of Cuyahoga Falls, was born in this city February 20, 1839, a son of George and Elizabeth (Harper) Allen—both born in Ireland. George Allen was born in 1799 in Antrim, Ireland, and was a papermaker by trade. He married, in Ireland, Elizabeth Harper. The children were Jane, Andrew, John (born in Ireland), Mary (died at sea), Robert, William, Julia, George L., Mary, Alexander, born in America, the parents having come to this country in 1832.

George Allen first settled in Lee, Mass., and worked at the papermaking business four years and then, in 1836, came to Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio, and worked in the paper mill. He was an industrious and hard working man, was careful and economical, and accumulated property, including eighty acres where the subject of this biography now lives. He lived to be about seventy-three years of age and died on his farm in 1872, an honored and upright man. Fraternally he was a knight templar Mason, having joined the order in Ireland when but twenty-one years of age.

George L. Allen, was brought to the farm where he now lives when a child of four years, received a common education and was brought up a farmer. He enlisted at Cuvahoga Falls, July 28, 1862, for three years or during the war, in the One Hundred and Fourth regiment Ohio volunteer infantry, was transferred, at Massillon, Ohio, to company G, One Hundred and Fifteenth regiment Ohio volunteer infantry, and served until honorably discharged, at the close of the war, at Columbus, Ohio, June 22, 1865. He was in the battles of La-Vergne, Tenn., and was taken prisoner December 5, 1864, by Hood's force and surrendered, with thirty others, to Gen. Forrest. was taken to Meridian, Miss., and thence to Andersonville prison, was confined five months and was then sent to Vicksburg to be exchanged. The prisoners, being unable to travel, were left at Cahaba, Ala., for about two or three weeks, when, the war being closed, the Union troops took possession. When Mr. Allen enlisted he was a strong and very hardy man, weighing about 150 pounds, and did his full duty, actively and promptly. His severe privations during his imprisonment reduced him to only seventy-five pounds, and when released he was a mere skeleton, and was so sickened with chronic diarrhea that he could hardly walk about. Several of his comrades from Cuyahoga Falls, were unable to undegro the strain and died. On his return to Cuyahoga Falls, Mr. Allen was so much reduced, that his own mother did not know him, and it was ten years before hn even partially recovered.

He settled on the home farm and married, October 20, 1875, in Cuyahoga Falls, Allie C. Blake, who was born in Columbus, Ohio, August 8, 1854, a daughter of William O. and Louisa (Beach) Blake, of New England ancestry, formerly from England, where the family were shipbuilders. Mr. Blake was one of the proprietors of a large printing establishment in Columbus, Ohio, being a member of the firm of Osgood & Blake. Mr. and Mrs. Blake were the parents of two children—Alice E. and William A. Mrs. Blake died when Mrs. Allen was but four years old; Mr. Blake died in Columbus, Ohio, in September, 1865. He bought a farm at Copley, Summit county, Ohio, where Mrs. Allen lived after the death of her mother until seven years old, and then lived in Columbus. Mr. Blake was a member of the Episcopal church. He had attended school but six months in childhood, but was a man of education gained by his own efforts and teaching himself Greek after he was fifty years old. He was a publisher and writer of books and wrote books for the old firm of Miller Bros., publishers, of Columbus, Ohio. Among his works widely sold and read was the "History of the World." His nom-de-plume was Prescott.

Mr. Blake descended from the famous naval officer—Adm ral Blake, of England. Gen. Blake, of Mansfield, Ohio, an Englishman, was also of that family.

Since their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Allen have lived on the home farm and have one son, Howard, who is a telephone inspector of Dayton, Ohio. Mr. Allen is a member of the G. A. R., Eadie post, at Cuvahoga Falls. He is a war republican and cast his first vote for A. Lincoln. He is an honored citizen and for many years was a member of the school board. Mis. Allen's grandmother, on her maternal side, was an Abernathy—a descendant of the famous Dr. Abernathy. The Allens are Scotch-Irish. Mr. Allen is a member of the Ex-Union Prisoners' association. He was detailed orderly to general headquarters, Covington, Ky., in 1863, and was in Morgan's raid, and in September his horse fell on him, disabling his right leg, and he was in hospital at Covington, Ky., and nine months in Cincinnati and Cleveland.

OHN ANDES, a prominent farmer of Suffield township, was born in Randolph township, Portage county, Ohio, September 8, 1852, a son of Peter and Rosa (Horning) Andes.

Peter Andes, the grandfather of subject, came from Germany to the United States in 1831 and settled in Randolph township, where he engaged in farming. He had four children, viz: Peter, father of our subject; Mary, widow of Joseph Schrader; John, who died in Germany, and Elizabeth, who died in Randolph county, the wife of John A. Knapp, also deceased. Peter and his wife were members of the Catholic church, and passed away in that faith. Peter Andes, the father of subject, is also a native of Germany, and in 1832 came to Portage county, settling on a farm on which he lived forty years, and then bought the farm now owned by his son John, the subject of this sketch. To his marriage with Miss Horning were born eleven children, eight of whom are still living, viz: Nicholas, Margaret, Peter, Mary (wife of Joseph Wise). John, Adam, Joseph and Elizabeth. father is a democrat in politics, has served as supervisor, and in religion is a true Catholic, having served in all the secular offices of his church. He now resides in Randolph township, a highly respected citizen, but was bereaved of his wife, who died at the early age thirty-six years, a devout member of the Catholic church.

John Andes passed his boyhood days on his father's farm, and was educated in a Catholic school. At the age of twenty-one he engaged in farming on his own account, and June 5, 1877, he married, in Randolph township, Miss Odelia Paulus, a daughter of Joseph and Theresa (Gless) Paulus. Mr. Paulus was born in Germany March 25, 1830, a son of Andrew and Barbara (Hoerdt) Paulus, and in 1846 came to Ohio and settled in Suffield township, Portage county, where he is still engaged in farming. January 16, 1857, he first married Miss Eva Knapp, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Andes) Knapp, and to their marriage were born twelve children, of whom five died in infancy, the survivors being John, Lewis, Henry, Mary (wife of John May), Joseph, Frank and Julia. To his second marriage, which was to Miss Gless, was born Odelia, now Mrs. Andes.

Andrew Paulus, grandfather of Mrs. Andes, was born February 1, 1795, and his wife, Barbara Hoerdt, was born August 2, 1807. They were married in Germany, their native country, in 1829, and came to America in 1846. Here Andrew died in February, 1877, at the age of eighty-two years and eleven days, his wife having preceded him to the grave in 1873, at the age of sixty-eight years, both dying in the faith of the Roman Catholic church. Of their five children, four lived to maturity, viz.: Joseph: Margaret, wife of Andrew Hart; Della, widow of Frederick Wolf; Augusta, wife of Wendell Earhart, and Francis A., who died January 6, 1897, at the age of sixty-four years. Mrs. Joseph Paulus was born in Randolph township January 23, 1837, her parents having come from Germany in 1832.

John Andes, our subject, has had born to him six children, of whom five are still living, viz: Cora, Frank, Augusta, Alfred and Clotilda. The deceased child bore the name of Leona and died March 20, 1894, at the age of six years and five months. The year of his marriage, 1877, Mr. Andes settled on his present farm, which he has placed under a high state of cultivation, and improved with every modern convenience. A democrat in politics, he has served as supervisor of his township three terms, and is still the incumbent of the office. Mr. Andes, now in the prime of life, is one of the most respected residents of Suffield township, and one of its most progressive and prosperous farmers.

OHNSON A. ARBOGAST, attorney at law and senior member of the well known firm of Arbogast & Esgate, room No. 3, Arcade building, Akron, Ohio, has been a resident of this city since 1883, having first come as a student of Buchtel college. He is a native of Sidney, Shelby county, Ohio, was born June 30, 1863, and is a son of Allen and Lydia (Schobey) Arbogast, the former family coming from Virginia and the latter from New Jersey, both having been largely engaged in agricultural pursuits.

Cornelius Arbogast, the paternal grandfather of our subject, was a pioneer Universalist preacher, and for about forty years served in the ministry of that church in the counties of Clarke, Madison, Champaign and Shelby, Ohio, and was an eloquent and fervent exhorter and profound expounder of the gospel.

Johnson A. Arbogast was reared on his father's farm, received his elementary education in the common schools, and his literary education at Buchtel college. He read law with W. D. Davies, of Sidney, Ohio, and after teaching school for three years the last year in Marlboro, Stark county - was admitted to practice in 1888. He at once located in Akron, and for four years had his office with John J. Hall. In 1894 he formed his present partnership with Mr. Esgate, and since that time they have been successful in the general practice of Mr. Arbogast, however, has their profession. largely been retained in the administration of estates, and is now one of the assignees of the valuable Schumacher property. He has been exceptionally successful in this peculiar line, and in general practice has risen perhaps more rapidly than any other young member of the present bar of Summit county. In politics Mr. Arbogast is an ardent republican and takes an active part in promoting the success of his party. Fraternally, he is a member of Nemo lodge, No. 746, I. O. O. F., of Akron, in which he has passed all the chairs, and is also a member of Akron tent, K. O. T. M.

Mr. Arbogast was united in marriage in Medina, Ohio, June 20, 1888, with Miss Lelia Badger, daughter of Joseph and Amanda Badger, and this union has been blessed with four children, viz: Hazel L., Gladys Y., Frederick A. and Doris. The parents are members of the Universalist church, and their home is at No. 112 Adams street, where Mr. Arbogast has erected a modern residence. Mr. Arbogast has by his own talents risen to his present position in his profession, having come to Akron without any means of importance and almost a stranger.

THE AKRON CHEMICAL COM-PANY, organized in 1880, was incorporated by E. G. Kubler, president; J. M. Beck, vice-president; C. L. Brown, secretary and treasurer; F. M. Atterholt and C. B. Raymond; the present officers are F. A. Wilcox, president; J. M. Beck, vicepresident; C. L. Brown, secretary, and E. B. McConem, treasurer. The company was organized for the purpose of organizing paint specialties, but in 1892 it added the manufacture of printing inks, which have now become its main product. In the paint line graphite preparations for all kinds of iron painting are made, and in inks, superior qualities for book, job and bag printing are produced, and the output of the company is in demand all over the United States and many parts of Europe, especially for its printing inks. This is the only establishment of the kind in Akron and has become one of the city's important industries.

C. L. Brown, the secretary of the Akron Chemical company, was born in Chester county, Pa., February 14, 1840, a son of Isaac and Margaretta K. (Kinsey) Brown, of sterling Onaker descent. The father was reared to farming, but in his advancing age retired to Philadelphia, where he lost his wife July 19. 1896, when she died at the age of seventyseven years, and where he still lives at the age of seventy-six. C. L. Brown was educated in Philadelphia, and at the age of nineteen years began clerking-first in a dry-goods store and in 1808 came to Akron and for five or six years here followed the same vocation. In 1873 he formed a partnership with C. G. Auble and William Duer, under the firm name of Auble, Brown & Co., but some six years later fire destroyed the stock of the concern and the firm was dissolved. Mr. Brown then became a traveling salesman for Herrick & Cannon, in the wholesale crockery line, meeting with excellent success for seven years, his route covering a radius of about 150 miles around Akron. He next became a stockholder and director in the Selle Gear company of Akron, and for four years traveled through eighteen states, introducing and selling the products of that concern, and is still one of its directors. In 1889 he assisted in organizing the Akron Chemical company, and has since been one of the chief factors in its success.

The marriage of Mr. Brown took place in 1867 with Miss Emma E. Yeamans, daughter of Robert Yeamans, of Philadelphia, born November 11, 1845, in Philadelphia, Pa., and this union has been blessed with seven children, viz: Annie E., Harry J., Frank M. and Maggie K., all deceased, and Edwin E., Bertha and Ella F. Mrs. Brown was educated in the schools of Philadelphia, Pa. originally a member of the Baptist church, but on removing to Akron she joined the Methodist Episcopal church, in which she has been a most active worker since. She is also a member of the Home and Foreign missionary societies of the M. E. church and has endeared to her a large circle of friends. a woman of gracious, christian devotion, and her every day life is made up of living and working for the right. For thirty years Mr. Brown has been almost constantly on its official board. He is an Odd Fellow and charter member of Akron lodge, No. 547, and in politics is a republican. The Chemical company has its place of business on State street, near Main, while the residence of Mr. Brown is at No. 106 Franklin street. votes all his business hours strictly to the interests of the Chemical company, and the remainder of his time is devoted to his interesting family and his church work. He is exceedingly domestic in his habits, and finds unequaled happiness in the family circle. eldest living son, Edwin E., is a graduate of the Akron high school and of the city's commercial college, and for six months was a clerk in the office of the Akron Iron company, and since leaving that company has been in the employ of the American Cereal company, in their Chicago office. He is a strictly moral young man and an active worker in the Methodist Episcopal church. Miss Bertha Brown graduated from the high school with the class of 1894, then attended the business college, and is now filling a clerical position in the office of Aultman, Miller & Co. Miss Ella F. Brown is still attending school. Mr. Brown is one of the ablest business men in Akron, has always been an indefatigable worker, and stands very high in the esteem of the social as well as business circles of Akron, and with his brethren in the church and lodge.

OHN ALLEN, now living in retirement just south of Akron, Ohio, is a native of Coventry township, Summit county, was born October 20, 1821, and is a son of a pioneer family of English extraction, but of long residence in America.

Jesse Allen, grandfather of subject, came from Groton, Conn., to Summit county, Ohio, in 1811, took part in the war of 1812, and here followed farming until the time of his death. Jonah Allen, father of subject, was born in Groton, Conn., October 17, 1798, and was consequently but thirteen years of age when brought to Ohio by his parents. He was reared in Coventry township, Summit county, where he passed all the remainder of his life with the exception of a few years passed in Akron, where he was engaged in the manufacture of cloth. HARLES BAIRD, a well-known attorney at law at Akron, Ohio, is a native of this city, was born March 25, 1853, a son of Robert Baird, who was a native of Kincardineshire, Scotland, born March 8, 1818, and who in 1843 came to America, settling in Akron, which was then little more than a village, and following his trade of blacksmithing for many years.

Robert Baird has seen the village of Akron grow to its present proportions and probably has made more acquaintances and friends in the city and throughout the county than any man living within the limits of either. was from his early settlement here a strong anti-slavery man and free-soiler until the formation of the republican party, when he became one of its most faithful adherents. was married in Akron to Miss Helen Knox Moir, a native of Scotland and a daughter of Charles and Mary Gordon Moir. Charles Baird, whose name opens this biographical notice, was educated primarily in the common schools, graduated from the high school of Akron, then for one year studied Greek and Latin at Buchtel college, and then entered the law office of Upson & Ford, studying assiduously until his admission to the bar November 2, 1875, following which day he formed a co-partnership with his preceptor, Judge Upson, under the firm name of Upson & Baird. In 1877, on the return of Mr. Ford, the name of the firm was changed to that of Upson, Ford & Baird, and so continued until March, 1883, when Mr. Upson was called to the supreme bench of Ohio, when the firm dissolved and Mr. Baird continued the practice alone until 1891, when he formed a partnership with Edwin F. Voris, under the firm name of Baird & Voris, which continued until June, 1895, since which time Mr. Baird has continued the practice alone.

As a republican, Mr. Baird was appointed, in 1875, township clerk of Portage township, and in 1879 canal collector, which office he held until his election, in 1880, as prosecuting attorney of Summit county, filling this position one term of two and one term of three years, making a total of five years in this responsible Having given special attention to the laws governing corporations, he has been very successful in this line of practice, and has, beside, been instrumental in the formation of several companies, whose lines of industry have given employment to many hands and redounded to the material progress of He has, moreover, assisted in founding several of these important links in the chain of Akron's prosperity. For instance, he was one of the incorporators of the Portage Straw Board company, the mills of which were located at New Portage and Circleville, Ohio, and one of its directors until it was consolidated with the American Straw Board company, in the organization of which he had charge of the legal proceedings and was its first secretary. Mr. Baird also assisted in 1880-81 in the organization of the Diamond Match company, the most gigantic in the world in its line, and has since been one of its attorneys. He was also one of the incorporators of the Goodrich Hard Rubber company, has been a director since its organization, and is largely interested in the B. F. Goodrich company as a stockholder.

In 1890 Mr. Baird joined O. C. Barber and A. T. Paige in the purchase of a tract of land on which the town of Barberton is now located, platted that town and assisted in the formation of the Barberton Land & Improvement company, of which he is secretary and treasurer; he was one of the incorporators of the National Sewer Pipe company, and is its vice-president; was one of the organizers of the Stirling company and assisted in securing ts location at Barberton, and was one of its directors for some years; was one of the incorporators of the Barberton Belt Line Railroad company, and is its superintendent and treasurer; was an incorporator of the Creedmoor Cartridge company, at Barberton, and is one of its directors; was one of the organizers of the General Fire Extinguisher company of New York, whose plants are located at Warren, Ohio, and Providence, R. In 1888, on the death of Albert Allen, Mr. Baird became administrator of the Commins estate, the largest administered up to that time in Summit county, and in 1892 was appointed one of the executors of the will of Thomas W. Cornell, the largest estate ever administered in Akron, and is still executor, in association with J. B. Wright. As an attorney, Mr. Baird has had a wide practice in the courts of Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Pennsylvania, Connecticut, New York and Ohio, and in the federal courts, making a specialty of corporation law, although he does a great deal of general practice besides.

Mr. Baird was united in marriage, February 10, 1882, with Miss Lucy Allyn Voris, daughter of Gen. A. C. Voris, of Akron, and this union has been crowned by the birth of five children, viz: Alvin Voris, born December 3, 1882; Helen Elizabeth, August 30, 1884; Betsey Coe, June 11, 1886; Charles, October 15, 1888; and Katharine, November 19, 1890.

L. BALDWIN, of East Akron, trustee of Springfield township, is one of the leading young farmers of that township. He was born in Montville, Geauga county, Ohio, March 1, 1860, the son of Lewis C. Baldwin, whose parents, Erastus and Lucretia Baldwin, were substantial farming people of Goshen, Litchfield county, Conn. Lewis C. Baldwin was born in Goshen, Conn., July 20, 1826, and was reared on the paternal farm. He came to Summit county, Ohio, in 1842, and on January 2, 1852, was married to Jerusha A. Chamberlain, who was born April 10, 1827, a daughter of Amos and Asenath (Crane) Chamberlain. To them, beside our subject, were born Elton L., May (wife of Thomas J. In this latter year they moved to Hudson, this county, where they lived until 1884, when they located on the farm on which our subject lives, and where the father died January 5, 1896; the mother June 23, 1891. Both were earnest members of the Disciples' church. Mr. Baldwin served in the late war on guard duty on Johnson's Island, enlisting August 23, 1864, in company B, One Hundred and Twenty-eighth Ohio volunteer infantry, being discharged in 1865. He was a stanch republican and took an active interest in local affairs. During his residence in Geauga county he held several offices. He was a charter member of Montville lodge, I. O. O. F., and a past grand in Apollo lodge, No. 61, same order, and a member of Buckley post, G. A. R., of Akron. He was buried with the honors of both fraternities.

E. L. Baldwin has always lived on the He received a good common-school education, and on January 1, 1884, married Miss Josephine M. Thompson, who was born November 26, 1862, in Hudson, the daughter of Asaph and Sabrina (Burroughs) Thompson. Both Mr. and Mrs. Thompson were natives of this county, the former being born at Hudson, December 15, 1831, the latter at Northfield, October 16, 1835. They resided continuously at Hudson, where she died February 22, 1873. He died December 15, 1881, in California, whither he had gone but a few months before for his health. Both were members of the Presbyterian church. Mrs. Baldwin's paternal grandfather, William Thompson, was of Scotch descent, and was one of the earliest pioneers of the county. He married Mary Oviatt, and they lived and died at Hudson, having accumulated considerable wealth for their day. maternal grandparents, Allen and Betsey (Honey) Burroughs, were pioneer farming people of this county and lived and died at Northfield.

Since the second year of his marriage our subject has lived in Springfield township, and occupies a finely improved farm of 190 acres owned by Joseph A. Baldwin, of Akron. He is largely engaged in the breeding of registered Jersey cattle, and now has a considerable and valuable herd. He has been in this business for the past ten years and has been quite successful. He is a republican, strongly grounded in his political faith, and is a member of Apollo lodge, No. 61, I. O. O. F. In 1892 he was elected trustee of Springfield township and is now serving his second term in that office. To Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin have been born the following children: Ruth E., Lee E., Mary F. (deceased), and Joseph C.

YRON BARBER, a retired farmer of Brimfield township, Portage county, Ohio, is a son of Lyman and Julia (Landorn) Barber, and was born near the village of Brimfield May 6, 1822. His parents were both natives of Litchfield, Conn., came to Ohio in 1818, and settled in Brimfield township, Portage county, where the father bought 200 acres of land. Lyman Barber was a carpenter by trade, and erected all his buildings, including dwelling and barn, and yet he was a successful farmer. To his marriage with Miss Landorn were born four children, of whom two still survive-Myron and Nelson; Emily died July 13, 1840, at the age of twenty years, and one child died in infancy. Mrs. Julia Barber died February 14, 1856, at the age of sixty-one years, and May 3, 1857, Mr. Barber married Mrs. Mary Weston. February 8, 1865, he passed from earth.

Myron Barber was reared on his father's farm and attended the common schools until eighteen years old. At nearly his majority he married, March 23, 1843, Miss Elizabeth Jennings, daughter of Solomon and Susan (Price) Jennings, who bore him eight children, viz.: Wallace L., Emily, wife of Earl Merrills; Phemie, wife of Wallace Merrills; D. H.; Franklin W.; Susan E., who died February 8, 1862; Byron W., who died July 23, 1849; Oliver E., whose death was caused, September 5, 1873, by an explosion of lime at Springfield. The mother of this family was called away November 5, 1872, at the age of fifty years. Mr. Barber next married, in May, 1874, Mrs. Mary H. Taylor, who met with a sad and untimely end. On July 16, 1896, she left her home, in the best of health, to go to Kent to do some shopping, but within six hours was a corpse.

In politics, Mr. Barber has been a republican and has served his fellow-citizens as a member of the board of education and supervisor, but filled these offices more from a feeling of duty than from any desire for public office. Being one of the oldest native-born citizens of his township, his long and useful life is duly appreciated by his neighbors, and his name, which is well known throughout the county, is honored wherever and whenever mentioned.

ELSON L. BARBER, a retired farmer, was born in Brimfield township, Portage county, Ohio, June 3, 1825, a son of Lyman and Julia (Landorn) Barber, natives of Litchfield county, Conn.

Joseph Barber, grandfather of Nelson L., married a Miss Cole and reared a family of ten children, all now deceased. Of the daughters, Dorcas, the eldest, lived single until her sixtieth year, when she married a man who was eighty years old; Lucy was married to Isaac Osborn; Polly was the wife of Orrin Gilbert; Sally became Mrs. Arba Twitchell; Maria married a Mr. Sill; Abbie married a gentleman of the same name—Sill; the sons were named Norman, Lyman and Edwin.

Lyman Barber, father of Nelson L., was a carpenter by trade and came to Ohio about 1816. To his marriage, in Goshen township, Litchfield county, Conn., with Miss Julia Landorn, there were born four children, of whom two still survive—Myron and Nelson L.; one child died in infancy, and Emily, a school-teacher, died in 1840, at the age of twenty years. The father was called away in 1865.

in his sixty-sixth year, and the mother died in Brimfield.

Nelson L. Barber passed his early years on the home farm in Brimfield township and attended the district school until sixteen years old, and then attended a select school in Twinsburg, Summit county, two terms of three months each. At the age of seventeen he began teaching—his first school being at Brimfield—and in all he taught fourteen years during the winter months, passing the summers in His marriage took place April 22, farm work. 1852, within a few rods of his present home, to Miss Sarah Berkheimer, daughter of John Berkheimer, and this marriage has been blessed with four children, viz: Emmit, George M. and Jesse O., still living, and John L., who died in 1881, at the age of twenty-four years. The mother of these children was called from earth in 1882, at the age of forty-eight years. After his marriage Mr. Barber continued to teach school for three terms, and then turned his attention exclusively to farming, which he successfully followed until a few years ago, when he retired on account of ill health, having for many years been a victim of asthma. In August, 1866, he made a trip to Minnesota, remained two months, and was considerably benefited; then made a visit south, and for the past eight years has alternated his visits between Minnesota and Michigan.

In politics Mr. Barber has been very prominent as a republican, and for twenty-one years served as a justice of the peace, having been elected seven times consecutively, his last term expiring in the spring of 1896; he also served as township trustee for a number of years, and for nine years was a school director. Fraternally he has for many years been a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and socially he enjoys the well-earned esteem of his fellow-citizens in general and of his immediate neighbors in particular.

REDERICK J. BAUER, M. D., a prominent practitioner of Summit county, was born in Suffield township, Portage county, Ohio, March 5, 1854, a son of Jacob and Christena (Holtzworth) Bauer, of whom further mention is made in the following paragraph.

Jacob Bauer was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, February 22, 1809, a son of Michael and Mary (Wildermuth) Bauer. For six years he was a soldier in the German army, later learning blacksmithing, and in 1839 came For a short time he to the United States. worked at his trade in Erie, Pa., and then came to Ohio, settling in Greensburg, Summit county, where he engaged in farming. He married Miss Christena Holtzworth, who was born in Germany in 1819, and to this union were born nine children, of whom seven are still living, viz.: Rudolph; Mary, wife of George Price, of Suffield; Adelia, widow of Newton Stoffer; Lena, wife of John Peterson, Carthage, Mo.; Frederick J., the subject; Lucinda, wife of John May, living on the old homestead in Suffield township; Jacob W., residing in Columbia, S. C., where he has charge of the state weather bureau. Those who passed away were Sophia, who was the wife of William Wilson, and George, who died in The mother of these children was infancy. called from earth in 1882, at the age of sixtynine years, and the father in September, 1890, aged eighty-one years and six months, both in the faith of the Reformed church.

Frederick J. Bauer passed his early boyhood days on his father's farm, attending the district school of Suffield meanwhile, and, being an apt scholar, prepared himself for school-teaching, which preparation he found to be of some advantage in later years. At the age of seventeen years, he and his brother Rudolph, and their brother-in-law, George Price, leased a saw-mill in Suffield, and did a good business, under the firm name of Bauer Bros. & Price, for two years, when they sold out. Mr. Bauer then engaged as clerk in the general store of George Michael, in Suffield, which position he held eight months, and then, beginning with 1874, for three winters taught school in his native district, and one spring term—his last term being taught after he had begun the study of medicine in 1877. While engaged in teaching, he attended Mount Union college during the summer months, which he attended six terms—two terms at a time, and then, in 1877, as just mentioned, began his preparatory studies in medicine under Dr. J. C. Ferguson at Mogadore. He next attended the Ohio Medical college at Cincinnati, and later the university at Wooster, from which he graduated in 1880. Returning to Mogadore, he practiced, in partnership with his former preceptor, Dr. Ferguson, until the latter's death, in January, 1886, since when he has been alone, his profound hygienic knowledge being the means of yearly increasing his large list of patients.

Dr. Bauer was united in marriage, October 17, 1885, at Kent, Ohio, with Miss Kate S. Rubbins, a daughter of John and Lydia M. (Olds) Rubbins, and this union has been blessed with two children, Frederick Otis and Carl Holtzworth. Mrs. Dr. Bauer was born in Newport, N. Y., August 12, 1866, but was brought to Kent, Ohio, by her parents while yet a child. She is a highly educated lady, and through the training of her devoted mother was prepared, while yet a mere child, for the profession of teacher, which vocation she entered upon at the early age of sixteen years, teaching for two years, her last term being just west of Mogadore, in the same district in which the doctor had been teaching, and where she formed his acquaintance, marrying him when about nineteen years old. Since her marriage she has been giving lessons in oil painting and pastel drawing, in which arts she is an adept.

John Rubbins, father of Mrs. Bauer, was born in England, and is a machinist by trade. He came to the United States a single man, enlisted in the Union army and was shot through the hip at Gettysburg; after recovery he re-enlisted and served until the close of hostilities, when he was honorably discharged after a service of four years. Returning to New York, he married Miss Lydia M. Olds, October 3, 1865. This lady was a native of the Empire City, was a daughter of Carty and Catherine (Jenkins) Olds, and was born January 9, 1847. She bore her her husband two children -- Emma, who died at the age of three years and seven months, and Kate S., now The devoted mother was called Mrs. Bauer. away October 13, 1896, leaving her disconsolate husband and surviving daughter to mourn her loss. Catherine (Jenkins) Olds, the maternal grandmother, of Mrs. Bauer, was a daughter of Evan and Lydia (Hathaway) Jenkins, and bore her husband twelve children, viz: Otis; Jane, widow of Bereth Bullard; Jennette, widow of Hiram Linster; Helen, wife of Samuel Walker; Orrin; Delbert; Sarah, wife of Julius Gardner, and Lewis, all still living; the deceased were Orson, who died in the army of Frederick City, at twenty-three years of age; Marcia, who was married to Eli Root, and died in August, 1891, and Lydia M., the mother of Mrs. Bauer. Both grandparents were devout members of the Methodist church.

Dr. Frederick J. Bauer is a democrat in politics, and in 1886 was elected a justice of the peace, which office he filled with great ability for three years, and was also a member of the school board for two years. Fraternally he is a member of Akron lodge, No. 83, F. & A. M., and of Mogadore lodge, No. 482, K. of P., in the latter of which he has passed all the chairs, and was its delegate to the grand lodge in the spring of 1897; he is also an honorary member of the Junior Master Mechanics of Mogadore. He is likewise a member of the Summit county Medical association, of the Northeastern Medical society of Ohio, and of the State Medical association, to all of which he has contributed many valuable essays on professional subjects. Mrs. Bauer has been a member of the Agricultural society for the past two years and takes a very active part in its proceedings. Socially, the doctor and his wife hold a very high position, and are well qualified to ornament the select circle in which they move.

■ ENRY AULTMAN, a well-known farmer of Brimfield township, Portage county, was born in Columbiana county, Ohio, December 30, 1829, a son of William and Susan (Shaffer) Aultman. His grandfather, William Aultman, was a native of Germany, was a wheelwright by trade, and when a young man came to America and settled in Pennsylvania, and later removed to Ohio, where he died at the age of sixty years, a member of the Baptist church. The parents of subject were both born in Pennsylvania, came to Onio about the year 1812, and first located in Washington county, where Mr. Aultman engaged in carpentering and farming. To his marriage with Miss Shaffer were born five children, four of whom still survive, the subject being the eldest; the other three are Lydia to Ann, wife of Samuel Wise; Fannie, married B. John Wise, and Samantha S., now Mrs. S. B. Jones. The name of the fifth child was Elias, who died in infancy. The father of this family died in October, 1892, at the age of eightyfive years, and the mother, who is a daughter of William and Sophia Shaffer, still hale and hearty, at the age of eighty-six, is living with her daughter in Brimfield.

Henry Aultman attended the common schools of his boyhood, and in 1845 came to Brimfield township with his parents, whom he materially aided to support. He, himself, began life a poor man, but by untiring industry and true economy has worked himself upward, and now owns one of the best farms in Portage county; he has also been engaged in threshing for the past twenty years, thus adding materially to his income. During the winter months, butchering has received considerable of his attention, and he has been a good manager of everything he has undertaken, the result being a competency.

The marriage of Mr. Aultman took place October 17, 1858, to Miss Elizabeth Gusherd, daughter of George and Catherine (Kroll) Gusherd, and this happy union has been blessed with three children, of whom Curtis married Miss Eva Woodenberg, Lettie M. is the wife of E. F. Whittlesy and Charlie E. died July 24, 1875. Mr. Aultman and family are members of the Methodist Episcopal church at Brimfield, in which Mr. Aultman has filled all the secular offices, and he has also served as a member of the board of school directors, and as supervisor for many years, being a member of the republican party. The high esteem in which he is held by his fellow-townsmen he has gained through his personal merits, and his good example through life may well be imitated with profit by the rising generation.

Mr. Aultman now owns 216 acres of choice land, nearly all of which is well improved and on which his pleasant residence was built in 1889. He is one of the self-made men of the county, and is one of the most respected, having done as much as any man in the township for the promotion of its interests, and its moral, educational and material progress during the half century he has resided here, but the details of which grand work his modesty will not permit to be chronicled.

ILLIAM H. BEEBE, cashier of the Second National bank of Ravenna, Ohio, was born in this city October 19, 1841, and is a son of Horace Y. and Augustus C. (Coolman) Beebe, the former of whom was a native of Middletown, Conn., and the latter of Ohio. Mr. and Mrs. Beebe were the parents of two children—Mary P., the deceased wife of D. M. Clewell, and William H., as named above.

Oliver Dutton Beebe, paternal grandfather of subject, was a native of Connecticut, of English ancestry, and died in Middletown, that state, well advanced in years, and the father of three sons and two daughters. William Coolman, maternal grandfather of Mr. Beebe, was born in Middletown, Conn., was a farmer, and further details concerning his life may be found in the biography of Dewitt C. Coolman, on another page of this volume.

Horace Y. Beebe, father of subject, was an early comer to Ohio and first located at Cuvahoga Falls, but later removed to Ravenna. For many years he was county clerk and afterward was a conductor on the Cleveland & Pittsburg railroad, but left its employ in 1854 and became cashier for the Robinson, King & Co. bank, but withdrew ten years later, when that bank was merged with the Second National bank, in 1864. He was always active in politics, and was one of the four Ohio men in the national republican convention who changed their votes to Lincoln, and thus secured his nomination for the presidency of the United States. During the Civil war he was an assessor of internal revenue in Ohio, and later became bookkeeper and manager of the Diamond Glass works. He was one of Ravenna's most public-spirited citizens and a gentleman of great force of character; was pronounced as an Odd Fellow, and was a past grand master in that order and past grand representative at the time of his death, which occurred in 1888, his wife having died a few years previously—both devoted adherents of the Universalist faith.

William H. Beebe, whose name opens this biographical notice, has passed his entire life in Ravenna, excepting, perhaps, a temporary absence during his college days. received his preparatory education in the public schools of his native city, and then attended Hiram college under President James A. Garfield, and the day after he quit that institution of learning he entered the Second National bank at Ravenna as cashier, and is now in the thirty-eighth year of his incumbency of that position. On the 13th day of October, 1864, he was united in marriage with Miss Ella Reeves, daughter of John and Harriet M. (Mason) Reeves, of Trumbull county, and now has his residence on Bowery street, at the head of Meridian, Ravenna. Mr. Beebe has been a director of the Ravenna Gas & Electric company since its organization in 1873, and is at present its treasurer.

Mr. Beebe is an exalted Odd Fellow, being past grand patriarch of the state of Ohio; at present a representative to the sovereign grand lodge; past grand of Ravenna lodge, No. 65; past patriarch of Ravenna encampment; member of Beebe Rebekah lodge, No. 405 (which lodge was named in honor of his father), member of canton Cleveland, No. 33. in which he holds the rank of lieutenant-colonel, and of Kremlin Moscow, I. O. M., of Cincinnati. He is also a member of Uncas tribe, No. 57, l. O. R. M., Crescent lodge, No. 252, K. of P., Ravenna council, No. 376, Royal Arcanum, and grand treasurer of the grand council, R. A., of Ohio, for the past ten years, and was representative to the supreme council, R. A., at Savannah, Ga., in 1896, and in Boston in 1897.

Politically he is a republican. Mr. Beebe has served his fellow-citizens as a member of the Ravenna city council for six years, and is very active in promoting the material prosperity of the city. He has always, indeed, been active in his support of all wholesome measures of a public nature, and free in his aid for their advancement. For thirty-seven years he has been prominently before the public, and during that long period no murmur of complaint has ever been uttered against him. He is a most genial gentleman and has hosts of friends.

HARLES C. BENNER, a rising young attorney-at-law of Akron, was born in Franklin township, Summit county, Ohio, March 27, 1870, and is a son of Simon and Caroline E. (Slawbaugh) Benner, both natives of Summit county.

Simon Benner was born June 17, 1846, was a school-teacher in his earlier years, and for a long time taught at various places in the state of Indiana, and on his return to Ohio was united in marriage with Miss Slawbaugh, a daughter of Jacob and Mary (Keller) Slawbaugh, and this union was blessed with nine children, of whom eight still survive, viz: Elda, wife of Frank Werner; Clinton A., Melvin L., Charles C., Ervin R., Gertrude M., Wallace J. and Howard C.; Otto M., the deceased child, passed away at the age of five years. For a number of years Simon Benner served as a justice of the peace, but later became a farmer and an extensive dealer in live stock, and was an influential and prominent citizen. He and his wife were very active members of Grace Reformed church, and in this faith was called from earth August 22, 1884, at the early age of thirty-eight years, his widow surviving until January 7, 1890, when she was called to join her departed husband, when forty-five years old.

Henry Benner, the paternal grandfather of Charles C., was a native of Pennsylvania, as was also his wife. He came to Ohio early in life and was among the early settlers of Franklin township, Summit county. He was a blacksmith by trade, which vocation he followed as long as his strength permitted, and then engaged in farming. To his marriage with Miss Kintz there were born eight children, of whom six are still living, viz: David; Mary Ohl; Anna, wife of Jacob Myers; Harriet, now Mrs. Daniel Zellers; Isabella, married to James Kerstter, and Hiram; those who have passed away were Sarah, wife of Henry Raber, and Simon. The father of this family died in 1884, at the advanced age of ninetytwo years, while his wife still survives, in excellent health, aged eighty-eight. The maternal grandparents of Mr. Benner were both born in Lancaster county, Pa., were pioneers of Franklin township, and were the parents of two children-Frank and Caroline C.

Charles C. Benner was primarily educated in the common schools of Norton and Copley townships, Summit county, and this was supplemented by an attendance at the Ada Normal university of Ohio. He passed the later years of his minority on his father's farm, assisting in its cultivation during the summer months, and devoting the less busy winter months to study. In 1890 he commenced reading law with the well-known legal firm of Baird & Voris, continuing his studies until admitted to the bar, in June, 1893. The firm of Baird & Voris having by this time dissolved, Mr. Benner at once opened an office for practice in connection with Mr. Baird, and this congenial relationship has since continued, to their mutual profit.

Mr. Benner entered upon the chosen work of his life fully equipped for the execution of all the complex, minute, exacting, ofttimes vexatious, and yet fascinating duties of the legal profession, and has met with phenomenal success, his marked ability being recognized from the beginning, and his clientele is not only an extensive one, but unusually respectable in its individualism. Courteous and affable to the general public, he has made many warm friends, and, dignified and honorable in all his dealings with his brother-attorneys, he has won their unqualified esteem. Socially inclined by nature, he is popular as a member of the Akron lodge of the Benevolent & Protective Order of Elks; he is also a charter member of Akron lodge, No. 693, Knights of Pythias, and is prominent, likewise, in the Improved Order of Red Men. December 1, 1890, he became a member of company B, Eighth regiment, Ohio national guard, of which he was elected captain, but resigned his commission in 1894, his increasing legal business and other pressing affairs precluding him from giving what he thought to be the necessary attention to military affairs in order to keep up the esprit du corps of his company.

Mr. Benner was most happily united in matrimony September 29, 1897, at Akron, with Miss Gertrude Forster, the accomplished daughter of Martin B. and Sarah (Clark) Forster, well-known and prominent citizens of Akron.

OHN A. BENNETT, an extensive dealer in coal and all kinds of mason's supplies, sewer pipe, drain tile, etc., at Ravenna, Portage county, Ohio, is a native of the state of New York and was born in Niagara county, April 11, 1853. His parents, Daniel and Louisa (Secor) Bennett, are natives of the same county and have had born to them five children, of whom four are still living and are named John A. (subject), Charles, Ellis and Edward.

Daniel Bennett, the father, has been a farmer through life, has prospered in his calling, and is a man of influence in his county, where he has held several local offices, and is a pious member of the Methodist church, while his wife is equally devoted to the Baptist faith. The father of Daniel was also a farmer of New York state, had born to him two sons and one daughter, and lived to an advanced age. His wife's father, John Secor, was likewise a farmer, was county surveyor for a number of years, and also lived to reach old age.

John A. Bennett, the subject, was reared on his father's farm in Niagara county and was educated, like most other farmer lads, in the district school. At the age of eighteen years, however, he left the homestead and came to Ohio, and for two years worked in the shipyards at Cleveland. He then returned to the home farm, on which he assisted until his health failed, when he went to New Orleans, La., but, failing to recuperate, he in a short time returned to his home, where he was confined to his bed on account of his illness. in search of health he made a trip to Georgia, where he passed one summer, and, somewhat improved, returned to New York. The rigorous climate of the north still being too severe for his constitution, he made yet another trip to Georgia, where, in a short time, fortunately, he gained fifty pounds in his avoirdupois, and full health was apparently restored to him, and he again returned to the north. In 1887 he came to Ravenna, but still continued, nevertheless, his peregrinations through the eastern, southern and northern states for three years longer, securing for himself, in the meantime, an excellent peach orchard of 100 acres in Georgia. Charmed with the beauty of Ravenna, however, he made the city his permanent home and engaged in his present extensive coal business and its collateral branches.

Mr. Bennett was married, in 1876, to Miss Frances Foster, daughter of Thomas Foster, and to this marriage was born one child, Cora Louise. Mrs. Bennett having passed away in 1879, Mr. Bennett next married, in 1882, Miss Emma G. Carmer, daughter of Benjamin F. Carmer.

Mr. Bennett is a member of the Royal Arcanum and in politics is a republican. As a business man he has been very successful, being prompt in filling the orders of his patrons and attentive to their needs. His integrity has never been questioned, and his plain, straightforward methods have won for him a constant increase of custom. Socially, he and wife are held in high esteem by their neighbors and friends, of whom they have made many since their residence in Rayenna.

William Bergin, whose name opens this biography, lived on his father's farm until his seventeenth year, receiving his education in the district school, and then was employed as a clerk in the grocery, provision and liquor store of a Mr. Donahue, at Ravenna, and this position he retained six years. February 11, 1867, he married Miss Mary McNamara, a daughter of John and Bridget (Murphy) McNamara, and this union has been blessed with three children, of whom Mary E. died December 13, 1867, aged one month; Ann T. and Ellen are the names of the surviving two.

In 1867 Mr. Bergin passed a few months on the old homestead, but in the fall removed to Iowa, where he engaged in the grocery trade, but, owing to the ill health of his wife, returned to Ohio eight months later and bought a half-interest in his brother's farm south of Ravenna, on which he resided one year, when he removed to the city, where he was engaged in the wholesale butchering business until 1872. He then settled on his present farm, where he has since been engaged in general farming and stockraising, and is widely known among horsemen as a breeder of some of the fastest trotting horses in the country.

In politics Mr. Bergin is very prominent as a democrat and has served as school director for several years. Mrs. Mary Bergin was born in county Kilkenny, Ireland, May 26, 1841, and was brought to America in 1852 by her parents, who first located in Earlville, Ohio, and afterward removed to Ravenna. Patrick McNamara, paternal grandfather of Mrs. Bergin, was a farmer and the father of eight children. Thomas Murphy, her maternal grandfather, married Miss Mary Grace, and was blessed with a family of thirteen children. Mr. McNamara, the father, passed away October 19, 1889, at the age of seventy-eight years, his wife having preceded him to the grave March 23, 1887, aged seventy-eight. Mr. and Mrs. Bergin stand very high in the social circles of Franklin township, and the business name of Mr. Bergin is without a stain.

Mr. Betz is the owner of a highly cultivated farm of seventy-five acres, improved with excellent buildings, and regarded as one of the best farms of its size in Norton township. and his wife are leaders in Grace Reformed church, to which all the family also belong, and are active in Sunday-school work. Betz is a member, likewise, of Buckley post, No. 12, G. A. R., and, although a stanch democrat, voted, at the age of twenty years, while in the army in Tennessee, for Abraham Lincoln for the presidency of the United Locally he has always taken an active part in politics and has filled the office of township trustee, and also as county infirmary director for three years from November 8, Mr. Betz is probably one of the best marksmen in the state of Ohio, being capable of taking off a pigeon's head in a tree-top with a rifle-ball, and was never known to kill a squirrel except by shooting it through the head. So great is his skill in this respect, he is barred out of all ordinary shooting matches. He is very comfortably situated, is at the head of a respected family, and enjoys in every particular the esteem of his fellow-citizens.

ORMAN B. BIDLEMAN, one of the most substantial farmers and live stock raisers in Green township, Summit county, Ohio, is a native of this township, and was born February 24, 1850, a son of George and Rachel (Grotz) Bidleman.

John Bidleman, paternal grandfather of Norman B., was born in Pennsylvania, was a drover, and married Elizabeth Lillie, who was also a native of the Keystone state, was born in 1780, and died March 3, 1867, the mother of four children. It is surmised that her husband met with a death by violence, as he had departed from his home for New Jersey with a drove of ninety-one mules, always carried considerable money about his person, and was never thereafter heard of. Abraham Grotz, maternal grandfather of Norman B. Bidleman, was also a native of Pennsylvania, was a hatter by trade, doing business in Bloomsburg, Columbia county, and in 1831 came to Ohio. To his marriage to Emeline Koon were born eleven children, of whom three still survive, viz: John K., of Bloomsburg, Pa.; Rebecca, widow of Michael B. Myers, and Louisa, wife of John B. Myers, of Green township, Summit county, Ohio.

George Bidleman, father of Norman B., was born in Bloomsburg, Pa., October 16, 1804, and learned the tanner's trade. married, April 3, 1828, Miss Rachel Grotz, who was born February 11, 1809, a daughter of Abraham and Emeline (Koon) Grotz, and to this union were born six children, of whom Rebecca is the wife of Jacob Royer, of Stark county; Norman B.; Abraham passed away in infancy, in 1829; William died March 17, 1851, at the age of seventeen years; Lovinia died in 1830; an infant unnamed is deceased. George Bidleman settled in Ohio he followed farming until his retirement about twenty years before his death, which occurred January 28, 1890, his wife dying May 18, 1891. Mr. Bidleman had attained considerable prominence in his township, of which he was a trustee for many years, and had accumulated a handsome competency, living retired from active attention to business for fully twenty years. He and wife were both conscientions members of the Reformed church and were greatly esteemed for their many good qualities of heart and mind and the purity of their lives.

Norman B. Bidleman resided on his father's farm until fourteen years of age, receiving, in the meantime, a fair education in the district school. For a year he clerked for C. F. Stroman & Co., receiving $50 and his board for his services. The following year he hired to David Grotz for $15 per month, and remained with him two years, and then, at the age of seventeen years, took possession of his father's farm. November 14, 1872, he married Miss Lovinia A. Wise, who was born January 1, 1850, in Lake township, Stark county, Ohio, a daughter of Samuel N. and Anna (Raber) Wise, and to this union have been born four children, of whom two-Carrie E. and Mattie M. - are still living, Elsie A. having died February 16, 1874, aged twenty-one days, and Norman B., Jr., also dying in infancy.

Samuel N. Wise, father of Mrs. Bidleman, was born in Stark county, Ohio, October 9. 1823, was reared a farmer, but for many years was engaged in the live stock trade, and now resides in Union Town, Stark county, in retirement, and is still an active member of the Methodist church, in which he has been a class leader for the past thirty years. He married Miss Anna Raber, who was born May 22. 1822, a daughter of John Raber, and to their union were born five children, of whom two are still living, viz: Hiram P., of Union Town, Stark county, and Lovinia A., wife of Mr. Bid-The deceased three children were Amelia, John and Amanda—the last named having been married to Frank Myers, and dying April 5, 1887, at the age of thirty-four Mrs. Anna (Raber) Wise departed this life January 4, 1892, aged sixty-nine years, seven months and twelve days, and was a devout Christian.

Since 1872, in addition to farming, Mr. Bidleman has given a great deal of attention to the raising of and dealing in live stock, and for the past ten years to the buying and selling of wheat, and at present is operating the grain elevator at Myersville Station, constantly adding to his already comfortable fortune. Politically he was in early days a democrat, but now affiliates with the prohibitionists, preferring that the grain he handles should go into breadstuffs, rather than into whisky. He cast his first vote for Horace Greeley. He and family are members of the Methodist church at Union Town, in which he holds the office of steward, and of which he was, for a number of years, a trustee, and was superintendent of the Sunday-school.

Mr. Bidleman is one of the most progressive business men of his township and county, and well deserves the high esteem in which he is held by his fellow-citizens, for he has certainly done much to advance the moral and material progress of both town and county, having begun when a mere lad and continuing the good work in the prime of his manhood.

APT. GEORGE BILLOW, the veteran funeral director of Akron, Ohio, is a native of Germany; he was born on the 2d day of April, 1833, in Nordheim, near the city of Worms, on the famous river Rhine, Hessen Darmstadt; he is the fourth son of John and Elizabeth (Millius) Billau. The family, consisting of the parents, five sons and two daughters, immigrated to this country in 1844, settling eight miles northwest of Fremont, Sandusky county, Ohio, in what was then known as the "Black Swamp." At the age of sixteen, George, our subject, was apprenticed to Ambrose Ochs, a wagonmaker

A. Collins in his factory at Middlebury, now the Sixth ward of Akron, and later embarked at the same place in the business for himself until the second year of the war of the southern Rebellion, when, in July, 1862, he assisted in recruiting a company of volunteer infantry for the Union army, enlisting himself as a private, being mustered in with his company, I, One Hundred and Seventh regiment, Ohio volunteer infantry, as orderly sergeant, at Cleveland, Ohio, on September 6, 1862. On November 30, following, he was commissioned second lieutenant, but the name being spelled Billow instead of Billau—the army being under marching orders to Fredericksburg, Va., in anticipation of meeting the enemy in severe battle, prompted Col. Seraphim Myers, who commanded the regiment, to advise the immediate muster in as second lieutenant under the name given, since which time it has been so retained. Subsequent promotions to first lieutenant and captain followed October 1, 1863, and November 3, 1864, respectively. The One Hundred and Seventh regiment, Ohio volunteer infantry, with which the captain cast his lot, was destined to pass through extraordinary hardships, privations and severe battles. Before being fully equipped, it was rushed to the front to resist the advance of the rebel army in Kentucky, under Gen. Bragg, after which it was forwarded to the army of the Potomac and assigned to the command of Gen. Franz Sigel, the Eleventh corps, at Fairfax C. H., Va., sharing with it the cruel hardships of Gen. Burnside's December campaign to Fredericksburg, Va., the humiliating defeat of the battle of Chancellorsville, Va., May 2, 1863, and its glorious victory at the famous battle of Gettysburg, Pa., July 1, 2 and 3, 1863, losing heavily in killed and wounded because of the prominent part taken, yet, in all, Capt. Billow escaped the rebel missiles. After the battle of Gettysburg, what remained of the One Hundred and Seventh regiment, Ohio volunteer infantry, was, with Gen. Gordon's division, transferred to Folly Island, S. C., the department South, commanded by Gen. Q. A. Gilmore, where, on the several islands in front of Charleston, they were engaged in assaults upon and the final taking of Fort Wagoner, on Morris Island, as also in frequent skirmishes and small battles from August, 1863, to January, 1864, when they were transferred to Jacksonville district While on Folly Island, Capt. of Florida. Billow was taken sick with typhoid fever, and with other hopeless cases, sent to St. Augustine, Fla., returning to his command about four weeks later, not well, but convalescent. He never fully recovered from said sickness; in consequence he was, in February, 1864, detailed on the staff of Col. Noble, of the Seventeenth regiment, Connecticut volunteer infantry, commander of brigade, to act as commissary of subsistence; on May 18, following, he was ordered by Gen. Foster, commanding the department South, to Fernandina, Fla., in charge of the commissary department. cember 13, 1864, he was assigned to duty as provost marshal at Jacksonville, Fla., and March 12, 1865, by special request of Commissary Gen. Champlin, at Hilton Head, S. C., he was again returned to his former post at Fernandina, serving until relieved for the purpose of muster-out with his regiment at Charleston, S. C., July 10, 1865, and finally discharged at Cleveland, Ohio, July 26, 1865, serving his entire term of nearly three years without a single furlough.

The captain is a member of the Episcopal Church of our Savior, and is quite prominent as a Freemason, being Past E. C. of Akron commandery, No. 25, K. T., and its present Prelate; King of Washington chapter, No. 25, R. A. M.; P. M. of Adoniram lodge, No. 517, F. & A. M., for the establishment of which and the Masonic Temple company he was untiring as a prime mover; he is also a member of the Mystic Shrine; he is a charter member and past commander of Buckley post, No. 12, G. Capt. George Billow's marriage took place September 19, 1854, to Miss Anna Mary, daughter of Conrad and Charlotte Fink, of Akron, Ohio. His family consists of five sons — George W., Charles F., Albert C., Jacob and Edwin L.—and three daughters—Anna Mrs. John Sabin, in Vermont), Ida (Mrs. James Rehert, Akron, Ohio), and Clara.

Since his discharge from military service the subject of this sketch has been engaged, with various successes and reverses, in the grocery business at Akron, as a partner, also as salesman; invested largely in fanning-mill patent right on the advice of friends, proving a total loss; then moved to Huntsville. Ala., to enrich himself, raising cotton, which proved a dismal failure, whereupon he returned to his old home, Akron, Ohio, and in 1875 engaged in the undertaking business, and by industry, honesty and skill has succeeded in making it the leading establishment in his city, which is still growing, and, possessing the respect and confidence of his fellow-citizens, this seems to afford him the contentment so essential to happiness and quite satisfactory at the eventide of a busy life.

YLVESTER J. BOLENDER, a thriving farmer of Franklin township, Summit county, Ohio, was born in Lake township, Stark county, January 31, 1850.

George Bolender, grandfather of subject, was a native of Union county, Pa., was carpenter and cabinetmaker, and a pioneer of Stark county, Ohio. He was also a farmer, and in Union Town, Stark county, was proprietor of an inn and a stage-coach line. In politics he was a democrat, and in religion was a member of the Reformed church. He married, in Stark county, Margaret Wise, who came from Cumberland county, Pa., in 1815.

John Bolender, father of subject, was born in Green township now in Summit county) March 27, 1819, was reared to farming, also learned cabinetmaking, and for several terms taught school in the old pioneer school-house of his district. In politics he was a democrat, and for a number of years filled the office of justice of the peace. He was an elder in the Reformed church and for fifteen years was superintendent of the Sunday-school. He at one time possessed considerable property, but, owing to the failure of others in business, he lost heavily. About 1838, Mr. Bolender married Miss Judith Pontious, daughter of Benjamin and Sophia (Myers) Pontious, and to this union were born Sophia, deceased wife of Manum Rayor; James K., who died when small; Armina L.; Sylvester J.; Lucretia;

Charles; and Sarah J., wife of Forest Nees. Mr. Bolender remained on his farm until 1866, when he retired to Union Town, where his death took place August 7, 1883, and that of his wife July 7, 1893. Both were honored for their chaste lives and their unswerving adherence to the teachings of their church.

Sylvester J. Bolender lived on the home farm until seventeen years of age, and then served an apprenticeship of four years at cabinetmaking and later learned hard-wood finishing. He had received an excellent education in the Greensburg academy and was prepared for teaching school, and duly qualified, also, for teaching music. He passed nine years at his trade, and on May 4, 1876, married Jennie R. Sorrick, daughter of Peter and Mary A. (Kyser) Sorrick, and this marriage has resulted in the birth of Bertha B., who was born May 22, 1877, and died August 7, 1877, and Hazel L., born November 17, 1888.

Peter Sorrick, father of Mrs. Bolender, was born in Franklin township September 20, 1822; his wife, Mary A. Kyser, was born in the same township May 29, 1829, and here they were married November 15, 1855. His only child, Jennie R. Bolender), was born September 21, 1856. Adam Sorrick, father of Peter Sorrick, was a native of Blair county, Pa., and an early pioneer of Stark county, Ohio. He took up land from the government in Franklin township (then a part of Stark but now in Summit county), and lived to clear it all up. He married, in Franklin township, Mary Raber, also a native of Blair county, Pa., and died in 1875 -his wife dying March 27, 1877.

Sylvester J. Bolender, since his marriage has lived upon the 127-acre farm formerly owned by his father-in-law, and has materially improved it, rendering it both comfortable and profitable. In politics he is a prohibitionist, has the full confidence of his party, and is moreover widely known and respected throughout the township.

ENRY F. BOWERS, a successful and and respected farmer of Green township, Summit county, Ohio, was born in Lake township, Stark county, September 15, 1845, a son of Frederick and Elizabeth (Coxen) Bowers, the former a native of Bedford county, Pa., born in May, 1798, and the latter born in Columbiana county, Ohio, in July, 1816.

Frederick Bowers was brought to Ohio in 1808 by his parents, who located, first, about five miles south of the site of the present city of Canton, Stark county, where they remained one year, and then removed to Lake township, where Frederick passed the remainder of his He was reared a farmer, and married Mrs. Elizabeth Spotts, a daughter of --and Catharine (Fox) Coxen, the marriage resulting in the birth of five children, of whom three still survive, viz: Jacob, in St. Joseph county, Ind.; Henry F., our subject, and Catherine A., wife of Uriah Stoner, of Canton, Ohio. The two deceased were William, who died at the age of nineteen years, July 4, 1863, in hospital at Cincinnati, Ohio, from disease contracted in the Civil war, and Rachel, who died at the age of forty-seven years, the wife of Isaac Shriver, who is also deceased. Bowers, who was a carpenter as well as farmer, departed this life in June, 1880, at the age of eighty-two years, and his widow followed him to the grave in July, 1884, at the age of sixtyeight years.

Jacob Bowers, grandfather of Henry F. Bowers, served seven years in the Revolutionary war and was a pioneer of Stark county, Ohio (settling there in 1808), and to him and wife were born fourteen children, of whom twelve reached maturity. The maternal grandparents were natives of England and the parents of ten children, three of whom are still living, viz: Hannah, wife of George Witsman, of Lake township, Stark county, Ohio; William, of West Virginia, and Emanuel, of Kan-The deceased Coxen children were Mrs. Lucinda Bogue; Phebe; Mary, wife of Jacob Shively; Sarah, wife of Jonas Ruff; Elizabeth, wife of Henry F. Henry F. Bowers was reared on his father's farm and was educated in the district school of his native township and at Greensburg seminary. At the age of nineteen years he began teaching school, following the vocation for twelve successive terms in district No. 1, Lake township; five, in No. 6; two, in No. 12; two in Union township; all in Stark county, Ohio, and one term in Green township, Summit county, but the summer months were passed on the farm.

Mr. Bowers was united in marriage February 23, 1871, with Miss Catherine A. Kreighbaum, daughter of Abraham and Harriet (Reifsnyder) Kreighbaum, of Lake township, and to this union have been born three children, viz: Edith I., wife of Frank Long, of Akron; Harriet, married to Frank Langs, a leading merchant of Myersville, Green township, and Ralph C., still under the parental roof.

Abraham Kreighbaum, father of Mrs. Bowers, was a native of Lake township, Stark county, Ohio, was a tanner by trade, but in later years became a farmer. To his marriage with Miss Harriet Reifsnyder, daughter of David and Mary (Grane) Reifsnyder, were born seven children, viz: William C.; Catherine A., who was born April 14, 1852, and is now Mrs. Henry F. Bowers; Frank G.; Daniel R.; Mary, wife of Isaac Heckman; Charles S., and Ellen, wife of J. Bare, all living in Stark county, with the exception of Mrs. Bowers. The mother of this family was called away March 1, 1884, in the faith of the Evangelical church, and at the age of fifty-two years; the father reached the age of sixty-seven years, and died in October, 1895, in the faith of the Lutheran church, although he had formerly been a member of the same church with his wife.

In the spring of 1887 Mr. Bowers purchased his present farm, where, in connection with farming, he is extensively engaged in stockraising. For twelve years Mr. Bowers was a member of the school board in Stark county, and has served as township clerk of Green township, Summit county. He enjoys the confidence of the entire community, and he and family are among the most respected in Green township.

OHN H. BREWSTER, who is well known as one of the most experienced business men and thrifty farmers of Coventry township, Summit county, Ohio, was born on his present farm January 11, 1834. His father, James G. Brewster, was a native of Groton, Conn., was born in 1797, and was fourteen years old when brought to Summit county by his parents, and here endured all the hardships of pioneer life, being educated in an old log school-house and inured to the severe toil of frontier farming. early manhood he married Miss Martha Hasson, who was a native of Carlisle, Pa., and to this union were born six children, viz.: Stephen, deceased; John H., the subject; James G., who died January 1, 1897; Hiram; George W., and William, who died when quite small. The father wrought out from the wilderness the farm now occupied by our subject, was the owner of 320 acres, and in his day was considered a wealthy man. He was a gentleman of great influence in the community in which he lived, took an active part in whig politics and also a great interest in muster day. In religion he was a Universalist, and died in that faith June 27, 1842, more than ordinarily well respected; his widow survived until October 12, 1884, when she died, a Scotch Seceder in religion and venerated as a lady possessing many womanly virtues.

John H. Brewster has always resided on his native farm, never having been away from it, with the exception of two months passed in Iowa. The five Brewster brothers who attained manhood's estate never divided their financial interests, but jointly conducted the farm, beginning at the point where their father They now own about a section and a half of fine arable land in Summit county, beside 400 acres of coal land in Columbiana county, as one mutual possession. John H., however, is president of the Buckeye Sewer Pipe company, of Akron, and president of the United States Stoneware company, of the same city; also is a director in the Barberton Savings bank, and is interested with his brothers in the Brewster flouring-mill, of Coventry township. In politics Mr. Brewster is a republican, and has filled most of the township offices as a matter of duty as a good citizen, has served three terms as county infirmary director, and is at present serving his second term as county commissioner.

Hiram Brewster, brother of John H., was born June 8, 1835, and has always lived on this, his native farm. Neither brother is married, both living in "single blessedness" in their beautiful country house, which cost them over $14,000.

J. H. Bruster

The grandfather of Mr. Brewster was Stephen Brewster, born in Groton, Conn., in 1770, came to Summit county, Ohio, in 1811, and died here July 12, 1858. He was a carpenter by trade, and he and the father of Mr. Brewster erected the first flouring-mill on the Tuscarawas river. The mill was commonly known as the Fritts mill.

OHN BOOSINGER, a retired farmer and one of the oldest residents of Brimfield township, Portage county, Ohio, was born here May 8, 1818, the center village of the township being then known as Thorndyke, and is a son of John and Barbara (Willard) Boosinger.

Conrad Boosinger, the grandfather of our subject, came to America from Germany, and took part in the war for American independ-John Boosinger, the father of our subject, was a native of Virginia, was a soldier in the war of 1812, and in 1816 came to Portage county, Ohio, and entered a 200-acre farm in Brimfield township, which was then a dense wilderness. Here he built a log cabin, and by untiring industry cleared up his land, which he converted into a fine farm, and which, through the added industry of our subject, is now one of the best farms in the county. To his marriage with Miss Willard were born eight children, of whom John (our subject), Benjamin and Nathan are still living, while Catherine, Sarah, Susan, Philip and George have passed away. The father of these lived to be ninety years of age, when he died in the faith of the Universalist church.

John Boosinger, the subject of this memoir, was reared on the Brimfield farm, received such education as could be secured in the pioneer school, and at the age of twentytwo years assumed the management of the home place. He was first married in November, 1842, to Miss Caroline Naff, daughter of Conrad and Mary Naff, and to this union were born two children—Lafayette V. and Lucy C.—the latter married to George Meacham. Mrs. Caroline Boosinger was called from earth April 11, 1843, at the age of twenty-nine years. November 4, 1845, Mr. Boosinger chose for his second helpmate Miss Julia Naff, a sister of his deceased wife. This union has been blessed with three children, viz.: Edward Conrad; Sadie, wife of William Moulton; and Omer C., who died December 30, 1887, at the age of twenty-nine years.

Mr. Boosinger greatly inproved the homestead while it was in his possession. He operated a threshing machine several years in connection with his agricultural pursuits, but the old home place has passed out of the family, and now Mr. Boosinger owns another fine farm of 120 acres. In politics he has always been a democrat, and has filled the office of township trustee, and for six years was a member of the board of school directors. He is a devoted member of the Universalist church, of which he is also a trustee, and no resident of the county of Portage stands higher in the esteem of the public than John Boosinger.

ENJAMIN M. BOYER, a highly respected agriculturist of Springfield township, Summit county, Ohio, and a well-known educator, was born in Juniata county, Pa., February 17, 1841, a son of George and Mary Magdalena (Kepner) Boyer, of whom mention in full will be made further on.

Benjamin M. Boyer received a sound publicschool education, then attended Airy View and Markelville academies, and when seventeen years of age began teaching school in his own district, continuing the vocation six consecutive years. He assisted his father on the home farm when not attending or teaching school, and in 1864 came to Ohio, and in Akron secured a position as clerk in P. D. Hall's drygoods store, where he remained nearly two years, and while thus employed was married, at Wooster, Ohio, October 3, 1865, to Miss Mary A. Ritter, daughter of John S. and Elizabeth (Ritzman) Ritter, and of whom further mention will be made before this sketch shall have been brought to a close. marriage has been blessed with five children, of whom Philander M., Harry J., Emerson E. and Altha Augusta are still living; Effie M. died when but one year old. Of these children, Philander M. passed through the common schools and the Akron high school; also took a course in Buchtel college, and in the normal department of the Union Town (Stark county) high school; his present business is that of a gardener. Emerson E. graduated from Hammill's business college, is engaged in the dairy business, and is an honored member of lodge No. 50, I. O. O. F., at Akron. Miss Altha A. has passed through the district schools and has been awarded a certificate which permits her entrance to any high school in the county.

In 1866 Mr. Boyer began teaching school during the winter months in Portage township, Summit county, and taught for eighteen consecutive terms, but while not teaching found many other occupations to engage his time and attention, for instance: The first year after leaving the dry-goods business he conducted a meat market in Springfield township, and then bought a small farm, but shortly afterward sold it at a handsome profit and bought another south of Akron, where he engaged in gardening. He then entered the brokerage business, which he still continues, more or less, handling stocks, chattel mortgages, etc. In 1884 he relinquished teaching, and since then, beside his broker's business, has been principally engaged in agriculture, dairying, and in running a fruit and vegetable wagon to Akron. He has also had some experience as a teacher of vocal music in the public schools, and at one time was engaged in the sale of musical instruments. In polities he is a democrat, and cast his first presidential vote for Gen. Geo. B. McClellan. He has served as township supervisor several terms, has been a member of the school board six years, and township trustee one term, performing his duties faithfully and satisfactorily. He has served, also, as as guardian of three families of children and has settled up their estates to their entire satisfaction. nally Mr. Boyer is a past grand of Summit lodge, No. 50, I. O. O. F., of Akron, and also of the encampment. Religiously, Mr. and Mrs. Bover are members of the Lutheran church, while Philander M. and Altha are communicants of the Methodist Episcopal church at Krumrov.

Mrs. Mary A. (Ritter) Boyer, wife of Benjamin M., was born January 22, 1843, in the house in which she and her husband now reside in Springfield township, which house was erected by her father, who, with his wife, came from Snyder county, Pa., and settled on the farm now owned by Mrs. Boyer. Of the eight children born to John S. and Elizabeth (Ritzman) Ritter, Frederick resides near Bedford, Cuyahoga county, and is an agriculturist; Henry lives in Springfield township, Summit county, and is also a farmer; Phebe is the wife of Levi Thornton, of Coventry township; Catherine is at home; Mrs. Boyer and John S. M. are next in order of birth; one child died in infancy, and Matilda, who was the wife of Solomon Warner, died at the age of forty-nine years. The father of this family died in 1872, at the age of sixty-six years, and the mother in 1884, when seventy-seven years old, both in the faith of the Lutheran church, and among the most highly respected residents of Springfield township.

George Boyer, father of Benjamin M. Boyer, was born on the banks of the Susquehanna river, Cumberland county, Pa., January 4, 1819, and his wife, Mary Magdalena Kepner, was born March 19, 1818, in Juniata county, in the Tuscorara valley, of the same state, and they were married December 19, 1839. In Juniata county, of the Keystone state they retain their residence, and are now living in retired ease. In his younger days Mr. Bover learned tailoring, but followed the trade a short time only, preferring to drive a team attached to a canal-boat, at which work he earned considerable money, and in course of time was able to buy his present farm in Juniata county. To his marriage have been born nine children, of whom Benjamin M., whose name opens this article, is the eldest; Elmira I. is the wife of Alonzo H. Guss, of Akron, Ohio; Lehman O. resides in Juniata county, Pa.; Mary is the wife of Jacob Wisehaupt, also of Juniata county; Ida C. was first married to Dr. Hench, and, after his death, was married to Wilson Robinson, who is also deceased, and the daughter herself is the manager of the household of her parents; George W. manages the farm for his father; Elizabeth C. died after reaching maturity; Sarah C. died at the age of eight years, and Albert Luther died in infancy. The father of this family, now eighty years of age, retains in full his mental faculties and keeps a general oversight of his financial interests, being a large stockholder in the Port Royal bank, and having other extensive investments. In fact, he has always been a financier, and while a canal-boat driver boarded seven canal boatmen, and during the construction of the Pennsylvania Central railroad exercised his energy in driving a team along that road, realizing $3,000 in three years. He and wife are members of the Lutheran church, live fully up to its teachings and are among the most venerated residents of Juniata county.

Michael Boyer, paternal grandfather of subject, was born in Lebanon county, Pa., and was a son of a German who settled in Lebanon county, Pa., and to his marriage with Miss Koons were born five children, of whom three are still living, viz: Catherine, widow of James Foose, and a resident of Newport, Pa.; George, and Jane, wife of David Kilmer, of Juniata county, Pa. One son, John P., with his family, was burned to death in Perry county, Pa., and another son, Philip, is also deceased.

The maternal grandfather of B. M. Boyer was twice married, and to his first marriage were born John, Jacob and Catherine, all de-His second marriage was to Miss ceased. Sarah Dupes, and to this marriage were born eight children, viz: Elizabeth, now eightynine years old and married to Samuel Aughey, of Millford, Pa.; Christine, who was first married to Jacob Hertzler, and, after his death, to a Mr. Heikes, who is also deceased; Mary Magdalena, who is the mother of our subject; Benjamin D.; Samuel D.; Solomon, who died in infancy; Sarah, who was married to Samuel Rice, but, with her husband, is now deceased: Henry, the oldest, has also passed away, and the parents have likewise gone to their rest in the faith of the Lutheran church.

Mr. Boyer is located on a beautiful farm of 154 acres in Springfield township, seven miles from the court house at Akron. He comes from one of the old and respected families of Summit county. He is also owner of valuable real estate in the city of Akron, and is classed as one of the progressive farmers of Summit county. While he was a member of the school board in his township the question was agitated of forming a high school system and Mr. Boyer was appointed as committee on that work, which was finally adopted. The system of high school known as the Akron system originated in this county and in Akron.

ILHELM J. BRACKLOW, proprietor of the Columbia hotel, Ravenna, Ohio, was born in Berlin, Germany, August 1, 1853, and is a son of Johan and Caroline Bracklow, who were the parents of four sons, three of whom are still living—Wilhelm J., Herman and Joseph. The father, Johan, was in early life a soldier, but later became a carpenter, contractor and builder, and was killed by an accident, which occurred in his native city. His widow married Otto Kickow, and both now live in Ravenna, Ohio, with their two children, Lena and Mary. Both grandfathers were also military men.

Wilhelm J. Bracklow was a youth of fourteen years when brought to America by his mother. He had received a very good publicschool education in his native country, and at the age of fifteen years began clerking in a hardware store in Ravenna, Ohio, where his mother had made her home. Eight years later, tiring of this occupation and seeking for wider fields in which to realize a fortune, he started west, in 1875, for the Black Hills, for the purpose of prospecting, but in 1877 returned to Ravenna, but a trifle better off than when he departed. However, he was prepared to enter the furniture business in partnership with his now step-father, Otto Kickow, which they carried on together about five years; he next clerked in the grocery store of Furry & Williams for seven years, and then, for several years, conducted a restaurant, in which business he was so successful as to induce him to take charge of the Columbia hotel in 1896, where the prospects for a competency are most flattering, as he is a most genial landlord, is well acquainted with the needs of the traveling public, and as his experience in the restaurant business has fitted him for a first-class caterer and qualified him for overseeing the essential of all hotel-keeping—the cuisine.

The marriage of Mr. Bracklow took place September 10, 1881, with Mrs. Cynthia Williams, daughter of Stephen and Eunice (Chickering) Bissell, but to this union there has been no offspring. Mrs. Bracklow, however, is the mother of one son-Alonzo C.by her former husband. The parents of Mrs. Bracklow were natives of Massachusetts and were the parents of nine children—three sons and six daughters, of whom five are still living, Maria A., wife of George Clark, of Royalton, Ohio; Cynthia, wife of Mr. Bracklow; Maud I., wife of Charles Coolidge, of Cleveland; Della E. and William S., both, also, of Cleveland. The paternal grandfather of Mrs. Bracklow was Harvey Bissell, a native of Massachusetts, an early settler of Medina county, Ohio, and the father of six children; the maternal grandfather of Mrs. Bracklow was George Chickering, also a native of the Bay State, was a farmer and was one of the pioneers of Cuyahoga county in the Buckeye For several years he kept a country inn, about twelve miles from Cleveland, the only stopping place west of the city on the state road, and in reality in the wilderness. He had a family of seven children, who all grew to maturity, and the last few years of his life were passed in Cleveland, where he died at the age of seventy-seven. The father of Mrs. Bracklow, Stephen Bissell, was a carpenter, came to Ohio in an early day, and settled in Medina county until about 1876, when he moved with his family to Cleveland and followed his trade until his death, in March, 1892, at the age of sixty-six years; his widow is still a resident of that city.

Mrs. Bracklow is a faithful member of the Methodist church and is an able assistant to her husband in his present business, being a lady of much experience. Mr. Bracklow is a master Mason and a member of the uniform rank, K. of P. In politics he is independent, and during his long residence of thirty years in Ravenna has never made an enemy, but retains the friendship of hundreds of citizens whom he has won by his obliging disposition and unvarying courtesy, and his ability to "keep a hotel."

EORGE W. BREWSTER, the fifth son of James G. and Martha (Hasson) Brewster, was born on the home farm March 21, 1837, received a sound common-school education, and in 1857 went to California, via New York city and the isthmus of Panama. He passed nearly seven years on the Pacific coast, two years in the mines, and for one year drove a ten-mule team between Sacramento, Cal., and Virginia City, Nev. He was next employed to manage or superintend the interests of a syndicate of wealthy men in 7,000 acres of land, and in 1866 returned to Summit county, Ohio, to become bookkeeper and manager for the Brewster Bros.' coal mines, which have now been worked for more than twenty years, employing from twenty-five to 135 men. His present residence, in this interest, is situated about a half-mile north of Thomastown, and cost $14,-000, and to which allusion is made in the memoir of John H. Brewster.

For five years Mr. Brewster has been treasurer of the Summit County Agricultural society, and a director for fourteen years; he is a director in the Buckeye Sewer Pipe company, in the United States Stoneware company, both at Akron, and in the Barberton Savings bank. In politics he is a strong republican, and fraternally is a member of lodge No. 83, F. & A. M.

Mr. Brewster was joined in matrimony, October 18, 1876, with Miss Marie L. Kent, who was born in Suffield township, Portage county, Ohio, a daughter of Josiah and Lucia (Miller) Kent, pioneers of Portage county. Mr. Kent is now deceased, and his widow makes her home with Mr. and Mrs. Brewster. The marriage of Mr. Brewster has been blessed with four children, viz: Georgia M., now attending Buchtel college; Hiram Wallace, who died young; Arthur K., who was a very intelligent, but never strong lad, and died April 28, 1895, at the age of fourteen years, and Bessie. Mr. and Mrs. Brewster are members of the Congregational church, and it is hardly necessary to add that their social standing is with the most respectable people of Summit county.

OSIAH BROWN, one of the old soldiers of the Civil war, was born February 28, 1838, in Chyahoga Falls, received a common education in the public schools and learned the cabinetmaker's trade of his father. He enlisted at the age of twenty-three years, September 10, 1861, for three years or during the war, at Cuyahoga Falls, under Capt. A. J. Konkle, in company D, First Ohio light artillery, was promoted sergeant, served until he re-enlisted at Strawberry Plains January 7, 1863, in the same organization, and was promoted to second lieutenant May 13, 1864, and assigned to battery E, First Ohio He was honorably discharged at artillery. Chattanooga, Tenn., June 20, 1865, having served his country three years and eight months. He was in the battles of Ivy Mountain, Ky., Pittsburgh Landing, Corinth, Miss., Nashville, Tenn., Knoxville, Tenn., and a battle near Resaca, La. Mr. Brown was sick in hospital from November, 1862, until May. 1863, with chronic diarrhea-with this exception he was always an active soldier and prompt and efficient in the discharge of his duty. After the war he returned to Cuyahoga Falls and worked for Turner, Vaughn & Taylor for twenty years, in the wood-working department, and then engaged in the furniture and undertaking business with his father. He married, July 2, 1866, at Lebanon, Pa., Lucy E. Warner, who was born May 5, 1841, in Springfield township, Summit county, Ohio, and a daughter of John Warner. To Mr. and Mrs. Brown were born Ida A., Charles A. and Birdie Mr. Brown is a member of Eadie post, No. 37, G. A. R., Cuyahoga Falls, and is now quartermaster, and also of Howard lodge, No. 36, I. O. O. F., and is an honored and respected citizen.

Simon Brown, father of our subject, was born in Pennsylvania February 21, 1811, a son of Jacob Brown, of sturdy Pennsylvania-Butch stock. Simon came to Cuyahoga Falls when a young man, about 1833 or 1834, and learned cabinetmaking and undertaking of J. T. Holloway, and, when he had learned his trade, engaged in business for himself at Cuvahoga Falls, and so continued for more than sixty years, or until his death, October 5, 1895. He was very industrious and reliable, and through his long business career was seldom away from his duties. He married Elizabeth Pontious, born March 25, 1817, in Lake county, near Hartsville, Ohio, a daughter of Solomon Pontious.

To Mr. and Mrs. Brown were born Josiah, April 28, 1838; Harriet E., February 10, 1840, and Ezra, January 18, 1842. Both Mr. and Mrs. Brown were members of the Methodist church, in which he took an active interest and to which he contributed liberally. In politics he was a republican and was a strong Union man. His son Ezra served in the Seventh Ohio volunteer infantry for about one year, was wounded in the hand badly, and was honorably discharged. This wound caused his health to be totally ruined. Simon Brown, father of our subject, was a well known and highly respected citizen and had the respect of all throughout his long life.

USTIN K. BREWSTER, one of the most enterprising business men of Akron, was born in Coventry township, Summit county, Ohio, November 23, 1845, is a son of Alexander and Margaret (Kinney) Brewster, and paternally is of remote Scottish extraction, William Brewster, the progenitor of the family of that name in America, having been a native-born Caledonian who came to America in the Mayflower, in 1620, landing on Plymouth Rock, Mass. From him descended William Brewster, the great-grandfather of our subject, who married a Miss Woodard and lived in Groton, Conn.

Stephen Brewster, son of the last-mentioned William, and grandfather of our subject, was born in Groton, New London county, Conn., May 4, 1770, became a carpenter and joiner, and married Lydia Bellis, who was born in Connecticut, May 14, 1771, a daughter of John Bellis, who lost three sons on board men-of-war during the war of the Revolution. To the marriage of Stephen Brewster were born the following children: James G.; Lucinda, who was married to James Edrington; Charlotte, married to Martin Hansell; Hannah, married to William Clark; Hiram, who died in infancy, and In 1800 the family moved from Alexander. Connecticut to Whitestown, Oneida county, N. Y., and in 1812 came in wagons to Summit county, Ohio, there being at that date only two log cabins in Akron. They cut a road from East Akron through the wilderness to Akron, part of this road being now Buchtel avenue, and here the father bought the farm of 160 acres on which John Brewster now resides, built on it the first habitation—a log cabin—and cleared up the land. Stephen Brewster erected the first frame house in the township, and, being a zealous Presbyterian, the early meetings of this sect in the neighborhood were held in this new dwelling. Stephen and wife later became charter members of, and largely aided in building, the First Tallmadge and Second Springfield town-Mrs. Lydia ship Presbyterian churches. Brewster died in this faith at the age of seventy-one years, and Mr. Brewster died, an equally devout Presbyterian, July 4, 1858, aged eighty years and two months.

Alexander Brewster, youngest child of Stephen and Lydia Brewster and father of our subject, was born in Oneida county, N. Y., September 10, 1808, and was consequently four years of age when the family reached Summit county, Ohio, the day on which the war of 1812 was declared against Great Britain. He was educated in the log schoolhouses of the frontier, and lived on the home farm until his marriage, January 9, 1830, to Margaret A. Kinney, who was born May 14, 1813, a daughter of Ephraim and Mary Kinney. To this marriage were born the following children: Louisa, wife of J. F. Michum; Alfred A.; Ephraim; Mary; Melissa, wife of R. H. Kent, and Austin K.

In 1848, Mr. Brewster engaged in coal mining, and before retiring had made it the largest industry in this line in the state, as will be shown in the coming paragraph, but it is here necessary to introduce an episode in the life of Mr. Brewster. March 18, 1850, he, in company with several others, started for the gold fields of California, going by wagon to Saint Louis, Mo., thence by steamboat up the Missouri river to Saint Jo, and then by wagon across the plains, through hordes of hostile Indians, to Sacramento, and while on this trip saw many hundred persons die of cholera. For about one year he engaged in gold digging, and then returned to Ohio and resumed coal mining.

While in the coal business, Mr. Brewster, in company with his sons, exhausted about ten mines, and the books of the company, kept in Cleveland, show that he handled from 300,000 to 500,000 tons of coal yearly for twenty-one years, besides other outputs, not recorded in the books mentioned. The company had almost exclusive control of the mines on the Cleveland & Ohio canal, and continued their operations until 1865, when Mr. Brewster retired to Akron with a competency, and this city is still his home.

December 14, 1854, Mrs. Margaret A. Brewster was called from earth, and some time afterward Mr. Brewster married Minerva Brown, who died September 6, 1877. Mr. Brewster next married Mrs. Lucy J. Chamberlain, daughter of Justus and Sarah (Hyde) Gale, who came from Brattleboro, Vt., in 1833, to Akron, Ohio, which then contained a population of about 300. Here Mr. Gale became a prosperous merchant, accumulated valuable property, and died in the faith of the Episcopalian church, and in politics was a whig. During the active years of his life, Mr. Brewster was a class leader in the Methodist Episcopal church, and has always been most liberal in his contributions toward the support of church and school. At the age of eighty-nine years, he is to-day one of the oldest, most prominent and most respected of the citizens of Summit county.

Austin K. Brewster was educated in the district schools of Coventry township, in the Greenburg seminary, and in the public schools of Akron, and began his business life in 1805 by becoming bookkeeper in the office of his father, in Coventry township. The same year, the firm of Brewster & Sons was formed, and in 1867 the Brewster Coal company was incorporated, since when Austin K. has been its secretary and treashrer. In 1869 he came to Akron, the main office of the company being transferred to this city, and here he has ever since made his home. May 25, 1875, Mr. Brewster married Miss Louise Hitchcock, daughter of Frederick and Laura L. (Seekins) Hitchcock, of Cleveland, Ohio, and this union was blessed with one child, Liona L., born May 4, 1882. Mrs. Louisa Brewster, it is painful to add, was called from earth and from her family April 6, 1897.

ELAH WARREN BURT, mayor of Kent, Ohio, was born in Franklin township, Portage county, June 15, 1835, the younger of the two children born to Warren and Lydia (Shurtliff) Burt, and is a representative of one of the pioneer families of Franklin township.

Martin Burt, grandfather of subject, was a native of Northhampton, Mass., was a farmer, and in 1821 traded his land in the Bay state for 600 acres in Ohio, and the same year came to Portage county and settled in Franklin township, where he cleared up a farm adjoining Lake Brady, being one of the first settlers of that neighborhood. To him and wife, Philomelia (Robinson) Burt, were born six children, viz: Warren, father of subject; Martin, who resides in Virginia; Philomelia (Mrs. Ormsby), of Vermillion, Ohio; Horace, deceased; Dorcas C., who was married to Rodney Wing and died in Birmingham, Ohio; Electa, wife of Samuel Wales, of River Falls, Wis.

Warren Burt, father of Selah W., was born in Northampton, Mass., August 5, 1806, and came to Ohio with his parents, driving a team all the way and arriving in Portage county on his fifteenth birthday. Here he grew to manhood, assisting his father in clearing up the new homestead, and working on the dams and locks of the Pennsylvania & Ohio canal, in the meantime receiving a very fair common-school education. November 30, 1829, he married Miss Lydia, daughter of Selah and Pruanna (Phillips) Shurtliff, and a native of South Hampden, Mass., born in 1810, and also came to Ohio in 1820 with her parents, who settled in Franklin township, Portage county. At his marriage, Warren Burt was presented by his father with a tract of eighty acres of the original 600 acres of land, on which he lived until 1863, when he removed to Kent, where his wife died in 1886, since when he has made his home with his son, Selah W. To his marriage there were born two children, viz: Lydia Louisa, wife of T. M. Sawyer, of Cleveland, and Selah Warren, the subject of this memoir. In politics Mr. Burt was first a whig but is now a republican, and in religion he has been a member of the Christian church since almost childhood, and of this church his wife was also a member.

Selah Warren Burt was reared on the home farm in Franklin township, received his elementary education in the common schools and then attended Hiram college two terms. In August, 1859, he first married Miss Sarah Stowe, who died in April, 1861, leaving one child, also deceased. In 1862 he married Miss Susan A. Stratton, a native of Franklin township and a daughter of Joseph B. and Ruth (Olin) Stratton, and this union has been blessed with one daughter, Cora M., wife of Frank C. Green, of Kent. Joseph B. Stratton, father of Mrs. Burt, was a native of Vermont, was a farmer, and ended his earthly cares in the city of Kent.

Mr. Burt followed agriculture as a calling on his farm of eighty-two acres until 1886, when, on the death of his mother, he retired to Kent. In politics he has always been an active republican and his first public office was that of township trustee of Franklin, which he held for over twenty years. In 1893 he was elected infirmary director, which office he still holds. He served as member of the city council of Kent for one term, and in 1896 was elected mayor. He has proven faithful and efficient in every trust reposed in him, and is deservedly popular with his party as well as with the general public. He is a member of Rockton lodge, No. 316, A. F. & A. M., of which he is a past worshipful master. wife and daughter are members of the Universalist church. Socially the family stands very high, and their circle of acquaintance embraces a wide extent of the territory of Franklin township.

OHN F. BYERS, manager of the John F. Byers Machine company, Ravenna, was born in Milton township, Mahoning county, Ohio, November 13, 1844, a son of Frederick and Ann (Reichard) Byers, natives of Pennsylvania, and the parents of five children, four of whom are still living, viz: John F., George R., Charles, and Hattie, the wife of A. Trowbridge.

Frederick Byers, the paternal grandfather of subject, was born in Germany, lived for many years in Pennsylvania, but died in Mahoning county, Ohio, at the age of eighty-six years, the father of a large family. John Reichard, the maternal grandfather, was also a native of Germany, first settled in the Keystone state, later came to Mahoning county, Ohio, and there died at an advanced age. Frederick Byers, the younger, father of John F. Byers, was reared on a farm in Pennsylvania, came to Ohio in his early manhood and lived in Mahoning county until within ten years of his death, which occurred in Ravenna, March 4, 1869. His wife died in 1887, a member of the Lutheran church.

John F. Byers, the subject of this biography, was educated in the district schools of his native county and reared on the home farm until nearly seventeen years of age. About 1859 he came to Ravenna, learned the stone-cutter's trade, and worked on a neighboring farm until twenty-one years old, and then worked for fourteen years for the railroad company as stonecutter. His next step in business was to establish his present machine shop, which employs, when in full running order, about fifty hands.

On the 7th day of August, 1890, Mr. Byers was united in marriage with Miss Kate Palm, daughter of Adam Palm, and this happy marriage has been blessed with four children, born in the following order: Fred, Anna. John and Mr. Byers and family have a pleasant Eve. home one mile south of Ravenna, where he owns a farm of 125 acres, which, beside being pleasant --- Mr. Byers having been reared a farmer—is made profitable through his skillful direction. Mr. Byers is a non-affiliating Odd Fellow, although for a number of years he was an active member of that order. In his politics he is independent and votes for the man he thinks to be best qualified to fill the offices necessary to be filled—preferring to devote his time and attention to the needs of his patrons rather than wasting it by dabbling in party fends. He and wife enjoy a high position socially and are much esteemed by all who know them.

RED 1. BEAN, the gentlemanly proprietor of the Etna House, Ravenna, Ohio, is a native of Hammondsville, Ohio, was born January 17, 1869, and is the only survivor of the three children born to James and Eliza (Downer) Bean, the former of whom, also a native of Ohio, was a physician, but died when the subject was in his infancy; the mother, now Mrs. H. S. Shannon, is a resident of Ravenna, Ohio. Subject was educated at Ada, Ohio, and graduated from the Northwestern Ohio university; his life has been passed almost entirely in hotels, his step-father, Mr. Shannon, having had an extensive experience in this line of business, and to him subject owes much of his instruction in hotel keeping.

The Etna House, of which Mr. Bean took charge June 1, 1896, was thoroughly renovated and remodeled and is to-day the most favored of the hotels in Ravenna. The diningroom service is perfect and the employees courteous and polite on all occasions. The tables are supplied with the choicest viands that can be procured, and three complete meals are furnished daily-not with one good dinner and a light breakfast and supper, as is the custom with many hotels-but three substantial repasts. The rooms are neatly furnished and steamheated-thebeds are luxurious and inviting to repose, and the Etna is rapidly becoming the choice of resorts by the traveling men of northeastern Ohio, who esteem themselves fortunate if they reach the house in time to pass a Sunday or a holiday. No large city hotel could boast of a more elegant menu than that prepared at the Etna for Thanksgiving day, 1896, and the daily fare is proportionately liberal and choice. nection with the hotel is a bar, from which all gambling and its devices are strictly excluded. This is presided over by a temperate and polite gentleman, who caters to a legitimate trade, supplying the choicest articles of consumption, but discourages all loungers and disreputable visitants. The two clerks of the hotel are affable and obliging, and use every effort to make the guests feel at home. Bean is himself a frank, genial and cordial gentleman, whose long experience as manager and proprietor of hotels here and elsewhere has well fitted him for the discharge of his duties in the delicate profession he has chosen to pursue, and all acknowledge him to be able and thorough in all its multifarious departments.

Mr. Bean is prominent in Freemasonry, being a member of Rockton lodge, No. 316, A. & F. M., of Kent; of Tyrian chapter, No. 91, R. A. M., of Ravenna, and of Akron commandery, No. 25, K. T., and also of the Order of the Eastern Star, and Crescent lodge, 225, Ravenna. In politics he is a republican.

HRISTIAN CACKLER, one of the most prominent native farmers of Franklin township, Portage county, Ohio, and a representative of one of the oldest families in the county, and the third of his name, was born August 17, 1836, in the house in which he resided until the spring of 1897, when he removed to Kent-a son of Christian and Tharisa (Nighman) Cackler, of whom a biography will be presented further The house in which subject was born was erected by his father in 1829, was one of the first brick mansions erected in portage county, is still an elegant residence, and here was organized permanently the Pioneer association of Portage county in 1874.

Christian Cackler, the subject, was educated in the common schools of his district, and he also attended the schools of Kent for a few terms. All his life has been passed in the quiet but noble pursuit of agriculture, and he now owns 114 acres of land in one body, this being his portion of the original 400 acres owned by his father. He was married August 10, 1862, to Elizabeth Mary Bently, daughter of John Bently, of Kent. This lady was born in New York city January 29, 1843, and when fifteen years of age came with her parents to Portage county, Ohio. To her marriage with

Mr. Cackler she has borne two children, viz: John C., who was born January 13, 1872, and who married in December, 1894, Miss Mary Hilderhoof, the result of this union being one son, Donald G., and whose residence is in Kent; Theresa Ella Louisa, the second child of Mr. and Mrs. Cackler, resides with her parents and is a music teacher. In politics Mr. Cackler has always been a democrat, is at present a township trustee, and has held several other township offices as a matter of public duty, but not for either emolument or honor. Fraternally he is a knight templar Mason, and both his wife and daughter are members of the order of the Eastern Star, an auxiliary branch of the Masonic order for the benefit of the wives and daughters of Masons.

To revert to the life of the parents of subject: Christian Cackler, one of the first settlers of Portage county, died at his residence, in Franklin township, on the morning of July 5th, 1878. He was born in Washington county, Pa., June 27, 1791. In the spring of 1804, with his father and eldest brother, he moved to Hudson, Ohio. Three years later he was bound out to remain till he was twenty-one, that he might help support the family. Shortly after he obtained his freedom, he enlisted in the war of 1812, and remained in service one year and twenty days. In August, 1814, by Frederick Caris, Esq., he was married to Miss Tharisa Nighman. This was the first white couple married in Franklin township. On January 1, 1816, he moved to the place where he resided until death. The young couple had to endure the privations and hardships incident to the early settlement of Portage county. The prospect before them would not, to young people of this generation, seem very inviting. Mr. Cackler had an ax, and his wife a bed, and they purchased three white saucers, three knives and forks, and a wooden pail. These articles, with three wooden plates, a kettle and a table that was given them, composed their "set out." They contracted for fifty acres of land for $175, and they had to labor, struggle and economize for seventeen years to obtain a deed. This was a grand triumph over trying difficulties and adverse surroundings, and prepared the way for other victories. From this time they were blessed with material prosperity. By honest work, frugal management, and the rise of real estate, they acquired a valuable property. nearly fifty years they lived and toiled together. Of twelve children all but one lived to years of maturity, and three still survive, and reside at, or near, the old home. Of thirty-two grandchildren all but one survive their honored ancestors.

Mrs. Tharisa Cackler lived until April 23, 1869, when she expired at her home in Franklin township from a paralytic shock. She was born in Hagerstown, Md., November 23, 1791, and came to Franklin township, Portage county, Ohio, with her parents, in 1808. Herewith is appended in chronological order the complete genealogy of this old and respectable Ohio family, from the original pioneer to the birth of the subject of this memoir:

ILLIAM HENRY CANFIELD, bookkeeper for the Ravenna Shoe company, was born in this city September 6, 1840, and is a son of William Harrison and Lydia Thompson (Frary) Canfield, the former of whom was born in Edinburg, Portage county, Ohio, and the latter in North Becket, Berkshire county, Mass., but came when quite young to Ohio with her father.

William Harrison Canfield, father of our subject, was well educated in the district schools of Edinburg, then learned cabinet-making, which he followed many years, and then engaged in undertaking, removing to Windham, Portage county, in 1841, where he lived until 1858, when he came to Ravenna, remained here one year, and then went to Corry, Pa., where he passed the remainder of his life.

William Henry Canfield, the subject, was educated in the common schools and in the academy of Windham; at the age of fifteen years, came to Ravenna and entered the store of Bostwick & Beatty as clerk, whence he went to Cleveland and took a course of six months in the Spencerian Business college, thoroughly learning bookkeeping and business methods generally. He then clerked for Edwin Holden, at Charleston, Portage county, for a year and a half, and afterward went to Youngstown, Ohio, where he started a grocery, which he later merged into a general store, this being about the time of the opening of the Civil war. In 1865 he sold out his Youngstown establishment and went to Corry, Pa., in 1866, where he entered the freight office of the Atlantic & Great Western Railway company and remained until 1869, when he returned to Youngstown, Ohio; where he was employed in the office of the same company as bookkeeper for fourteen years. About two years of this time, however, he was in charge of the Shenango company's coal mines, under the general manager, R. J. Wick. About this time Mr. Canfield's health began to fail, and for a time he withdrew from his too confining vocation, and found desultory employment with the board of elections, also served as juror and as assessor until February 1, 1893, when he returned to Ravenna and assumed the duties of his present position, which he has since filled in a most satisfactory manner.

September 2, 1862, Mr. Canfield married, in Youngstown, Miss Elizabeth Burnet, deughter of Stephen F. and Harriet (Drake) Burnet, the union resulting in the birth of nine children, viz.: Emma Lydia, Mary Elizabeth, Fordham Harrison, Frederick Wesley (deceased), Cyrus Burnet and Harriet Iva (deceased), Clara Louise, William Jay and Charles Henry. father of Mrs. Canfield, Stephen F. Burnet, was born in New Jersey and his wife in Rochedale, Lancashire, England. Mr. Canfield had three children, viz.: William H., Charles Wesley, who died in February, 1876, and Iva G., now Mrs. J. P. Dawley, of Cleveland, Ohio.

Mr. Canfield was formerly a member of lodge No. 365, F. & A. M., of Corry, Pa., but is now an unaffiliating Mason. In religion he is a Methodist, and at Youngstown was recording steward and trustee of his congregation; with his family he is now a member of the Methodist Episcopal church of Ravenna, of which he is also a steward. In politics he is a strong republican and a believer in a protective tariff and sound money.

ILLIAM I. CARIS, D. D. S., one of the most scientific dentists of the state of Ohio, and now a resident of Kent, was born on his father's farm in Portage county, September 4, 1852. He is the inventor of the Caris Electro-ansætherizer, and is at the head of a company in Kent organized for the manufacture of the same.

John Caris, grandfather of subject, was a native of Connecticut, was a soldier of the Revolutionary war, and while yet a single man came to Ohio and was one of the first settlers in Rootstown, Portage county, of which township, also, he was the first justice of the peace. He was a millwright by trade and a general wood worker, was very ingenious, and invented a wheel for spinning flax and wool, and also invented a turning lathe. He here married Elizabeth Hartle, by whom he became the father of nine children, viz: George, a shoemaker; Michael, a farmer; Frederick, a blacksmith; Samuel, a farmer; Lycurgus, a stone and brick mason; Henry, a farmer; Mary, married to James Likings; Susan, wife of Nelson Fuller, and one other. These children all made their homes in Portage county excepting Lycurgus, who settled in LaGrange, Frederick Caris, a brother of John, came with the latter to Portage county and engaged in farming.

Samuel Caris, father of Dr. William 1. Caris, was born in Rootstown township December 27, 1823, a son of John and Elizabeth Caris. He was reared a farmer and married Rachel Ward, who was born in Rootstown June 20, 1824, a daughter of William and Betsey (Eatinger) Ward. William Ward, while serving in the army during the Revolutionary war, was badly injured and was carried from the field to camp by his comrade, John Caris, and this incident made them lasting friends—three sons of John Caris subsequently marrying three of the daughters of William Ward. John Caris lived to reach the age of eighty-two years, but his friend, William Ward, died when seventy-three or seventyfour years old. To the marriage of Samuel Caris and wife were born three children, viz: Belle, wife of Ira L. Herriff, of Kent; Dr. William I.; and Frank D., who died at the age of seven years. The mother of these children passed away in June, 1805; the father is living in Kent, but still owns the home farm. He has always been a democrat, but has taken very little interest in politics, excepting the depositing of his ballot.

Dr. William I. Caris lived on the home farm, attending school the meanwhile at Rootstown, until seventeen years old; he then passed a year at Ravenna in business, and at the age of eighteen commenced the study of dentistry with Dr. G. A. Case, under whose preceptorship he remained two years, and then opened an office in Huntington, W. Va., where he was in active practice until 1874, when he returned to Kent, Ohio, being now one of the oldest dentists in this city and standing in the front rank of the profession. He is an active worker in the Ohio State Dental society, in the Northern Ohio Dental society, the Odontological society, the West Penn Dental society, of Pittsburg, and of the Lake Erie Dental society, and is a constant attendant at their meetings as well as a valuable contributor to their professional literature. He is the inventor of the most wonderful and effective cataphoric instrument ever discovered, which is denominated the Caris electro-anæstherizer, and is unequivocally endorsed by hundreds of professional dentists of the highest reputation who have used the little instrument or machine, and a company has been formed in Kent for its manufacture. Dr. Caris has been also instrumental in advancing other local enterprises in Kent, and is a stockholder in the Royal Machine company, which manufactures refrigerators, steam engines, etc.; he is also a stockholder in the Kent opera house, of which he was the first manager, holding that position two years. Fraternally he is an Odd Fellow, and has passed all the chairs in his lodge; is a member of Akron encampment, No. 18, and of grand canton, No. 2, being brigade surgeon of the Ohio division and holding the rank of major; he is also a Knight of Pythias, being a past chancellor commander, and now a member of McPherson lodge, No. 65, at Akron; likewise, he is a member of the Royal Arcanum.

March 25, 1876, Dr. Caris married Miss Roxie S. Parmelee, and this union has resulted in the birth of two bright children-Carl P. and Mabel D. In politics the doctor was a democrat until the formation of the greenback party, with which he identified himself and was elected city clerk; he was then appointed to fill an unexpired term as mayor of Kent, and after the expiration of his term was elected to succeed himself and served one While mayor he succeeded in introducing the present waterworks system in Kent, the contract for the construction of the plant being let under his administration. is now serving his second term in the city council. The doctor has made every dollar he owns, although his father once went his security for $400, which has long since been paid by the doctor. The father could have done better, but had full confidence in his son's ability to succeed with this little aid, and he was not disappointed.

EWTON CHALKER, one of the most sagacious and experienced attorneys-at-law of Akron, Ohio, with his office at No. 130 South Howard street, has been a resident of this city since 1874. He is a native of the Buckeye state, and was born in Southington, Trumbull county, September 12, 1842, a son of James, Jr., and Eliza J. (Hyde) Chalker, both, also natives of Trumbull county. The families on both sides were from Connecticut and were of English descent, the paternal branch having come to America about the year 1640.

James Chalker, Jr., father of Newton Chalker, the subject, was twice married, his first wife having been Miss Eliza J. Hyde, who bore him four children, viz: Benson, who died in childhood; Byron, a farmer of Southington, Trumbull county, who died at the age of fifty-two years; Newton was the third born; Columbus, also a farmer, who died at the age of twenty-seven years. The mother of this family died December 24, 1849, and Mr. Chalker then married Adaline Timmerman, of York state, who bore two daughters—Mary J., deceased wife of A. J. Morris, of Southington, and Bertha, wife of Thomas McConnell, of Warren, Ohio. The father, James Chalker, Jr., lived to reach the age of eighty-two years, and died September 23, 1893.

Newton Chalker was reared in his native township and attended the district school until he was fourteen years of age, and then attended the Western Reserve seminary, at Farmington, Trumbull county, at intervals, until he reached his twenty-first year, when he entered Allegheny college, Meadville, Pa., from which he graduated in the class of 1866 with the degree of A. B., and later received the degree of A. M. The year of 1866-67 he was principal of the Dixon (Ill.) seminary, and in 1867-68 was superintendent of the public schools at Darlington, Wis.; in 1868-69 he attended the law school of Albany, N. Y., graduated in 1869, receiving the degree of LL. B., and was at once admitted to the bar of New York, but soon afterward went to Cameron, Mo., was admitted to the bar of that state, and for five years was there engaged in active practice. In 1874, as before stated, he came to Akron, Ohio, where he has since been occupied in general practice, and in handling real estate. He has made two allotments in the city of Akron, the first being known as Chalker's sub-division of a part of the original plat, and the second as Chalker's North Hill addition, and which comprises twenty-one acres. Mr. Chalker has also been a stockholder and a director in the People's Savings bank of Akron.

In 1893 Mr. Chalker pratically retired from business and passed much time in travel. He visited Canada, most of the states of the Union, and Mexico. In 1895–96, he made a tour around the world, visiting the leading nations of the earth.

In politics Mr. Chalker is a republican, in religion a rationalist; he is also a member of Buckley post, G. A. R., having enlisted in the Civil war, in company B, Eighty-seventh Ohio volunteer infantry, and having been engaged in the three days' battle at Harper's Ferry, Va., in September, 1862, under Gen. Miles, who was defeated by the larger army of Stonewall Jackson. After a service of four months, he was honorably mustered out at Delaware, Ohio. Mr. Chalker is unmarried, but has a pleasant home at No. 907 North Howard street. He is truly a self-made man, having acquired his success through his astuteness as an attorney, his financiering abilities, and, above all, his unswerving integrity and diligence in caring for the interests of his patrons.

RIN D. CHILDS, M. D., an eminent physician and surgeon of Broadway and Market streets, Akron, Ohio, is native of Washington county, Vt., was born in February, 1840, and is a son of Dennis and Angeline (Straw) Childs, of English descent.

Dennis Childs, father of the doctor, was a farmer and civil engineer and quite distinguished in his native state of Vermont in public affairs, having been twice elected to the legislature and having filled several minor offices. In the fall of 1855 he removed to Wisconsin, where he quietly followed agriculture until his death. His children, who all grew to maturity, were six in number, and were named, in order of birth, Ruth, who is married; O. D., the subject; A. S., a homeopathic physician of Chicago, Ill.; A. A., a dentist of Akron, Ohio; Eunice, wife of Charles Remington, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Mary, wife of Myron Samphere.

Dr. O. D. Childs was educated in the common and high schools of Vermont and Wisconsin, having been fifteen years of age when he accompanied his parents to the latter state. He was reared to farming, and in February, 1865, enlisted for the war in company D, Forty-ninth Wisconsin volunteer infantry, and served until honorably discharged at Madison, Wis., in October, 1865, long after the war had In the fall of the same year he came to Ohio and entered the office of Prof. T. P. Wilson, in Cleveland, where he read medicine until prepared to enter the Cleveland Homeopathic college, where he attended lectures until his graduation in February, 1867. In the fall of 1868 he assisted in organizing the Woman's Homeopathic college of Cleveland, in which he filled the chair of anatomy until this college was merged into the Cleveland Homeopathic Medical college. During the interval, however, he had opened an office for practice in Akron, in 1867, and alternated his professional with his college duties. doctor has made nervous disorders a special study, and his practice has been very lucrative and successful. For twenty years the doctor has been a member of the state Homeopathic Medical society, was one of the organizers of the Northeastern Ohio Medical society, and also of the Summit county Homeopathic Clinical Medical society, as well as of the Cleveland Medical college, of which he is still one of the trustees. In 1871 he became a member of Akron lodge, No. 83, F. & A. M. He is public spirited to a marked degree, and eager to advance the prosperity of his adopted city. He was one of the organizers of the Citizens'

Savings & Loan association in 1871, and is still a stockholder and director; also an organizer of and director in the Akron Belting company; also a director in the Akron Abstract & Title Guarantee company, and is active in other enterprises. In 1870 he was one of the organizers of the Y. M. C. A., of which he was president for the years 1874, 5 and 6.

Dr. Childs is emphatically a self-made man in the business sense of the expression, having begun life with little or no pecuniary assistance, and now standing in the front rank among the members of his profession, as well as among the solid business men of the city of Akron.

The doctor was united in marriage in June, 1890, with Miss Lillian R. Robertson, daugherer of Capt. Robertson, now of Kansas City, Mo., but formerly for many years a steamboat captain on the lower Ohio and Mississippi rivers. The marriage of the doctor has been blessed with one child—Celeste Angeline.

ENJAMIN F. CLARK, recorder of Summit county, was born in Columbiana county, Ohio, January 24, 1841, a son of George Calhoun and Susan A. (Lee) Clark.

George Calhoun Clark was a native of Lancaster county, Pa., of Scotch and German parentage. While an infant he was deprived by death of his father and was being reared in the Catholic faith by his mother, which, being obnoxious to him, caused him to desert his home at a tender age and seek a refuge in Virginia. There he spent his youthful days and managed to secure a good commonschool education, and later learned the carpenter's trade; he next began the study of the Scriptures, with a view to entering the ministry. While engaged in these studies he married Miss Susan A. Lee, a first cousin of Gen. Robert E. Lee, and daughter of William Lee, who married a Miss Atchison and resided Albemarle county, Va. After marriage Mr. Clark came to Ohio and located in New Lisbon. Having united himself with the Disciples' church and entered the ministry, he devoted his life to that service, chiefly preaching in Columbiana, Trumbull, Stark, Wayne and Summit counties, Ohio, from the age of thirty years until his death, at the age of fifty-nine years, in Wooster, Wayne county, August 12, 1860, while he was there in charge of the Disciples' church. His widow survived him until March 4, 1865, when she died also in Their family comprised eight chil-Wooster. dren, viz: William H., who died at Nashville, Tenn., at the age of thirty years; Mary A., widow of Lieut. Harvey, a soldier of the Civil war; Sylvanus, who died in Millersburg, Holmes county, in 1872, from the effects of wounds received at the battle of Pea Ridge, while serving as sergeant in Capt. Hickenloope's battery; Elizabeth F., who was first married to Stephen A. Goodrich, a soldier of company I, One Hundred and Second Ohio volunteer infantry, captured at Birmingham, Ala., and murdered by guerrillas, and whose second husband was Ezra Tryon, a veteran of the Mexican war, and later was wounded while serving in the Sixth Ohio battery in the Civil war, but who died on his farm at Nelson Center, Portage county, in 1893; George W., a machinist of Kansas City, Mo., and a member for three years of company H, Sixteenth Ohio volunteer infantry; and Benjamin F., the subject.

Benjamin F. Clark was reared in northeastern Ohio, was educated in the public schools—principally of Massillon—and at the age of sixteen years entered the office of Dr. A. Metz, the noted oculist and surgeon of Massillon, studied under him for three years, and was prepared for his first course of lectures when the Civil war broke out, and he enlisted, August 13, 1861, in company H, Sixteenth Ohio volunteer infantry. He was wounded in the knee by a piece of shell at the siege of Vicksburg, Miss., late in 1862, was sent home, and, after careful nursing, recovered and re-enlisted March 20, 1864, entering company B, McLoughlin's squad of cavalry, and participated in the engagements at Resaca, Big Shanty, Kenesaw Mountain, around Atlanta and the raid on Macon, where he was taken by the enemy and sent to Andersonville, where he was confined nine months. one of the first 100 selected to be sent to Annapolis, Md., for parole, and, like the others, was a mere skeleton, unable to walk, from star-As soon as able to be transported be was returned to his home at Wooster, Ohio, but here collapsed, and for three months was on the verge of the grave. His good mother nursed him to life again, but at the sacrifice of her own; for, on the third day after he was was able to sit up, she lay down and three days later yielded up her faithful spirit. Clark then joined his regiment at Charlotte, N. C., and was placed on guard duty; shortly after his squadron was merged into company C, Ohio cavalry, and was finally mustered out at Charlotte, N. C., October 28, 1865.

After returning from the war, Mr. Clark learned the printer's trade at Wooster, and about this time was married, of which event further mention will be made. At the same time, in partnership with his brother, George, he established a bakery and confectionery, which was continued for about one year. He then took his young wife to Canton, Ohio, entered the Repository office, Josiah Hartzell and Thomas Saxton proprietors, and was connected with this journal eight years, and, beside setting type, did much of the local reporting and editorial work. In 1874 he came to Akron and ten years was a compositor on the Beacon and eleven years on the editorial staff—having charge, during the three years of the latter period, of the local force. He gave some attention to politics while on the Beacon, but was not a seeker of office; nevertheless, being a stanch republican, he was solicited, in the fall of 1890, to become the candidate of his party for the office of recorder of Summit county—was elected, and re-elected in 1893. His term of office expired in January, 1897, and then he was appointed by the county commissioners to fill the vacancy in the office, occasioned by the change in time of the year when the recorder assumed the duties of the office.

Beside wielding a trenchant and facile pen, Mr. Clark is a first-class business man. was one of the founders of the Van Wart company and is its vice-president; he is also proprietor of a novelty store in Youngstown, which he has placed in charge of a son, and which he established in the spring of 1892; he is president of the board of trustees of the First church of Christ in Akron, and for seven years was secretary of the board of charities in this city. Fraternally, he is a member of Akron lodge, No. 547. I. O. O. A. R., and McPherson lodge, No. 63, K. of P.

The marriage of Mr. Clark took place May 1, 1866, with Miss Carrie Foltz, daughter of Moses and Sarah Foltz, the union resulting in the birth of four children, viz.: Harry W., who died at the age of six months; Cora Alice, wife of H. S. Brandon, picture-framer of Akron; George Kean, manager of his father's store in Youngstown, and married to Miss Ona B. Waite, of Akron; and William Kean Foltz, at home with his parents.

YRON CHAPMAN, M. D., of Copley township, Summit county, Ohio, was born near Skaneateles, N. Y., Jannary 8, 1822, a son of Ashbel and Polly (Lane) Chapman, natives of Massachusetts and the parents of the following-named children: Orson C., Selina, Orlin C., Lovina, Melissa, Lucius, Cynthia (whose husband, H. D. Patch, was killed at Shiloh in the late Civil war), Percinda, Almeron, Philinda, William J., Byron and John H.

The Chapman family came overland from New York by teams to Copley township, Suinmit county, in the fall of 1835, and settled on a farm of 154 acres, one-half mile south of Here Ashbel Chapman, who had fought at Lundy's Lane in the war of 1812, cleared up a comfortable home, and on this farm Byron was reared to manhood, attending in the meanwhile the common and more advanced school, until twenty-two years of Having now decided to adopt the medical profession as his life-pursuit, he commended the study of the science under his brother, William I., then a practitioner of some note in Copley. Later he attended lectures at Cleveland (Ohio) Medical college, from which he was graduated in March, 1847. But, just about this time, his elder brother and preceptor, William J., was suddenly called from earth and his field of usefulness, yet Byron felt no hesitancy in taking charge of the deceased physician's patients, whom he so skillfully treated that his reputation was at once established, and an increased and lucrative practice has been his ever since.

Dr. Byron Chapman was united in marriage, December 23, 1847, with Miss Matilda

Dils, then of New Hudson, Oakland county, Mich., but a native of Cayuga county, N. Y., born April 11, 1830, a daughter of Abram and Mary (Polhamus) Dils. To this union have been born two children, Willis D. and Fannie P.

Willis D. Chapman was born October 3, 1848, and was educated in Copley and the Pennsylvania Polytechnic college of Philadelphia. He then became locating engineer on the Lake Shore & Tuscarawas Valley railway, held the position until 1871, and then filled a similar position on the Canada Southern railway from 1872 to 1876; was then engaged in general civil engineering, with headquarters at Toledo, Ohio, for two years; then was for two years mining engineer and United States deputy surveyor in Montana, and in Akron, Ohio, served as city engineer from 1886 until 1889, since which time he has been engaged in electric street railway construction in Akron, Canton and Zanesville, Ohio. At present Mr. Chapman is general manager of the Akron Street Railway & Illuminating company. has been a member of the American society of Civil Engineers since 1883, and also of the Ohio society of Civil Engineers. His marriage took place February 26, 1873, to Miss Ella A. Marriner, who was born in Akron May 5, 1849, and to this union have been born six children. Charles A., Etha M., Willis D., Jr., Ella A., George B. and Fred. Chapman was born August 3, 1852, and is now the widow of Albert E. Hiestand, who was a prominent attorney of Akron. Hiestand has her present residence with her parents in Copley, and is a lady of many estimable qualities.

Dr. Chapman has been a member of the republican party since its organization, assisting as a delegate to Columbus, Ohio, when the party was founded in this state. He has served as postmaster seventeen years, as township clerk ten years, and as treasurer twenty-seven years. Fraternally, he is a member of Copley tent, No. 204, K. O. T. M., and has ever been a prominent man, professionally and socially, and has always held an advanced position in promoting the moral and educational interests of his county and state. The doctor has acceptably filled a position on the school board for about twenty-two years, which speaks volumes for him as far as the esteem in which he is held by the general public is concerned, but his professional eminence is the crowning glory of his life.

RANKLIN P. CHAPMAN, the enterprising boot and shoe merchant of Ravenna, Ohio, and probably the most extensive dealer in fashionable footwear in the city, was born in Rootstown, Portage county, August 1, 1852, a son of Edward E. and Melissa (Reed) Chapman, also natives of the Buckeye state and parents of five children, of whom four are still living, viz: Rose, wife of Nelson Loveland; Willliam B., Franklin P., and Carrie, now Mrs. Charles Bogue.

Edward E. Chapman, in his earlier business life, was an itinerant merchant, and drove a notion wagon through the country, profitably disposing of his wares to the good housewives and others who were debarred ready access to the markets of the town merchants. He later engaged in the cigar and tobacco trade, and ceased his peregrinations. Horace Reed, the maternal grandfather of Franklin P. Chapman, had the proud distinction of being the first white male child born in Rootstown township. Portage county, and further concerning his ancestry may be found in the memoir of Judge C. A. Reed, on another page of this volume.

Franklin P. Chapman was reared and educated in Rootstown until thirteen years of age, and then went to Cleveland, where, for a short time, he was employed as a bell-boy in the Weddell house. He then returned to Rootstown and for one term walked daily to Ravenna to attend school, as supplementary to his earlier education. His next step in life's progress was to learn the shoemaker's trade in Ravenna, and after having thoroughly mastered this business he started a shop in Rootstown, which he conducted about two years. June 19, 1872, he was united in marriage with Miss Tibbie Powers, the accomplished daughter of James and Rebecca (Windle) Powers. This union has been blessed by the birth of one daughter, Maud Irene, of whom they are justly proud. This young lady is a graduate of the Boston school of oratory, and in May, 1896, completed a post-graduate course in the Boston school of Expression, and in June of the same year was selected to represent this school at the Boston Art school recital.

From about the year 1873 until 1880 Mr. Chapman conducted a grocery store and shoe shop at Freedom Station, Portage county, and was the postmaster there for nearly seven years, having served until the close of the Garfield and Arthur administration. In 1880 he came to Ravenna and soon afterward bought out the interest of Mr. Sturtevant, of the shoe firm of Rumbaugh & Sturtevant, and for about ten years was in partnership with Mr. Rumbaugh, whom he bought out in 1892, since which time he has been doing a most successful business on his own account, and is carrying one of the finest and best assorted stocks of boots, shoes, etc., to be found within the limits of Portage county.

Mr. and Mrs. Chapman are members of the Methodist Episcopal church, of which he has been a member of the official board and treasurer for many years, and of the tenets of which he and his wife are strict observers, as well as liberal supporters of the church itself. Fraternally Mr. Chapman is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and of the Royal Arcanum, and politically has always been a stanch republican, being at present clerk of the board of health, of which he was president in 1895.

Socially Mr. and Mrs. Chapman enjoy the esteem of a very large circle of friends, and as a business man his integrity and fair dealing have always been favorably commented upon; any one who once deals with him will ever after continue to patronize him. He has a most pleasant residence at the corner of Oak and Meridian streets, where his hospitable doors are always open to his numerous friends, who never tire of passing their hours at this home of culture and refinement.

ELAH S. CLAPP, one of the oldest and most respected agriculturists of Franklin township, Portage county, Ohio, was born in Montgomery township, Hampden county, Mass., January 9, 1812, and is a son of the late Selah and Diana (Sheldon) Clapp, both natives of the Bay state.

Selah Clapp, father of our subject, was a shoemaker by trade, was married in his native state March 1, 1804, and came to Ohio August 8, 1820, and here engaged exclusively in farming, became a highly respected citizen, and was honored by being elected to various township offices. To his marriage were born eight children, of whom three only are now living, viz: Spencer, of Iowa; Selah S., the subject of this memoir, and Diana, widow of Dr. J. P. Of those who have passed away, Samuel died July 2, 1818, aged three years; Silas and Susan died at unrecorded dates: Achsah died July 19, 1863, at forty-five years of age; Delana died May 11, 1870, when forty-six years old. The father, Selah Clapp, died June 4, 1840, at the age of seventy-five years, and his widow died, at the age of eighty years, August 29, 1850—both devout members of the Presbyterian church. Noah Sheldon, maternal grandfather of subject, was a native of Northampton, Mass., and married a Miss Clark, by whom he became the father of a large family.

Selah S. Clapp was but eight years of age when brought to Franklin township, Portage county, by his parents. His educational opportunities were limited, as schools were at a great distance, and his services were needed in clearing up the home farm from the wilder-He was thoroughly initiated in the science of pioneer farming, and at the death of his father purchased the homestead, on which he still resides. His marriage took place at Ravenna, Ohio, to Miss Mary Brown, also a native of Massachusetts and a daughter of Nicholas and Fanny (Phillips) Brown, both natives of Massachusetts and parents of five children—Lucy, Mary, Lewis, Benjamin P. and Fanny—all now deceased. The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Clapp was blessed with four children, of whom Fanny E. died January I, 1855, aged eighteen years and six months. The surviving three are Mary Adelia, single and at home; William H., who married Miss Mary Richardson and is a prosperous farmer of Franklin township, and Lucy T., still unmarried and making her home with her father, Mr. Clapp having had the misfortune to lose his wife January 27, 1875, who died a sincere Christian, at the age of fifty-eight years

In politics Selah S. Clapp is a republican, but has never sought office, although he has been honored by election to several township offices, and has served very acceptably as township trustee several terms. For the past sixty years he has been a member of the Disciples' church, and to the erection of the house of worship of this denomination in Franklin township he contributed $1,000, and also contributed very liberally toward the erection of the Presbyterian church edifice at Kent. more than fifty years Mr. Clapp has been a deacon, and for many years a trustee of his church, of which his wife is also a devoted Mr. Clapp is the owner of one of the best farms in Franklin township, beside other property, and at one time, in connection with farming, also dealt largely in live stock, traveling extensively through the western states in the prosecution of his business. Being now over eighty-five years of age, he is still hale and hearty, and no man in the township stands higher in the esteem of the community.

V. CLEAVER, M. D., one of the most experinced physicians and surgeons of Akron, Ohio, is a native of East Bethlehem, Washington county, Pa., was born June 13, 1858, and is a son of John I. and Pleasant H. (Hill) Cleaver, the former of German and the latter of Scotch-Irish descent.

The Cleaver family is a very ancient one in America, the ancestors of the doctor having come to this country in 1682, and Pennsylvania has ever since been known as its home. John Cleaver, grandfather of the doctor, was one of the first settlers of Washington county, then a wilderness, but now one of the most populous in the state. Although tending largely to the pursuits of agriculture, the family has produced several physicians of celebrity and others have reached distinction in politics. Dr. Hiram Cleaver, an uncle of the subject, was professor of obstetrics in the Keokuk (lowa) Medical college, and his son was also a physician, but both are now deceased; James H. Cleaver, M. D., is the present mayor of the city of Council Bluffs, Iowa; another uncle, Eli B. Cleaver, of Jefferson county, Ohio, has served in the state legislature, but John 1. Cleaver, father of subject, contented himself with the ennobling pursuit of agriculture. His children were four in number and were born in the following order: Etta, who died in early life; Dr. J. V., the subject of this biography; Solon H., who died in early childhood; Isaac N., who has charge of H. P. Wasson's mercantile establishment, of Indianapolis, Ind.

Dr. I. V. Cleaver passed his early life on his father's farm, and received his elementary education in the public schools; he next attended the Southwest Normal school at California, Washington county, Pa., and then taught school four years, synchonously reading medicine under Dr. Q. C. Farquhar, of East Bethlehem, Pa., and a so serving as treasurer's clerk of his native county. then became a student in the medical department of the university of Pennsylvania, and gave especial attention to surgery under the able instruction of the renowned Prof. C. R. Agnew (surgeon to President Garfield), and graduated May 2, 1887. On the 1st day of June, the same year, he came to Akron, and for one year was in partnership with Dr. Thomas McEbright, and then opened an office for practice on his sole account. stands at the head of his profession in Summit county, and his patronage has been so great both in medicine and surgery, and particularly the latter, that he has felt it incumbent upon himself to relinquish the former and to devote almost his entire attention to the latter branch of his profession. Of professional societies the doctor is a member of the State Medical association, the Northeastern Medical society, the Mississippi Valley Medical association, and the Celsus club, of Akron, of which latter he was the first president. Fraternally, he is a member of Akron lodge, No. 247, I. O. O. F., of which he is a past grand, and is also a member of the encampment, in which he is P. C. P.

The marriage of the doctor took place in Akron, October 24, 1894, to Miss Mabel Wagoner, daughter of Aaron Wagoner, and to this union has been born one child—Josephine. In politics the doctor is a republican, and has served two years as city physician and as infirmary physician four years, and is also surgeon to the Northwestern Ohio railroad company.

APT. JEDEDIAH COLE, ex-soldier and county surveyor of Portage county, Ohio, was born in Garrettsville, this county, May 26, 1830, a son of Jedediah and Elizabeth (Noah) Cole, the former of whom was a native of Vermont and the latter of Chester, Pa. Mr. and Mrs. Cole had born to them four children, one of whom died in childhood; the three survivors are Rebecca, wife of Uriah Craig, of Cameron, Mo.; William C., of Hamilton, Mo.; and Jedediah, the subject of this notice.

Benjamin Cole, the paternal grandfather of our subject, was a soldier from Vermont during the whole of the Revolution, and died in his native state at a green old age, as did also his wife. They were the parents of ten children-eight sons and two daughters. John Noah, maternal grandfather of subject, was a native of Dresden, Saxony, and on coming to America first located in Pennsylvania, where he married a Quakeress--a most amiable lady, who was never known to utter an angry word. In 1804 or 1805 Mr.. Noah came to Ohio, and with several members of his family settled on the farm in Nelson township where subject was reared, having but a short time been preceded by the Garrett family, of There Mr. Noah followed his Garrettsville. calling of agriculturist until his death at the age of eighty-nine years—his wife's death occurring within six months of his own, at the age of eighty-two.

Jedediah Cole, father of subject, was a carpenter and joiner in early life, but later engaged in farming. He came to Portage county, Ohio, in 1818, and settled a mile and a half east of Garrettsville, where he followed farming and likewise practiced medicine. Here he lost his wife in 1834, and was next married to Mrs. Milton Hamlin, née Sanford, of Elyria, Ohio, whose father is reputed to have been the first permanent settler of Mantua township, Portage county. To this second marriage of Mr. Cole were born five children, of whom three still survive---Milton, Orilla and Cordelia. Mr. Cole was a gentleman of no political aspirations, although he filled some few township offices that were in reality forced upon him, and was content to lead the life of a useful citizen until his death, on his farm, in 1850. He and his wife had formerly been members of the Baptist church, but in later years became identified with the Disciples, there probably having been no place of worship for the former denomination in the neigh-It may here be mentioned, also, borhood. that one of the brothers of Mr. Cole was killed in the battle of Lundy's Lane, Canada, in the war of 1812.

Jedediah Cole, the subject proper of this memoir, was born, reared, and, in fact, married in a log house, and can recollect when the wagon-road between Ravenna and Garretts-ville was nearly all a dense wilderness, and he is at present the representative of two of the oldest-settled families of Portage county. He remained on his grandfather's farm until sixteen years of age, and received his early education in the district school, later attended the high school of Nelson, and then engaged in teaching at Salem, Ill. He received his first license to teach in that state from the father of the recent democratic candidate for the presidency of the United States, eight years before the latter was born. Before teaching four years in Salem, he taught one year mearly) in the neighborhood of the Jennings family, then went to Jacksonville, Iowa, taught two years, and then taught in Prairie Du Chien, Wis., until 1862, where he enlisted in company A. Thirty-first Wisconsin volunteer infantry, served something over two years, receiving graduated promotions from the ranks, and was then mustered out to be commissioned captain in the One Hundred and Twenty-third U. S. C. I., for meritorious conduct in the field, and in this capacity served somewhat more than a year. He was finally mustered out in the latter part of October, 1865, returned to Portage county, and rented a sawmill in Nelson township, and carried on the lumber trade until 1869, when he was elected county surveyor by the republican party, and has filled this office ever since, with the exception of a part of a term, and, it is needless to say, to the perfect satisfaction of all parties.

Mr. Cole was united in marriage September 6, 1855, with Miss Catherine M. Dickens, daughter of James H. and Lydia (Pitner) Dickens-Mr. Dickens having been a Methodist minister for more than fifty years. To the happy union of Mr. and Mrs. Cole have been born five children, viz: Augustus S., the present mayor of Ravenna, who married Jane Allen, and has one child living—Lee; Henry M., died at the age of thirteen years; James, who resides in Kansas City, Mo., engaged in the coal and ice trade, is married, and has one daughter; Katherine D., a graduate of the Boston School of Oratory under Miss Edgelly, and who is now a noted elocutionist east and west, having made successful tours through both sections and is now professor of elocution in the I. F. College at Jacksonville, Ill.; Paul, the youngest of the family, is attending Hiram Mrs. Cole is a devout member of the college.

Methodist church, while Mr. Cole is a master Mason and also a member of Mark Horton post, G. A. R., of Garrettsville. He has always been a favorite with the republican party, and has served as justice of the peace in every state in which he has lived. His residence is in Garrettsville, but he has his office in the court house in Ravenna. He has grown with the growth of the county, has witnessed its wonderful progress for the past sixty years, and even before reaching his majority became a factor in its development. He and wife are extensively connected in their social relations and stand high in the esteem of the people both of Garrettsville and Ravenna.

UGUSTUS S. COLE, mayor of Ravenna and attorney at law, and a descendant of one of the oldest-settled families of Portage county, Ohio, is a son of Jedediah Cole, present county surveyor, and his wife, Catherine (Dickens) Cole, of whom an extended biography will be found preceding this memoir. Augustus S. was born in Jacksonville, Chickasaw county, Iowa, during a temporary residence of his parents in that town, on October 6, 1858. In 1865 he was brought to Portage county on the return of the family to their old home, and was here reared to manhood, and here received his preliminary schooling, and later attended Oberlin college for a short period. He learned civil engineering under his father's instructions, began the study of the law in 1880, and in 1882 was admitted to the bar.

November 27, 1884, Mr. Cole was united in marriage with Miss Jennie Allen, daughter of William R. and Mary Allen, which marriage has been blessed with one child—Lee. Since 1886, Mr. Cole has been in the active practice of the legal profession in Ravenna, in which he has met with eminent success, being now classed with the foremost lawyers of the county and state. He has always been an ardent republican and has ever been popular with that party, as well as with the public in general, and under its auspices has filled most satisfactorily the office of justice of the peace, and in April, 1892, was elected to the highest office within the gift of the citizens of Ravenna-that of mayor, his present position. Fraternally Mayor Cole is a royal arch Mason, and is also a Knight of Pythias. He is a genial, wide-awake public-spirited citizen, a sound and reliable lawyer, and an accomplished gentleman. His home is on West Oak street, which he and wife make the seat of a generous hospitality, and which is the abode of a true domestic felicity. The attention of the reader is respectfully called to the biography of Jedediah Cole, father of the mayor.

EWITT CLINTON COOLMAN, postmaster of Ravenna, Ohio, was born in this city, February 16, 1828, a son of William and Mary (Burroughs) Coolman, respectively natives of Connecticut and Vermont and the parents of five sons and three daughters, all of whom are now deceased, with the exception of Dewitt Clinton, whose name opens this paragraph.

William Coolman, paternal grandfather of subject, was born in Strassbourg, Alsace, Germany, and came to the United States in 1790. He first located in Charleston, S. C., but afterward moved to Middletown, Conn. Still later he removed to the town of Turin, Lewis county, N. Y., and in 1810 came to Ohio and settled in Shalersville, Portage county, where he passed the remainder of his life, engaged in his regular calling of farmer, and died at the age of eighty-eight years—the father of three sons and two daughters.

Daniel Burroughs, the maternal grandfather of subject, was a native of Vermont, was a soldier in the Revolutionary war, was a farmer by vocation, and in 1808 came to Shalersville, Portage county, Ohio. He had never experienced a day's illness in all his long life, and while on a visit to one of his sons in Illinois, simply lay down as if to go to sleep, and so passed away in about his ninetieth year, leaving a family of five sons and three daughters.

William Coolman, father of DeWitt C. Coolman, was for many years a contractor for carrying the United States mail between Pittsburg, Pa., and Cleveland, Ohio, but in 1810 came to Shalersville, Ohio, with his father, and there made his home until his marriage, when he came to Ravenna. He was a prominent worker in the democratic party, and after settling in Rayenna served first as deputy sheriff, was later elected sheriff, and filled the office several terms. In 1839 he was appointed clerk of courts and served seven years, and also served several terms as a member of the Ohio general assembly. Among the minor offices which he filled was that of city magistrate, and among the numerous business enterprises in which he was engaged was that of contractor on the Ohio & Pennsylvania canal, and during its existence was one of the government directors thereof; he was also a contractor on the Cleveland & Pittsburg railroad, a director in the Cleveland & Pittsburg and the Erie railroads, and was very active, also, in advancing the business enterprises and public improvements of Portage county. He had been a soldier of the war of 1812, and when the Civil war burst forth, still filled with patriotic ardor, he carried his trusty old rifle to Cincinnati, with the intention of again enlisting in the defense of the flag of the nation, but for some reason his services were declined -possibly on account of his age. In 1845 he lost his wife, who died in the faith of the Methodist church, and he took, for his second life companion, Miss Susan Bristol, but she also was called away, dying in the same faith, but leaving no offspring. His own death occurred in Ravenna in December, 1869, at the age of seventy-six years, his religion being that of the Methodist church, and his fraternal relations being with the Masonic order, of which he had been a member ever since he had become of the proper age to assume its obligations. Few men in Ravenna were more honored or held in higher estimation by its citizens, and his loss, though inevitable, was deeply felt throughout the community.

DeWitt Clinton Coolman was reared in Ravenna, there received his rudimentary education in the common schools, which was supplemented by an attendance at the Allegheny college at Meadville, Pa., until the senior year, when, in 1847, he joined the engineer corps at Ravenna, to engage in the construction of the Cleveland & Pittsburg railroad, and thenceforward followed the profession for thirty years, and within that period was chief engineer in the construction of the Atlantic & Great Western road from Salamanca to Dayton-now known as the New York, Pennsylvania & Ohio rail-In 1869 he established, in partnership with George Robinson, the Diamond Glass works, which, with some few changes, were successfully conducted until 1880, the changes being occasioned by the death of Mr. Robinson and the incoming of Wanzer Holcomb, the sale of Mr. Holcomb's interest to Mr. Coolman, and the final disposition by Mr. Coolman of his plant to other parties. fact. Mr. Coolman has been one of the prime movers in the progress and prosperity of Ra-He was one of the organizers of the Second National bank, was one of its first directors, for a time was its vice-president, and later its president, and has been more or less interested in other business enterprises of minor note.

Always a stanch democrat, Mr. Coolman has represented his congressional district in three national democratic conventions—in New York in 1868, in Cincinnati in 1880, and in Saint Louis, in 1892, when Grover Cleveland was nominated for his second race for the presidency; he ran against James A. Garfield for congress in this, the Nineteenth district of Ohio, and was also his party's nominee for lieutenant-governor of Ohio on the ticket with Thomas E. Powell. February 16, 1894, he was commissioned postmaster of Ravenna, an office he is still administering with his accustomed ability.

The marriage of Mr. Coolman was solemnized in December, 1849, with Miss Elizabeth Coleman, the accomplished daughter of James and Sarah (Bell) Coleman, of Halifax, Nova Scotia, and this happy union has been blessed with six children, viz: James and Horace (twins), Clinton H., Mary, and Blanche and Bertha (twins). Of these, however, Clinton H. and Blanche only survive. Clinton H. married Miss Anna Hall, and to their union have been born four children—Frederick William, DeWitt Clinton, Catherine Multon and Alexander Curtis: Blanche still resides with her parents and is an assistant in the Ravenna post-office. Mrs. Coolman is a devoted member of the Episcopal church, while Mr. Coolman is an exalted member of several secret societies-being a thirty-second degree Mason, of which order he has been a member for thirty-nine years, during which time he has served as master of Unity lodge, No. 12, for several terms; as high priest for a number of years, and is a veteran member of Oriental commandery of Cleveland, being now exempt from all dues; he is also a member of the Mystic For forty-seven years he has been an Odd Fellow, and has filled all the chairs of his home lodge—Ravenna, No. 65. He is likewise a charter member of the home lodge of the Royal Arcanum. He has had his home in Ravenna now for sixty-eight years and done much to aid the development of the city and the prosperity of Portage county, and but few men have won so deservedly high a standing in the esteem and confidence of their fellow-citizens as DeWitt Clinton Coolman.

ON. ELI CONN, M. D., and state representative for Summit county. Ohio, is a native of Butler county, Pa., was born June 10, 1840, and is a son of Joseph and Elizabeth (Ferguson) Conn, also natives of the Keystone state, of combined Scotch and Irish extraction. The father died in his native state in 1854; and the mother in 1889, at the unusually great age of ninety-two years.

Dr. Conn, the subject of this memoir, was reared on the family homestead, and after receiving a due course of instruction in the district school, became himself a teacher and conducted a school in his native township in the winter of 1860-61, and was thus employed at the time of his enlistment, in 1861, in the One Hundred and Second Pennsylvania volunteer infantry, which was assigned to the Sixth corps of the army of the Potomac, and with which he remained until the close of the Rebellion, taking part in thirty-two regular battles and as many, or even more, skirmishes. After receiving an honorable discharge, he returned to his home and in the fall of the same year entered Baldwin university at Berea, Ohio, from which institution he graduated, in 1868, with distinction. He next attended the Cleveland (Ohio) Medical school for two terms, and then located for practice in his native Being a stanch republican at that county. time, he was elected by his fellow-citizens probate judge of Butler county, Pa., and filled the office for four years to the utmost satisfaction of his constituents. In 1880, the doctor came to Akron, where his professional abilities were at once recognized, and he was equally successful in securing a long list of patrons. Naturally, he attracted the attention of the local members of the republican party, and was elected health officer of the city of Akron, which position he held from 1882 until 1884. In 1895, he was elected to represent Summit county in the Ohio general assembly, but has modified his political views to some extent, and is now a silver republican.

In 1869, Dr. Conn was united in marriage with Miss Helen Kingsbury, of Medina, Ohio, the result of the union being four children, viz: Ellwood K., Maud J., Mary A., and Helen E. The family stand very high socially, and professionally the doctor holds a most prominent place before the public and in the esteem of his fellow-practitioners. He is connected with various medical associations, for whom he has prepared numerous essays on medical subjects, and has also contributed numerous similar articles to the journals published in the interest of the medical profession.

YRUS L. COX, a substantial farmer and citizen of Franklin township, Summit county, Ohio, was born in Green township, in the same county, July 5, 1850.

Christopher Cox, great-grandfather of subject, came from England prior to the Revolutionary war, bought an extensive tract of land in the wilderness of Washington county, Pa., and there and in Greene county, followed farming the remainder of his life. He married a Miss Rush, and by her became the father of the following-named children: Jacob, John, William, Moses, Ann, Lucinda and Matilda.

Jacob Cox, grandfather of subject, was born in Greene county, Pa., was reared a farmer, and there married Elizabeth Hardsock, who was born in Washington county, a daughter of ante-Revolutionary parents. To this union the following children were born, Nancy, wife of John Hann; Susan, wife of Joseph Grayble; Henry; Annie, wife of Isaac Horn; Noah; Christopher; Hıram; Kittie A., wife of Thelas Wheeler; Jacob; Andrew, and Mary A., wife of Joshua Martin. After marriage the parents settled in Washington county, where they passed the remainder of their days. politics the father was a whig and filled several township offices, and in religion, although not a member of the church, affiliated with and worshiped with the Baptists, and was free with his purse in contributing to the support of church and school. He died in August, 1861, honored alike in Greene and Washington counties, Pa., where all his active life passed away.

Christopher Cox, father of Cyrus L., the subject, was born in Greene county, Pa., November 30, 1820, and, like his ancestors, was After receiving a good reared to farming. common-school education he taught school for some months. In 1842 he walked from Pennsylvania to Summit county, Ohio, 130 miles, and settled in Green township. Here he married, April 4, 1844, Mary Chisnell, a native of Lancaster county, Pa., born in 1824, and a daughter of George and Mary Chisnell, and to this union have been born the following children: Cornelius (deceased), Hiram, Harriet, Henry Potters, Cyrus, John, Albert, Elizabeth (wife of Oliver Overholt), Edward, George, Harvey, Frank, and Clara (wife of Edward Huena, editor of the Barberton Leader... 1859 the parents moved from Green township. Here, at one time, Mr. Cox owned over 1,000 acres of good farm land, all of which he paid for with money earned through his personal exertions, with the exception, perhaps, of a few hundred dollars bequeathed him by his father. The greater part of this land Mr. Cox has divided among his children, but still retains a sufficient quantity to well provide for his own needs. In politics Mr. Cox was originally a whig, but became a member of the republican party on the formation of the latter, but simply gives voice to his political opinions at the polls, being by no means desirous of public office. He is closely identified with the Brethren church, in the faith of which his beloved wife died August 18, 1889, after a wedded life of over forty-five years.

Cyrus L. Cox, the subject of this sketch, took to himself a wife in Stark county, Ohio, on the 19th day of December, 1875. lady whom he married bore the maiden name of Lavina N. Smith, and was born in Stark county, May 15, 1855, a daughter of Samuel and Mary (Ruch) Smith, the former of whom is a native of Pennsylvania, born in 1829, and the latter was a native of Germany. Mr. and Mrs. Smith were married in Stark county, where the death of Mrs. Smith took place August 18, 1889, in the faith of the Lutheran church. Mr. Smith resides near Canal Fulton, Stark county, where he owns 900 acres of land and is largely engaged in stock dealing. He also attends the Lutheran church and is liberal in his contributions to its support. In politics he is a republican, but his time and attention are mostly devoted to his business affairs. His children were born in the following order: Levi, Lavina N., Caroline, Ellen, Amanda, John, Charles and Mary. The marriage of Cyrus L. Perry is desirous of entering a school of a more extended course of study, and, as his parents are people of abundant means, the wishes of the children will be observed.

Mr. Cox has been identified with Franklin township, Summit county, all his life, with the exception of about four years in Green township, Summit county. He owns a good farm of 125 acres, which he has improved with a modern farm house and barn. He also owns a sawmill and threshing machine, which occupy most of his time, while his farm work is done by hired help. In politics Mr. Cox is a strong republican, and cast his first presidential vote for the soldier president, Gen. U. S. Grant. In religion he and wife adhere to the Methodist Episcopal faith, the children are attendants at the Sunday school, and in the local church he has filled the office of steward. highly respected among his neighbors for his sobriety, industry and upright life, and his wife enjoys with himself the warm regard of the entire community.

E. COURTNEY, the accomplished photographic artist, of the Arcade building, Akron, Ohio, is a native of the city and was born March 15, 1858, a son of Robert A. and Lucy A. (Hannan) Courtney, natives respectively of Maryland and Ashland county, Ohio. The father, a mechanic of great skill, first came to Akron in 1842, and is still a resident of the city; the mother passed away some years since.

F. E. Courtney, the subject of this memoir, was reared and educated in Akron, and some time after quitting school went to Canton, Ohio, and there took lessons in his present art under his brother, Sherwin B. Courtney, who is one of the leading photographers of the state of Ohio. After passing nearly five years unner his able instruction and thoroughly learning the art in all its branches, F. E. Courtney went to South Carolina and for a year was in the employ of Mr. Anderson, a well-known photographer, and then returned to Ohio and spent another year with his brother at Canton. He then went to Medina, Ohio, and to Chester and Allentown, Pa., passing one year each in the latter two places, and then once more returned to Ohio and followed his vocation until 1888, when he came to Akron and succeeded to the business of Mr. Chandler, up to that time Akron's favoriteart-Mr. Courtney has now one of the finest studios in the northeast part of the state and executes every variety of work known to the photographic art, including portraiture, view and commercial and mechanical delineations, in all of which he is unexcelled. fully abreast of all the modern advances made in photography, being a member of both the State and the National Photographic associations, which are constantly making known to their members every new feature or improvement as fast as it is developed.

ANIEL E. CRANZ, M. D., one of the eminent physicians and surgeons of Akron, Ohio, occupies the rooms Nos. 3, 4 and 5, Odd Fellows' temple, where he has been in the active practice of medicine since July, 1893, but is now giving special attention to rectal and gynæcological surgery.

The doctor was born in Middletown, Holmes county, Ohio, October 31, 1854, to William and Mary (Drushel) Cranz, of German descent. The family settled in Summit county in 1863, and here the father died in 1895. The latter in early life was a merchant, and his later years were passed in farming; in politics he was a democrat, and in religion was a Lutheran. His children were born and named in the following order: Sophia, deceased; Pauline, wife of Hon. C. O. Hale, of Bath township; Frederick, an engineer, residing in Akron; Cornelia, of Bath township; Daniel E., the subject; Frances Lena, deceased; Kate, a teacher of German and French in the Athens (Ohio) State university; Lewis, a farmer of Bath township; Eugene F., also a farmer of the same place; Herbert, foreman of a brass foundry at Wadsworth, Ohio; Estella, wife of Amos Walters, of Bath township, and two children who died in early childhood.

Dr. Daniel E. Cranz passed his early days on his father's farm, received his elementary education in the district school, and then attended Buchtel college, at Akron. age of seventeen years he began the study of medicine under Dr. O. D. Childs, of Akron, and then for three years attended the Hahnemann Medical college, of Chicago, Ill., from which he graduated in 1877, and at once settled down to the active practice of his profession in Wadsworth, Ohio, where for sixteen years his ability and professional knowledge won recognition; but this field was not sufficiently extensive for the exercise of his energy and varied attainments as a surgeon, as well as physician, and in 1893, as already stated, he found a wider scope for his profession in Akron, where he has met with the most flattering success. He is a member of the State Homeopathic Medical society, of the Northeastern Ohio Medical society, and of the Summit county Clinical society; he is also one of the visiting surgeons of the Akron city hospital. Fraternally he is a member of Adoniram lodge, No. 517, F. & A. M., of Akron. Ohio.

Dr. Cranz was married at Wadsworth, Ohio, February 26, 1880, to Miss May E. Butts, to which union have been born two children—Pauline and Cornelia. The doctor and his wife are members of the Reformed church, although the Cranz family of former days were identified with the Lutheran church from its establishment-each first-born male child of the family becoming a minister in that church from the time of Martin Luther to the time of Daniel Cranz, grandfather of subject of this review, who was a pioneer minister of Holmes county, Ohio; and it may also be stated that one church of this faith in Germany had for over a hundred years a member of this The family is a very family as its minister. ancient one, and in the Black Forest of Germany hangs to-day an oil painting of one of the doctor's ancestors, who was a minister in the Lutheran church, and who lived in the tenth century.

HARLES H. CULVER, the well-known blacksmith and master mechanic of South Akron, Ohio, is a native of Seneca county, N. Y., was born March 16, 1848, and is a son of Charles H. and Harriet Culver, now residents of the city of Buffalo.

Charles H. Culver, the elder, was born in the Empire state in 1825, and was there married to Mrs. Harriet Smith, whose maiden name was Newberry, she being a niece of Lord Newberry, of England. To the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Culver the following children were born in the order named: Sarah, Clarissa, Charles H., Solon K., George H., Clarence B., Emmeline and Ida. The parents lived for many years in Seneca county, N. Y., but finally settled in Buffalo, where they are highly esteemed for their many excellent qualities, and worship at the Presbyterian church.

Charles H. Culver, the subject, passed his earlier years in Geneva, Ontario county, N. Y., and has always been an industrious student, being mostly self-educated. At Phelps, N. Y., in 1874, he built the first Monitor engine ever placed on wheels, and, in 1879, came to Ohio and for ten years was master mechanic of the Diebold Safe & Lock company in Canton, and later was master mechanic of the Canton Car company; he then lived in Cleveland two years, and in 1890 came to Akron, and was here employed as foreman of the D. F. Morgan Boiler company; he also, for a time, filled the position of master mechanic for Aultman, Miller & Co. For the past five years, however, he has been in business on his own account in South Akron, and, being extraordinarily skilled in his art, is meeting with the success his knowledge and industry deserve.

In politics Mr. Culver is a democrat and is a strong advocate of free silver. He is very popular with his party, and in the fall of 1896 was honored by an election to the office of justice of the peace, which position he fills with ability. Fraternally, he is a member of Adoniram lodge, No. 517, F. & A. M. Mr. Culver was united in marriage, in September, 1886. with Mrs. Elmira Snyder, whose maiden name was Bancroft, and both enjoy the esteem of a constantly widening circle of sincere friends.

In 1864 Mr. Culver made an effort to enlist in the Union army, but, owing to his youthful years, his application was refused. March 31, 1865, however, he succeeded in enlisting in company K, Eighth regiment, New York mounted volunteers, for three years, or during the war, was honorably discharged from the service June 27, 1865, and was mustered out at Alexandria, Va., the war having been brought to a successful close.

HERLOCK B. CUTHBERT, one of the most highly respected citizens of Brimfield township, Portage county, Ohio, and an ex-soldier and a very successful farmer, is a native of this county, and was born March 24, 1843, a son of James and Anna (Graham) Cuthbert.

James Cuthbert was born in Perth, Scotland, came to America when a mere boy, lived in New York a few years, where he was married to Miss Graham, a native of New York. and then came to Kent. Ohio. The result of this marriage was nine children, seven of whom are still living, viz.: William, of Long Branch, Cal.; James A., of Kent, Ohio; Harriet, widow of John Newham; Sarah, wife of G. W. Rouse; Sherlock B., the subject; Charles J., and Mary A., wife of M. M. Parkerson, of Corning, Iowa. Mr. Cuthbert lost his life partner in 1850, and his own death occurred in 1882, at the advanced age of eighty-three years. He was one of the oldest Odd Fellows in the state at the time of his death, had been a faithful member of the Congregational church for many years, and was an elder for some years prior to his demise.

Sherlock B. Cuthbert attended the schools of Kent until twelve years old, and then, until sixteen, worked out among the farmers of the neighborhood; he next apprenticed himself to a blacksmith, with the intention of learning the trade, but the outbreak of the Civil war made a change in his plan, and August 27, 1861, he enlisted in company A, First Ohio light artillery, and served within a few days of four years, being twice wounded-the first time at Shiloh, where he was struck on a finger (and he still preserves the bullet), and the second time at Stone River, where he was shot in the left thigh, December 31, 1863. No attempt will here be made to enumerate the many battles in which Mr. Cuthbert participated, and it will suffice to say that for meritorious conduct he was promoted to be corporal September 21, 1863; also that, on receiving his second wound, a few months later, he lay four days on the battle field without food or drink, and was then hauled thirty-one miles to hospital, where he lay four weeks; was then transported to Cincinnati, where he was confined in hospital four months, and then confined in hospital at Cleveland four months longer; finally, having recovered from his severe wound, he returned to the front and reenlisted in his same company as a veteran, received the usual thirty-day furlough, and served until receiving an honorable discharge, at Cleveland, July 31, 1865.

After returning from the war, Mr. Cuthbert served a year at Kent as baggage-master, and for two years afterward was employed by the railroad company. April 4, 1870, he married Miss Minerva Needham, daughter of Valorus and Mary L. (Smith) Needham, to which marriage have been born five children, viz: Charles H., Ellen J., Grace N., Mary and Perry E. Since 1870, Mr. Cuthbert has devoted his attention to farming, and is now one of the most prosperous agriculturists of his township. In politics a republican, Mr. Cuthbert his served his fellow-citizens as supervisor of Brimfield township one term, giving complete satisfaction to his constituents. He is a member of A. H. Day post, G. A. R., at Kent, and is one of the most highly honored and esteemed residents of Brimfield township and Portage county.

Valorous Needham, father of Mrs. Sherlock B. Cuthbert, was born in Hampshire county, Mass., March 29, 1806, and was reared a carpenter. In 1833, he came to Ohio, located in Brimfield township, Portage county, worked at his trade a number of years and then bought the farm now occupied by his son-in-law, Mr. Cuthbert. There he resided until 1865, when he retired to Kent. His marriage took place, in 1843, to Miss Mary L. Smith, daughter of Henry and Chloe (Chapman) Smith, and to this marriage were born six children, of whom two only are still living —Mrs. Cuthbert, who was born March 27.

1849, in Brimfield township, and Mrs. L. M. The deceased four were named Henry, who died in July, 1862, at the age of eighteen years; Chloe, who died in July, 1862, aged two and a half years; Harmer, who died at the age of eighteen years in May, 1865, and Ellen, who died in April, 1869, also aged eighteen years. The mother of this family died September 7, 1860, at the age of fortyfive years; the father, June 13, 1891, at the advanced age of eighty-five years, the wife in the faith of the Baptist church. Alvin Needham, father of Valorous, and grandfather of Mrs. Cuthbert, was also a native of Massachusetts, married Miss Abigail Wallbridge, and came to Brimfield township, Portage county, Ohio, in 1835, and here passed the remainder of his life in the noble pursuit of agriculture.

AFAYETTE DARROW, a prominent farmer of Stowe township, is a grandson of George Darrow, who was one of the original pioneers of Summit county, Ohio, and came with 'Squire Hudson on his second trip to Summit county in 1800. George Darrow married, October 17, 1801, Olive Gaylord. This was the first marriage in Summit county and was solemnized by 'Squire Hudson. They settled in what is now the southern part of Hudson, on Darrow street, and cleared up a good farm from the wilderness, where John Morris, who married a Darrow, now lives. George Darrow and wife were the parents of George, William, Daniel, David, Charlotte, Olive and Amanda.

Mr. Darrow died at the venerable age of eighty-two years, a much respected pioneer. He was an Indian figher, and after the shooting of Daniel Diver in Deerfield in the winter of 1806-7, George Darrow and Jonathan Williams joined in the pursuit of the slayer, the latter shooting and killing the Indian Nickshaw in the township of Richfield. In the war of 1812, a military company was formed in Hudson township, and George Darrow, as major of the battalion, was assigned the work of opening a road through to Camp Huron, near Sandusky, but before its completion, learning of the trouble which the American troops were meeting with at the hands of red skins in the vicinity of Detroit, he hurried forward to reinforce the garrison at Fort Huron, afterward being ordered to assist in the building of Fort Meigs. He was afterward colonel in the state militia, and was always called Col. Darrow.

William Darrow, son of above, and the father of Lafayette Darrow, was born on Darrow street, on his father's farm, received a common education and was reared a farmer. He married, December 15, 1841, Harriet Deacon, who was born in Hudson township, a daughter of Henry Deacon. Henry Deacon was born in Pennsylvania, of German descent; his wife was of Irish descent. Mr. Deacon was an early settler of Hudson township, became a substantial farmer, cleared up a large farm and was at one time the largest landowner in Hudson township. His children were Mary, Harriet, William (who went to Colorado and never returned), Betsey and Henry. Mr. Deacon was a good business man and lived to a ripe old age. William Darrow settled on the old Darrow homestead and there passed all his remaining days and was successful, owning 400 acres of land. His children were George, Lafayette, William and Mary. Mr. Darrow lived to be sixty-eight years old and died on his farm. He was a much respected, honorable and upright gentleman.

Lafayette Darrow was born on his grand-father's old homestead, July 21, 1851, received a common-school education, and has always been a farmer. He married, September 30, 1875, in Stowe township, Ellen J. Call, who was born September 6, 1852, in Darrowville, a daughter of Moses and Maria (Starr) Call. Mr. Darrow owns a good farm of 160 acres, which he has placed under first-class cultivation. He is independent in politics, and in religion is a member of the Congressional church. He is a gentleman of undoubted integrity of character, and stands deservedly high for his sterling worth.

ON. LEONIDAS S. EBRIGHT, M. D., of Akron, an ex-soldier of the late war, was born in Fairfield county, Ohio, near Royalton, September 25, 1844, and is a son of George and Rachael (Hathaway) Ebright. He is paternally descended from Pennsylvania-Germans, and maternally, through his grandfather, from Scotch ancestry.

George Ebright, father of the subject of this review, was a carriagemaker by trade and minister of the Methodist church for many years. He had a family of nine children and died in 1864, at the age of fifty-three years; his widow is now seventy-six years old.

Dr. L. S. Ebright was educated in the public schools of Fairfield county, and May 7, 1862, enlisted in company K, Eighty-fifth Ohio volunteer infantry, for the three months' service, and was, honorably discharged in September, 1862. In the winter of 1863-64 he taught school, and in April, 1864, he enlisted in the Eighthy-seventh Ohio infantry, but was soon transferred to company G, Eighty-eighth regiment, and served on detached duty until July 3, 1865, when he was mustered out, by special order, at Camp Chase, Ohio. After returning from the army he was employed for six months as clerk in a drug store in Wooster, Ohio, and in February, 1866, came to Akron entered the office of Drs. Bowen & Ebright (Dr. Ebright being an uncle), and with them read medicine until prepared to enter the Charity Hospital Medical college at Cleveland, from which he graduated in February, 1869, when he returned to Akron, where he practiced until the winter of 1871, and then took a course in the medical department of the college of Physicians & Surgeons of New York. He then resumed practice in Akron, which he continued until October, 1872, when he went to Germany and passed ten months in the hospitals of that country. After an absence of thirteen months abroad, Dr. Ebright again took up the active practice of medicine in Akron, but for many years devoted all the time he could spare from his professional duties to fraternal and benevolent matters, being a member of the F. & A. M. and K. of P. For four years he was grand treasurer and one year grand regent of the grand council of Ohio, R. A., and was three times representative to the supreme council from this body; was grand commander of the grand council of A. L. of H., and for eight years was a member of the supreme body of of that order; he was surgeon of battery B, O. N. G., for five years, and for five years, also, was surgeon of the German Guards. He was also appointed by Gov. McKinley surgeongeneral on the governor's staff, with the rank of brigadier-general, and held the office four years. As a republican he has been very popular, and in the fall of 1879 was elected to represent Summit county in the lower house of the state legislature. For twenty years he has been a member of the county central republican committee, and during that time has made more speeches in the cause of the republican party than any man in the county. He was the first secretary of the Northeastern Medical society, and in 1896 retired from the presidency of the same; he served a long time as health officer of Akron, and for ten years has been physician to the Children's home. He is president of the county Agricultural society and also a director in the Hill Sewer Pipe company. He is a member of Buckley post, No. 12, G. A. R., and has likewise been a member of the board of physicians of the Akron city hospital for many years. He has a good knowledge of the German language as well as of the English, and in his political canvasses has made many speeches in the former tongue, and has been the associate and compeer of such able orators as McKinley, Tom Reed, Judge West, Ben Butterworth, Boutelle, and others, and is, in fact, one of the representative leaders of the republican party. In the memorable campaign of 1896 Dr. Ebright did effective work for the party in Ohio, Kentucky, city of Chicago, and Michigan, and as a mark of confidence and the esteem with which he is held by the leaders of the party he was appointed, by President McKinley, postmaster of Akron, Ohio, his commission bearing date of July 27, 1897.

Dr. Ebright was united in marriage, in 1883, to Miss Julia Bissell, of Sharon, Medina county, Ohio, which union has been blessed with two children—Ruth B. and Mary R. The doctor is a frank, outspoken gentleman, is witty, apt and genial. He is quick at repartee on the stump and in the social circle, and, as may well be inferred from the above record, has host of friends in Akron and Summit county.

EORGE L. DARROW, one of the substantial farmers of Stowe township, Summit county, Ohio, is now living on the old Darrow homestead, where he was born August 19, 1856. His remote ancestors came from Scotland, and settled in Connecticut some time in 1600, at New London.

Nathaniel Darrow, great-great-grandfather of George L., was born in New London, Conn., and married Rachael Wilcox, of English descent. Their children were Nathaniel, Isaac, James, George and David, whose descendants are scattered throughout the United States.

George Darrow, son of above and great-grandfather of subject, was born September 8, 1747, and settled when a young man in Lebanon, New York state, married Eunice Meacham, and reared a family of six children (all of whom lived and had families of their own), viz: Celia, born March 12, 1774; Joseph, March 27, 1775; George, October 7, 1778; David, March 13, 1782; James, May 18, 1784, and Sallie, June 19, 1787. In 1806, George Darrow came with his family to Stowe township, Summit county, Ohio, then all in the woods. He was one of the original pioneers, but died, five years after settling, in 1811.

Joseph Darrow, son of above, and grandfather of subject, born March 27, 1775, came to Ohio, when a single man with 'Squire Hudson as a surveyor, was one of the party who landed at the mouth of the Cuyahoga river, river 1799, and he was the surveyor who laid out the land for 'Squire Hudson. Mr. Darrow married, in Northampton township, April 18, 1803, Sallie Prior, who was born October 28, 1781, a daughter of Simeon and Catherine (Wright) Prior, and they settled on the farm where our subject now lives. The Priors were of English descent, and of New England ancestry, and were pioneers of Summit county. Simeon Prior married, January 1, 1781, in New England, and settled in Northampton township. Joseph Darrow's name appears with that of his brother George in the list of voters of the first election of town officers held at Hudson, Ohio, April 5, 1802, in the first log house built in Summit county. This was built by 'Squire David Hudson, in 1799, in the fall, 'Squire Hudson being one of the original proprietors of Hudson township, which was the land of the Connecticut company. 'Squire Hudson came out from Goshen, Conn., to Cleveland, and from there up the Cuyahoga river to Boston, near the southwest corner of Hudson township. He had with him a company of men, and Joseph Darrow, the surveyor, and they cleared ten acres of land when he surveyed the township. The Darrows were no doubt among the earliest pioneers of this county. Joseph Darrow settled in the woods and cleared up the farm where our subject now lives, and he surveyed much of the land in this county, including the first road from Hudson to Canton.

Joseph Darrow and wife were the parents of the following children, all born in Stowe township: Polly, born February 3, 1805; Lyman, September 3, 1806; Abbie, November 24, 1808; Stephen, March 31, 1810; Julia, December 10, 1811; Sarah A., July 19, 1813; Caroline, January 1, 1815, Charles, September, 19, 1816; Seth, November 30, 1818; Catherine, January 22, 1821; Norman, October 14, 1822; Newry C., October 27, 1824; Clarissa, February 15, 1827.

Joseph Darrow was a democrat in politics, and died November 13, 1856, a venerable man of eighty-one years. He was a justice of the peace many years and much respected. He was a hunter and trapper in early days, for his own pleasure and the benefit of his family. He was one of the early members of the Masonic lodge, at Hudson, Ohio, and was liberal in religion, holding to the Universalists' belief. He was a man of sterling worth and high character.

Charles Darrow, son of above and father of George L. Darrow, was born September 19, 1816, on the farm where the latter now lives, and the first child born in the frame house still occupied by our subject and built in 1815-1816. He received a good education for his day in the old pioneer school-house and was always a farmer. He married, January 27, 1841, Sabra Wilcox, who was born July 2, 1818, a daughter of Nathan Wilcox. After marriage Mr. Darrow and wife settled on the old Darrow homestead, and here they passed all their remaining days. Both were members of the Methodist church, and in politics he was a republican. He was a strong Union man and had a son in the Civil war—Norman, a private in company G, One Hundred and Fifteenth regiment, Ohio volunteer infantry, who died of sickness at Camp Chase, Ohio, October 20, 1862. Mr. Darrow owned a good farm of 160 acres and was a substantial and respected man.

George L. Darrow received a good education in the public schools and became a farmer, and also learned the carpenter's trade. He married, September 3, 1876, in Darrowville, Emma R. Appleton, who was born July 28, 1858, in Northfield, Summit county, Ohio, a daughter of Wesley and Amanda (Norton) Appleton. Wesley Appleton was a soldier in the Civil war and was among the missing. the church of the Immaculate Conception at Ravenna, Ohio, was born in county Kilkenny, Ireland, October 18, 1860, and is a son of Patrick and Catherine Farrell, the former of whom died in 1879. The six children born to these parents were named Mary, Michael (deceased), James J., Margaret, Anastasia and John. The mother and three of the surviving children still reside in Ireland, Anastasia being housekeeper for her brother, the Rev. James J., our subject.

Rev. James J. Farrell received his elementary education in the national schools of Ireland and his literary and philosophical courses were taken at Saint Kiernan's college in Kilkenny. In 1882 he came to the United States and at once entered upon his theological studies at Saint Mary's academy in Cleveland, Ohio, where he remained under discipline for In 1885 he was ordained priest three years. by the Rt. Rev. Richard Gilmour, bishop of Cleveland (now deceased), and said his first mass in the Catholic church at Willoughby, His first appointment was to the pastorate of St. Patrick's church at Elmore, Ottawa county, Ohio, which he held until the fall of 1885, where he faithfully ministered to the spiritual wants of a small congregation and to those of the missions at Oak Harbor, Genoa and Woodville until October, 1885, when he was transferred to Hudson, Ohio, and given the pastorate of Saint Mary's congregation, with whom he remained four years, having also under his care the missions of Cuvahoga Falls and Peninsula, Ohio. About this time the Catholies of Ravenna were deprived of their beloved pastor, the Rev. John T. Cahill, and the good and faithful service of Father Farrell being fully recognized, he was selected by the bishop as a fitting successor to the late brilliant and eloquent divine. In September, 1889, Father Farrell came to Ravenna, and has here performed his duties with untiring zeal up to the present day, and much is due to him for the present flourishing condition of the congregation of the Immaculate Conception. This consists of about 125 families, or 500 members, and supports two schools-primary and grammar, respectively-which are conducted by the Dominican sisters of Jersey City, N. J., three of the society being sent to Ravenna for the purpose named. The fine church edifice is located at the corner of Main and Sycamore streets, and stands on a lot of 180 feet frontage on Main by a depth of 220 feet on Sycamore street, and the other property of the congregation comprises the parsonage and a residence for the sisters.

Father Farrell is a profound student and has a well-stocked library; he is a delightful conversationalist, an eloquent pulpit orator, and, above all, a devout priest and servant of his church, and few can estimate the immense amount of arduous labor performed by him in promoting the spiritual welfare of his charge, who, indeed, love him as a father. As a relaxation from his onerous duties, in part, and the recuperation of his health, and in part to re-visit his beloved mother and family, Father Farrell made a trip to Ireland in the summer of 1896, and while there availed himself of visiting many points of interest in the Emerald isle, beside his old home. Since his return he has renewed his ministerial duties with increased vigor, being heartily welcomed by his people.

IRAM SILAS FALOR, a well-known citizen of Coventry township, Summit county, Ohio, was born on the farm on which he now lives, March 22, 1829, and descends from one of the old pioneer families of the county, of German origin.

Adam Fehler, as the name was originally spelled, was the grandfather of subject, was a native of Germany, and was the founder of the present Falor family in Ohio. On coming to America he first located in Pennsylvania, resided in Reading a few years, and then came to Ohio. Here he lived in Stark county some time, then bought a farm near Wolf Lodge, now within the corporation of the city of Akron, but died a number of years ago in New Portage, Summit county.

George Adam Falor, son of Adam Fehler, and father of Hiram Silas, the subject, was born in Lower Smithville, Northampton county, Pa., July 17, 1798, and in 1809 was brought to Ohio by his parents, and after having lived in Stark county about five years, located on what was later known as the Thornton farm, and which now constitutes a populous part of the city of Akron. mained with his father until he was twentyfive years of age, and then bought from the government what is now the well known Falor farm of eighty-two acres in Coventry township, at $1.50 per acre, which he cultivated many years, besides following his trade of stonemason. George A. Falor was three times married—his wives being sisters, and named respectively, Nancy McCoy, Rachel McCoy, and Mrs. Jane (McCoy) Wilson. To the first marriage were born four children, viz: Milo J., deceased; James M., deceased; Lucinda, now Mrs. John Gottwalt, and Hiram S., the subject. To the second marriage were born George W., now deceased; Oliver P.; Mary A., now Mrs. J. A. Hiram S. Falor, the subject, received a sound common-school education and early learned the trade of harnessmaker, a business he conducted for fifteen years with unqualified success in Akron. In 1860 he went to California and for a time clerked in a wholesale store in San Francisco: worked for a brief period in the mines, and then established the pioneer harness shop in Virginia City, Nev. In 1861 he organized the City guards, and, as captain of this company, tendered its services to the government at the outbreak of the Rebellion, but, for the lack of means of transportation at that time, the tender was declined. In 1863 Capt. Falor returned to Akron, and five years later removed to his present farm, of which mention has already been made, and which now comprises eleven acres just outside the corporation limits of Akron, and also of sixty-three town or building lots.

Capt. Falor has ever been a consistent republican and has faithfully and ably filled many offices of honor and trust, political and otherwise. For several years he was foreman of one of Akron's pioneer fire companies; was deputy village marshal two years; was secretary of the Summit county Agricultural society two years, and for two years its assistant secretary; he was a messenger in the office of State Treasurer Joseph Turney, at Columbus, from 1880 to 1884, and was a member of the police force in charge of Music Hall during the Ohio Centennial exposition of 1888; was census enumerator for Coventry township in 1890, and was a justice of the peace from 1893 to 1896. Capt. Falor was first married, July 4, 1854, to Miss Bertha E. Agard, who bore him three children, viz: Benjamin Ştanton, who was born August 21, 1855, and died October 30, 1874; Claude Emerson, who was born December 23, 1856, served in the regular army fourteen years, seven months and sixteen days, and was honorably discharged for disability; and Honora N., who was born January 18, 1859, and died January 27, 1865. Mrs. Bertha E. Falor died January 4, 1873, an ardent and consistent member of the Baptist church, and July 16, 1873, Capt. Falor married Mrs. Phebe A. Lutz, of Westfield, Medina county, Ohio, a daughter of Martin and Fanny Wright, and the mother of two children by her first husband-Minnie, who died May 1, 1881, and Sylvester E. Lutz. To this second marriage of Capt. Falor have also been born two children-Hiram Garcelon, August 12, 1879, and Phebe Fanny, March 6, 1881. Mr. and Mrs. Falor are members of the Main street (Akron) Methodist Episcopal church, of which the captain is a trustee, and toward the erection of which edifice he was a liberal contributor. He possesses to an unusual extent the esteem and confidence of his fellow-citizens and is universally recognized as one of the most public-spirited and useful members of the community in which he has so long had his being.

Philip Flath, father of subject, was also a merchant tailor in his younger manhood, but later engaged largely in farming. He lost his wife in 1861, and his own death occurred in Germany in 1882, at the advanced age of more than eighty-two years. Both were devoted members of the Lutheran church. The paternal grandfather of Mr. Flath was a wealthy farmer, had born to him six sons and one daughter by two marriages, and died at the age of eighty years; the maternal grandfather was a school-teacher.

Peter Flath was educated in Germany and learned his trade under the instruction of his father. At the age of nineteen years he came to the United States, and after working at his trade six weeks in New York city, came to Ohio, and for six months worked in Portsmouth, Scioto county; he then went back to the Empire state, and for nearly four years worked in Rochester; thence he came west again and was employed in Chicago, Ill., until 1854, whence he returned to New York city, remained there seven or eight months, and then once more returned to Ohio and located in Cleveland.

ILLIAM KEAN FOLTZ, M. D., a distinguished physician and surgeon of Akron, Ohio, was born in Juniata county, Pa., a son of Moses and Sarah (Kean) Foltz, February 15, 1829.

Dietrich Foltz, paternal grandfather of the doctor, was a native of Dauphin county, Pa., but whether of German or Swiss descent is unknown, but it is certain that his ancestors settled in America prior to the war of the Revolution. Dietrich was a wagonmaker by trade, but in later life bought a farm in Juniata county, on which he passed the remainder of his life. Those of his children who grew to maturity were named Moses, George, Betsy (Mrs. Harris), Samuel, Benjamin, John, Joseph and Kebecca.

Moses Foltz, eldest son of Dietrich and father of Dr. Foltz, was born in Juniata county, learned wagonmaking from his father, and married Sarah Kean, a daughter of William Kean, of Scotch-Irish descent, and also a native of Juniata county. To this marriage were born ten children, of whom eight grew to maturity, viz: William K., Joseph M., John K., Hiram H., Abner E., Heber M., Caroline (Mrs. Frank B. Clark), and George K. In 1831 Moses Foltz came to Ohio, located in Wooster, Wayne county, and for four or five years followed wagonmaking and then engaged in carpenter work. Nearly every winter, however, from 1834, he taught a term of school, as the inclement weather precluded his working as a carpenter, and this course of life he followed until his death, which occurred in Smithville, Wayne county, in 1864, at the age of fiftyseven years, a highly respected citizen.

William Kean Foltz, our subject, was reared in Wayne county, Ohio, from the age of two years, and was educated at Heidelberg college. At the age of eighteen years he began the study of medicine, entering the office of Dr. C. H. Stauber, of Wooster, and in February, 1869, was graduated from the Eclectic Medical college, of Cincinnati, where he had finished his medical education. He had previously practiced a year in Lafayette, Medina county, and then in Sharon Center ten years, following which he had a lucrative practice of ten years in Ashland, Ohio. In 1877 Dr. Foltz came to Akron, where he has ever since met with the most flattering success, standing now in the front rank of his profession. He is an honored and valued member the Ohio State Eclectic Medical society and of the National Eclectic Medical association; also of the Ohio Academy of Science and the Akron Scientific club—In politics he is a stanch republican.

Dr. Foltz was united in marriage May 12, 1856, with Miss Carrie Lehman, daughter of John and Nancy (Bear) Lehman, of Wayne township, Wayne county, Ohio, and this happy union has been blessed with one child, Kent O., a prominent oculist and aurist.

He then worked at his trade in Wooster and in Medina county a few months, and in March, 1866, came to Akron, followed his trade, more or less, until 1885, and then filled the position of superintendent of the Akron Transfer line for a year. In 1887 he was in the directory business at Zanesville, Ohio. and in 1888 was appointed canal collector for the port of Akron, which position he filled in a most satisfactory manner for six years. In 1894 and 1895 he was in the employ of the Foltz Jewelry company of Cleveland, and was also connected with the same company in Akron during 1895–96. As a republican he served as a member of the Akron school board four years, and it was during his incumbency of this office that the principal school-houses of Akron were erected.

Mr. Foltz was joined in wedlock in March, 1862, with Miss Cynthia B. Hughes, daughter of William and Mary (Flora) Hughes, of Wooster, Ohio, the marriage resulting in the birth of three children—William, who died in infancy; Minnie (the wife of Frederick W. Davis), and Harry. Mr. and Mrs. Foltz are members of the Disciples' church, and their social standing is very pleasant, as they have a large circle of estimable friends, by whom they are very highly respected.

RS. MARY FOSDICK, of Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio, is the proprietress of one of the most attractive summer resorts in northern Ohio, situated at the Big Falls of the Cuvahoga river, at the cave known as the "Old Maid's Kitchen," and has for the past twenty-two years kept a famous hostelry, well known to Cleveland and Akron people. She is the widow of David Fosdick, who was born in New York city, came to Ohio when a young man, located at the present place in 1874, and built the hotel, it being one of the first summer resorts on the Cuyahoga river. Mr. Fosdick died in 1893 and Mrs. Fosdick has since managed the hotel. They were the parents of four children, Marion, Myrtle, Arthur, and George (deceased, aged thirty-three years). falls at a very rapid descent through a very rocky and picturesque glen, which it has worn through the solid rock to the depth of several hundred feet during countless ages of time. The rugged sides of this deep glen are covered with a great variety of native forest trees, and it is one of the most beautiful places in the whole west. In early times, this locality was a famous hiding place for the Indians and early hunters, and before the time of Boquet's expeditions, the savages of the Cuyahoga secreted many white prisoners in its rocky nooks. The "Old Maid's Kitchen" is formed by the falling of immense blocks of sandstone from the walls of the glen, and well illustrates the powerful forces of nature.

Mrs Fosdick is a lady of remarkable energy and strength of character and well calculated to manage her hotel, which is kept in the best of style. She caters only to the most respectable people, and many come to this interesting place from all parts of the United States and other countries. Mrs. Fosdick is a notable cook and the fame of her viands has spread far and wide. She does her own cooking and concocts the daintiest of dishes, and her broiled chicken should be eaten to be appreciated.

EORGE K. FOLTZ, the leading jeweler and optician of Akron, was born in Madisonburg, Wayne county, Ohio, December 14, 1849, and is a son of Moses and Sarah (Kean) Foltz, of whom mention is made in the biography of Dr. William Kean Foltz, on a preceding page.

George K. Foltz received a fair education in the public schools of Wayne county, which he attended until fourteen years of age, when, in 1864, he entered the Beacon office in Akron and was a "printer's devil" for about six months. August 14, 1865, he began an apprenticeship at the jewelry business in the store of H. S. Abbey, served out the stipulated term, and remained as a journeyman until the death of Mr. Abbey, in 1872; later he continued in the employ of his former preceptor's son, Henry E. Abbey, who subsequently became one of the most famous theatrical and operatic managers in the country. In 1875 Mr. Foltz formed a partnership with W. J. Frank in the jewelry business, under the firm name of Foltz & Frank, at No. 118 Howard street, and in the spring of 1876 this concern was consolidated with Wait, Dewey & Co. In the spring of 1877 Foltz & Frank absorbed the entire business and continued under the latter name until 1891, when Mr. Foltz disposed of his interest in the concern to Mr. Frank and went to Georgia, where he embarked in the same line of business at Thomasville, and conducted a prosperous trade from January 5, 1891, until February 12, 1892, when he had the misfortune to lose his wife. He then returned to Ohio and was engaged in business alone at Cleveland from 1892 to June, 1895, when he returned to Akron and became one of the incorporators of the Foltz company, for the purpose of conducting business as jewelers and opticians, and opened trade in the same room in which he had begun his apprenticeship thirty years previously, and of this company Mr. Foltz was the manager for two July 15, 1897, Mr. Foltz opened his present place of business, at 162 South Main street, under the firm name of the Foltz & Ewart company, jewelers, opticians and dealers in artists' supplies.

The marriage of Mr. Foltz took place October 27, 1874, to Miss Katie Gintz, daughter of Kasimer and Susan (Varrick) Gintz, of Akron, of English and German descent—Varrick street, New York city, being named after one of her ancestors. The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Foltz has been blessed with one child—Adelaide Louise. Mr. Foltz attends the Disciples' church, to the support of which he contributes liberally, and in politics he is a republican. The Foltz family, as may readily be supposed, are highly respected in the social circles of Akron.

In politics Mr. Foote is a democrat, and has served as treasurer of Kent and Franklin township two terms, as member of the school board two terms-being president one year and treasurer one year-and has also served as a member of the city council. In November, 1889, Mr. Foote was appointed a member of the Ohio Soldiers' Relief Commission, and still holds this position. Mr. Foote is respected as a gentleman of the strictest integrity, and his long business career is a proof that this respect is well founded.

LMER E. FRANCE, postmaster of Kent, Ohio, and a leading dry-goods merchant, was born in Portage county, April 22, 1863, a son of James and Martha (Littlewood) France, natives of England, who came to the United States early in the 'fifties, and later purchased a farm in Franklin township.

tington, W. Va., where for a time he was in the dry-goods trade, then came to Kent, where he dealt in real estate for some time and then engaged in the dry-goods business, in which he continued until 1883, when he retired from business in the broader sense of the word, attending only to his limited duties as vice-president of the City bank, of which he was one of the founders. His wife, who was born in 1819, passed away on the 15th day of April, 1893, and his own health beginning to fail, he made a visit to his daughter Emily, in Denver, Colo., where he suddenly expired January 8, 1894. He was a man of excellent judgment and decided views, but liberal and generous both in mind and purse; he was not a member of any religious denomination, but was strictly moral and led an unimpeachable life; in politics he had been a republican until the nomination of Horace Greeley for the presidency by the democrats in 1872, from which time forward he acted with the democracy. He had accumulated considerable business and residence property, which he divided between the three children who grew to maturity of the five that were born to him, these three being Rhoda, born in England, and wife of William McKeon, of Kent; Emily, wife of F. C. Kendrick, of Denver, Colo., and Elmer E., whose name opens this biographical sketch.

Elmer E. France was educated in the public schools of Kent, and at Eastman's Business college in Ponghkeepsie, N. Y., and began his business life as an assistant to his father in his dry-goods store, thoroughly learning the business. In 1883, with his sister, Emily, he succeeded his father in the business, and in 1886 became sole proprietor, and has now the finest and the largest and best selected stock of goods in his line in Portage county. He is an excellent business man, affable and obliging, just in his dealings, and knows how to retain the trade of a patron to whom he has an opportunity of once making a sale.

Mr. France was most happily united in wedlock, August 4, 1886, with Miss Cora M. Haymaker, daughter of O. F. Haymaker, and this union has been blessed with two children, viz: Carl H., born June 8, 1887, and Marjorie, born in Jannary, 1891. In politics Mr. France for twenty years has been active in the ranks of the democracy, and April 1, 1896, was appointed postmaster of Kent, which office he has filled with his usual business ability and to the entire satisfaction of the public. Fraternally he is a royal arch Mason, is an Odd Fellow and a Knight of Pythias, and as a citizen and business man bears an unimpeached and respected name.

Capt. Feederle, it will be seen, has filled many positions of responsibility and trust, has always enjoyed, and still does enjoy, the entire confidence of his fellow-citizens, and well deserves the high esteem in which he is universally held.

ZRA FOWLER, justice of the peace at Kent, was born in Portage county, Ohio, May 7, 1840, a son of Abel and Ruth (Manning) Fowler, natives of Connecticut and early settlers in the Buckeye state.

In the early part of the seventeenth century three brothers, William, Samuel and John Fowler, came from England, the land of their nativity, and settled in New England. Of these, William Fowler, the paternal ancestor of our subject, built a mill at Milford, Conn.,

and the site is still occupied by a building erected for the same purpose and the seventh in the order of construction. It bears the inscription "Ye Fowler's Mill," and is still operated by William Fowler & Son-descendants of the original immigrant, William. In the tower of the bridge which spans the little Wepowege river at that point is a burrstone taken from the first mill erected there, and is now used as a seat. Many of the descendants of the immigrant William reached distinction in the various walks of life, and among them was Jonathan Fowler, the famous Baptist divine of Providence, R. I. The parents of Ezra Fowler, the subject, were married in Milford, Conn., where the father was a merchant, and shortly afterward came to Ohio. They first located at Poland, then moved to Randolph, Portage county, where the father kept store and also bought furs, next moved to a farm at Charlestown, and finally settled in Ravenna, where he conducted a grocery store until his death, in 1854, at the age of fifty-six years; his widow survived him until 1885, when she died at the age of eighty-three. Mr. Fowler was a man of considerable influence in his day and had taken great interest in military affairs, being at one time colonel of a rifle regiment. To him and wife were born ten children, of whom eight grew to maturity. Of these, William was killed by the overturning of a mail coach between Allegheny and Cumberland, Pa.; Amanda was married to Frederick Caris, and is now deceased: Caroline is the wife of R. E. Patterson, of Garrettsville; Mary was the wife of Rufus Thomas and died at Warren, Ohio; Manning, who was a major in the One Hundred and Fifty-first Ohio volunteers, died at Kokomo, Ind.; Nancy was the wife of W. H. Gibson, and died in Youngstown, Ohio; Lucy is the wife of William Collins, a resident of Parsons, Kan., and Ezra is the subject of this memoir.

Ezra Fowler was four years old when his parents moved to Ravenna, and there he attended school until 1854, when he went to Warren, and lived with his sister Mary, and until 1857 attended the school of that town. For three years he drove stage between Ravenna and Newton Falls, then learned the trade of carriage trimmer in Ravenna, and afterward was in the grocery business for a short time! Early in 1862 he enlisted in company D, Seventy-second Ohio volunteer infantry, took part in the battle of Shiloh, and was then detailed as courier to Gen. R. P. Buckland, for whom he was also private secretary, and filled out a total service of three years. After the war he was employed as a clerk in a drygoods store in Fremont, Ohio, next at Garrettsville, next in driving a saleswagon, with Warren as his headquarters, and in 1876 conducted the Poe House in Ravenna; in 1878 he came to Kent, and since has been engaged in the hotel business.

November 12, 1869, Mr. Fowler was united in marriage with Miss Kate D. Taylor, who was born in Palmyra, Ohio, July 30, 1851, a daughter of Salmon and Mary A. (Calkins) Mr. Taylor was a well-known grocer of Ravenna and died in that city in September, 1862, at the age of fifty-four years, where, also, his widow died April 5, 1894. were the parents of two children—Walter B., of Ravenna, and Mrs, Fowler. The latter was but three years of age when her parents settled in Ravenna; she was educated in the public schools and was a very apt scholar, became a teacher of music and also a church organist, and is to-day a highly accomplished and amiable lady and an ornament to the social circles Two children have blessed the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Fowler, viz: Mary Addie and Elizabeth L, the latter the wife of John Arighi, of Kent.

Mr. Fowler in politics was a democrat until 1896, since which time he has been an ardent republican; is a member of the board of education, and in April, 1896, was elected a justice of the peace, which office he has filled with impartiality and to the entire satisfaction to the public and credit to himself up to the present hour.

🗩 RUMAN L. FIRESTONE.—As a commercial and manufacturing center, Akron commands a position which essentially calls for hotel accommodations of good capacity and able management. In this regard the subject of this sketch will be found capable of maintaining a reputation equal to any other in the possession of a hotel that is unsurpassed in its accommodations. support of this assertion, it is only necessary to visit the Windsor hotel, of which he is proprietor, to find it is not only one of the best hotels in northeastern Ohio, but of the entire state as well, in all that pertains to a strictly first-class hostelry. Ever since it has passed into the hands of Mr. Firestone, the Windsor, has been regarded as not only one of the most pleasant and convenient resorts for the traveling public, but one of the most homelike and comfortable hotels in this or the adjacent states.

Mr. Firestone descends from one of those sturdy German pioneers who were so prominent in the early settlements of eastern Pennsylvania. Matthias Firestone, the great-grandfather of our subject, came to America about 1750, and served in the war of the Revolution and subsequently settled in eastern Pennsylvania. Jacob, his son and grandfather of our subject, settled in Maryland after he grew to manhood, locating in Frederick county, where he died at the age of fifty-five. He was a farmer by occupation, served as a soldier in the war of 1812, and was in Fort McHenry when it was bombarded by the British. married Mary Holt, a native of Maryland, and their family consisted of six sons. George W., the fifth son and the father of Mr. Firestone, was born on the homestead in Frederick county, Md., in 1811. He learned the millwright trade, and in 1835 settled in Wayne county, Ohio, where he followed his business until he was seventy years of age, erecting and repairing mills throughout the counties of Wayne, Stark, Homes and Ashland. He died at Fredericksburg, Ohio, in 1891, his wife having died in 1858. This lady bore the maiden name of Jane Hutchison, and was a daughter of James Hutchison, a native of Connecticut, who came to Ohio shortly after the war of By this marriage the following children were born, Truman L., Eugene T., and Mary I., wife of George Smith.

Truman L. Firestone was born January 26, 1846, at Fredericksburg, Ohio. After the death of his mother he went to live with his uncle, David Firestone, in Licking county, where he was raised upon his farm, receiving a common-school education; and where he remained until June 4, 1863, when he enlisted in company E, One Hundred and Twentyninth Ohio volunteer infantry, for six months, and served until March 4, 1864. Returning home, he again enlisted, April 4, 1864, in company H, One Hundred and Second Ohio volunteer infantry, and served until his regiment was mustered out in 1865, when he was transferred to the One Hundred and Eighty-ninth Ohio volunteer infantry, and was stationed at Huntsville, Ala., and finally discharged in July, 1865. He participated in the following Cumberland Gap, Walker's engagements: Ford, and the three engagements at Decatur, After the close of the war Mr. Firestone located at Fredericksburg, Ohio, and learned the trade of a wood turner, serving an apprenticeship of two years. In 1869 he located in Akron and was engaged at his trade and various occupations until 1882, when he returned to Fredericksburg and engaged in the planing-mill business for nine years. In 1890 he went to Cleveland, where he remained for two years, working for the Gobielle Pattern company and C. E. Taft company; at the expiration of this time he came to Akron and engaged in the planing-mill business, which he conducted until 1896, when he purchased the Windsor botel. Politically he is a republican, and is a member of E. M. Mast post, No. 302, G. A. R., of Fredericksburg, Ohio.

Mr. Firestone was married in May, 1874, to Miss Nellie, daughter of Peter and Elizabeth (DeLashmutt) Hanson, and by this marriage they have had two sons—Cloyd W. (deceased) and George Forest.

By careful management and much self-denial, he has been able to add seventy-two acres to his holding, and this farm is now improved with new, modern, up-to-date buildings. Here Mr. Frank still makes his home, but some five years since relinquished active farming and engaged in business in Copley; as previously stated. children are named Jennie, who was born Tebruary 12, 1860, was first married to Washington Jones, and, after his death, to A. Hale, a jeweler of Akron, and Fiena, born December 10, 1871, and now the wife of E. Brunskill, a butcher by trade, also of Akron. Mr. Frank is a democrat in politics and cast his first presidential vote for James K. Polk, and he and his wife are members of the German Reformed church. He has been a hard-working, upright man, has made his own fortune, and is now considered to be one of the substantial citizens of Summit county. He enjoys the confidence and respect of all who know him, and his well-spent life fully entitles him to the esteem in which he is held.

AXWELL G. GARRISON, county treasurer of Portage county, Ohio, was born in Franklin township, this county, April 12, 1851, and is a son of James and Hannah (Walker) Garrison, the former of whom was born in Pennsylvania, and the latter in Summit county, Ohio, and were the parents of six children, viz: William J., who died in the army; Charles A., a veterinary surgeon of Ravenna; Alice, wife of William J. Grubb, of Kent, Ohio; Frances, married to H. D. Minnick, of Wellsville, Ohio; Maxwell G., the subject, and Edward F., a physician, who died of diphtheria at Suffield, Portage county.

Joseph Garrison, paternal grandfather of Maxwell G., was a native of Pennsylvania, was an early settler of Portage county, Ohio, was the father of fourteen children, was a farmer, and died at about the age of sixty years. William Walker, maternal grandfather of subject, was born in Virginia, was quite young when brought to Ohio by his parents, who settled in Stowe township, Summit county, where he was reared a farmer, was married, and died between sixty and seventy years of age.

James Garrison, father of Maxwell G. Garrison, was a child when brought to Ohio by his parents, who settled in Deerfield township, Portage county, where he was reared to manhood. After reaching his majority he removed to Stowe township, Summit county, where he was married, but later returned to Portage county and settled in Franklin township, and here died December 26, 1872, at the age of fifty-nine years, an elder in the Disciples' church at Kent; his widow is a resident of Kent, is a member of the same church, and is highly respected by all who know her.

Maxwell G. Garrison, whose name opens this biography, was reared on his father's farm in Franklin township, and received his rudimentary education in the district schools. He next attended the high school at Hudson, and later entered Hiram college. He was an apt scholar, and was noted for his rapid progress in his studies. He early embraced the political faith of the republican party, became very popular with its members, was early elected city treasurer of Kent, and afterward treasurer of Franklin township, serving for a number of years to the entire satisfaction of the public, and, consequently, with credit to himself.

Mr. Garrison began the study of law in the office of D. L. Rockwell, a prominent attorney of Kent, and was admitted to the bar in 1876. He was shortly afterward elected city solicitor of Kent, and continued in the active practice, with marked success, in that city, until 1881, when, on the organization of the City bank, he entered that institution as its cashier, held the position until 1894, when, having been elected county treasurer, he removed to Ravenna and entered upon the duties of his office. To this responsible office he was re-elected in the fill of 1895, and is now filling his second term. This latter fact is in itself ample evidence that the citizens of Portage are well pleased with their choice.

Mr. Garrison was united in marriage July 19, 1873, with Miss Sarah L. Peck, daughter of Rufus H. and Sarah (Lappin) Peck, and this happy union has been blessed by the birth of three sons and two daughters, viz: Ruth, Bessie, Charles, Guy and Iliff. Of these, Ruth is married to Harry Callihan, a carbuilder of Kent, and is the mother of one child -Robert Maxwell Callihan. Mr. and Mrs. Garrison are consistent members of the Disciples' church, and fraternally Mr. Garrison is a Freemason, an Odd Fellow and a Knight of He is still one of the directors of the City bank of Kent, and is also a director in the Portage county Building & Loan association of Ravenna. MANUEL FRANKS, a well-to-do farmer of Green township, Summit county, Ohio, is a native of this township and was born July 21, 1851. He was educated in the Greensburg academy and reared to farming, which has been his life-long pursuit.

Jacob Franks, great-grandfather of Emannel Franks, was a native of Alsace, France, and emigrated to Pennsylvania in the days of William Penn. His son, Jacob Franks, Jr., was born in Washington county, Pa., there married Elizabeth Dice, a native of the same county, and soon afterward came to Ohio and settled in Trumbull county. He was a soldier in the war of 1812, and was serving within hearing of Perry's cannonade in the famous naval action on lake Eric. His children were born in the following order: Samuel, Andrew, John, Henry, George, Isaac, Jacob, Elizabeth (Gates) and Jonas.

Isaac Franks, father of subject, was born in Mahoning county, Ohio, February 21, 1817, and became a highly respected and substantial farmer of Green township, Summit county, owning here, at one time, 280 acres, but the greater part he has donated to his children, reserving, for his own, 117 acres. He settled in this township when a young man and married Miss Catherine Miller, of Mahoning county, June 13, 1850. This lady was born March 5, 1833, and is a daughter of John and Susan (Stambaugh) Miller, well known residents, formerly, of Ellsworth, Mahoning county. To Mr. and Mrs. Franks have been born two children, viz: Emanuel, our subject, and Mary E., now the wife of L. M. Kepler. Franks has always been a very industrious farmer, and all his possessions resulted from his personal exertions. He and his wife are consistent members of the Methodist Episcopal church, are liberal in its support and active in its work, and well deserve the high esteem in which they are held.

Emanuel Franks was united in marriage November 21, 1876, with Miss Ella Frances Cox, who was born April 15, 1853, a daughter of Henry and Charlotte (Horner) Cox, and this marriage has been blessed with three children, viz: Lloyd M., born June 25, 1879; Bertha, November 6, 1885, and Russell O., November 18, 1888. In politics he is a true and faithful republican, and as a citizen he is wide-awake, progressive, open-hearted and greatly respected.

OSIAH GAYLORD, one of the substantial farmers and respected citizens of Stowe township, Summit county, Ohio, springs from an ancestor who came from England to America in old Puritan times.

Stewart Gaylord, grandfather of Josiah Gaylord, was born in Connecticut, near Windsor, was there married, and became the father of the following children: Samuel, John, Stewart, Josiah, Betsey and Clarissa. Stewart Gaylord was a soldier in the Revolutionary war, in the commissary department, and served as meat packer. He was a cooper by trade and came to Stowe township with his sons, Stewart and Josiah, in 1809, making the journey with a yoke of cattle and one horse, being forty-four days on the way, and sleeping in the wagons. There was not a frame building in Cleveland, except the post-office, twelve feet square. He was an old man when he came with his family to Ohio-too old, in fact, to open a farm. He died at the residence of his son, John.

Stewart Gaylord, father of subject, was born in Windsor, Conn., October 25, 1780, and married, at Middletown, Conn., Mary A. Cramer, daughter of a sea captain in the China trade. Mr. Gaylord was a ship carpenter by trade and worked on lake Erie. He had a sub-contract and built two of the vessels that were in action in Perry's fleet, in the battle on that lake. These vessels were built in the Cuyahoga river at old Portage. Mr. Gaylord had been importuned by the Commercial land company to settle in Cleveland, where land was worth between $4 and $5 per acre, but he would not do so, and settled with his wife and one child in Stowe township. He cleared up this farm from the woods and made a good home. The Indians were in the surrounding country and frequently visited the log house and would often sleep by the fireside. They were friendly, and even during the war of 1812 did no mischief. Mr. and Mrs. Gaylord were members of the Congregational church, were among its earliest members, and in politics Mr. Gaylord was a whig. He was a soldier in the war of 1812 and served three months. His children were Mary, John, Stewart, Almira, George, William, Josiah, Hiram and Robert, all now deceased except Josiah, the subject of this sketch. Mr. Gaylord died October 20, 1840. He was an industrious man and well-to-do, was respected by all, and brought up an excellent family.

Josiah Gaylord, son of Stewart, last mentioned, was born September 8, 1824, on his present farm in a frame house still standing, and which was a very good house for those days. He received a common-school education in the district school—first in a log schoolhouse—and has always been a farmer. He married, at the age of thirty-six years, June 14, 1861, in Stowe township, Laura Beckley, who was born September 19, 1832, in Stowe township, a daughter of Noel and Margaret (Lindsey) Beckley. Noel Beckley was a son of Selah, who was the son of Elias, mention of which family will be found in the biography of 'Squire Noel Beckley.

After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Gaylord settled on the Gaylord homestead and have since lived here. They have prospered and added to their land and have a fine farm, upon which they have built a substantial two-story residence. Their marriage has been blessed with four children, viz: Mary (died at twenty-two years), Willis W., Noel and Norman. Mr. Gaylord was first a whig in politics, but on the formation of the republican party joined its ranks, and has ever since been loyal to its doctrines. Mrs. Gaylord is a consistent member of the Episcopal church, and the family are among the most respected of the old pioneer stock of the county.

REDERICK GEIDLINGER, justice of the peace, of Suffield, Portage county, and a most highly respected citizen, was born in Lake township, Stark county, Ohio, February 7, 1856, a son of Frederick and Phebe (Ginthel) Geidlinger, natives of Germany. The father was a tailor by trade, and on coming to America settled in Stark county, where he followed his trade until the end of his days, which were abridged by death in January, 1856, and where his wife died October 18, 1886, aged fifty-seven years, six months and twenty-eight days—both members of the Reformed church.

'Squire Geidlinger was educated, primarily, in the public schools of his native county, and completed his education at Mount Union col-He also attended a commercial college and the Ada normal school, in Hardin county, pursuing his studies during the summer months, and teaching school during the winter season. As the 'squire was a posthumous child, he was necessarily reared under the care of his mother, with whom he remained until about eighteen years old, up to which time he assisted her on the home farm. In 1882 Mr. Geidlinger came to Portage county and engaged in the dry-goods trade in Suffield, which for three years was conducted in partnership with a brother, under the firm name of Geidlinger Bros. In 1885 Mr. Geidlinger bought out the interest of his brother, and continued the business alone until the spring of 1896, when Dallas F. Kelle became a partner and the firm name now is Geidlinger & Co. 'squire is also the owner of a fine farm, over which he keeps a personal supervision, and realizes therefrom a handsome income.

In politics an active democrat, Mr. Geidlinger was elected township treasurer and filled the office with entire satisfaction to his party and his fellow-citizens for three terms. Under President Cleveland's first administration Mr. Geidlinger was appointed postmaster of Suffield and filled the office four years. In 1890 he was elected justice of the peace, and is now serving his third consecutive term, and during this period has adjudicated or administered several estates. Fraternally, he is a member of Knights of Pythias lodge, No. 568, of Suffield, of which he was one of the charter members, and in which he has filled all the chairs.

The marriage of 'Squire Geidlinger took place January 3, 1883, at Union Town, Stark county, Ohio, to Miss Amanda E. Frank, daughter of John and Margaret (Lepper) Frank, of whom further may be read in the sketch of P. Lepper, of Springfield township, Summit county. The birth of Mrs. Geidlinger occurred October 20, 1861, and she has blessed her husband with two children—Edna and Olive Mr. and Mrs. Geidlinger are members of the Reformed church, to which they contribute quite freely in aid of its work for good in this and the coming world. Mr. Geidlinger, as his career shows, has been a very popular and useful citizen, and he and wife stand in the center of a wide and constantly increasing circle of warm personal friends.

EORGE GEYELIN, an ex-soldier of the Civil war and a respected citizen of Tallmadge, Summit county, Ohio, was born in Glarus, canton of Glarus, Switzerland, February 22, 1825, a son of George and Barbara (Spitteler) Geyelin.

George Geyelin, father of our subject, was a native of Muellhausen, Alsace, France, but now a province of Germany, and was born in 1768. He was a calico designer and colorer, for which he received a large salary, and was the owner of considerable property. To his marriage with Miss Spitteler were born four children: Georgeina, Rosali, Benjamin and George. His later years were passed in Glarus, Switzerland, where he died in 1826. His widow afterward married Jacob Keller, a carpenter, and to this union were born John, Judith and Casper, of whom Judith and Casper came to America. Casper served in the Civil war, in the same company with George Geyelin, our subject, and, although the shortest man in his regiment, was a good soldier.

George Geyelin, our subject, was but one year old when his father died. His mother then removed with her children to Zurich. where she lived with her father, Casper Spitteler. In that city George attended school until fifteen years of age, then learned saddle and harness making and worked at his trade until about thirty years of age, when he embarked at Havre de Grace, France, on board the sailing vessel Irena, and forty-six days later, December 31, 1854, landed in New York He at once went to Pittsburg, Pa., where he worked at his trade from January 6 until March 5, 1855, when he came to Ohio and located in Ravenna May 1: then went to Lawrence, Kans., where he passed nine months during the troublous times of the anti-slavery agitation, and then returned to Ravenna, where he enlisted, April 25, 1861, in Capt. F. A. Seymour's company G, Seventh Ohio volunteer infantry, for three months, and assisted in building Camp Dennison. After having filled out his term of enlistment he re-enlisted in the same company, took part in the battles of Cross Lane, Port Republic, Cedar Mountain, Antietam, Winchester, and on scout duty around Charleston. At Port Republic, June 9, 1862, he was struck on the head by a piece of shell, but did not leave the field, although he lost a great deal of blood. After the battle of Winchester, while on a "double quick," he was ruptured and was obliged to go to the hospital at Frederick City, Md., and was finally honorably discharged at Bolivar Heights, Va., November 26, 1864. He was always prompt and cheerful in the discharge of his duty, and made an excellent military record.

After his return from the army Mr. Geyelin for some time worked at his trade in Ravenna, and later opened a shop in Rootstown, Portage county, Ohio, where he lived until 1870, when he came to Tallmadge, and here he has since resided. He is a hard-working, straightforward man, is a good workman and honest in all his dealings, and stands high in the esteem of his fellow-citizens. In politics he is a republican.

He had made an exchange of his farm with the Connecticut Land company before leaving the east, for his property here, and had come out in 1812 to view his land. There was a small tract of about fifty acres cleared, and a log house and barn built. The original settler was a Mr. Daily. Mr. Gilbert, assisted by his sons, cleared up a good farm, made a fine pioneer home, and about 1831 built a substantial This house is frame house of two stories. still in a good state of preservation, and the original windows, with old-fashioned panes, are still in place. The lock and latches are the same as when built, and neither the exterior nor the interior has been changed. Mrs. Lydia Gilbert, mother of Orrin Gilbert, came out at a later period, and died in Solon, Ohio. Joseph L. Gilbert was about two and a half years old when he came with his father's family to Ohio in the fall of 1828, but can remember some incidents of the trip. He received a good education for that early day, became a farmer, and married, when twenty-five years old, in Buffalo, N. Y.—when passing through that city on a visit to Connecticut, October 9, 1850—Harriet A. Hall, who was born January 13, 1828, in South Adams, Mass., a daughter of Asa and Hannah (King) Hall. EV. AMBROSE GRAHAM, pastor of Saint Patrick's Roman Catholic church at Kent, Ohio, was born in Cookstown, county Tyrone, Ireland, January 1, 1852, a son of Charles and Agnes (Devon) Graham, who were the parents of lonr sons and four daughters, of whom the sons all entered the learned professions—that is to say, William is a priest at Darlington, in the north of England; Robert, who was also a priest, died in Belfast, Ireland, in 1885; Ambrose, the subject, and Joseph, who is a physician of London, England. The father of the family was a well-to-do merchant of Cookstown, and neither he nor any of his children, excepting Ambrose, the subject, ever left the Emerald isle for America.

Rev. Ambrose Graham received his literary education in the Cookstown academy and then passed a year in an institution of learning in England. His theological studies were pursued in Saint Paul's college, Dublin, Ireland, and at Blair's college, Aberdeen, Scotland. He was ordained priest February 2, 1876, and his first appointment in his holy calling was as assistant at Saint Mary's church, Glasgow, Scotland.

In January, 1880, he was appointed pastor of Saint Mary's church, at Irvin, Ayrshire, Scotland, but August 22, 1880, resigned his charge and came to the United States, and on September 20, 1888, was appointed to his present charge which, to the present time, he has filled to the great satisfaction of his loving and revering flock.

Saint Patrick's church at Kent was organized in 1867 by Rev. P. H. Brown, at that time pastor of the Catholic church at Hudson, Summit county, with an out-mission at Kent comprising about forty families. The Saint Patrick church edifice was erected in 1868 at a cost of $12,000. edifice was quite imposing and a cemetery was very tastefully laid out, and Father Brown officiated as priest until succeeded in consecutive order by Fathers W. J. Gibbons, J. P. Carroll, J. D. Bowles, F. J. O'Neill, James Maloy (1880-81), Louis Brairie, J. F. Cahill and George Leming. D. D., all good and faithful pastors and earnest in their work. Graham was now appointed to the charge, and diligently set to work to improve the edifice and add some necessary accessories, for which he secured contributions amounting to $2,000, but the worthy father was careful not to overtax the financial ability of his devoted children. and the congregation is now entirely free from ∢lebt. Through the zealous efforts of Father

Graham, Saint Patrick's church now numbers within its fold over 120 families and its parochial school, taught by four sisters of the order of Saint Dominic, has an enrollment of fully eighty pupils. Naturally enough, Father Graham is fully satisfied with the approval he has met with from the superiors of the church for his zealous work, but the need of approval from laymen, even beyond the pale of his church, must be gratifying to even one in holy orders.

ENRY C. GRANT, a well-known resident of Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio, was born in New Haven, Conn., February 3, 1836, a son of William T. and Esther F. (Treat) Grant.

Henry C. Grant received his education in the public school, also attended the academy at Orange, Conn., and became a farmer. He was in a market in New Haven three years when young. In 1855 he came to Ohio and lived a short time in Cuyahoga Falls, and in March, 1856, went to Lawrence, Kans. was in the exciting times of the Kansas troubles over the slavery question. Mr. Grant was accompanied to Kansas by Samuel Wood, a prominent lawyer and settler in Kansas, who was later driven out of the then territory by border ruffians. Mr. Grant worked awhile at farm work for a Mr. Emery, of Maine. committee of safety, of Lawrence, Kans., organized for the defense of the freesoilers, and the young men were armed with Sharp's rifles and organized a campaign. Mr. Grant joined company B in April, 1856, and resisted an attempt to arrest Samuel Wood, made by Sheriff Samuel Jones, a border ruffian from Missouri, growing out of the Branson rescue. As this attempt did not succeed, another was made to arrest Samuel Wood, aided by a company of United States dragoons, and that night

Sheriff Iones was shot in his tent and badly wounded, and these events led up to the Kan-Early in June Lawrence was sacked, Gov. Robinson's residence was burned and the hotel destroyed by fire. The city and even the private residences were plundered. These events covered the entire summer, and Mr. Grant was under arms during the entire time. At one time he was in camp with the famous John Brown, near Osawatomie. Grant was in several skirmishes with the border ruffians, at one time under the celebrated Jim Lane, who aided in the capture of a block-house five miles from Lawrence, in which attack several were killed and wounded. The block-house was burned, and fifty men with all their arms and one piece of artillery were captured. He was also in an attempt to capture border ruffians under Henry Clay Pate, nine miles from Lawrence. This band had murdered David S. Hoyt, a noted freesoiler, while on a visit to their camp by invitation and under promise of protection. He was a prominent Mason. The freesoil men, Mr. Grant being one, destroyed this camp. was also with a party who attacked a blockhouse near Lecompton, Jim Lane being in command. They also broke up a nest of border ruffians and horse theives under Col. Titus, suffering some loss. Mr. Grant remained under fire with the freesoilers until the fall of 1856, when, the Kansas troubles being quieted, he returned to Ohio.

Mr. Grant worked at farm work in Summit county until the war, when he enlisted, September 1, 1861, at Cuyahoga Falls, in company D, First regiment, Ohio light artillery, to serve three years, if not sooner discharged; later he re-enlisted, as a veteran, at Strawberry Plains, Tenn., in same organization, to serve three years or during the war, and served until discharged as first lieutenant at Camp Chase, Columbus, Ohio, August 31, 1865. He had been promoted, for meritorious conduct, to first sergeant and then to second lieutenant, and was assigned from company D to company A, and afterward promoted to first lieutenant and assigned to company G, from which he was mustered out. During November, 1861, in the mountains of eastern Kentucky, under Gen. Nelson, he was in several battles. and at Green River Bridge, Ky., the entire force surrendered to Gen. Bragg, later were paroled, and sent to Ohio and exchanged. The regiment was re-organized and sent into Kentucky, and was in the fights from Lexington to Knoxville and at the investment of Cumberland Gap, where 2,000 prisoners were taken; and he was in the siege of Knoxville, and the assault, when invested by Gen. Longstreet, and at Blaine's Cross Roads. part in the great Atlanta campaign, and was in the battles of Dalton, Resaca and Pumpkinvine Creek, Peach Tree Creek, Dallas, Kenesaw Mountain and general assault on Atlanta. He was also at Jonesboro and Lovejov Station. During this remarkable campaign, Mr. Grant was under continuous fire with his comrades for 119 days. After the fall of Atlanta his battery followed Hood, and he was in the battles of Columbia, Spring Hill and Franklin, and was in the battle of Nashville when Hood's army was destroyed. After this he was in camp at different places in Alabama and Tennesse until June, 1865, when his corps was ordered to New Orleans. Mr. Grant was always an active soldier, was sick in hospital but one mouth, at Lookout Mountain, and was in all the campaigns, marches, skirmishes and battles in which his battery took part.

In the beginning of the war, September 10, 1861, he married, at Tallmadge, Ohio, Sarah M. Sackett, who was born May 15, 1837, at Avon, Livingston county, N. Y., a daughter of Aaron and Hulda (Tanner) Sackett. After the war Mr. and Mrs. Grant settled on the home farm, consisting of 150 acres, which he has improved and cleared from very heavy timber. To Mr. and Mrs. Grant have been born six children: William B., Harry S., Charles T., Walter S., Theodosia (died aged nine years) and Dorothy. Mrs. Grant is a member of the Congregational church and in politics Mr. Grant is a stanch republican and one of the founders of the party, taking part in the early struggles and casting his first vote for Abraham Lincoln on his first nomination for the presidency. He was an ardent abolitionist and fought for the cause on Kansas soil and from the beginning to the end of the Civil war. Mr. Grant is a well known man of integrity of character, and his family is well educated; his two sons are graduates of colleges—Charles of Princeton, N. J., and Walter S., of Middlebury, Vt.

EORGE B. GREEN is one of the most progressive farmers of Franklin township, Portage county, Ohio, and in this township he was born on the parental farm November 26, 1851, a son of Seneca and Mary A. (Holt) Green, relative to whom a digression may here be made.

Seneca Green was born in Hampshire county, Mass., October 3, 1808, and was a son of Clark and Submit (Hastings) Green. He was reared on his father's farm until his fourteenth year, and was then apprenticed for six years at shoemaking. After learning his trade he worked for a year as a journeyman in North Lee, and then engaged in business on his own account in South Lee, Mass., and realized in this line considerable profit. In the autumn of 1836 he disposed of his business in South Lee and came to Ohio, purchased the farm in Portage county on which our subject, George B. Green, was born, and became one of the most prosperous and influential farmers of Franklin township. He first married, October 3, 1832, Miss Sarah Spellman, of Monterey, Mass., but this lady was called away May 6, 1834, and February 29, 1836, Mr. Green married Miss Mary A. Holt, of Austerlitz, N. Y. This latter union was blessed wirh six children, viz: Sarah, wife of H. L. Russell; Stephen, of Streetsboro, Ohio; Spellman, of Franklin township; Ann, wife of G. H. Taylor, of Lansing, Mich.; Mary A., married to A. A. Ross, of Kent, Ohio, and George B., whose name opens this biographical sketch. Mr. Green, in his politics, was a whig in his early days, but on the formation of the republican party became one of its most ardent supporters. Death took from him his devoted wife June 6, 1877, at the age of sixtyeight years, and his own death occurred May 9, 1887, at the age of seventy-eight. But few citizens of Franklin township ever attained a higher degree of esteem than this honored pioneer from New England, who used the best energies of his active life in the development of Franklin township.

Clark Green, the father of Seneca Green. was born in Massachusetts, April 11, 1776, almost on the eve of the grandest and most successful revolutionary event recorded in the world's history. To his marriage with Miss Submit Hastings were born nine children, of whom two still survive, Salome and Clara. The deceased were named Billings, who died August 17, 1865, at the age of sixty years; David, who died December 22, 1863, at the age of sixty-two; Eunice, whose death took place September 8, 1852, aged fifty-three; Seneca, the date of whose death is given above; Porter, born May 9, 1813, whose death took place in 1893, at the age of eighty, and Hannah, who died October 17, 1842, at the age of thirty-nine years; George, born June 19, 1811. The father of this family passed away November 27, 1848, at the age of seventy-two years, and his wife followed him to the grave April 12, 1863, aged eighty-five years.

Morris Holt, the maternal grandfather of George B. Green, was born April 13, 1768, and Sallie, his wife, was born December 1, Their marriage resulted in the birth of seven children, viz: Horace, February 14, 1794; Stephen, January 15, 1796; Betsey, April 1, 1798-died May 4, 1858; Sallie, born July 29, 1800 - died April 9, 1865; Mercy, born June 29, 1802; Desire, born August 11, 1804—died August 2, 1864, and Mary Ann, born July 13, 1809—died June 6, 1877. the above-named children have passed away, but in some instances, it will be perceived, the dates of death are not on record. departed this life March 19, 1815, at the age of forty-eight years.

George B. Green, the subject of this biography, passed his early life on the home farm, assisting his father until he reached the age of twenty-one years, when he engaged in farming on his own account. His marriage took place at Earlville, Ohio, October 21, 1874, to Miss Clara L. Haymaker, daughter of James and Mary (Olin) Haymaker, and this marriage has been blessed with three children, viz: Mabel A., James S. and Walter H. In conjunction with general farming, Mr. Green deals extensively in live stock, and ranks as one of Portage county's up-to-date agriculturists. In politics he is a rigid republican, in his fraternal relations is a Knight of Pythias, and his religious devotions are paid at the Universalist church.

Mrs. Clara L. Green, wife of George B. Green, was born August 30, 1850, in Earlville, and obtained her education in the district schoolhouse near the "gravel bank," and after leaving school taught a term. Some sixteen years after her marriage she was taken seriously ill (in 1890) and for a year or two was a confirmed invalid, and scant hopes were entertained for her recovery, but she eventually recuperated and is now enjoying excellent health.

James D. Haymaker, father of Mrs. Green, was a son of Frederick and Rachel (Davis) Haymaker, and was born in Franklin township, Portage county, Ohio, September 2, 1809, in a little log cabin near the historical site of Brady's Leap. About ten days after his birth his mother died, thus leaving him to the care of his father, who took him to Pennsylvania, leaving him to the care of his grandfather, with whom he remained until he reached his tenth year, and then returned to his father, who had in the meantime married again, and was living in Beaver county, Pa. In 1823 his father returned to Franklin Mills (now known as Kent), Ohio, and there James D. obtained all the education he ever received. After staying in Franklin two years, he entered a woolen factory to learn a trade; after having four years' experience there, he embarked in the business of making wooden pails, tubs and wooden ware. This employment he followed for the next two years, and then removed to Fairport, Ohio, on lake Erie, where he opened a hotel, or, as it was then called, a "tavern." Here he continued business for two years, and then, returning to Portage, county, he purchased a farm, in 1834, on which he spent the remainder of his life. It consisted of eighty-eight acres of new land, but Mr. Haymaker went bravely to work to prepare for himself a habitation, and on the 6th day of June, 1835, his house and barn were raised—this "raising" being famed throughout this section as the first temperance, or "cold-water raising," that had November 29, 1835, in the presbeen known. ence of neighbors and friends, James D. Haymaker and Mary Rosetta Olin took upon themselves the vows of matrimony; thirteen children have been the fruit of this union, nine of whom survive, viz: Oscar F.; Rachel, wife of Mc-

Kendree Norton; Arvin; James; Clara, wife of our subject; Almira, wife of Theodore H. Kindice; Amelia, wife of M. G. Norton; William J., and Abbie, wife of E. W. Case. who have passed away were Franklin, who died in 1850, aged fourteen years; Cora, who died February 2, 1859, aged nine months; Mary R., who passed away July 27, 1866, aged twenty years, and Ann, who died May 11, 1893, aged fifty years. James, fourth son of James Haymaker, Sr., served in the Civil war, having enlisted January 12, 1865, in the One Hundred and Ninety-third regiment, Ohio volunteer infantry, at Cleveland, Ohio. James and Mary Haymaker celebrated their golden wedding anniversary November 29, 1885, when friends and neighbors, to the number of two hundred, gathered to congratulate the aged couple on having reached the zenith of half a century of wedded life.

January 31, 1889, Mr. Haymaker laid down life's burdens to exchange "The cross for the crown." He left to his posterity that priceless inheritance, an irreproachable character and a stainless name. Mrs. James (Olin) Haymaker is the daughter of Arvin and Betsey (Bennett) Olin, and was born in Perry, Wyoming county, N. Y., February 22, 1820. She removed with her parents to Ohio, and here was married to James Haymaker.

Arvin Olin, grandfather of Mrs. Green, was a son of Ezra and Ruth (Green) Olin. He was born in Shaftsbury, Vt., July 13, 1797; was married March 9, 1817, to Betsey Bennett, who was born in Bennington, Vt., February 6, 1801, and to them thirteen children were born. Arvin Olin died June 7, 1870, and Mrs. Olin followed him January 5, 1872, aged seventy years and eleven months. Ezra Olin, great-grandfather of Mrs. Green, was born in Rhode Island March 23, 1772, the son of John Olin, Second. In the month of March, 1791, he was married to Ruth Green, daughter of Samuel and Ruth Green, who was born in Rhode Island November 10, 1770, and died May 19, 1847. To this union were born ten children. In 1848 Ezra Olin, married, for his second wife, Mrs. Booth, of Orangeville, N. Y., who died in 1855; Mr. Olin died November 5, 1858, aged eighty-six years seven months and twelve days. John Olin, second, great-greatgrand-father of Mrs. Green, was born in Rhode Island in 1714, son of John Olin, first, and Susannah (Spencer) Olin. He was married in East Greenwich, R. I., to Susannah Pierce, daughter of Jeremiah Pierce, December 9. To them were born seven children. John Olin, second, died in January, 1797. aged eighty-three years; Susannah, his wife, died in February, 1802, aged eighty-seven. John Olin, the first, great-great-great-grandfather of Mrs. Green, emigrated to America from Wales in 1700, settling near Greenwich, R. I., and is said to have come to this country at the age of fourteen years. He was married, in East Greenwich, October 4, 1708, to Susannah Spencer, daughter of John and Susannah Spencer, natives of Wales. John Olin, the first, died at Newport, R. I., June 10, 1725, aged sixty-one years.

Here ends the genealogical record of Mrs. Green's family, on the maternal side of the house, as far as it is possible to trace it. So we will leave Mr. and Mrs. Green living in their comfortable home pleasantly situated on the road leading from Kent to Hudson, which is now known as the Hill Side Lawn farm. They are cheered by the presence of their three children, of whom Mabel A., born August 28, 1875, graduated from the Kent high school, in 1894, and has since been engaged in teaching. James S. was born May 5, 1880, is also a Kent graduate of the class of 1897. and Walter H., born February 26, 1889, is still attending school. Mr. Green and family are among the most respected of the residents of Franklin township, and Mr. Green's reputation as a farmer and stock raiser is widespread and well deserved, while his business name stands without a blemish, and he is, at present, trustee of Franklin township.

DWARD HELLER, of Ghent, Ohio, is one of the most substantial and influential farmers in Bath township. He was born in Northampton county, Pa., May 23, 1826, son of Abraham and Elizabeth (Evenrider) Heller, the former a native of Bucks county, Pa., and the latter of Lehigh county, the same state. His father was a miller by trade, and by his frugal and industrious habits accumulated considerable property, possessing large land holdings in connection with his extensive milling interests, and operating largely in the timber and lumber way. He died in 1852, his wife surviving him some years. They were the parents of the following children: Elizabeth, Joseph, Ann, Adleman, George, Edward and Polly.

Edward Heller, the subject of this sketch, spent the early part of his life with his father in the mill and upon the farm, remaining there until he was past twenty-five. In 1851 he was married to Miss Julia A. Dutt, who was born in Northampton county, Pa., in 1827. The following year Mr. Heller and his bride came to this county and located in Copley township on a farm of sixty acres which they purchased. Mr. Heller cleared half of this tract and erected a comfortable home, where they resided for nearly twenty years. In 1870 he traded this farm for the mill property west of Ghent, the largest and best steam and water power grist and saw-mill in the western part of the county. He also bought a mill half a mile east of Ghent and twentyone acres of fine land in the township. Deciding to retire from the milling business he afterward traded his mill properties for the excellent farm of 154 acres upon which he now resides. This is known as the Hershey farm, from its former owner, A. Hershey. Mr. Heller has made large and notable improvements upon this place in the way of modern buildings and up-to-date appliances, and has an admirable home.

Mr. Heller comes from vigorous and hardy stock, it being a boast that the average age in his family is eighty years—a family, too, strongly grounded in its religious faith and rigid in its observance of its tenets. He is a member of the Evangelical church, and is a pillar in that denomination. During his residence at Copley he was superintendent of the Sunday-school. He is a man upright in his business dealings, consistent in his christian walk, courteous in his manner-a gentleman who enjoys the unbounded confidence and respect of the entire community. A very sore bereavement to the Heller household was the death, November 4, 1885, of of the wife and mother. Mrs. Heller was a noble woman, devoted to her family, and a practical, earnest helpmate. Her memory is cherished socially in the household and is not a thing that dies. Following are the children of this family: Quintus A., Benjamin F., Amanda E., and Emma D.

OHN GRETHER, ex-auditor of the county of Summit, Ohio, was born in the Fourth ward of the city of Akron, February 21, 1857, and this has been his home since his birth. He is the eldest of the six children born to John G. and Barbara (Doersch) Grether, the other five being George, a blacksmith, in the employ of the Akron Salt works; Fred, receiving and shipping clerk for Strong, Copp & Co., wholesale druggists of Cleveland; Emma, in Akron: Charles, druggist of Akron, and Amelia a stenographer, who was an assistant to her brother. John, when he was county auditor.

John Grether, the subject, was educated in the high school of his native city of Akron and also took a course in a business college. From the age of sixteen he assisted his father in his grocery until nineteen years of age, when he entered the employ of E. Steinbacher, wholesale and retail dealer in groceries, drugs, oils and paints, and during the six years and four months he was in the employ lost but twenty-one days. Mr. Grether then purchased the Palace drug store, which he conducted six years and eight months, when he disposed of the concern and turned his whole attention to the real estate business, having already made some investments in realty. In 1887 the real estate firm of Motz & Grether was formed at Kokomo, Ind., where they did an extensive business for three or four years, when Mr. Grether withdrew. In 1890 he organized the Kokomo Enameling works in that city, and in the same year organized the Globe Sign works in Akron, of which he is president. This plant is in South Akron, and furnishes oil-cloth and muslin signs for all parts of the United States. It is 40 x 160 feet, ground plan, and three stories high, and employs from sixteen to eighteen hands.

In 1890, also, the Grether & Pfeiffer real estate firm was formed, and at once began making additions to the city of Akron—four on North Hill and three on West Hill—the entire acreage being sixty-three. The extension of the Akron Electrical street-car railroad, from the Little Cuyahoga river and Howard street to the Cuyahoga Falls road, on North Hill, was largely brought about by Grether & Pfeiffer, they turning over their road to the Akron street-car company, on condition that both be operated as one.

In 1892, Mr. Grether was elected county auditor of Summit county on the democratic ticket and filled the office three years, proving himself to be in every way worthy of the trust reposed in him, and was probably one of the most efficient officers that ever served the people of Summit county. On leaving this office he resumed his real estate transactions. He is also the manufacturer of the Buckeye Copper Polish, which has a most extensive sale throughout the whole country; he was likewise one of the founders of the Marion Keely institute of Marion, Ind., of which he is president. Fraternally, he is a member of Atolia lodge, K. of P., No. 21, as well as of the uniform rank; member of the B. & P. O. Elks, which he joined in February, 1897; also of the Red Cross, the Turnverein and other German societies; he is a director of the German-American Building & Loan association, and has his office under the Buchtel hotel. His religion is found in the faith of the German Reformed church. Mr. Grether has been one of the most active of the business men of Akron and has done as much for the development of the city as probably any other of its native-born residents, and is in consequence duly honored by all.

UDGE NATHANIEL PERKINS
GOODHUE, recently clerk of courts of Summit county, son of Hon. Nathaniel W. Goodhue, and his wife, Nancy W., was born in Akron, Ohio, August 6, 1853, and was educated in the public schools of the city. From December, 1872, to July, 1878, he was deputy clerk in the United States court at Cleveland, Ohio: from September, 1878, until February, 1882, he was a traveling salesman for Kellar & Goodhue, wholesale dealers in boots and shoes, at Rochester, N. Y.; from February 8, 1882, to February, 1891, he was deputy probate judge of Summit county, having read law under his father, and from February 8, 1891, to August 2, 1897, served as clerk of courts of Summit county, having been elected on the republican ticket.

April 4, 1883, Mr. Goodhue was united in marriage to Miss Mary Kent McNaughton, daughter of Finley and Ella (Kent) McNaughton, but no children have blessed this union. Mrs. Goodhue was born in Akron October 31, 1858, her parents having formerly been residents of this city, but now residing in Youngstown, Ohio.

Hon. Nathaniel W. Goodhue, father of Nathaniel P. Goodhue, was elected probate judge of Summit county in October, 1881, and acceptably filled the office until his sudden death in September, 1883, when his son and deputy continued to act in the same capacity under Charles R. Grant, who was appointed by Gov. Foster to fill the vacancy of judge caused by the death of Nathaniel W. Goodhue.

ORACE G. GRIFFIN, sheriff of Summit county, Ohio, is a native of the Buckeye state, and was born in Geauga county October 8, 1840, a son of Seth B. and Huldah (King) Griffin, natives, respectively, of Pennsylvania and Ohio.

Seth B. Griffin was a farmer by vocation, was active in politics, national, state, county and township, was a well-informed gentleman and a counselor for his neighbors in all matters of dispute, and a member of the Masonic order in high standing, having gone to Canada to receive his last degree. He was the father of four children, born in the following order: Theressa, the deceased wife of Oscar Watts, of Geanga county, who is also deceased, having been killed in the battle of Chancellorsville; Charlotte died in childhood; Horace G.

is the subject of this memoir; Lester is a contractor and builder of Cleveland.

Horace G. Griffin was reared on his father's farm, was educated in the common and select schools of Geauga county, and enlisted, September 10, 1861, in company G, Forty-first regiment, Ohio volunteer infantry, and gallantly performed the duties of a soldier until mustered out at Nashville, Tenn., June 26, 1864. After his return he was for about a year on the sick list, and was then employed by Budlong & Stokes to conduct a cheese factory on a large scale at Charndon, but two years later this concern changed hands, and Mr. Griffin then started, for L. J. Randall, of Charndon, the first creamery ever established in Ohio, and this he operated for two years. He was then employed by a company in Versailles, Ky., to start a cheese factory at that point—the first in Kentucky—and for two and a half years conducted it with profit and to the satisfaction of all concerned. He then returned to Geauga county, Ohio, and engaged in mercantile business in Fowler's Mills, but sold out within a few months and went to Painesville, Lake county, and re-engaged in merchandising, which he followed for two years, then disposed of his stock and came to Akron to fill a contract with the Valley Railroad company, then in course of construction, to complete the grading from Akron to Union Town. After filling his contract he again entered the mercantile trade, and for five years did business in Akron under the firm of Viall The firm having sold out, Mr. Griffin at once engaged in business on his own account, in the Sixth ward, on Market street, where he now carries a full line of groceries, notions, etc., and is among the solid men of Akron.

An ardent republican, Mr. Griffin has always taken an active part in the politics of the city and county; for eight years consecutively he was a member of the board of educationbeing the first in Akron to fill three successive terms-and during his incumbency the high school building and three common school buildings were erected. Without solicitation he was appointed by Gov. Foraker a member of the board of elections, and served four years, or during the life of that board; he also served six years as a member of the board of city assessments. In the fall of 1894 he was elected sheriff of Summit county, and at the expiration of his term he returned to the mercantile business. In all the offices he has held his efficiency has made itself self-evident, and in every case his constituents have consented to release, only to advance him, to positions of Fraternally, Mr. Griffin is a higher honor. member of Middlebury council, No. 969, Royal Arcanum; Spertian lodge, No, 126, K. of H.; Buckley post, No. 12, G. A. R.; American Legion, No. 428, and J. O. U. M., Pride of Akron, No. 343.

The marriage of Mr. Griffin occurred in Geauga county, Ohio, December 22, 1864, with Miss Harriet Taylor, daughter of Rev. Justice Taylor, and this union has been blessed with two children, viz: Lizzie T., wife of Dr. H. H. Jacobs, of Akron, and Lucy H., a student at Granville seminary, but residing with her parents. The family attend the Baptist church, and have their pleasant home at No. 111 Forrest street, when Mr. Griffin is not attending his duties as sheriff, when, of course, his residence is at the county jail on Broadway, Akron. Mr. Griffin began at the bottom of the ladder as a business man, and by his own ability and industry has reached his present eminence. He is courteous and genial in his bearing, and has made friends in all parts of the country where it has been his fate to live.

'APT. WILLIAM GRINNELL, prominent as a business man, public official and citizen of Ravenna, Ohio, as well as an ex-soldier of the Union army, was born in Allegany county, N. Y., June 28, 1839. His parents, James and Julia A. (Luce) Grinnell, were respectively born in Oneida county, N. Y., in 1810, and in Cattaraugus county, in the same state, in 1813. They were married in their native state, and about 1849 came to Ohio and settled on a farm in Franklin township, Portage county, where the mother died and where the father still lives at the advanced age of eighty-seven years. Of their family of three sons and one daughter the captain is the eldest, and can trace his genealogy back to Auld Scotia.

Capt. Grinnell was a lad of twelve years when brought by his parents to Portage county, and in Franklin township was an attendant at the public schools until about the age of fifteen years, when he found employment in a store at Kent. In the spring of 1859 he went.

to Hardin county, Ky., where, for a time, he worked on a farm, but soon secured a position as clerk in a general store in Elizabethtown, in the same county. While thus employed, he was approached, in the winter of 1860-61, by a committee, who urged him to join a military company of prospective Confederates then being formed, but this he declined to do, the consequence being that his stay in the state would be hazardous, and so, in the spring of 1861, he returned to Kent and re-engaged as a salesman in a store. In 1862 he enlisted in company I, One Hundred and Fourth Ohio volunteer infantry, was mustered in as fifth sergeant, and passed through the various grades of promotion until commissioned first lieutenant. At the siege of Knoxville, Tenn., November 29, 1863, he received a wound so serious that it disabled him for life, and he was furloughed home. He was never able to return to his command, and was eventually discharged on account of disability, although in the meantime, for gallantry in the face of the enemy and for meritorious conduct in the line of duty, he was promoted to the captaincy of company D, of his own regiment, the duties of which office his injury precluded him from performing.

May 30, 1865, Capt. Grinnell was united in marriage with Miss Rachel A. Phillips, a native of Portage county and daughter of Benjamin Phillips. Mr. Phillips was at one time a member of the state legislature of Massachusetts, from which state he came to Ohio and settled on an extensive farm in Franklin township, Portage county, where his wife ended her days. Mr. Phillips attained great prominence, locally, after coming to this county, and died in Rayenna, honored by all who ever knew him. Mr. and Mrs. Grinnell have had no children born to them, but have adopted a son, William P. Grinnell, now seventeen years of age and attending school in Hudson.

Soon after his marriage Capt. Grinnell was appointed deputy county auditor of Portage county, which position he was ably filling when elected county auditor in 1868, and this important and responsible office he held for twelve consecutive years—a recognition by the public of ability and integrity seldom accorded to official incumbents. In 1883 the captain was appointed, by the governor of the state, a member of the tax commission created to revise the tax laws, but impaired health did not permit his acceptance of the onerous and delicate office.

Capt. Grinnell has been an important factor in the material progress of Ravenna. was one of the founders and builders of the Ravenna Flint Glass works, and was secretary and treasurer of the company until 1884; he drafted the original bill to authorize the erection of the present court house, which bill was approved by the state legislature, and the county commissioners instructed to issue bonds and proceed with the work, Capt. Grinnell being appointed a member of the building committee by the court of common pleas. The captain was also the author of the present system of water-works in Ravenna, which were constructed in 1885-86, the captain having in charge the interests of the city as its agent; for nearly nine years he was a member of the board of trustees of these works, and for several years the secretary of the board. In 1890 the captain was one of the incorporators of the Ravenna Brick & Tile Manufacturing company, of which he has ever since been the secretary and treasurer. The capital stock of this company is $15,000, and it gives constant work to a force of eighteen employees.

In politics Capt. Grinnell is a republican, and an active one. He has served a number of years as chairman, secretary and treasurer of the republican county committee, and in 1888 was a delegate to the national convention which nominated Benjamin Harrison for the presidency of the United States. In 1890 he was appointed, without his knowledge, a member of the state board of equalization, the jurisdiction of which extended over the five counties of Ashtabula, Geauga, Lake, Portage and Summit; about the same time he was appointed supervisor of the Eighth census district, comprising twelve counties - both of which positions he filled with consummate The captain has also served as a member of the board of deputy state supervisors of elections under the provisions of the Australian ballot law, and has been a member of the Soldiers' relief commission ever since its formation.

In religion, Mr. and Mrs. Grinnell cling to the faith of the Congregationalists and are both active in the work of their church. Fraternally, the captain is an Odd Fellow and a zealous member of the Grand Army of the Republic, being a charter member and commander of the first post organized in Portage county (at Kent) and a charter member of the David McIntosh at Ravenna, of which he is past post commander. The social standing of the captain and his wife is most enviable, forming, as they do, the center of a constantly widening circle of admiring friends.

ILLIAM T. GRUNDEL, the well-known cigar manufacturer of Ravenna, Ohio, was born in the kingdom of Prussia, Germany, February 24, 1828, and is a son of John and Louisa Josephine (Lucke) Grundel, both of whom have long been deceased. The father descended from a representative German family that for generations had held offices of trust under the government; the father of subject's mother was captain and owner of a merchant vessel, and was engaged in trading with all the cities on the coast of the North sea, and other of her relatives are now holding offices under the government. There were six children born to John and Louisa J. Grundel, viz: Henrietta, Robert, Adolph, William, Theodore, Albert and Albertine, all now deceased, excepting Adolph and William Theodore, the last named being the subject, whose name opens this paragraph. Adolph, who served as a sharpshooter in the army, still resides in Prussia, in retirement.

William Theodore Grundel, the subject, received a sound literary education in his native country, and after leaving school was employed by the government in its revenue department—a year and a half on land and about eight months on board of a revenue cutter. In 1848 he came to the United States, landed from the steamer Herman in New York city, where he remained about three months, thence went to Boston, Mass., returned to New York, and next went to Richmond, Va., where he served an apprenticeship of two years at cigar-He then visited all the cities of any importance along the Atlantic coast from Maine to Texas, and finally married, in 1856, Miss Adeline Adams, of Connecticut, a daughter of Lorenzo and Susan (Woodworth, Adams, of whom the former was a native of Massachusetts and the latter of the Nutmeg state. Mrs. Grundel was educated in the public schools and the Ladies' seminary of Suffield, Conn., and at the time of her marriage her father was the proprietor of the Enfield Bridge hotel, at Enfield, that state. lady, who was born in 1836, died in Ravenna, Ohio, October 16, 1884, the mother of three children, viz: Albertine, Willie and Bertha. Of these, Albertine is the wife of the Rev. I. M. Van Horn, who was formerly pastor of the Christian church of Ravenna, but is now pastor of the Disciples' church of Warren, Ohio, and has under consideration a recent call to the pastorate of the West London tabernacle, England; Bertha is the wife of S. R. Metzger, of Cleveland, Ohio, and Willie died October 20, 1872, his remains being interred in Maple Grove cemetery, Ravenna.

After his marriage Mr. Grundel resided in Suffield, Conn., until 1859, when he came to Ohio and secured a position in Elyria. had been there about a year and a half when Lyman Moses, a well-known cigar manufacturer of Rayenna, Ohio, but formerly of Suffield, Conn., where he and our subject had worked together, hearing of Mr. Grundel's presence in Elyria, wrote to him and offered him a more remunerative situation in Ravenna, which was accepted, and for twenty years Mr. Grundel was in the employ of Mr. Moses, to the entire satisfaction of both parties. In 1880 Mr. Grundel rented a storeroom in the Otto Sontum block, north of the court house, Ravenna, and, with a borrowed capital of $400, purchased a stock of tobacco and smokers' articles and entered on the first business venture of his life. Inside of one year he so prospered that he was able to refund the borrowed money; from time to time he added to his stock and fixtures. and by hard work and close attention to business eventually reached the foremost position in his line in Ravenna. He to-day enjoys a lucrative trade, both wholesale and retail. manufacturing some of the most favorite brands of cigars now used in the city and county, including the Perfectos, at ten cents each; the Golden Keys and Cubanas, at five cents each, and numerous other brands of equally good quality, but not, as yet, equally popular, yet destined to become so, as he never sends out an inferior article. In politics Mr. Grundel is a republican and a stanch friend of protection of American industries. He has served as a member of the Ravenna city council, resigning the latter position to accept the office of corporation, township and school treasurer, still holding that of township treasurer. Fraternally he is a Freemason, having been made such in Norfolk (Va.) lodge in 1851, and is a charter member of Crescent lodge, Knights of Pythias, at Ravenna. His name as a business man is without a stain, and the high esteem in which he is held as a citizen is the just reward of his personal merits.

LBERT HALE, one of the most influential farmers of Springfield township and secretary of the Summit county Agricultural society, was born July 7, 1845, at the old homestead near Mogadore, which has witnessed the development of three generations of Hales. He is of Welsh descent, and traces the arrival of his paternal ancestry in this country to the year 1636. His great-grandfather, Samuel Hale, was reared in Connecticut, and about the year 1802 settled in Suffield, Portage county, Ohio. being one of the pioneers of that region. He was the father of the died there in 1800. following children: Thomas, Samuel, Orestes. who died of small-pox shortly after his arrival in Portage county, and Mrs. Martin Kent. Thomas, the eldest son, acquired a considerable education for that place and period, and became one of the pioneer school-teachers. He also interested himself largely in politics, and was also a land owner of considerable note about Suffield Center. About the year 1831 he moved to Mogadore and continued his vocation of teaching. He was for many years a justice of the peace, and was a man of much prominence and great personal influence in the community. His wife was Laura Moore, a native of Connecticut. Her father, Nathan Moore, was a surveyor and civil engineer, who settled in Canfield, Ohio, about 1799, and in 1806 located in Springfield township, Summit county. He was a giant in size and strength, being six feet six inches in height. He cleared and improved what is now known as the Christ farm, and was concerned in all the original surveys of this region. He was a noted hunter in his day, and one of the best known and most influential pioneers.

To Thomas and Laura Moore) Hale was born but one child, Austin Moore, father of our subject. He was born May 2, 1814, on the farm in Springfield township. He became the pioneer nurseryman of Summit county, and conducted this business successfully until his death, which occurred February 25, 1889. He was married twice, his first wife being a daughter of Ephraim Bellows, a native of Connecticut, who bore him four children—Thomas, Albert, Laura (Mrs. Henry H. Stahl), and Mary (Mrs. Frank Hoff). His second wife was Laura, daughter of Erastus Brown, of Weymonth, Medina county, Ohio. To this union was born one daughter, Nellie.

Thomas Hale was known for many years as an ultra-abolitionist of the radical sort, who, from the passage of the fugitive slave law in 1852 until the war, refused to take an oath to support the constitution of the United States; was one of the most active conductors on the underground railroad in days when avowed kindness to runaway slaves involved much personal risk, and was a direct violation of the law as it then existed.

Albert Hale was given a careful education in the common schools and grew up to a thorough acquaintance with the details of the unrsery business, in which he was engaged with his father until the latter's death in 1889. He has always taken an active interest in the county's agricultural prosperity, and since 1882 has been a director in the Summit county Agricultural society, and since 1889 the secretary of that influential association. He is keenly alive to the county's best interests, and particularly to those of Springfield township, having unselfishly devoted much of his time to public affairs. For fifteen years he served as a member of the Mogadore school board, interesting himself largely in educational matters, and for nine years was justice of the peace. Politically he is an earnest republican. He has been a member of Akron lodge, No. 83, F. & A. M., for nearly thirty years, and is a charter member of Springfield grange, P. of H., of Springfield; also a member of the state board of agriculture.

On September 28, 1871, Mr. Hale was united in marriage to Ella, daughter of Henry and Mary (Gilbert) Smyth, early settlers of Suffield, Portage county, Ohio, and to them have been born five children, viz.: Ernest T., Florence, Amy, Warren M. and Constance. Ernest T. is now at Otterbein university, Westerville, where he has been for three years pursuing his studies in the classical course. Florence is pursuing a musical course, and has spent one year at Hiram college. Both are graduates of the Mogadore high school; the others are still at school at Mogadore.

ON. CHARLES OVIATT HALE, exstate representative from Summit county in the Ohio general assembly, and a prominent farmer of Bath township. Summit county, was born on the farm he now owns and occupies March 14, 1850, and is a descendant of one of the oldest families of New England.

The first authoritative record of the Hale family in America is traced to Samuel Hale, who was a soldier in the Pequot war of 1639 and supposedly came from Wales, where the name was well known and the male members of the family noted for their immense physical proportions and great strength, and the female members for their great beauty and refinement

Samuel Hale was a landed proof manners. prietor in Hartford, now in Connecticut but originally an adjunct of the Massachusetts colony, and died November 9, 1693, the father of the following-named children: Martha, Samuel (2d), John, Mary, Rebecca, Thomas, Ebenezer and Dorothy. The second Samuel Hale served in the legislature of his state for a number of years and died November 18, 1711, the father, by his first wife, Ruth Edwards, of the following-named children: Samuel(3), Mary and Ruth; and by his second wife, Mary Welles, of Jonathan, David, Joseph and Benjamin. Of the children born to the marriage of Samuel (2) and his wife, Mary Welles, Jonathan had but one child, Theodore, who was born February 6, 1735, and died May 14, 1807, father of the following children: Rachel, Lucy, Jehiel (1st), Ruth, Jehiel (2d), Theodore, Sarah, Samuel, Solomon, Jonathan (2d), and Abigail.

Jonathan Hale (2d) grandfather of subject, was born in Glastonbury, Hartford county, Conn., April 23, 1777, married Mercy S. Piper July 11, 1802, and in 1810 came to Ohio. this union were born Sophronia, William, Pamelia, Andrew, Abigail and James M. mother, Mrs. Mercy S. Hale, was called away October 16, 1829, and the father next married, November 2, 1830, Mrs. Sarah (Cozad) Mather, and to this union were born Jonathan D., Mercy A. and Samuel C. The grandfather of subject, Jonathan Hale (2d), was the first actual settler in Bath township, and it was at his suggestion that the township received its name when it was organized in 1818. He was a man fully six feet in height, weighed 180 pounds, and was, therefore, proportionately well formed. He was not given to garrulousness, although he was well educated for his day and was a constant reader and passionately fond of music. He was deeply religious, and his habits were such as to show that religion with him was no affectation. He was a husbandman by vocation and also a skilled brickmaker, and in the latter capacity burned the brick for and built the dwelling, in 1826-27, which is now occupied by the subject of this memoir. Mr. Hale died May 14, 1854, and his mortal remains lie interred in the cemetery originally on the old homestead, where a beautiful granite monument marks his last resting place.

Andrew Hale, son of Jonathan (2d) by his first marriage, was born in Bath township, December 5, 1811, and was the first white child to open its eyes within its limits at the time of birth. He here grew to manhood, received his education in the pioneer school and was reared to farming on the homestead his father had bewn from the wilderness. 12, 1838, he married Miss Jane Mather, who was born in Northfield township, and who bore her husband six children, viz: Pamela L., wife of W. C. Oviatt, now a resident of Florida; Sophronia I., who is married to S. I. Ritchie, of Tallmadge township, Summit county, Ohio; Clara, now Mrs. L. H. Ashman, also of Tallmadge township; Charles Oviatt, the subject of this biography; Alida, wife of Truman Humphrey, of Richfield, Summit county; and John P., a jeweler in Akron. The father of these children was a life-long member of the Congregational church and in politics was a stanch republican, and upon its birth he ardently expoused its principles and exercised his franchise for every candidate of the party till his death. He was a genial gentleman, a true friend and and kind neighbor; a strictly honest man, a useful citizen and an affectionate husband and father. His death occurred July 29, 1884, on the farm on which he was born, and was deeply deplored, not only by his own family, but by the entire community in which he had passed all his pure and unsulfied stay on earth. His widow, now in the declining years of life, is being filially and affectionately cared for by her eldest son, Charles Oviatt, the subject of this sketch.

Charles Oviatt Hale, by inheritance and the purchase of the rights of the other heirs, is now the sole owner of the original Hale homestead in Bath township. This farm contains 200 finely tilled acres and is situated in the beautiful Cuyahoga bottom, and here the subject was reared to manhood. He passed through the usual common-school course, also attended the preparatory school at Oberlin, and graduated from the commercial college. He has been an omnivorous reader, and public affairs, political economy and popular jurisprudence have been his favorite studies. politics he is a republican and has been an active factor in engineering the success of his party in local elections. He has never missed voting at a state election since attaining his majority, and has probably represented his township in more county conventions than any other man of his age in Summit county. has officiated three years as township trustee, several years as school director, was elected to the state legislature in 1801, and was reelected at the close of his term, so satisfactorily had he served his constinency, and has filled out his second term.

Hon. Charles O. Hale cast his first presidential vote for U. S. Grant, and has ever since served the republican party with unswerving fidelity. He was the fourth representative of Summit county who served two consecutive terms in the state assembly, a fact indicative of his personal popularity. He is also secretary of the Summit county Sunday-school union. Mrs. Hale was a daughter of William T. and Mary (Drushel) Cranz, and was born November 22, 1846, and is one of thirteen children—six sons and seven daughters—of whom eleven reached maturity. Her father was a native of Germany, came to America about 1834, located, first, in Holmes county, came to Summit county in 1863, and here died in 1895, a devout member of the German Reformed church, and in politics a democrat. Mrs. Cranz is a native of Westmoreland county, Pa., was born June 22, 1826, and now resides in Bath township, a member of the Congregational church at Hammond's Corners, and also a member of the King's Daughters.

Mr. Hale was united in marriage, May 20, 1875, with Miss Pauline Cranz, but no children have come to add to the happiness of his home and to perpetuate his honored name. He is a deacon in the Congregational church and for years has served as superintendent of the Sunday-school at Bath. His public services have won for him the esteem of the entire community, and his upright and conscientious walk through life has won him universal respect.

W. HALL, one of the best-known men in Summit county, and the junior member of the firm of Myers & Hall, operating a large and flourishing pottery at Mogadore, was born in Rootstown township, Portage county, Ohio, August 15, 1844. His father, Robert Hall, was born in Armstrong county, Pa., in 1812, son of John Hall, a wealthy farmer of that region. While Robert was yet a young man he came to Mogadore and engaged in the sale of general merchandise on a scale which was considered quite extensive for that time and place. After two years of this business he married and moved to Portage county, where he settled on a farm in Rootstown township. wife was Mary Warner, a native of Howard county, Md., whose parents, Jacob and Mary (Clary) Warner, came to Ohio from Maryland, first locating in Stark county, afterward coming to Mogadore, where they passed the remainder of their days, Mr. Warner being a strong pillar in the Methodist Episcopal church at that place. Our subject's father was a man of more than ordinary business ability, and was widely reputed in the community. He was a stanch old-line whig, and both he and his wife were zealous in the work of the Methodist Episcopal church. To them were born the following children: Edwin D., deceased; Albert W.; Mary J., wife of Edwin Taylor, and A. W., our subject. Mr. Hall died November 10, 1851, and his good wife followed him to the grave in March of the following year.

In his youth A. W. Hall received the advantages offered by the Oshkosh (Wis.) city schools and an excellent select school. sponse to his country's call, and while yet a mere lad, he enlisted in company F, Seventh Ohio volunteer infantry, the date of his enlistment being April 24, 1861. At the end of the three months he re-enlisted in the service. going out with company G, Twenty-ninth Ohio volunteer infantry, in which regiment he saw service in Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Georgia and Alabama, and participated in some of the most important engagements of the war, among which were the battles of Winchester, Chancellorsville, Lookout Mountain, the Atlanta campaign and others of a notable character. At Chancellorsville he was struck by a bursting shell and fell to the earth stunned, and while lying thus he was made a prisoner and sent to Belle Isle, and thence to Libby prison. After three months here he was paroled and sent to Annapolis, Md., where he remained another three months. here he was detailed as commissary sergeant in the camp of the paroled prisoners, a very responsible position, the duties of which he faithfully performed. He later rejoined his regiment at Lookout Mountain, engaging in "the battle above the clouds." He was in all the forty days' campaign and engagements attending the downfall of Atlanta, and continued on with Sherman's hosts to the sea. He received his honorable discharge in December, 1865. Mr. Hall does not draw a pension.

In March, 1869, Mr. Hall was united in marriage to Miss Helen J. Warren, who was born in Chyahoga county, Ohio, in 1845, the daughter of William H. and Phæbe (Proper) Warren, natives of New Hampshire. To Mr. and Mrs. Hall were born a son, Harry R., and a daughter. Eva A., the latter of whom lives at home. Harry R. Jacob Hall, father of Joseph W., was born in England and came to America in 1812, during the war with Great Britain, and was made a prisoner by the American officials, who intended to return him to his native land, but he made his escape and finally settled in Portage county, Ohio, and engaged in farming. To his marriage with Miss Osborn were born eight children, of whom three survive, viz: Elizabeth F., widow of Anthony Swartwout; Emerette, widow of Joseph Mack, and Joseph W., the subject of this biography. The deceased were named Hannah; Lewis, who died in September, 1866, at the age of thirty-three years; Elias A., who was a member of Thence he went to Cincinnati, and for two years was a teacher in the commercial department of the Nelson business college; he then became bookkeeper for the Cincinnati Coffin company; then for the Mosler & Baughman Safe & Lock company; later, for the W. E. Dibble & Co. book publishing company, all of Cincinnati. In 1881 Mr. Hammel came to Akron and purchased a half-interest in the Akron business college, and, associated with O. S. Warmer, carried on this institution for six months, when the co-partnership was dissolved. Mr. Hammel then established the now well-known Hammel's business college, which he has since conducted with so unparalleled success and made one of the leading institutions of the kind in the state of Ohio. Here he gives thorough instruction, assisted by a competent corps of professors, in all branches pertaining to a business carriculum and for placing the student in a condition to be able to accept any position in the business world. The line of tuition may briefly be summarized as follows: Business arithmetic, practical penmanship, practical letter writing, commercial law, short hand, type writing, banking, commission, transportation, etc. Day and night sessions are held the year round. in infancy. The death of the father took place in Portage county in April, 1883, at the age of sixty-seven years, and that of the widow occurred June 27, 1894, when she was seventy-five years old. Both had long been consistent members of the Evangelical church.

DAMS B. L. HOWARD, M. D., a leading physician of Summit county, Ohio, and proprietor of the Fair Oaks Villa, at Cuyahoga Falls, an institution lounded in 1894, for the treatment of patients afflicted with mental or nervous disorders, was born in Boston, Mass., January 7, He received his medical education at the Wooster Medical university of Cleveland. Ohio, from which he graduated in 1891, and at once commenced practice in that city, but was soon appointed, by the Ohio state board of insane, as third assistant physician of the state hospital for the insane at Cleveland, with which institution he held connection for two years, and during this period was successively promoted to second and first assistant physician, in recognition of his superior merit and skill.

In the winter of 1893-94 Dr. Howard came to Cuyahoga Falls and purchased the elegant brown stone villa known as Fair Oaks, originally erected and occupied by the wealthy Newberry family, and converted it into a sanitarium for the treatment of mental disorders—the interior of the house being large and well adapted for the purpose, with all the modern improvements, including steam heat, electric light, baths, etc. It is to all intents and purposes a "Family Home," where everything is made as homelike as possible—intelligent men and women being employed as attendants and companions for the patients.

The feeling of social degradation that is commonly felt by patients in retreats and public institutions is not experienced here. utmost possible liberty is permitted under suitable guardianship to all the patients, and each one is regarded and treated as a member of a Each case receives the attenprivate family. tion and study given to private practice, and when needed the ablest medical talent in the country is called into consultation. drives in the vicinity are considered delightful, and for healthfulness of location Fair Oaks is unsurpassed. A conveyance is kept for the pleasure and use of the patients, and no pains are spared in affording each patient all the happiness and recreation possible. One excellent feature to be considered by all is the limited number of patients, not more than fifteen being cared for at any time.

Dr. Howard has been remarkably successful in his specialty, and, being advanced in his views on mental ailments and experienced in their treatment, he contemplates making further improvement at Fair Oaks by the erection of isolated colleges at pleasant spots in its grounds, in which the inmates will have every home comfort and each individual be treated in quiet and seclusion, as his judgment may select. The entire establishment marks an age of progress, and it is gratifying to see that persons suffering from mental and nervous disorders can find a home in this humane institution and be treated in a kind and rational manner and restored to health at a moderate cost.

Fraternally, Dr. Howard is a member of Cuyahoga Falls lodge, F. & A. M., No. 117, Washington chapter of Akron, and Akron commandery, and also of the Cleveland Medical society and of the American Psychological society. He is a consistent member of the Baptist church, and is esteemed wherever known for his philanthropic and truly humane impulses, as well as for his more than ordinary degree of professional skill.

HARLES R. HAMMOND, of the firm of Hammond Brothers, breeders of and dealers in live stock, with their farm in the southwest part of Copley township, Summit county, Ohio, was born in this township September 27, 1860.

Of these, James was married, June 30, 1838, to Miss Elizabeth Spensley, who was born October 4, 1819, a daughter of James and Nancy Spensley, who reared a family of nine children, viz: Ann, Thomas S., George, James E., William A., Elizabeth, Frank P., Charles R. and Alice D. In 1848 James Hammond came to the United States, landing in New York June 20, with $26 in his pocket and his wife and five children to care for. He found his way to Sharon, Medina county, Ohio, where he worked a year in a paint-mill, and then came to Western Star, Summit county, and was the first milk peddler in the village; thence moved to the village of Akron and was employed at driving a milkwagon until 1854, when he came to Copley township and purchased a small farm, on which he lived five years and then sold, and purchased a larger place in the southern part of the township, and here, by hard work and good management, secured a competency. Although he had not attended school after his fourteenth year, he became quite well informed, and in 1868 was elected president of the Summit county Agricultural society, and on his retirement from the office, six years later, was presented by the members of the society with a gold watch and chain in recognition of his services. He was a very popular and public-spirited gentleman, and although frequently solicited to accept public positions, would never accept anything higher than township offices, several of which he filled with great credit to himself. His death took place in August, 1881, and no more respected citizen ever lived in Copley township.

Charles R. Hammond remained with his father until the death of the latter, when he and his brother, Frank P., purchased their present stock farm, which comprises 326 acres of fine land, 180 acres of which were bought from the other heirs to the Hammond estate. In 1890, Charles R. Hammond, who had received a very fair education in the Copley schools, entered the Toronto (Canada) Veterinary college, studied there one year, and then entered the National Veterinary college at Washington, D. C., from which he graduated March 19, 1893, being thus fully prepared for conducting his present business. Fraternally, he is a charter member of tent No. 204, K. O. T. M., of Copley.

Frank P. Hammond, an elder brother of Charles R., and his business partner, was born in Copley township April 15, 1857, acquired his education in the Copley district and high schools, and has been a farmer and stock raiser all his life. The father was born in Wayne county, Ohio, May 1, 1827, and the mother, a native of England, was born Jannary 13, 1830, and came with her parents to the United States at the age of thirteen years. They were married March 28, 1850, and had born to them the following children: Maud, August 4, 1852, now the wife of S. A. Boroes, an attorney of California; Rollin, April 1, 1856, and now a resident of Canton, Ohio; Florence, the wife of Mr. Hammond; Sadie, wife of Sherman Tobes, of Ashtabula county, May 28, 1864, and one child that died in infancy. The father, who was a farmer, died July 31, 1888, and the mother, January 18, 1894, both expiring at the home of the Hammond brothers. The marriage of Frank P. Hammond has been blessed with two children, viz: Herbert, born March 6, 1886, and James G., born December 23, 1889.

The Hammond Bros. conduct a very prosperous business, are well known over a large expanse of territory, and hold about three public stock sales per year, which are attended by buyers from many states. The brothers are greatly respected for their integrity and fair dealing, and are liberal in their support of every project designed for the promotion of public prosperity.

OBERT J. HARPER is a native of the Buckeye state and was born in Trumbull, Ashtabula county, June 13, 1875, his parents being Robert D. and Theressa (Wintersteene) Harper, also natives of Ohio.

When a mere boy, Robert J. Harper was taken by his parents to Cleveland, where he received his preliminary education in the public schools; he later attended the Spencerian Business college, from which he was graduated in 1891, and then went to Chargin Falls, and for two years was employed by S. M. Armour as clerk, for which position his education had fully qualified him. At the conclusion of his faithful term of valuable service with Mr. Armour, Mr. Harper came to Ravenna and here accepted a clerkship in the extensive grocery house of J. S. Smith &

Sons, with whom he remained a little more than two years, when he returned to Cleveland, where he was proffered, and accepted, a situation in the large clothing establishment of J. L. Hudson & Co., in the Wilshire block, on Superior street. With this firm he remained until the spring of 1896, when he came back to Ravenna, and in April of the same year rented the spacious storeroom at No. 124 Chestnut street, opposite the court house, and opened an elegant billiard parlor.

Mr. Harper is a member of the Methodist church, and his father, who is also a resident of Ravenna, affiliates with the Odd Fellows' lodge of the city. EORGE W. HART, a retired farmer of Stowe township, Summit county, Ohio, and a respected citizen, is a descendant from an old colonial family of New England.

Rufus Hart, grandfather of George W. Hart, was born in Litchfield county, Conn., and moved to Batavia, Genesee county, N. Y., at an early day. He was a major in the war of 1812, but ranked as lieutenant at the battles of Chippewa, Lundy's Lane, and the burning of Buffalo. He was a farmer, came to Summit county, Ohio, in 1815, and purchased a farm one mile south of Akron, which he cleared up from the woods. Maj. Hart had a good farm of 312 acres. In old age he retired on his farm, where he died at about the age of eighty years, a member of the Universalist church and the father of the following children: Clarissa, John C., Lucretia, Lucinda and Edward.

John C. Hart, father of George W. Hart, the subject, was born April 17, 1798, at Cornwall, Litchfield county, Conn. He was at the blowing up of the fort at Buffalo, in 1812, at the age of fourteen years, and was engaged in carrying news from one point to another. He enlisted when but fourteen or fifteen years old in the cavalry service, and was with his father at Newark, Fort George, and other contested points. On the evacuation of Fort George he suffered great hardships, as they had no tents, no blankets, nor clothing, and slept on the ground. He was at Black Rock, and was employed as a bearer of dispatches, when the British attacked Fort Erie in 1814. He came to Ohio in May, 1815, with his father, and when they located in Middlebury, East Akron, there were but three or four log houses in what is now a thriving city. When he was but twenty-one years old he went south for employment, and traveled on foot to Steubensville, Ohio, floated down the Ohio river on a raft, which lodged on an island, and made his way as best he could to Cincinnati, where he bought a skiff and paddled his way to Shawneetown, but, not finding employment, he boarded his skiff and went to St. Louis. and there worked in a mill two months and then in a brick yard, but, being taken sick with fever and ague, returned home the following year, and purchased fifty acres of land south of Middlebury, built a house and barn, and cleared his land, and married, February 12, 1831, Margaret A. Sterling (born December 11, 1811), a daughter of John Sterling. They had six children: George W., John S., Charles S., Elizabeth, Fannie, and Hiram I.

Mrs. Hart died May 17, 1863, and Mr. Hart next married Mrs. Mary Sterling—a widow, whose maiden name was Tod.

Mr. Hart prospered and bought more land, until he owned over 300 acres, and for many years owned and managed three different hotels at Akron and Middlebury, and was also a large mail contractor, and at his death left a large estate. He was a colonel in the old state militia, and was very highly respected among the pioneers, and his advice was much sought after. He died August 20, 1880, aged eightytwo years, four months and three days.

George W. Hart, whose name opens this memoir, was born July 12, 1832, in East Akron, Ohio, and received a common education. He married, August 18, 1853, in Akron, Hannah Anna Beardsley, who was born July 18, 1832, a daughter of Talmon and Temperance (Spicer) Beardsley. In 1862, Mr. Hausman was united in marriage with Miss Margaret Sisler, of Manchester, of whom further mention is made in the biographies of Dr. Adam and John Sisler, on another page, and to this marriage two children have been born—Nellie and Fannie. HILIP HAWK, a successful farmer of Suffield township, Portage county, Ohio, is a native of the county, was born October 2, 1840, and is the son of Philip and Leona (Dock) Hawk, the father now deceased.

The parents of Mr. Hawk were natives of Germany, the father having been born in Alsace January 1, 1815. He came to America with his parents about 1835 and settled in Portage county, and here met his countrywoman, Leona Dock, daughter of Frederic Dock, whom he married. To this union were born four children—Daniel, Philip, Frederick and Lewis. After farming in Suffield township fourteen years, Mr. Hawk removed to Springfield township, Summit county, where he followed agricultural pursuits until his death, which occurred August 13, 1895, in the faith of the German Reformed church, at the age of seventy-nine years and five months. His widow, now hale and hearty, at the age of seventy-two years, still resides on the homestead in Summit county.

Philip Hawk, the grandfather of subject, was one of the earliest settlers of Portage county, followed farming all his life, and reared a family of five children, of whom two are still living—Daniel and Michael; the three deceased were named Abbie, Kate and Philip (father of subject). Frederick Dock, the maternal grandfather of subject, was also a native of Germany, and on coming to America lived a few years in Portage county, as a farmer, and then moved to Indiana, where he and his wife passed the remainder of their days.

Philip Hawk, the subject of this biographical notice, was reared to farming on his father's homestead and attended the public schools. At the age of twenty-five years he began farming on his own account in Springfield township, Summit county, but four years later removed to Tallmadge township, where he followed the same vocation for six years. In 1885, Mr. Hawk bought his present farm in Suffield township from John Pero, and in the spring of the same year took possession, and this has ever since been his home.

The marriage of Mr. Hawk was solemnized in Stark county, Ohio, February 14, 1875, with Miss Elvina Ginder, who was born April 27, 1840, a daughter of Adam and Margaret (Keller) Ginder, and this union has been blessed with four children—Mary, Frederick, Maggie and Albert—all still under the parental roof. Adam Ginder and wife were both born in Germany, and now live in Stark county; they have had born to them ten children, of whom four still survive, viz: Elvina (now Mrs. Hawk), Mary, Adam and Caroline (wife of Albert Moore).

Mr. and Mrs. Hawk are members of the Reformed church and have fully lived up to its teachings, and in this faith they have reared their family. In politics, Mr. Hawk has given his allegiance to the republican party, and although never desirous of public office, has yet consented to serve his fellow-citizens as a school director and as supervisor of his township, He has always been an industrious husbandman and an excellent manager, and has one of the best-improved farms in Suffield township, where he and his family enjoy the respect of a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

UGENE A. HAWKINS, a well-known agriculturist of Copley township, Summit county, Ohio, is a native of this township and was born June 28, 1854. In January, 1840, George W. Hawkins married Miss Matilda Hubbard, who was born in Batavia, N. Y., November 5, 1818, a daughter of Reuben Hubbard, and to this union were born five children, viz: Adelia, born June 4, 1845, died in infancy; Eliza, born June 4, 1845, was married to W. The two girls, Jessie and Mabel, are students at the Copley high school, and Jessie will graduate in the class of 1899.

Mr. and Mrs. Hawkins have a beautiful home in Copley township, about nine miles from Akron. Their farm is well cultivated. At his marriage Mr. Hawkins purchased the old homestead, on which he has made numerous improvements. In politics Mr. Hawkins is a stanch republican and cast his first presidential vote for R. B. Hayes, and for several years has been a member of the school board. He and wife are members of the East Granger Disciples' church and socially they stand among the leading citizens of Copley township.

Thomas E. Heath, the paternal grandfather of the doctor, was a soldier in the war of the Revolution, and the maternal ancestor, Isaac Chamberlain, was an officer in that war. Dr. Heath is a son of Stephen, who was a son of Thomas Heath, a farmer and blacksmith of Sharon, Conn., where he was born. Heath was also a blacksmith and farmer, and married Hannah Chamberlain, daughter of Isaac Chamberlain, a Revolutionary soldier. Stephen Heath moved, in 1835, to Geneseo, Livingston county, N. Y., where he lived on a farm of 240 acres until 1868, when he died, aged eighty-five years. He was a trusted man and held the offices of superintendent of the poor and supervisor—the latter an office equivalent to that of county commissioner in Ohio. Robinson, who wrote several text-books on mathematics which were adopted at West Point, and also Judge Samuel Treat, afterwards of the supreme bench of Missouri. Our subject then began the study of medicine in Geneseo, N. Y., in 1847, under Dr. W. E. Lauderdale and Dr. Daniel H. Bis-

The same year, 1851, the doctor settled in Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio, and soon established a large and lucrative practice. He bought out a drug store, and in company with his brother, Frederic S. Heath, now controls the largest drug business in Summit county with but one exception, that of a drug store established some years ago in Akron, and for many years it was the only store of the kind in Cayuhoga Fhlls. The doctor's practice, in his more active days, extended far and wide throughout the surrounding country. He is a member of the Northeast Medical association, and has always been a patron of the leading medical periodicals and has accumulated a valuable medical library.

Dr. Heath married, in 1854, Miss Emma A. Bruce, born August 22, 1834, in Troy, Geauga county, Ohio, a daughter of Franklin and Elethea (Lamb) Bruce. The boyhood days of Joseph Heighton were passed mostly in Edinburg, where he received a common-school education only, but at the age of twenty-three years was qualified to teach singing school, and at the same age was elected a school director and held the office many years. At the same age, also, he began lecturing on temperance, and in this field his services, for a long time, were in frequent demand. He has himself never handled nor tasted alcoholic beverages, nor has he used tobacco in any form. He was also, for about twenty-three years, a teacher of vocal music in Summit and other counties of the state. In 1863 he settled in Franklin township and engaged in agricultural pursuits until 1879, when he abandoned his original farm and moved to his present place, where he has principally been engaged in fruit culture, in conjunction with general agriculture.

The marriage of Mr. Heighton took place July 19, 1848, to Miss Olive Case, a daughter of Ariel and Minerva (Colton) Case, and this union has been blessed with four children, viz: Marius; Ann, wife of N. E. Olin, of Kent; Parker H. and Lloyd B. The parents of Mrs. Heighton were born in Tolland county, Conn., the father, Ariel, in 1804 and Minerva, the mother, in 1805. Ariel Case was brought to Portage county in 1809 by his parents, who settled in Rootstown township, was reared a farmer, and was married December 7, 1824, and had born to him four children, of whom two still survive, viz: Olive, now Mrs. Heighton, and Ashley M., who resides on the old Case homestead at Rootstown; the other two children died in early infancy. The father died May 21, 1884, at the age of eighty years, and the mother May 26, of the same year, aged seventy-nine.

Ariel Case, the paternal grandfather of Mr. Heighton, also a native of Connecticut, and of Scotch descent, came to Portage county, Ohio, in 1809, settled in Rootstown township, and later took part in the war of 1812. He was twice married, his first wife having been Betsey Porter, who bore eight children, viz: Porter, Horace, Ariel, Augusta and Erastus (twins), Hibbard, Truman and Harvey. Mrs. Betsey Case died at the age of forty-one years, and for his second wife Mr. Case married Mrs. Persis Case, née Steward, and to this union were born two children—Benjamin and Perry. Ariel Case died at Rootstown in 1854, at the age of seventy years, and the death of Mrs. Persis Case occurred at the same place. Stephen Colton, the maternal grandfather of Mr. Heighton, was a native of Vermont and settled in Rootstown, Ohio, in 1805, was a farmer, and married Miss Mary Russell, who bore him eight children, viz: Chelsea, Roswell, Mernen, Warren, Josephus, Mary, Prosper and Alva. Mr. Colton was very popular in his township and for a number of years held the office of township trustee. He and wife were consistent members of the Disciples' church, and in this faith he died in 1845, at the age of seventy-five years, and his wife in 1849, aged seventy-three.

ILLIAM A. HELFER, the well-known florist and proprietor of the Imperial greenhouse, Akron, Ohio, is a native of this city, was born July 24, 1860, and is the son of George H. and Rebecca (Luce) Helfer.

The grandparents of subject, Christopher and Lydia (Helman) Helfer, were natives of Pennsylvania of Scotch and German descent respectively, and in 1820 settled in Millbrook, Wayne county, Ohio, where, and in Congress township, Christopher Helfer followed his trade of shoemaking for about twenty years, and then purchased a farm in Congress township, on which he and his wife resided the remainder of their lives. Their children were named Mena (Mrs. Royce Somerton), George H., Mary (Mrs. Stephen Collins), Melinda (Mrs. Parker Campbell), Damel, and Sophia (Mrs. Joseph Sharp.)

George H. Helfer, father of subject, was born in Bellefonte, Pa., January 25, 1820, and the same year was brought, in a covered wagon, to Wayne county, Ohio, by his parents. He received a common-school education, and at the age of fourteen years began clerking in a general store, followed this calling until 1843, and then engaged in the dry-goods business on his own account in Congress township, as a member of the firm of Pancoast & Helfer. In 1847 he purchased his partner's interest and continued alone in Congress township until 1849, when he sold out his store and came to Akron, where, as a member of the firm of Helfer & Sechrist, he embarked in general business. In 1867, Mr. Sechrist sold his interest in this store to Clinton, a son of Mr. Helfer; the firm name was then changed to Helfer & Son, and so remained until 1877, when the father sold his interest to the son, who has since continued in the business alone. Mr. Helfer, the father, who was a stockholder in the Akron Iron company, now engaged himself with this concern as shipping clerk, and for twenty-one years filled this responsible position, when he retired from active business.

George H. Helfer was twice married. first wife, who bore the maiden name of Mary Elgin, was a daughter of Walter and Elizabeth Elgin, of Congress township, Wayne county, and bore her husband five children, of whom the only survivor is Clinton E., the popular druggist mentioned in the preceding The second marriage of Mr. Helfer pargraph. was with Miss Rebecca Luce, daughter of Jonathan and Elizabeth Luce, of Wayne county, Ohio, and to this marriage have also been born five children, of whom four still survive, William A., Emma (Mrs. Clarence Rudolph), Edwin W., and Minnie B. (Mrs. Henry Adams). In his politics Mr. Helfer is a stanch republican, and, as may easily be inferred from the foregoing record, is one of the substantial and most respected citizens of Akron.

William A. Helfer was educated in the public schools of Akron, his native city, and was here reared to manhood. As a young man, he entered the employ of the Akron Iron company as a workman, was promoted to the shipping desk, and later became general foreman of the polishing department, remaining with the company five years. From 1885 until March 1, 1897, he carried on a very successful retail coal trade, but during this interval, in April, 1896, broke ground for the erection of his floricultural plant at Nos. 861-63-65 South Bowery. Having sold his coal office at the date named above, he has since given his whole attention to his greenhouse, which possesses every modern appliance for the generation and cultivation of floral and ornamentalleaf plants. This conservatory, however, became so popular, that in the spring of 1897 Mr. Helfer was compelled to extend its capacity, and it now consists of five divisions or houses, being the largest and most complete industry of its kind in Summit county.

William A. Helfer was united in marriage, June 26, 1893, with Miss Hattie May Rothrock, a daughter of William H. and Sarah A. (Messer) Rothrock, of Akron. Politically, Mr. Helfer is a stanch republican, and fraternally is a member of the Knights of Pythias. As a citizen he stands high in the esteem of the people of Akron and Summit county, and socially he and his wife mingle with the select circles of Akron.

shortly after attaining his majority married, October 6, 1856, Miss Lydia Rice, who was born in Fayette county, Pa., February 22, 1836, a daughter of Sam and Fanny (Strickler) Rice. This marriage has been blessed with five children, born in the following order: Emma Alice, July 14, 1858, wife of Harry Swan, a farmer of Richfield township; Sarah Frances, July 26, 1860, married to Edward Sprankle, a farmer of Bath township; LeRoy, who died in infancy; George W., born October 2, 1863, and now managing the home farm, and Otto R., February 24, 1868, a merchant at Ghent. Mr. and Mrs. Hershey are both active members of the United Brethren church, in which he has been a class leader twenty-five years, and superintendent of the Sunday-school thirty-three years. In politics he is strongly republican, has served seven years as township trustee, and member of the school board.

The fine farm owned by Mr. Hershey comprises 222 acres, is well cultivated, and is improved with substantial modern buildings his new dwelling having been erected in 1893 and is located about seven miles from Akron. He has made a specialty of live stock, raising sheep and Durham cattle, but for the past three years he has taken no active part in the management of the farm, leaving that to his son, George W., and is now practically retired. He has endowed each of his children with $4,000, chiefly in land, and has been very liberal in his aid to all the worthy enterprises and charities of his township. He and his family are highly respected, and fully deserve the great esteem in which they are held.

BRAHAM HERSHEY, son of Jacob and Sarah (Boltz) Hershey, was born in Wayne county. Ohio, October 48, 1844, and for antecedents the reader is referred to the memoir of John Hershey.

elder brother, immediately preceding. His education was acquired in the common schools and farming has been his calling through life. having been reared to this vocation on his father's homestead. February 23, 1864, Abraham Hershey was united in marriage with Miss Mary Baughman, who was born in Baughman township, Wayne county, Ohio, February 11, 1844, a daughter of Jacob and Margaret Clapper Baughman, who early came from Pennsylvania to Wayne county, Ohio, and in whose honor the township in which Mrs. Hershey was born received its name. To this marriage have been born two children: John C., who resides with his parents, and Jessie M., the wife of Frank Rothtrock, of Cleveland.

After his marriage, Mr. Hershey engaged in farming and in dairying, including cheese making, doing a very successful business. 1895, he traded his farm of 145 acres, well improved with modern buildings, for the mill he now owns, one mile west of Ghent, in the valley of Yellowstone creek. This mill has excellent water-power and is also provided with steam-power, and it is the intention of Mr. Hershey to soon introduce the most approved roller machinery for the production of flour, the mill having a very large local trade and being run to its full capacity under the old, or grinding, process. Mr. Hershev is a careful and diligent student of standard books and the better class of journals, and has greatly augmented the common-school education acquired in his youthful days, and the store of useful knowledge he has secured in his mature years has been invariably turned to practical use. Ostensibly a republican in his political views, Mr. Hershev is liberal in his opinions in this regard, as well as in religion. and has held numerous positions of honor and trust in Bath township, enjoying, as he does, the full confidence of his fellow-citizens.

DWARD A. HERSHEY, who was elected county clerk of Summit county, Ohio, November 3, 1896, on the republican ticket, is a native of Chippewa, Wayne county, and was born February 6, 1856, a son of Benjamin and Susan (Wellhouse Hershey, both now deceased.

Benjamin Hershey was a Pennsylvanian by birth, but was brought by his parents to Ohio when but ten years of age, his father, John Hershey, being also a Pennsylvania-German. Benjamin grew to manhood in Wavne county and became one of the most extensive farmers and stockdealers in his part of the state, being a very large shipper of live stock and a solid business man in general. George W. Wellhouse, father of Mrs. Susan Hershev, was born in Germany, but came to Ohio when thirteen years of age, grew to manhood in Wayne county, and also became one of its most prominent citizens; he was a farmer, served his fellow-citizens in the state legislature, also as associate judge for some years, and was a director in the State National Bank of Ohio, and a substantial business man generally. Benjamin Hershev and wife were born seven children, viz: Abraham, deceased; George, a resident of Chippewa, Wayne county; Rev. Simon B., of the Ashland, Ohio, Congregational church; William, of Canton, Ohio; Mary, wife of W. Hemberger, of Akron; Edward A., the subject, and Ella, wife of D. C. Leonard, of Toledo.

Edward A. Hershey, whose name opens this biographical record, passed his early boyhood on his father's farm and was educated at the Smithville high school. On attaining his majority, he succeeded his father in the live-stock trade, to which he devoted his attention, in connection with farming, until 1885. In March, 1886, he came to Akron and associated himself with T. W. McCue in the coal business, and later became general manager of the Superior Coal company, and still later was associated with the Loomis Coal company. A republican in politics, he was elected, in 1892, city clerk of Akron, which position he most ably filled for two terms. In 1896, Mr. Hershey was complimented by his party by being nominated as its candidate for the office of county clerk of Summit, and was elected by a handsome majority. He has been a hard worker in his party's behalf and has served on the Summit county central republican committee, and for five years was committee treasurer. He has always been courteous and obliging in and out of office, and has won for himself a host of friends throughout the county and city. has a splendid reputation as a business man and is a director in the Akron Savings bank, and also in the Summit county Agricultural society, and is an active member of Akron lodge, No. 547, I. O. O. F.

The happy marriage of Mr. Hershey took place, in 1876, with Miss Josie L. Boone, of Sugar Creek, Wayne county, Ohio, and to this union have been born three children, viz: Bianche—who graduated from the Akron high school in the class of 1896—Ella and Roxie. Mrs. Hershey is a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and the family have a delightful home at No. 301 Spice street, where is enjoyed an unusual degree of domestic happiness and comfort.

EORGE HERSHEY, a thriving young farmer of Bath township, Summit county, Ohio, is native here and was born October 2, 1864, a son of John and Lydia (Rice) Hershey, of whom full mention is made in a preceding article. George Hershey was reared on his father's farm, and is an expert husbandman. He received the ordinary common-school education youchsafed to farmers' sons, and on reaching his majority married, December 17, 1885, Miss Kate Moore, who was born November 24, 1868, in Pittsburg, Pa., and in 1878 came to Bath township, Summit county, Ohio, with her adopted parents, John and Loudisa (Morrell) Moore, who settled west of Hammond's Corners.

Mr. Hershey owns a fine farm of eighty acres, which is thoroughly cultivated, tiled throughout, and made profitable; is improved with modern farm-buildings and a large brick dwelling, and, beside this farm, he cultivates the large farm owned by his father, which he leases for this purpose. In politics Mr. Hershey is strongly republican and cast his first presidential vote for Jas. G. Blaine, is an upright and useful citizen, and with his wife is most highly respected in the social circles of Bath township.

TTIS R. HERSHEY, a popular and promising young merchant and the postmaster of Ghent, Bath township, was born in this township February 24, 1868. He comes of a good old colonial His great-great-grandfather was a distinguished veteran in the Revolutionary war, and his great-grandfather. Abraham, was a soldier in the war of 1812. His grandfather, Jacob Hershey, was born in Lebanon county, Pa., July 12, 1812, and was married in 1830 to Sarah Bettz, who was born in the same county December 25, 1812. Two years after their marriage they moved to Wayne county, Ohio, where they resided until 1840, when they came to Bath township, where they passed the remainder of their days, Jacob dying in 1882, and Sarah in 1883. They were the parents of the following children: John, Jacob, Abraham, Henry and Sarah. Both the Hersheys and the Bettzes were of Swiss descent and trace the coming of their ancestors from Switzerland to America to colonial times. The Hershey family is noted for the longevity of its members and the size and strength of its men. The family lends its power and influence to the German Baptist church, and the republican party is gainer, by reason of the earnest political convictions of the men.

John Hershey, the father of our subject, was the first born of his family, was born in Lebanon county, Pa., February 2, 1834. His youth and early manhood were passed with his father upon the home farm, and he was married October 6, 1856, to Miss Lydia Rice, who was born in Fayette county, Pa., February 22, 1836. They are the parents of the following children: Emma A., Sarah F., George W., Ottis R. and Le Roy, the latter dying in infancy. Additional details concerning this family are contained in the biographical sketch of John Hershey.

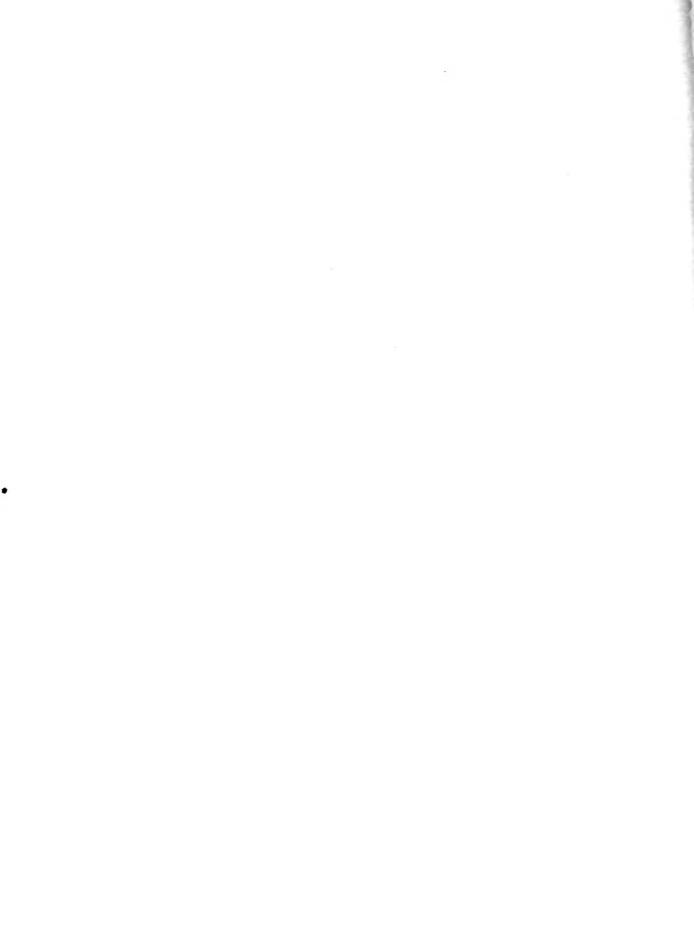

Ottis Rice Hershey is one of the most popular young men in this region. In his early youth he received the advantages offered by the excellent district schools of the township, and upon the solid foundation thus constructed built widely by passing supplemental courses at the Ada Normal school and at Buchtel college. On December 11, 1889, he married Miss Nellie R., daughter of Peter and Mary (Tiernan) Rees, who was born March 28, 1871. The year following his marriage Mr. Hershey engaged in the mercantile business at Ghent. and has been quite successful. In addition to his growing interests at this point he has another store at Codingville, in Medina county, in which he also does a thriving busidess. His services as postmaster at Ghent have given the utmost satisfaction to the public, and as a young man of affairs and promoter of the interests of his community receives a degree of consideration and recognition which marks him as one of the "coming" men of the county. Mr. and Mrs. Hershey have a pleasant home, in which, however, there does not, as yet, fall the patter of infant feet. Mrs. Hershey was a member of the Disciples' church and was devoted to the good works of that body. Since this biography has been written Mr. Hershey lost his companion in life, she dying September 15, 1897, and her remains lie interred in Bath cemetery.

who for ten years was prominent in the mercantile circles of Ravenna, Ohio, was born in Jefferson county, N. Y., September 19, 1840, a son of James and Sallie (Wadsworth) Krake, also natives of the Empire state. The father, who was of German parentage, was a manufacturer of fanning-mills and was also for many years a captain in the state militia. He and wife both died in La Fargeville, Jefferson county, in middle life, leaving the subject an orphan at the age of twelve years, he being the eldest of five children and being left the only survivor of the family.

Mr. Krake received as good an education as the public schools could afford him at his age, and he early entered a general store, in which he was employed until August, 1862, when he enlisted in company M, Fifth New York heavy artillery, which consisted of three battalions—one recruited in Brooklyn, N. Y., one in New York city and one in Jefferson and Lewis counties—in the latter of which subject The regiment was assigned to the army of the Potomac and took part in the Shenandoah valley raid under Gen. Phil. Sheridan, in the battles of Winchester, Cedar Creek, Monocacy and the lesser battles throughout the valley. Soon after leaving the army Lieut, Krake sought Ravenna as a home, and with this city he has been identified ever since. Here he first engaged in the dry-goods business, and later entered into the clothing trade. republican in politics, he was appointed deputy postmaster of Ravenna during Grant's first administration, and during the second Grant administration was commissioned postmaster. So ably did he perform the duties of this office it was thought proper to retain him there during the administration of Haves, Garfield and Arthur, and for one year under Cleveland-a period of thirteen years-when political influence was brought to bear to oust him from of-After being retired from the post-office, Mr. Krake took a year's rest, and then in 1888 embarked in the business of dealer in groceries and provisions, in which he controls the leading trade of Ravenna and gives constant employment to four clerks.

July 8, 1861, Lieut. Krake was joined in wedlock, in Copenhagen, N. Y., with Miss Amelia U. Mitchell, a native of that town, and this union has been blessed with one child—now Mrs. B. P. Converse, of San Antonio, Tex., and the mother of a son, James, and a daughter, Florence.

Lient. Krake was one of the incorporators of the Portage County Building & Loan association and is a member of its board of directors, and he is also prominently identified with most of the fraternal societies of the city. In 1873 he was made a Freemason, being initiated in Unity lodge, No. 12, F. & A. M., of which he is past worshipful master; also of the Mystic Shrine, and the Knights Templar, and is a thirty-second Mason; beside filling many subordinate offices he has served as treasurer of the Blue lodge and chapter for many years. As an Odd Fellow he has passed all the chairs, is the present representative to the grand lodge of Ohio, and is treasurer in lodge and encampment. In 1879 he was one of the Ravenna council, No. 379. Royal Arcanum of which he is now the collector, and also representative to the grand council of the state of Ohio. He was likewise a charter member of and is now past post commander of David Mc-Intosh post, No. 327. G. A. R., has been its delegate to several state encampments and national assemblies, and was the delegate to the state encampment for the present year, 1807.

Lieut. Krake is liberal in his religious views, and liberal in his support of churches and Sunday-schools, but has never identified himself with any religious organization. As a citizen he is enterprising and useful and is universally respected.

ILLIAM A. HOLCOMB, a retired citizen of Ravenna, Ohio, is a native of Westfield, Mass., was born September 5, 1804, and is a son of Roswell and Edith (Campbell) Holcomb, of whose six children—four sons and two daughters—Mr. Holcomb is the only survivor.

Enoch Holcomb, the paternal grandfather of subject, was also a native of Westfield, Mass., and descended from one of three brothers who were born in England, and together came to America. Enoch was a large holder of land, and beside farming kept hotel or tayern and also operated a distillery. and died in his native town at the age of seventy-eight years. Samuel Campbell, the maternal grandfather of William A. Holcomb. was born in Southwick, Mass., was by calling a painter, plasterer and stonemason, and died in his native town at the comparative? early age of forty-four years, but his will survived to reach the ripe old age and the one years, and died at the home it is a Rootstown, Ohio.

William A. Holcomb was reared and received his schooling in Westfield, Mass., and there learned the brick and stonemason's trade, also lathing and plastering. came west in 1821, walking in company with his cousin, Homer Campbell, all the way from Massachusetts with packs on their backs—Mr. Holcomb's pack weighing eighteen poundsand reached Ravenna on the 23d day of The country was all forest, yet the wayfarers were never lost, although they were guided by blazed trees only. to his native east, Mr. Holcomb was married, September 24, 1826, to Miss Lydia Olmstead, daughter of William S. and Annie (Wanzer) Olmstead—the ceremony taking place in Litchfield county, Conn.—and two weeks later Mr. Holcomb, his bride and her father, with the bride's sister and several others. started west, and on reaching lake Erie embarked on the steamboat William Penn, and for three days passengers and crew were at the mercy of a storm, but finally reached Sandusky, where the passengers were safely landed with their goods, and were conveyed in wagons to Rootstown, Portage county, where, for some years, Mr. and Mrs. Holcomb lived in a log cabin and underwent all the privations of pioneer life in the woods. Their farm comprised 205 acres, and they also possessed a dairy constituted of twentytwo cows.

After coming west Mr. Holcomb engaged in building depots, bridges, and in other rail-road construction work generally, in various parts of Ohio. His first work, however, was on the Cleveland & Pittsburg road, commencing at Cleveland and working to Pittsburg, also worked on the Erie, then called the Atlantic & Great Western railroad, superintending, from commencement to completion, the building of bridges, depots, round houses, etc. During the summer of one year, from April 1 to October 3, he earned $455, but was excelled, in this respect, by his amiable helpmate, who, during the same period, made cheese by hand and disposed of it in market for $560—a fact indicating, to some extent, the industry and thrift of the early pioneers. This dairy Mrs. Holcomb continued to manage, with equal success, for seven years.

Among the other tasks accomplished by Mr. Holcomb was the building of Hiram college. He tore away the old rail fence that marked the site of the present edifice, dug the cellar, quarried the rock for the foundation, and erected the original building, to which, however, additions have since been made by other builders.

To the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Holcomb were born ten children, five sons and five daughters, four of whom are still living, viz: Wanzer, of whom fuller details are given in a separate memoir; Edith, wife of A. S. Dunning, of Rootstown; Albert, of Springfield, Ohio, and Lydia, wife of S. R. Freeman, of Ravenna. Mrs. Lydia (Olmstead) Holcomb died in Ravenna July 23, 1884, a lady of most estimable characteristics and dearly beloved by her husband and children, and deeply mourned by them and a large circle of true Mr. Holcomb, who is and devoted friends. now in his ninety-fourth year, still has the appearance of not being over sixty-five, although he has led a life that has brought to them the endurance of much hard labor. But, on the other hand, he has led a life of sobriety and virtue, and thus has his reward. He is a fluent speaker, loves a good joke, even if it be at his own expense, is himself bright and witty, and his activity, at his great age, is simply wonderful. His great service in the development of the county are fully appreciated, and he is revered and truly honored by all throughout the length and breadth of the county of Portage.

ILBUR F. HOLLOWAY, one of the prominent citizens of Cuyahoga Falls, and during the war a telegraph operator of the army of the Potomac, descends from sterling English ancestry.

Joseph T. Holloway was the son of an Englishman, was born in Philadelphia and married in Williamsport, Pa., Susan Hawk, and their children were Josephus F., Mary, J. Wesley, Almira, Wilbur F., Louisa and Albert E. Joseph T. Holloway was an early prospector of the west, traveling on horseback and visiting Missouri and other states. He finally located in Union Town, Ohio, where he lived a few years, and thence came to Cuyahoga Falls. He established a cabinetmaker's shop and employed a number of men and carried on this business for a number of years. He also established a lumber yard and in his later life an insurance business. He was an honored citizen, a notary public and a justice of the peace for many years. His judgment was greatly respected by the people, and he was much called upon for advice. He was a local minister of the Methodist church and preached at Cuahoga Falls and the surrounding country. In politics he was a republican and was a stanch anti-slavery man. He was a successful business man and accumulated a competency. He was a prominent man in Summit county and drew up many wills and business papers and married many people and preached many funeral sermons. He wrote a reminiscence of the town as he was connected with it at an early day-but, unfortunately, this manuscript has been lost. He was at one time coroner of Summit county, was a stanch promoter of temperance and an earnest advocator of the cause; also president of a bible society. In his day Cuyahoga Falls was an enterprising business place. His first wife died and he married Celia Woodruff, but there were no children by this wife. He reached the great age of eighty-two years.

Wilbur F. Holloway, our subject, was born in 1837, in Cuyahoga Falls, and is a son of Joseph T. and Susan (Hawk) Holloway. He was educated in the common school, attended the high school and learned, when young, the telegraph business and was employed in the general office of the Pittsburg R. R., Cleveland, Ohio, for five years and in 1861 became telegraph operator at McClellan's headquarters—army of the Potomac— Washington, D. C., on Sixteenth street, the former residence of Commodore Wilks, and was here for several months. While he held this position, he frequently saw President Abraham Lincoln, who came often to the telegraph office for information and spent much time there, frequently talking with the He came at almost all hours, operators. day and night, sometimes as late as twelve at midnight, and on one occasion at four A. M. of a rainy, dark morning and asked to see Gen. McClellan, went to the general's room, and talked to him as he lay in bed for about twenty minutes. Lincoln frequently told stories and would talk familiarly with the people about him. Here Mr. Holloway saw many distinguished men, such as Gen. McClellan, Gen. Scott, the two French princes DeJoinville, Due De Chartres, who were on Gen. McClellan's staff and many army After this Mr. Holloway served in the war department at Washington and at Newport News, Va,, arriving there a few days after the fight between the Merrimac and Monitor. From there he went to Norfolk. Va., where he was under fire when Gen Longstreet invested the town and was at one time shot at by sharpshooters from a distance. He served from the beginning of the war to the close. The telegraph operators were frequently in advance and many of them were killed in the performance of their duty. After the war, Mr. Holloway was employed by the Western Union Telegraph company of Norfolk, Va., for ten years, being manager of the office and correspondent of the New York Associated Press. After his return to Ohio, he was master of transportation of the Valley Railroad, stationed at Cleveland, Ohio, and since has resided in Cuyahoga Falls.

During the war he invented a dictionary holder and reading-stand, which he still manufactures and which he has greatly improved. In 1892 he patented the Century Dictionary Holder and the Holloway Reading stand—undoubtedly the best of the kind in the market and in general use by literary people and libraries, and sold in all the countries in the world.

Mr. Holloway married Lucy Plum, of Cuyahoga Falls, a daughter of Henry Plum, whose biography appears on another page. In politics he is a republican. He stands high as a business man, and is much respected for his strictly moral character, and the social relations of himself and wife are most pleasant in every regard.

ANZER HOLCOMB, a retired contractor of Ravenna, was born in Rootstown, Portage county, Ohio, September 9, 1827, and is a son of William A. and Lydia (Olmstead) Holcomb, whose biographies are given in full in conjunction with this memoir, which renders it necessary only to here record the current course of the life of Wanzer Flolcomb himself, or, at least, its salient features.

Mr. Holcomb was reared on his father's farm, which he assisted materially in improving during his earlier days of youthful strength, and also learned from his father his trade of brick and stonemason. He remained on the home place until sixteen or eighteen years of age, then devoted his time almost exclusively to his trade in different parts of the county and state—four and one-half years having been spent in Mount Pleasant, lowa,—until 1868, when he settled in Ravenna, and began rail-road contracting, doing all manner of construction until his retirement, and being successful with every contract.

Mr. Holcomb was united in marriage, September 25, 1851, with Miss Sophronia C. Stough, daughter of Jacob and Margaret (Eatinger) Stough, the happy union resulting in the birth of three children, viz: Margaret Ann, William W. and Harry S. The eldest, Margaret Ann, has been twice married—first, to George T. Smith, and, secondly, to Hiram Bedell, and still lives to mourn the loss of both husbands; William W., book-keeper at Baldwin & Son's planing mill, married Mattie Rice, of Newton Falls, and has three children -Edna, Roswell and Calvin; Harry S., a furniture dealer of Montrose, Colo., married May Matthews, and is the father of one child — Marguerite. Mrs. Wanzer Holcomb is a devoted member of the Disciples' church, while Mr. Holcomb holds prominent station as a societary member. High in Masonry, he is a member of Akron commandery, No. 25; he first became an Odd Fellow while a resident of Lucas county, and there filled various chairs in his lodge; he is also a member the Royal Arcanum. Politically he is a republican, he has served three terms as county commissioner of Portage county. With the exception of the time passed in Mount Pleasant, lowa, and a few trips to the east, Mr. Holcomb has always resided in Portage county, and has witnessed its wonderful growth since he was old enough to observe anything, and has himself borne no small part in its development; he can also recall the time when he noticed, in his trips eastward, that what is now Madison square, in the heart of New York city, was a mere farm, and that the railroad extended but sixty miles from that now commercial emporium of the United States.

Mr. Holcomb resides in his fine and commodious mansion on North Chestuut street, Rayenna, where he is surrounded with genial and pleasant neighbors. He is himself a public-spirited citizen, a good-natured and pleasant gentleman, and, although sixty-nine years of age, would be taken anywhere to be aged about fifty. He is a lover of relics, and has a vast variety of them in his library, or, what he calls, his "den." Although extremely liberal and generous toward all worthy objects, private or public, he has never been a profligate, and still keeps an eye on business in his retirement, being a director in the Second National bank. His early efforts in promoting the welfare of Ravenna and Portage will never be forgotten, and he is still very popular with all classes.

LMER K. HOTTENSTEIN, M. D., the well known physician and surgeon of No. 226 South Main street, Akron, Ohio, has been a resident of this city since 1886, and descends from an ancient German family of nobles. The doctor was born in Berks county, Pa., in December, 1861, a son of Edward and Sarah (Knabb) Hottenstein, who descended from families that date their residence in that county from the early part of the seventeenth century. The Hottenstein family, generally, have followed professional lives, but not all of them. the great-grandfather of subject, was a physician, while the grandfather, William, was content with the peaceful pursuit of agriculture; Edward, the father of subject, became in turn a physician, and was the early teacher of the science to his son, Elmer K. Edward and Sarah Hottenstein are the parents of nine children, born in the following order. Ida, wife of James D. Lang, of Berks county, Pa., Alice; Elmer K.; Edward, physician of Kutztown, Pa.; Sarah, deceased; William J., dentist, of Akron, Ohio; Charles A., physician of Kutztown, Pa.; Deborah C., at home, and Peter D., a student.

Dr. Elmer K. Hottenstein was educated in the Keystone Normal school preparatorily and then entered Jefferson Medical college in Philadelphia, having also been prepared for this step through tuition under his father; he gradnated from this institution in 1883, and then took a special course on the eye and ear at the Wills Eye hospital, and also a course in the Pennsylvania college of Dental Surgery, from which he graduated, but does not practice dentistry excepting incidentally, although he had opened rooms for that purpose at Kutztown, Pa., two years prior to his coming to Akron. In fact, he has relegated that practice to his brother, William I., as will be discovered in a coming paragraph.

Dr. E. K. Hottenstein is a member of Akron lodge, No. 83, F. & A. M.; of Summit lodge, No. 50, L.O. O. F., and of encampment No. 18, same order; also of the Red Cross, No. 25. He was married December 2, 1891, to Miss Ida A. Bieber, daughter of William Bieber, and is now the happy father of two children, Clara B. and William E. The doctor and wife are members of Grace Reformed church and have a charming home at No. 126 Carroll street.

William J. Hottenstein, brother of Dr. Elmer K. Hottenstein, was born in Berks county, Pa., August 28, 1868, and was preliminarily educated in the common school and state normal schools; then read medicine under his father and next attended the Medico-Chirurgical college of Philadelphia, Pa., and then entered the Jefferson Medical college of the same city, from which he graduated in 1889. He then practiced medicine at home until the fall of the same year, when he entered the Pennsylvania Dental college of Philadelphia, from which he graduated in 1890, then returned to his old home and practiced both medicine and dentistry until the fall of that year, when he came to Akron and opened his dental parlors, and has since given his entire attention to dentistry. In August, 1894, his brother, Dr. Elmer K., and he opened their fine suite of offices on South Main street, in the Doyle block, where Dr. Elmer K. has a lucrative medical practice and Dr. William J. has an equally prosperous practice in dentistry in all its multifarious branches. Dr. William I. Hottenstein is a member of Granite lodge, No. 522, l. O. O. F., and also of Akron tent of Maccabees, No. 129; also of the Red Cross, and of the Akron Dental society. united in marriage, May 28, 1895, with Miss Amelia C. Von Alt, daughter of John and Frederica Von Alt, and they have their pleasant home at No. 119 Coburn street. Hottenstein is a devoted member of the Trinity Lutheran church.

In the early part of the seventeenth century, three brothers of the Hottenstein family came to America from Esslingen and landed in Philadelphia. One of these three, Jacob, settled in Oley township, now in Berks county, Pa., and purchased large tracts of land, which still remain in the family. Jacob was the great-great-grandfather of the doctors Hottenstein of Akron, Ohio, who now stand at the head of their professions and are among the most respected residents of the city.

ORACE M. HOUSER, secretary, treasurer and manager of the Akron Cultivator company, is a native of Reynolds, Schuylkill county, Pa., was born February 2, 1861, and is a son of Daniel

M. and Catherine (Seiberling) Houser, of German extraction. The father, who was a teacher for six or seven years in the public schools, later engaged in the coal and lumber business, but died in 1870; his widow is still living, and is deeply beloved by her four children, who were born in the following order: Horace M., the subject; Ida A., wife of Samuel R. Endy, Frackville, Pa.; Laura C., now Mrs. Charles Billing, of Tamaqua, Pa., and Sadie C., the wife of Alexander Bender, of Boston, Mass.

At the death of Daniel M. Houser, subject was placed with his grandfather, who was an extensive farmer and also kept a hotel, and general store, was postmaster and ticket agent, and a thoroughly practical business man. Under this relative Mr. Houser learned telegraphy and received a general business and English education, so that, at the early age of fourteen years, he was able to pass examination before the school board and was granted a certificate as teacher and given charge of the school which his father had formerly taught. During the winters of five years he there gave instruction, and in the summers attended the normal college at Millersville, Lancaster county, Pa., defraying his expenses from his own earnings, until he had reached the junior class. In January, 1881, he resigned his position as teacher and went to Oswego, N. Y., and there took a course in stenography, paying for his tuition by teaching penmanship. In August, 1881, he was tendered and accepted a position as stenographer with the J. F. Seiberling company of Akron. For eight years he was in the employ of this company as shorthand writer, shipping clerk and correspondent, and in 1889 associated himself with the Akron Tool company as stockholder and secretary, and so remained until the company sold out to the Akron Cultivator company.

This, the Akron Cultivator company, with its plant at Nos. 230 to 248 Union street, was organized in 1894, for the purpose, as its name partially indicates, of manufacturing agricultural implements, and is to-day one of the substantial industries of the city. Its capital stock in $100,000, and its officers are: George W. Crouse, president; Horace M. Houser, secretary, treasurer, and manager. It gives employment to sixty hands, and makes a specialty of corn cultivators and the Kraus Pivot-Axle Automatic Sulky cultivator, but of course the business of the company is not confined to the production of these implements only.

Mr. Houser is a strictly self-made man, having educated himself and being the founder of his business prosperity. He has other interests besides those of the cultivator company, and in every position he has held has been master of the situation, and during his last year with the Akron Tool company had entire control of the concern. His business success is the criterion of his intrinsic worth. While in politics a republican, he has never found it necessary to obtrude himself upon his party for official position.

Mr. Houser was united in marriage, February 12, 1896, with Miss Julia M. Crouse, daughter of George W. and Martha (Parsons) Crouse, and with his wife affiliates with the Episcopal church. His residence is at No. 107 Arch street.

HARLES LEONARD HOWARD, president and general manager of the Railway Speed Recorder company, and conspicuous as a business man of Kent, Ohio, was born on a farm near Utica, N. Y., May 28, 1838, a son of Boyd and Mercie (Wood) Howard, and is of remote English origin, his paternal grandfather having been born in Dutchess county, N. Y., where the father of our subject was born and married, and whence he moved to Oneida county, where he died ten days prior to the birth of our subject, who was the youngest of a family of thirteen children. The mother subsequently married Ira Burdick, and seventeen years later the family moved to Friendship, Alleghany county, where the mother ended her days.

Charles L. Howard fived on the home farm in Allegany county, N. Y., until nineteen years old, attending school when not at work. He then became a clerk in a general store in Friendship, and before he had reached his majority became a merchant on his own account, purchasing his stock in New York He made his home at Friendship twenty-five years, being engaged in farming beside the mercantile business. He was president of the Allegany county Agricultural association for some time, ever taking an interest in all farm pursuits. He was also a promoter and director of the Allegany Central railroad—a narrow-gauge line through the oil fields from Friendship to Olean, N. Y., and a director of the Allegany County Reporter, the leading republican newspaper of the county. He was postmaster of Friendship for ten years and also filled various municipal offices. Becoming interested in the oil business, he came to Wood county, Ohio, and in 1887 to Kent, and purchased an interest in the Railway Speed Recorder company, of which he was chosen secretary and treasurer; six months later, January 1, 1888, was elected general manager, and in 1890 was elected president. The other officers are at present E. A. Parsons, treasurer, and C. M. Power. secretary. The capital stock of the company is $250,000, and it manufactures, beside the speed recorder, Hawkins' patent jack, caboose and shop stoves, sucker rod joints and other oil-well supplies.

In politics Mr. Howard has always been a republican, but, being an advocate of and believer in a bimetallic circulation, supported the Bryan ticket in 1896. His first office was that of township clerk in Allegany county, N. Y., and he also held various other local offices. He was appointed postmaster of Friendship by President Hayes and was re-appointed by President Arthur, but since coming to Kent has given very little attention to political affairs.

Mr. Howard was united in marriage, in 1860, with Miss Amelia C. Babcock, who was born in Cortland county, N. Y., a daughter of Simon Babcock, a merchant and farmer. This union has been blessed with three children, viz: Hattie, who is married to B. F. Drake, of Friendship, N. Y., and has one child—Howard; Nora, wife of Milton Knilel, of Kent, and the mother of two children Lawrence and Inez; Nina, now Mrs. Charles Powers, of Kent, and mother of one child—Josephine Marie.

Mr. Howard is a knight templar Mason, is a very pleasant companion and a thorough gentleman, and few persons in Kent are more highly respected.

OHN L. HOUSLEY, a substantial farmer and a respected citizen of Stowe township, Summit county, Ohio, was born on his father's farm in Stark county, Ohio, December 21, 1846, and springs from English ancestry.

Levi Housley, grandfather of John L., was born in New York state and was the son of one of three brothers, who came over from England and fought through the Revolutionary war, in which one was killed. After the war, one brother settled in New York and one came west, and his descendants, later, settled in Maryland, where he purchased a farm, on part of which the battle of Antietam was fought. His log barn was chinked with mortar, in which the date of the building was marked 1765. He married, in Maryland, Mary Loman. Her mother's maiden name was Leidigh, and she came from Switzerland.

Levi Housley and wife were the parents of five children, Leidigh, Katie, Barbara, Roseann and Levi. Mr. Housley had a good farm and home, but came to Ohio in 1805 to see the country, and when he passed through Canton it contained one log house and two Indian wigwams. Mr. Housley located a piece of land in Stark county and then returned home, making the journey on horseback and traveling by a blazed trail. Failing to sell his place, he remained in Maryland until 1824, when he brought his family and settled on the land he had located in 1805, consisting of 160 acres covered by a heavy forest of oak, ash, and beech, but later moved to Lake township, in the same county, bought another farm of 160 acres and here passed the remainder of his days. He cleared up part of his first farm and all of his second, and had a goodly property improved with good He was a substantial citizen and a member of the Presbyterian church, and assisted to found the first church in his part of the county. In politics he was an old-line He was seventeen years old when the Revolutionary war closed, but, being afflicted with white swelling and lame, could not enlist as a soldier, but served as blacksmith, shoeing horses. His father, however, fought all through the war for independence.

Leidigh Housley, father of John L., was born in Maryland on his father's farm, October 23, 1814, and was reared a farmer. He came with his brother and family to Ohio, in 1824, when ten years of age, and married, March 21, 1837, Nancy Thompson, a native of Stark county, and a daughter of John and Mary Ellen (Warner) Thompson, of English Mr. Thompson came to Ohio about 1825, settled in Lake township, Stark county, and cleared up a farm of 200 acres. a Methodist in religion, a respected citizen and lived to be eighty-two years old. His children were Mary, Rachael, Eliza, Abbie, Nancy, Sally and Benjamin. Mr. and Mrs. Housley settled on the old Honsley homestead and there passed all their remaining days. Leidigh Housley was a very industrious and respected man and prospered by thrift and accumulated a handsome property—a good farm of 230 His children were Mary, Elizabeth, Catharine, Nancy, John L., Minerva, Levi, Sarah, Daniel, Ethelinda, Alice and Jesse. Mr. Housley was an honored citizen and held the office of township trustee, was a member of the school board, and filled other minor offices. He lived to be seventy-two years old and died in 1886, September 5, a Presbyterian in religion and in politics a republican, beloved by all his family and much thought of by all who knew him.

John L. Housley received a good commonschool education, and a business education at Oberlin college. He went to the Pacific coast in the fall of 1868, via New York city and the isthmus of Panama. Having two sisters, Mary and Nancy, in Benton county, Oregon, he visited them, rested from work, and trapped and hunted in the Cascade mountains one winter. and killed foxes, beavers, minks, otters and coons, and did a good business, making $100 per month. He returned home in the spring of 1870. He married, June 1, 1871, in Stark county, Ohio, Nancy Hill, born October 2, 1848, in Stark county, daughter of Thomas and Barbara (Long) Hill. Thomas Hill came from Maryland as a pioneer and settled in Plain township, Stark county. His children were Daniel (died two years old), Catherine, Susan, William, Nancy, Richard, Abraham, Sallie and Elizabeth. Mr. Hill died on his farm when seventy-nine years old, April 8, 1883. He was a man of great ingenuity, understood every kind of work, and was very handy with tools. He was very religious, was a German Baptist, was a kind and upright man. Mr. Hill was first married to Kate Worley, and they had Thomas, Samuel and David.

After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Housley settled on the old Housley homestead in Stark county, and lived there for some time, and came to their present farm March 11, 1873. Mr. Housley first bought 122 acres, and, by industry and thrift, has added to it until he now owns 142 acres of good land; he built a fine and tasteful house in 1893, and has it nicely furnished. Mr. Housley, aided by his faithful wife, has greatly improved his farm, on which are over 40,000 feet of tile drainage. Their children are Lewis E., Virgil M., Mary E., Nannie B., Leidigh and Richard L. Housley is a member of the German Baptist church and in politics Mr. Housley is a prohibitionist and free silverite. He has held the offices of supervisor, assessor, and member of the school board. The family is one of the best in the township and all the children are Virgil and Mary attended well educated. Buchtel college and are stenographers and typewriters. Lewis E. attended Ashland university and also a business college, and is now receiving clerk in the Goodrich Rubber company. The remainder are at home.

ENRY WILLETT HOWE, one of most prominent citizens of Northampton township, Summit county, Ohio, was born in the adjoining township of Bath, June 29, 1828, the eldest son of Capt. Richard Howe, a native of St. Mary's county, Md., born in 1799.

Stanislaus Howe, paternal grandfather of Henry W. Howe, was one of the pioneers of Maryland, and his paternal grandmother, Elizabeth, was a daughter of Edward Willett, who was owner of a large estate near Upper Marlboro, in the same state, and grandson of Edward Willett, who was appointed clerk of the court of Prince George county, Md., in The large Willett estate was devised to a trustee, who was authorized to sell and to divide the proceeds of the sale among the heirs, but no part of those proceeds ever reached the heirs of Stanislaus Howe, and the executor of the will was long ago released from his responsibility, and his sureties, or bondsmen, relieved from their liability under the statutes of Maryland.

Roxana K. Howe, mother of Henry W. Howe, was the second daughter born to Maj. Sylvanus Jones, a native of Bristol, Ontario county, N. Y., while his wife, Phebe, was a daughter of Capt. Arden Sears, a family active in organizing the first Protestant Episcopal church in New England, and to this day counted among its most munificent benefactors. Roxana K. Jones was the pioneer schoolmistress of Bath township, Summit county, Ohio, and also was one of the organizers of the first Sunday-school in Akron, of which she was a teacher for half a century, and a memorial window in the First Methodist church perpetuates her memory as one of its founders.

Henry Willett Howe received an excellent education in youth and early manhood, and was graduated from Oberlin college with the degrees of A. B. and A. M. For ten years he practiced law in Akron and its vicinity, and for six years was a member of the board of education at the time that the Akron school law was on trial as an experiment. During this period he was secretary of the board, did a full share of committee work and performed many of the duties that now devolve on the superintendent, and all without compensation; he also served two terms in the city council, which was likewise an office of honor and not of profit. In his capacity as attorney he became interested in several agricultural implement patents, and afterward became engaged in manufacturing, which afforded him relief from sedentary employments that were undermining his health. heriting from his father's estate a farm, he granted a right of way across it to a railroad company, the consideration being that the company should build and maintain a station thereon, and then made his residence in sight of his birthplace—within easy reach of both Cleveland and Akron. A post-office was also established at the same point by his request, and he was appointed postmaster, and still holds that office; he has also served as justice of the peace several terms—an office for which he is peculiarly qualified—and has frequently settled the disputes of his neighbors without litigation; he has officiated at many weddings, and has not unfrequently conducted the services at the burial of the dead. As to politics, Mr. Howe had been reared to a belief in the principles of the whig party, which he had advocated up to the time immediately preceding his coming of age, but in 1848, on the nomination by the whigs of a slaveholder for the presidency of the United States, he withdrew his influence from the old party and worked with vigor and enthusiasm for the establishment of the new, or republican organization; nevertheless he supported Bryan and the Chicago platform of 1896. For fifteen years he acted as secretary of the Pomona grange, P. of H, but declined promotion, as he had previously declined political honors.

In religious matters, Mr. Howe was reared under gospel influences, but when barely out of his teens began to insist upon "interpreting" the sacred writings in the light of the belief prevalent at the time they were written. He has so much confidence in his judgment in this respect that he is willing to live by it, and to die by it.

Mr. Howe was happily united in marriage, December 12, 1859, with Miss Isadora C. Bell, a native of Connecticut, and this union has been blessed with three children—Edward B., Frank R. and Abbey B.

For half a century he has been a contributor to agricultural and educational publications. His second son, Frank, since he became of age, has been occupied with educational work, and since April, 1892, at Darrowville, in Summit county, has published a monthly journal for the promotion of that interest.

ERBERT F. HUDSON, the well-known dealer in creamery supplies at Ravenna, Portage county, Ohio, was born in the township of the same name April 1, 1846, a son of James and Cordelia A. (Rowell) Hudson. The father, a native of Pennsylvania, was a farmer, came to Portage county, Ohio, with the pioneers, and died in 1876, in New York city, while on a visit; the mother, a native of New Hampshire, had died on the home place in 1874. These parents had three children, of whom subject is the youngest; Charles D. is a live-stock dealer in Chicago, and the sister, Mrs. Henry Sharp, resides on the old homestead. The family are of English extraction, and of ante-Revolutionary residence in America.

Herbert F. Hudson was educated in the city schools of Ravenna and in the well-known Eastman Business college of Poughkeepsie, N. Y. His first independent effort in business life was in buying and shipping live stock at Ravenna, but his main work has been in the line which now occupies his attention, and which was rooted in the industry which has led to it, which will easily be perceived by following his business career in detail. 1867 he erected the Beech Woods cheese factory in Ravenna township, and in the spring of 1870 constructed the Springdale creamery and cheese factory at Rootstown, having removed from the former to the latter place after disposing of the Beech Woods plant. In 1882 he entered the employ of the DeLaval (cream) Separator company, of New York, in the capacity of salesman and general agent, and with this company he still holds his connection, and during the past twelve years has sold and established agencies in nearly every state in the Union. This connection also involves the duty of supervising the erection of creameries on contract, and in this capacity Mr. Hudson has erected and equipped 154 creameries, beside making extensive sales to creameries that had already been established.

Mr. Hudson was united in marriage, in 1868, in Urbana, Ohio, with Miss Hettie M. Clark, daughter of Horace M. Clark, who was for many years county clerk of Portage county, but who, with his wife, is now laid in the Two children have blessed this happy union-Charles Clair, of Cleveland, and James Frank, still at home and attending school. The elder, Charles, holds an exceptionally good position in the Van Dorn iron works of Cleveland, being naturally gifted with a mechanical genius, which will be fully developed and expanded through the position he now He is happily married to Miss Mary holds. Ray, of Rootstown.

In politics Mr. Hudson has been a republican since old enough to vote: fraternally he has been a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows ever since reaching the age which qualified him as a voter. Mrs. Hudson is a zealous member of the Congregational church, and an interested worker in all the undertakings of the congregation of that denomination in Rootstown. She is kind to the poor, philanthropic in every thought, and her home is ever open to the young, where their social enjoyments are profusely allowed, but where the monitory wisdom of the mistress never fails to inculcate a lesson duly fitted to the unrestrained enjoyment of the young on these occasions. The especial care of this mother, however, has been that of her two sons, to whom she has always been the wise counselor and guide.

OSEPH HUGILL, of Akron, Ohio, is a native of Gunnersville, York county, England, was born September 1, 1834, a son of George and Isabella (Close) Hugill. The father of our subject was a son of George, who was a son of Edward, who was a son of John, and he a son of George, all natives of Yorkshire—the first three of whom were lead miners, and the latter three farmers. Joseph Close, maternal grandfather of Joseph Hugill, the subject, was a carpenter and builder by trade, and was a son of George Close, also a builder of Yorkshire.

Joseph Hugill, the subject, left his native country at the age of seventeen years, landed in New York city July 1, 1851, came thence to Cleveland, Ohio, where he was employed at stone and brick work, which he had begun to learn in the old country at the age of eleven years. In 1854 he left Cleveland and went to Canada, and worked at his trde for the Grand Trunk Railway company until 1856, and then began contracting for the Buffalo & Lake Huron Railway company—now a part of the Grand Trunk system. In 1858 he went to California and engaged in gold mining, also worked at his trade one year, and in 1860 went to Nevada, and worked on the Great Basin hotel, which was afterward purchased by the county for its own use. He next superintended the stone work for the Gold & Currie quartz-mill at Virginia City, at which he was engaged until May, 1864, when he returned east, and passed a year in Cleveland, Ohio. In 1865 he was employed in farming in Cuyahoga county, and in 1866 settled in Akron, where he engaged in general contracting for stone and brickwork, which business he followed until 1895, when he was appointed city commissioner, which position he still ably fills.

September 28, 1864, Mr. Hugill was united in marriage to Miss Sarah Wells, daughter of Martin and Martha (Walpole) Wells, the latter a lineal descendant of Horace Walpole, at one time the renowned prime minister of England. This union has been crowned by the birth of four children, viz: William E., Frank W. and Minnie (twins, deceased), and Rhea W.

Mr. Hugill is a thirty-second degree Mason in his fraternal relations, and socially he and family stand high in the esteem of the best people of Akron.

EORGE WHITFIELD HULETT, an ex-soldier of the Civil war and at present a well-known dealer in agricultural implements, feed, etc., at Kent, Portage county, Ohio, was born in Chemung county, N. Y., October 13, 1842, a son of Asahel and Clarissa (Hulett) Hulett, natives of Vermont.

Asahel Hulett was reared to manhood in his native city of Rutland, Vt., and at one time was warden of the Vermont state prison. He was married in the Green Mountain state, whence he moved to New York state, and in 1847 came to Ohio—making the journey with teams—and purchased a large farm in Franklin township, Portage county. He dealt extensively in live stock, and before the advent of railroads drove his stock overland to the eastern markets. He also dealt largely in produce and was likewise engaged in gardening on an extensive scale. His large farm was well improved, but in an evil hour he went security for friends and lost his vast possessions, with the exception of his home and seventy acres. He was a stanch democrat in politics and lived to be seventy-seven years of age, voting his ticket for more than half a century. He died in 1877, but his widow survived him eleven years and died at the age of eighty-six. Of their children, Rudolph died in infancy; Orison, a farmer, died in Kansas, leaving a family; Louise died unmarried; Harriet died in early life; John was a soldier in the Second Ohio cavalry, became a farmer after the war, and died in Kansas, unmarried; Esther is the widow of Horace Bester and lives in Kent, Ohio; Albert Rudolph, a soldier of the One Hundred and Fourth Ohio volunteer infantry, was killed in the battle of Franklin, Tenn.; George W., the subject, was next in order of birth; Sarah M. resides on the old homestead in Franklin township: Ella Gertrude, who was married to Sereno Holdridge, died in Shalersville, Ohio, leaving two children, and Franklin D. died in childhood.

George W. Hulett, the subject of this memoir, was reared on the Franklin township farm from the age of five years until nearly twenty, and attended the common schools in the interval. August 11, 1862, he enlisted in the volunteer service, and was mustered in, at Massillon, in company 1, One Hundred and Fourth Ohio infantry, and had his first engagement at Covington, Ky., then followed numerous engagements with the raider John Morgan in Kentucky; then the regiment crossed the mountains into Tennessee and was present at the capture of Knoxville, and fought at Cumberland Gap; then joined the Twentythird army corps, marched with Sherman south and participated in the capture of Atlanta; then returned northward to Nashville. Tenn., to intercept Gen. Hood, and took part in the battle of Franklin, Tenn., in which his brother, Albert Rudolph, was killed, and where our subject was taken prisoner and sent to Andersonville. In this rebel pen Mr. Hulett was confined until March 27, 1805, when he was taken to Vicksburg, Miss., and paroled. He was one of the unfortunates who boarded the ill-fated steamboat Sultana for passage This boat had gone up the Mississippi river to a point beyond Memphis, Tenn., when her boilers exploded, and of the 2,360 souls on board, over 1,600 lost their lives, Mr. Hulett being one of those who were spared. but not without injury. On returning to Portage county, Mr. Hulett purchased a farm and engaged in its cultivation, but dealing in live stock was his principal business until 1887, when he removed to Kent and continued dealing in stock alone until 1889, when he engaged in his present enterprise.

In May, 1873, Mr. Hulett was united in marriage with Miss Thirsa Chapman, a native of Brimfield township and a daughter of Henry C. and Alvira (Underwood) Chapman. In politics Mr. Hulett is a stanch democrat, but has never been a seeker after office. He has a clear record as a business man as well as a soldier, and stands high in the general esteem.

EORGE A. HUNTLEY, M. D., of Copley, Summit county, Ohio, is a native of the Buckeye state and was born in North Bloomfield, Trumbull county, September 11, 1871, the son of Dr A. O. and Alice (Hawkins) Huntley, the former of whom was born in Medina county in 1845, and the latter in Copley September 14, 1847, and were the parents of two children, viz: Josephine, who was born in 1808 and 18 now the wife of Lee Baldwin, of Washington.

Dr. A. O. Huntley was reared a farmer and educated in the district schools of Medina county as a preparatory course, and then, after a still further preparatory course of medical study, entered the Stirling Medical college of Columbus, Ohio, from which he was graduated after finishing the course, and began practice in Grangerburg, Medina county, but remained there a few years only, when he went to North Bloomfield, Ohio, where he had a most successful practice, which extended over a period of thirty years. Alice Huntley, the mother of Dr. George A. In January, 1840, Mr. Hawkins married Miss Hubbard, who was born in 1811, a daughter of Reuben Hubbard, and this union resulted in the birth of five children, viz: Adelia, who died in infancy; Eliza, born June 4, 1845died November 18, 1871; Alice C., mother of subject; George W., born September 2, 1851 —died November 13, 1876, and Eugene R., born June 28, 1854. Mrs. Hawkins was called away, in the faith of the Methodist Episcopal church, December 5, 1886, and Mr. Hawkins died May 21, 1896. In politics, the latter was a democrat.

Dr. George A. Huntley, after receiving the usual common-school education, graduated from the high school of North Bloomfield, Ohio, in 1890, then passed two years in Hiram college, and next entered the Western Reserve Medical college at Cleveland, from which he was graduated in 1895 with the degree of M. D., and the same year entered upon the practice of his profession in Copley Center, where he has become very popular and has met with unequivocal success.

The marriage of Dr. Huntley and wife has been blessed with one child—Francis Eugene, born November 21, 1896. The parents are members of the Disciples' church, and in politics the doctor is a strong republican.

INSANDE, one of the substantial citizens of Cuyahoga Falls, an honored gentleman and the head of a respected family, springs from sterling German ancestry, and was born in Boston, Mass., March 19, 1833, a son of John Henry and Mary (Schlusemyer) Insande. He received but little education and began to work in a nail factory when ten years old. When he was thirteen years of age he began to work for Peter Cooper, the great philanthropist, in his wire works at Trenton, N. J., continued in his employ for nine years and learned all the departments of the iron business, including iron rolling, and was also the first to make copper wire from ingots, to be used in making rivets for belts. He married, September 16, 1855, at Trenton, N. J., Sarah Bailey, who was born March 3, 1836, in Leicestershire, England, on a farm, a daughter of Samuel and Emily (Roper) Bailey. Mr. Bailey came to America, in 1845, bringing his family, and settled in New York city, After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Insande lived in Trenton, N. J., for two years. In 1857 they came to Cuyahoga Falls, where Mr. Insande engaged in forging steamboat shafting and car axles for Cleveland, and became foreman for the James forge. He finished learning the machinist's trade with the Bill Bros., well known machinists and inventors of Cuyahoga Falls, and continued with these two firms for eight years, and then bought a flouring and saw-mill at Brecksville, Cuyahoga county, Ohio, but soon sold it out and went to Newberg, Ohio, in 1865. He then became foreman of the Chisholm rolling mill and remained with this firm four years. In 1868 he bought a rolling mill in Cuyahoga Falls, but soon sold out and bought an interest in a machinery company, and three years later he was one of the founders of the Falls Wire company, and managed this business for fifteen years. His children were John H., William F. (who went to New South Wales, and was afterward a soldier in our great Civil war) and Henrietta. Mr. Insande died when our subject was a small child and Mrs. Insande next married John R. Walser, an iron worker. Samuel Bailey, father of Mrs. Insande, was born in England. He was a farmer and came to America in July, 1845, in a sailing vessel from Liverpool to New York, being six weeks on the passage. He located in New York, but five years later moved to Trenton, N. J., where he became a wire drawer, and died there aged fifty-two years, a member of the Episcopal church. His children were James, Sarah, Harriet, Georgianna, Samuel and John H., Jr. Mr. and Mrs. Insande have reared an excellent family of children, who rank among the most respected citizens of Cuyahoga Falls.

RNEST A. JOHNSON, of Cuyahoga Falls, Summit county, Ohio, and one of its most respected citizens, was born July 22, 1846, in Benton, Mich., a son of Nathan A. and Celestia (Davis) Johnson, the former a son of Moses and Christina Johnson.

Moses Johnson was born in Vermont March 10, 1777, of English descent, his remote ancestors having early settled in Vermont. Moses was a carpenter, joiner and farmer. He married, November 2, 1802, Christina Born, who was born in Schoharie county, N. Y., May 7, 1788. They located in Rochester, N. Y., at an early day, then moved to North Clarkson, N. Y., and in 1836 removed to Branch county, Mich., where Mr. Johnson cultivated a farm of eighty acres and worked at his trade of carpenter and joiner. There Mrs. Johnson died August 2, 1842, and Mr. Johnson August 31, 1850, their remains being interred at Takonsha. They were the parents of the following children: Betsey, Polly, Sibbillah, Evean, Levina, Rachael, Margaret and Morgan (twins), Christina, Nathan A., George, and Moses, Jr.

Nathan A. Johnson was born October 24, 1819, in North Clarkson, N. Y. He became a carpenter and joiner and married, at Charlotte, Mich., November 12, 1844, Celestia Davis, who was born at Pompey Hill, N. Y., a daughter of Stephen and Martha M. (Andrews) Davis. Stephen Davis was born April 2, 1799, in Rhode Island, of an old family who settled in New York state, and married there June 14, 1823. Stephen Davis settled, in 1838, in Benton township, Eaton county, Mich., where he lived on his farm of eighty acres, but died at Charlotte, Mich., May 30, 1893, aged ninety-four years, a man of excellent character, and the father of the following Celestia, Marion, Oscar, Helen, Robert, Oron, Martha, Mary and Edgar. Edgar Davis was killed in Kentucky, in 1863, in a skirmish with the southern cavalry. After marriage Nathan A. Johnson and wife settled in Charlotte, Mich., and there passed their remaining days. Their children were Ernest A., Alice, Inez, Charles, Clive and Ethel (twins). Mr. and Mrs. Johnson were members of the Universalist church, but very liberally assisted all denominations in their town, building the Universalist church at Charlotte. He and family hold a very high position in the social circles of Ravenna, and his professional skill has won for him a reputation equaled by that of but a very few practitioners in the county.

AMES JORDAN, the popular young proprietor of the Ravenna livery and sales stables, was born near Millwood, Knox county, Ohio, June 11, 1867, and is a son of George and Matilda (Gerringer) Jordan, natives of Pennsylvania, and the parents of two children-James, the subject of this memoir, and Mattie, the wife of H. Swigart, of Walhonding, Coshocton county, His paternal grandfather was George Jordan, who came from the Keystone state in an early day and located near Gann, Knox county, Ohio, but died in Rochester, in Coshocton county, the father of two children. The maternal grandfather of subject was of German descent, was a farmer, and died in his native state of Pennsylvania.

George Jordan, the father of James Jordan, came to Ohio in his early manhood, bought land near Gann, Knox county, farmed there for several years, and there served as justice of the peace and also followed agricultural pursuits in Knox as well as Coshocton county, until his death in Rochester, in the faith of the Disciples' church, of which his wife was also a member. He was reared a farmer and was educated in the district schools, lived at home until twenty years of age, and then came to Portage county. He then went to Aurora, and made butter for Will Eldridge for about a year, and then found employment as a carpenter for fourteen months, and then for a year was superintendent of a farm for Jeff Towns.

In 1888 Mr. Jordan came to Ravenna and worked for several months in Bob Widder's livery stable, and then formed a partnership with Mrs. Poe in the same line of business, and so continued for two years. He then sold his interest in the concern and bought a livery barn on North Meridian street, but ten months later sold this and bought his present popular place on Main street, near the Columbia hotel, and this he has successfully conducted for three years.

January 28, 1894, Mr. Jordan was united in marriage with Mrs. Julia Poe, widow of Simpson Poe and daughter of Seth D. and Maria (Witherell) Norton, natives, respectively, of Ohio and New York state, and the parents of six children, of whom four are now living, viz: Adelaide, wife of George F. Nichols, of Mantua, Portage county; Julia, now Mrs. Jordan; Lilla, widow of N. P. Catlin, and Emma, wife of Edward Clearwater. The paternal grandfather of Mrs. Jordan was Thuel Norton, of French descent; he was an early settler of Ohio, was a farmer and lumberman, was the father of a large family of children, and was accidentally killed by a horse in his old age. John Witherell, the maternal grandfather of Mrs. Jordan, was a native of New York state, lived principally in Watertown until he came to Ohio in early manhood, was a tailor by trade, and died in Hiram, Portage county, in middle age.

Seth D. His wife had passed away in 1888, at the same age and in the same faith. After his decease, Mrs. Poe continued the business in partnership with her brother-inlaw, George F. Nichols, beginning in the spring of 1888, and continuing for three years, then conducted it alone two years; since her marriage with Mr. Jordan, this gentleman has relieved her of business cares. Mrs. Jordan is a member of the Congregational church; Mr. Jordan is an Odd Fellow, and in politics is a republican. Both families are well connected, and Mr. and Mrs. Jordan enjoy to a marked degree the respect of a large circle of friends in both the city and county.

SAAC M. KELLEY, a highly respected citizen and thoroughly practical black-smith of Ravenna, Ohio, was born in Caledonia county, Vt., July 2, 1828, and is a son of Isaac and Mary (Moore) Kelley, the former of whom was a native of Boston, Mass., and the latter of the state of Vermont, where their marriage took place, and who were the parents of seven daughters and three sons; of these ten children, three are still living, viz: Sophia, wife of William King, and Russell D. Kelley and Isaac M. Kelley, the last named being the subject of this biographical notice.

Isaac Kelley, father of subject, was also a blacksmith, and came from Barnet, Vt., in 1836, worked in Cortland, Trumbull county, Ohio, for six months, went thence to Tallmadge, Summit county, and worked about a year, and thence moved to Cuyahoga Falls, in the same county, where he found employment for another period of nearly twelve months. In 1838 he came to Ravenna, opened a shop on his own account and carried on his trade until his death, which occurred in 1872 or 1873, at the age of seventy-seven years; a year or two later his wife died at the age of seventy-six, in the faith of the Baptist church. Mr. Kelley had been a soldier in the war of 1812, and for his services was awarded a land warrant for 160 acres of government land. In politics he was first a whig, but later became a democrat, yet never sought nor held public office. death of his father took place in Boston, Mass., and that of his wife's father in Vermont. The latter, Dr. William Moore, was a physician of some considerable note in the Green Mountain state, was of Scotch descent and had a family of seven children.

Isaac M. Kelley, whose name opens this memoir, was eight years of age when brought to Ohio by his parents, and ten years old when they settled in Ravenna, and still remembers the aborigines, who then were offering their beaded moccasins and knick-knacks for sale on the streets of the city. He was educated in the Ravenna academy, and at the age of fifteen years began learning the blacksmith's trade under the instruction of his father serving until he reached his majority. He then studied civil engineering, became quite expert in this science, and followed the profession two years, in the course of which he assisted in making the preliminary survey of the Atlantic & Great Western railroad—now of the Erie system. A part of the year 1849 Mr. Kelley lived in St. Paul, Minn., following his trade, and part of the same year in Little Falls, in the same state, and in 1850 lived in New Philadelphia, where he conducted a clothing store. Since then Ravenna has been his home.

September 23, 1853, Mr. Kelley was married to Miss Amelia Adams, daughter of Capt. Hiram and Jerusha Adams, of Revenna, and this union has been blessed with four children, born in the following order: Helen Amelia, Fannie Louisa, Julia Sophia and May Elizabeth. Helen is married to George S. Payne; Fannie L. is the wife of Edward Hatfield, a lawyer of Cleveland, and is the mother of three children-Margaret Stone, Edward Kelley and Gertrude May; Iulia S. is the widow of Edwin Bush, and resides with her parents. Mrs. Kelley and the children are all members of the Protestant Episcopal church, are devotedly attached to its doctrines, and strictly observe them in their daily walk through life. Mr. Kelley is a member of the Royal Arcanum, and in politics is a Jeffersonian democrat. For three years he was chairman of the county central democratic committee, and for four years was postmaster of Ravenna under Grover Cleveland's first presidential term. He has lived to see Ravenna grow from a mere village to its present status as a city, and during his long residence here has maintained a character for strict morality as a citizen and an invulnerable reputation for rectitude as a business man.

ILES KING, of Green township, Summit county, and an ex-union soldier, was born in Hubbard, Trumbull county, Ohio, April 13, 1831, and is of English descent.

George Todd King, father of subject, was a native of Maryland, early came to Ohio, and in Youngstown married Mary Starr, the union resulting in the birth of the following children: Miles, the subject; Margaret, wife of Harry Norton; Mary A., wife of Charles Wood; George, who was a soldier in the Sixth Ohio cavalry, and was found dead in his tent in front of Petersburg, Va., having died from either rupture or heart disease; Leander, who spoke nine languages and was quartermaster of the Thirteenth Pennsylvania cavalry during the Civil war; Edgar, who served in a volunteer infantry regiment from Hudson, Ohio, was captured and confined in Libby prison, and was finally killed in the disaster to the steamer Sultana on the Mississippi river; William went out with an infantry regiment from Kenton, Ohio. The father of this family was a substantial farmer of Mahoning county, Ohio, near the Trumbull county line, was a well known citizen, and died in August, 1885, a member of the old-line whig party, and his remains were interred in Lackawanna county, Pa., by his brothers; his wife died in Rootstown, Portage county, Ohio, in the same year and month.

Miles King was reared on his father's farm, received a good common-school education, and enlisted at Goshen, Ohio, in August, 1861, in the Sixth Ohio volunteer cavalry, and served three years and nine months, with Sheridan and Kilpatrick in the army of the Potomac, and fought at Fair Oaks, Little Rock, White House Landing, Cedar Creek, South Side, Weldon, second Bull Run, Petersburg, Richmond, and was in raids and skirmishes unnumbered—doing some of the hardest cavalry fighting during the war. He was captured but once, and succeeded in making his escape the same night. He received an honorable discharge at Point Lookout, Md., in the fall of 1865, when he returned home and resumed farming for a short time. For fifteen years Mr. King was an inmate of the Soldiers' Home, and during all that period never received a black mark. He was a brave and faithful soldier, and as a slight recognition of his services the government allows him a pension of $24 per month. He is a stalwart republican, a member of the G. A. R., and of the U. V. U., of Kenton, Ohio. He is a zealous member of the Evangelical association, and stands very high in the esteem of his fellow-citizens and associates in all the walks of life.

ERNARD KINNEY, the late wellknown capitalist of Ravenna, Ohio, was born in Corracloona, county Leitrim, Ireland, June 24, 1830, and there married Miss Mary Gilbride. They came came together to America in 1855, at once found a home in Ohio, and two years later permanently settled in Ravenna. He became a section boss on the Cleveland & Pittsburg railroad and held the position about fifteen years, and during this period opened a grocery and provision store in Ravenna, which was carried on by members of his family until within four years of his retirement from his railroad work. He invested his surplus earnings in real estate, purchasing tracts of timber land, which he developed and improved, and also bought largely of city property in Ravenna, including the old State Bank building. For a long time he was agent for three of the more prominent Atlantic steamship companies, The Cunard, the Williams & Guion and the Anchor. He erected several buildings in the city, including a grocery for his son, and was one of the most energetic business men that it was ever the good fortune of Ravenna to harbor within its limits. He was a devout Catholic and was a leading spirit in establishing and building up that church in Ravenna, and in this faith his wife is also an ardent believer, and in faithful adherence to it their children were strictly reared. These children numbered ten, as follows: James, who died July 7, 1892; Mary Ann (sister Cammillus, of the Ursuline convent, Toledo), died February 2, 1892; John and Catherine, deceased; Rose, who was a teacher in the school and organist in the Catholic church; Sarah, who died September 10, 1883; Bernard, Thomas, Agnes and Charley. The father of this family died November 7, 1889, most deeply mourned by the surviving members of his family and an innumerable host of truly warm-hearted friends. Since the lamented death of Mr. Kinney, the business has been carried on by his widow, assisted by her sons. Mrs. Kinney now owns the property at the corner of Main and Meridian streets, on which is situated the first bank building erected in Ravenna; also a two-story frame business building adjoining and two dwellings facing Meridian street; also houses on Bowery and Third streets. As a matter of history, it may be stated that the second-oldest building in Ravenna township was removed from its original site (where the Ætna House now stands) to property owned by Mr. Kinney, where it was used as a barn. This old building was erected by Gen. John Campbell, who, at that time (1812), occupied it as a hotel, which was known on account of its peculiar color as the old "Yellow House." It has recently been demolished, to make room for modern dwellings. And it may be further remarked that Mr. Kinney was one of the stockholders in the Hibernian Insurance company of Chicago, and lost, through the destructive conflagration of 1871, stock amounting to $5,000. The Kinney family to-day stand among the foremost citizens of Ravenna, and Mrs. Kinney may be cited as being one of the most intelligent business women of the county.

AMUEL KINSEY, one of the best-known farmers of Suffield township, Portage county, Ohio, was born in Pennsylvania, October 7, 1831, a son of Samuel and Susan (Rhodamel) Kinsey, who came to Ohio in 1833 and located, first, on a farm at Osnaburg, Stark county, where they resided eight years, and then came to Portage county and purchased a farm on the road leading from Suffield to Kent, on which our subject was reared from the age of ten years, and where he still resides.

Samuel Kinsey, the father of subject, was also a native of the Keystone state, was reared a miller, but usually followed farming as a vocation. To his marriage with Susan Rhodamel there were born ten children, six of whom are still living, viz: Elias, John, Samuel, Jacob, Joel and Leonard. Mrs. Susan Kinsey was called from earth in 1856, and her husband followed her to the grave in 1860—both dying in the faith of the Dunkard church.

Samuel Kinsey, the subject, assisted on the home farm until he reached his twentyfirst year, when he engaged in agricultural pursuits on his own account. In 1865 he took possession of the old homestead, and June 15, of the same year, was united in marriage with Miss Louise Rhodes, a daughter of David and Candace (Johnson) Rhodes, and this union has been blessed with six children, of whom four are still living, viz: Candace, wife of Charles Warner; Ellen, wife of William Brown; Alice, wife of Ira Snodgrass, of New Baltimore, and David S., who still resides with his Mrs. Louise Kinsey was born in Stark county, Ohio, December 11, 1840, her parents having come from their native state of Pennsylvania in 1835. They lived in Stark county until 1846, when they came to Portage county. Here the father, who was a shoemaker by trade, engaged in farming and also worked a while in the potteries, and in his latter years became a dealer in live stock. He was twice married, and by his first wife was the father of one child, Sophie, who died but a few years ago; by his second wife, Candace Johnson, daughter of John and Catherine (Steffa) Johnson, he became the father of six children, five of whom are still living, viz: Henry, John, Herman, Louise (Mrs. Kinsey), and Catherine. The paternal grandfather of Mrs. Kinsey was a native of England and attained the patriarchal age of 100 years; the grandmother, who bore the maiden name of Steffa, was a native of Germany. These grandparents were early settlers of Stark county, were members of the Lutheran church, and had born to them ten children, all now deceased.

Samuel Kinsey is a stanch republican in politics; his wife is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. Mr. Kinsey is one of the most successful farmers of Suffield township, has been an upright citizen, and is justly honored for his morality, industry and life of unselfish usefulness.

E. Norris—all these being also residents of Akron.

Oscar C. Kirn received a very good education in the public schools of Akron, which he attended until fifteen years of age, and then for a time was employed by a civil engineer. In 1875 he entered the employ of the Schumacher Milling company, with whom he learned millwrighting and mechanical engineering, and for seventeen years was one of the company's most trusted employees.

The marriage of Mr. Kirn took place in December, 1881, to Miss Mary K. Fuchs, of Akron, and two children—William R. and Raymond O.—now add sunshine to the happy family home at No. 237 Carroll street. As a business man, Mr. Kirn has achieved a success but rarely met with by a man of his years, and this success in so complicated a business is entirely owing to his unusual skill, strict integrity and incessant industry, which have gained for him an unwonted degree of respect and confidence wherever he has had transactions.

Mr. Kirn now manufactures special oatmeal machinery, and recently has furnished an oat-meal plant for John Inglis & Sons, at Leith, Scotland. Mr. Kirn has been very successful in his business career, and is one of the leading business men of the city of Akron.

ETER KLINE is a native of Suffield township, Portage county, Ohio, where he is still a respected tiller of the soil. His birth occurred May 7, 1844, and he is a son of George and Elibabeth (Yaker) Kline, natives of Germany, who settled in this township in 1830, and of whom detailed mention will be made further on.

Peter Kline, the subject, received a good common-school education in his native township, pursuing his studies until his eighteenth year, and then assisted on the home farm until he attained his majority, when he began a three years' apprenticeship at carpentering under John Pero. After serving the stipulated term, he engaged in the trade on his own account for two years, when he married and resumed farming. His first marriage took place May 5, 1869, to Miss Elizabeth Luly, daughter of Henry and Margaret (Shaffer) Luly, to which union were born seven children, in the following order: Henry, Leonard, Frank, George, Lawrence, Annie and Rosa. Mrs. Elizabeth Kline passed away, at the age of forty-two years, April 29, 1889, in the faith of the Catholic church, and Mr. Kline was next married, November 29, 1892, to Miss Elizbeth Green. This lady was born in Germany and came alone to the United States in 1874; she was employed, on her arrival, by a farmer, who resided near Mr. Kline's home, with whom she remained ten years, and then became Mrs. Kline.

The parents of Peter Kline were both born in Germany, and the parents of the mother of subject were Anthony and Elizabeth Yaker. The children born to George Kline and wife were five in number, viz: John C., Barbara, Peter (subject), John C. and George A.—Barbara being the wife of Adam Rothermal. The deceased child, Mrs. George Ley, died in 1895, at the age of fifty. On coming to America, Mr. Kline, with his then small family, settled in Suffield township, and being an industrious and thrifty farmer, acquired a competency. His death took place August 19, 1870, at the age of fifty-eight years, and that of his wife occurred April 17, 1889, when she was seventyfive years old. Both were devoutly pious and died in the faith of the Roman Catholic church.

OHN W. KREIGHBAUM, a substantial farmer, of Green township, Summit county, Ohio, is native here, was born on his father's farm February 18, 1843, and is of remote Pennsylvania-German descent.

The grandfather of subject, who also bore the name of John W., was a native of Lancaster county, Pa., and there married Christina Weaver, by whom he became the father of the following children: Jacob W., John, George, Elizabeth, W. F., Sarah, Daniel, Christina and Jonathan. In 1815, Mr. Kreighbaum brought his family, as then constituted, to Ohio, and bought a farm of 280 acres in the wilderness of Green township, which farm is now owned by his grandson, our subject. He had but few neighbors in those pioneer days, excepting, perhaps, the Indians and wild animals, but he was industrious and succeeded in clearing up a good farm, on which he passed the remainder of his life. He was an elder in in the first Lutheran church in Union Town, and in politics was a Jacksonian democrat.

George Kreighbaum, father of the subject of this memoir, was born in Lancaster county, Pa., February 17, 1813, and was consequently but two years of age when brought to Ohio by his parents. He was reared on the home farm, receiving his education in the pioneer schools, and first married Sarah Spade, daughter of John Spade, also a pioneer from the Keystone state. This lady died in Springfield township, Summit county, leaving two children-John W. (subject) and William B. Mr. Kreighbaum next married Mrs. Rebecca Brubaker, daughter of Jacob Dillier and widow of Samuel To this marriage were born two Brubaker. children—Jacob and Irvin. Mr. Kreighbaum was the owner of 140 acres of good farming land, was a democrat in politics, a highly respected citizen, and died November 18, 1889, in the faith of the Lutheran church.

John W. Kreighbaum received his preliminary education in the district school, and at the age of nineteen years entered the Greensburg academy, which he attended seven or eight terms. He then adopted teaching as a vocation and was very successful, but when he had taught two terms in one district and five terms in another, failing health warned him to relinquish the profession and to resume agricultural pursuits.

April 9, 1866, Mr. Kreighbaum was united in marriage with Miss Mary J. Brubaker, who was born in Ashland county, Ohio, March 7, 1844, a daughter of Samuel and Rebecca (Dillier) Brubaker, the former of whom was a carpenter and joiner and a son of Jacob Brubaker, a pioneer of Ashland county from Pennsylvania. To the union of Mr. and Mrs. Kreighbaum have been born two children, viz: Cordia G., April 16, 1867 (died November 22, 1884), and Lloyd C., who was born March 2, 1878, and attended the graded school at Union Town, and has also attended Buchtel college, and is now a student at Eastman's Business college, at Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

Mr. Kreighbaum has a well-improved farm of 136 acres, but resides on a one-acre lot near Lake, in order to be close to business and the post-office. In politics he is a stanch democrat, and has been justice of the peace of Greene township twenty-one years, and is also a notary public, having been commissioned by Gov. Bushnell. He is a member of Apollo lodge, No. 83, F. & A. M., and is also a Royal Arch Mason. In religion his wife affiliates with the Reformed church, while Mr. Kreighbaum is a member of the Lutheran church, which he aids liberally to support. He is a very popular gentleman as well as a substantial citizen, and he and family are a credit to the township.

Mrs. Kreighbaum is a native of Ashland county, Ohio, and was born March 7, 1844, at Mohican. Her father was born in the Keystone state. He was a sound democrat in politics and a true Methodist. He was a man who was ready to advance the public good. He was born in 1818 and died December 19, 1848. The mother was also a native of Lebanon, Pa., was born in 1818, and died in March, 1874. Mrs. Kreighbaum's grandparents, Jacob and Elizabeth Brubaker, were Pennsylvanians by birth, and the former a farmer by occupation, and to their marriage were born nine sons and four daughters.

RANK KUNKAL, a successful farmer and a greatly respected citizen of Suffield township, Portage county, Ohio, is a native of Belgium, and was born September 13, 1825. His father, Andrew Kunkal, was a farmer by occupation, and to him and his wife, Mollie Kunkal, were born two children, of whom John died at the age of fifty years, the other being Frank, the subject of this biography. The mother was called from earth in 1838, at the age of forty-eight years, and the father in 1855, when sixty-three years old, both dying in the faith of the Roman Catholic church.

Frank Kunkal was reared on his father's farm, received a fair common-school education. and in 1851 came to America in a sailing vessel, landing in the city of New York, where he remained one year, when he came to Ohio. For two years he lived in Cleveland, where he met and married Miss Elizabeth Moledore, a daughter of Dominic and Catherine (Oluch) Moledore, the ceremony being performed June 10, 1855, and the marriage resulting in the birth of eight children, viz: Henry, born September 13, 1856; Mary, born November 29, 1859, and now the wife of B. Weideman; Frank, born July, 1862; Jacob, who was born December 18, 1863, and died June 22, 1881; Sylvester, born January 11, 1866; Barbara, now Mrs. John Beasler, born January 14, 1870; Clara, born October 1, 1872, and married to Lewis Rothermal, and Dora, born May 12, 1876.

Mrs. Elizabeth (Moledore) Kunkal was born in Hesse Darmstadt, Germany, January 12, 1835, where her father died in 1838 and her mother in 1843, both in the faith of the Catholic church and the parents of six children, four of whom died in childhood, the two survivors being Henry and Mrs. Kunkal. This lady left her native land in 1853 and came alone to America. For a short time she lived in Randolph, Portage county, Ohio, then went to Akron, Summit county, and then to Cleveland, where she worked as a domestic until met by and married to Mr. Kunkal at the date mentioned above.

Immediately after his marriage Mr. Kunkal came to Suffield township, Portage county, and bought the farm on which he still resides, and on which his children, named above, have been born and reared. The farm is located about one mile west of Suffield Center, and fifty rods east of Suffield station, on the Cleveland, Canton & Southern railroad, and Mr. Kunkal has made it one of the most productive and profitable in the township, his long experience having made him an expert agriculturist, as everything about his premises clearly indicates. In politics he is a democrat and for two years has served as township supervisor, doing his duty well, faithfully and satisfactorily. He and family are members of St. Joseph Catholic church, and are among the most highly respected residents of Suffield township.

L1 LEONARD, a prosperous and now retired farmer and prominent citizen of Franklin township, Portage county, Ohio, where he was born February 5, 1825, is a son of Sewell and Sally (Bettys) Leonard, natives of Massachusetts. His maternal grandfather, Nathaniel Bettys, was an early settler of Tallmadge township, Summit county, Ohio, at a point now known as Bettys Corners. He was a captain in the war of 1812, was an influential citizen, and died on his farm at the greatly advanced age of ninety-four years.

Sewell Leonard, father of subject, came to Ohio about the year 1818, being then about twenty-five years of age, and, being a farmer, soon settled, after marriage, on a farm near Lake Brady, where his death occurred March 5, 1852, and that of his wife in 1880. They were the parents of six children, viz: Frederick, a farmer, who died at Nashville, Tenn., while serving as a soldier in a Michigan regiment of volunteers; Nathaniel, who has been a business man at Bellefontaine, Ohio, for many years; Eli, the subject of this biography; Ives, who resides in Akron, Ohio; Lyman, who was killed in a powder-mill explosion in Bedford, Ohio; and Roland, who died at the age of twenty-six years.

Eli Leonard was reared a farmer and this has been his life-long calling. He was a filial son and took good care of his parents, who were both crippled, the father by disease and the mother by an accident to her buggy while attending a county fair, which accident caused her to use crutches for many years. Leonard was married, in Franklin township. April 14, 1859, to Miss Antoinette Bull, who was born in Shalersville, Ohio, in May, 1840, a daughter of Samuel and Catherine (Freeby) Bull. Her father, Samuel Bull, or, rather, Buell, as the name was originally spelled, was born in Berks county, Pa., June 11, 1809, a son of Samuel and Barbara (Godfrey) Bull. who settled in Columbiana county, Ohio, in 1826, and were the parents of eleven children. Samuel, Jr., was married November 14, 1833, to Catherine, who was born in February, 1809, a daughter of George and Catherine (Ecker) Freeby, of Coventry, Ohio, and to this union were born six children, viz: Henry Austin, who was killed while serving in the Seventh Ohio volunteer infantry; Maria, who was married to Elisha Smith, and died in Kent; George W., a school-teacher and farmer, who died in Denver, Colo.; Antoinette, now Mrs. Leonard; Marvin, who died in infancy; and Samuel, a farmer of Brimfield township, Portage county. The father of this family died in 1886, a member of the Kent Methodist Episcopal church, as was also his widow, who died December 14, 1896. To Eli and Antoinette (Bull) Leonard have been born three children, viz: Eva, June 28, 1860, now the wife of Linus Meloney, of Kent; Addie, April 19, 1865, died March 28, 1884; George, born August 7, 1868, a business man of Canton, Ohio, married to Lou Johns, and the father of one child, Helen A.

Mr. Leonard, who still owns his farm, has for the past six years lived in retirement in Kent, where he owns, also, a pleasant residence property. In politics he has always been independent, voting as suited his judgment, and has never held any office excepting that of school director. Mrs. Leonard has been a member of the Methodist Episcopal church of Kent since 1859, and has always been faithful in her devotions, as well as faithful as a wife and mother.

ALPH H. LODGE, proprietor of Silver Lake park, one-half mile from Cuyahoga Falls, and an honored and respected citizen, was born near this city August 3, 1830, a son of George A. and Rebecca (Smith) Lodge.

George H. Lodge was born fifteen miles below Philadelphia, on the Delaware river, in New Jersey, was a mason and farmer, and married, in Philadelphia, Rebecca Smith, of that city, daughter of Ralph Smith, an extensive builder. In 1829 Mr. Lodge came to Ohio and settled in Stowe township, where he bought a farm and lived on it sixteen years. He then went to Cleveland, Ohio, where he engaged in mercantile business, beside conducting an extensive market garden for many years and sold immense amounts of his vegetables in his own store. He finally returned to Cuyahoga Falls, retired, and died here in 1880, at the age of eighty years. In politics he was first a whig, but became a republican on the organization of this party. He was a man of high character and of great integrity. His children were Ralph H., Emma S., George, Mary, Cornelia and Caroline. The Lodge family descends from French stock, and the name was originally spelled DeLodge.

The founder of the family in America came from England in the same ship with William Penn and settled on the Delaware river. The old homestead is still in the family name. Samuel Lodge, grandfather of our subject, married Abigail Horner, of New Jersey. Her parents were from Germany, and their children were Isaac, Hannah, Benjamin and Elizabeth, Samuel and George.

Ralph H. Lodge received his education at the public schools and went to Cleveland with his father when he was sixteen years old and was engaged with him in the business of gardening, and conducted this business after his father retired. He married, April 7, 1870, at Cuyahoga Falls, Julia A. Plum, born January 7, 1847, at Massillon, Ohio, a daughter of Henry and Nancy (North) Plum.

Henry Plum was born October, 1814, in Middletown, Conn., of English-Puritan ancestry, who came from England early in the settlement of this country. The Norths were of the same stock. Henry Plum married in Middletown, Conn., and moved to Ohio about 1836-7, and settled at Monroe Falls, where he established a shoe business. He afterward moved to Cuyahoga Falls and engaged in the same business and afterward went to Massillon, Ohio, where he engaged in the mercantile business as early as 1857 and conducted this business nearly forty years, when he retired. Fraternally, he is a Mason. Mr. and Mrs. Plum are both members of the Methodist church, of which Mr. Plum is trustee and Politically he is a republican, and was one of the founders of the party in Ohio. His children are Mary, Wilbur, Charles (died an infant), Lucy, William R., Julia A., Emma, Lillian, Rose and Carrie. William R. Plum, one of the sons, is an attorney at law in Chieago, was on Gen. Thomas' staff during the war as telegrapher and afterward graduated at Yale with high honors.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph H. Lodge settled, after marriage, in Cleveland, where they lived six years, and came to Summit county in April, 1865, rented land, farmed until January 10, 1875, then bought 135 acres of land, controlling Silver Lake, for the purpose of making a summer resort. To Mr. and Mrs. Lodge have been born Ballard, Lillian, William, George, Lewis, Evelyn Anna, Mabel, Laura, Julia (who died six years old) and Ralph H., Jr. Mrs. Lodge is a member of the Methodist church and in politics Mr. Lodge is a republican.

Silver Lake park is one of the most beautiful summer resorts in the state of Ohio. Mr. Lodge has spent thousands of dollars in ornamenting and beautifying the grounds and providing many attractions for pleasure seek-The lake is about three-fourths of a mile long and the water is as clear and pure as crystal. It is known to be a mammoth spring or many springs combined in one. In places it reaches a depth of over forty feet. bottom is comprised of sand and it affords excellent bathing facilities. Many bath houses are provided and also a toboggan slide into the The lake is surrounded by gently sloping grounds, well wooded, and the scenery is charming and diversified. In addition to the natural forests of oak, chestnut and hickory, Mr. Lodge has set out a variety of shade trees which in twenty years have attained a large growth and are from one to two feet in diameter, but the luxuriant hard and soft maple predominate. Excellent bathing facilities for 200 persons are provided, with commodious private drying rooms. A fleet of about fifty row boats, an electric launch, and a steamer afford plenty of boating facilities for those who enjoy boating. The extensive groves make pleasant camping grounds and as many as 300 people have camped here at one time. Tents and floors are provided, if desired, and all necessary camp equipments. Plenty of clear and pure ice is in store for the use of the establishment. Mr. Lodge has a large experience as a caterer to the public, and a talent for amusing the patrons of his place. Among these attractions is a menagerie including three elks from their native forest. The stag is a splendid specimen of this animal, with wide, branching antlers. Two bear-pits-twenty feet in diameter-with caves and subterranean passages and trees for climbing, give comfort to six glossy, black bears, who live here contentedly with their cubs. The bears breed and rear their young as in a state of nature twelve of them have been born here. raccoons, wolves and squirrels live here in the park as in their native wilds. A very valuable addition is the tiger, or jaguar, from South America. They are a delight to the children and a curiosity to grown people. For the past fifteen years the raising of gold-fish has been a prominent feature of the park—as many as 40,000 being raised in one year. There are also birds of prey, such as eagles, owls, etc.; a large merry-go-round, purchased at an expense of $3,500 with panoramic views, is another great attraction. So is the shell bazaar and photographic establishment—pavilions, with tables for the picknickers; also shooting galleries and billiard tables add to the amusements. Several cottages, built of logs, with huge oldfashioned fire-places, are rented to patrons who wish to stay for a week or more. About fifty attendants are necessary to care for the guests and provide for them during the busy season, and as many as 10,000 people have been entertained in one day. The charges are mere nominal for the use of the grounds and popular prices prevail. Take it all in all, it is one of the most attractive places of summer resort in the west, and it is conducted in the most orderly manner. No liquor is sold in the place or in the township, neither are any disorderly people allowed on the ground nor is the park open on Sunday.

Three electric tracks connect the park closely with Cuyahoga Falls, Akron and Cleve-A fine base ball and bicycle track, with grand stand seating 400 persons, add to the pleasure of the patrons. A fine brass band and concert orchestra were employed last season at an expense of $1,600, not including the board of the musicians. The lake and park together contain 215 acres of woodland and water and thirty-five buildings of importance have been constructed within its limits. A fine water supply is furnished by a large windmill, with pump, and large tank at an elevation of forty feet. This gives abundance of water for the guests, and in addition there is a large reservoir, supplying twenty drinking fountains. Mr. Lodge has now had twenty years of experience in his line, and, aided by his excellent wife and family, has created probably the finest pleasure resort existing to-day in Ohio.

ENAS KENT, of Kent, Ohio, was, at the time of his death, one of the oldest citizens of Portage county, and almost, if not quite, the last of the business men who became identified with it in its infancy.

He descended from the old Puritan stock,—his father having been a soldier in the Revolutionary war—and was born in Middletown, Conn., July 12, 1786. His childhood and early manhood were passed in Leyden, Mass. His educational advantages were necessarily meager, being those only of the common school; but, limited as they were, he improved them to the best advantage. The arithmetic that he studied, a copy of Adams' old work published in 1802, is in the possession of his son, Marvin. Upon a portion of the leaves, left blank for that purpose, Mr. Kent worked out and proved every example in the book. When a young man he learned the trade of carpenter and joiner, the same that his father had followed.

At the age of twenty-five he was united in marriage with Miss Pamelia Lewis, a native of Farmington, Conn. The father of Miss Lewis was a Revolutionary veteran, and also a carpenter and joiner. With these peculiar coincidences in their family history the destinies of this happy pair were united, and never went apart until soon after the anniversary of their golden wedding, when they were severed by the death of Mrs. Kent, October 21, 1862.

In 1812 the father of Mr. Kent emigrated to Ohio and located in Mantua, where he died at an advanced age. Young Zenas accompanied the family to these western wilds, but soon afterward returned to the east for his wife, and, coming west again, settled in Hudson, then a township of Portage county. Hudson, he formed the acquaintance and secured the friendship of Capt. Heman Oviatt. He also, while there, built a tannery for Owen Brown, and taught school in the winter sea-In the summer of 1815, Mr. Kent removed to Ravenna, and went into business, Capt. Oviatt furnishing the capital for that The captain always regarded Mr. Kent with peculiar interest and friendship, and years afterward, when he was a prosperous merchant, the captain would refer with great pride to the fact that he "sot him up."

In commencing his mercantile career, Mr. Kent erected a wooden store building upon the site now occupied by the Second National bank, working upon it with his own hands. This building, which at once became a store and a dwelling, was some years afterward moved to the south side of Main street, and stands in what is known as Little's block.

MRS. ZENAS KENT DECEASED.

The store building finished, the firm of Oviatt & Kent commenced operations. The partnership terminated in a few years, when the junior of the firm was able to repay the capital so kindly advanced by his early friend. Once more Mr. Kent undertook a building enterprise after he commenced trade, the only diversion of the kind he allowed himself, for other parties, during his long mercantile career. In 1826 he took a contract to erect the present courthouse in Ravenna. This building was then the architectural wonder of the surrounding country. Mr. Kent's mercantile enterprise proved a grand success, and in energy and perseverance found a rival only in that of the late Cyrus Prentiss. With all its increased facilities and manifold advantages, the present day does not give us so great a development of the tact and enterprise that characterized the pioneer tradesman.

> "What heroism, what perils then, How true of heart and strong of hand, How earnest, resolute, the pioneer man."

From 1831 to 1850, Mr. Kent had a store in Hudson, which was known as that of Kent & Brewster. It did a very profitable business. In 1832 Mr. Kent, in company with David Ladd, purchased five or six hundred acres of land in the township of Franklin, embracing a water-power of the Cuyahoga river at that place. In the same year he erected Kent's flouring-mill, which for the third of a century enjoyed the highest reputation. The first flour shipped from northern Ohio to Cleveland went from this mill, via the Ohio canal.

The connection of Mr. Ladd with this property was temporary, and Mr. Kent became sole proprietor. In 1836 he sold the entire property for $75,000 to the Franklin Land company, which afterward became the Franklin Silk company. After Mr. Kent bought out Mr. Ladd, he arranged with John Brown—afterwards of Osawatomie fame—to carry on the tanning business, a tannery establishment having been previously commenced.

In 1837 Mr. Kent built the large brick block containing a hotel, stores, etc., near the eastern bank of the Cuyahoga. In the winding up of the disastrous affairs of the silk company in 1843, most of the original property found its way back into the hands of Mr. Kent. In 1845 Mr. Kent sold his stock of goods in Ravenna to his sons, Marvin and Charles H. Kent, and, after a successful career of thirty years, retired from active business. fifteen months' business in Ravenna, the firm of M. Kent & Co. sold out to S. A. & R. A. Gillette, who also purchased the large brick store building of Mr. Kent, Sr. Subsequently the property adjoining this store, used as a residence, was purchased by H. L. Day, and with this transaction terminated the mercantile business identification of Zenas Kent with Ravenna.

In 1849 the Franklin Bank of Portage county was established, and Mr. Kent chosen its president. This position he held until 1864, when the bank closed its business, and in its place was organized the Kent National bank, of which Mr. Kent was made president, which place he occupied at the time of his In 1850 Mr. Kent commenced the erection of a cotton factory, at the same time built a fine dwelling house for his own occupancy. When the latter was completed, in 1851, he removed to Franklin, where his financial interests had all become centered. In the spring of 1853, Mr. Kent was chosen treasurer of the A. & G. W. R. R., which position he retained until May, 1854, when he resigned, and E. P. Brainerd became his successor, and held the office until 1864.

In April, 1860, having previously built a city mansion on Euclid avenue, he removed to Cleveland, and in November, 1864, Mrs. Kent having died on the 21st of the preceding October, he returned to Franklin, the name having been changed to that of Kent, where he passed the remainder of his life.

Mr. Kent was not marked by any brilliant or dashing characteristics. He possessed good common sense, to which were added indomitable will, native shrewdness, and unflagging energy, and, better than all, an inflexible integrity, which gave him the confidence of all with whom he had dealings.

As a tradesman he was more methodical than speculative, and his devotion to his business was almost unparalleled, and his management always safe and prosperous. It is related of him, as a sample of his caution, that in the early days of his store-keeping he once refused twenty bushels of wheat for a pound of tea, fearing that the former would not replace the latter when a new purchase should be made. As illustrative of his industry, it may be stated that upon one occasion, when in New York city for the purpose of purchasing goods, a representative of a silk house called upon him at his hotel, at the usual hour of commencing business, to solicit his patronage. Mr. Kent replied: "If you expect to sell me goods, you must get up early in the morning. I bought all my silks before breakfast."

As a specimen of the spirit of his integrity, it may also be stated that when the Franklin Silk company tendered him the presidency of their banking department Mr. Kent required them to place in his hands the means to redeem their issues, saying that he would place his name upon no paper without having the power to protect it from dishonor. The arrangement was made. The disastrous history of the silk company is well known, but their paper was all redeemed, dollar for dollar. Mr. Kent's entire business life was a grand success, and he left behind him an estate estimated to be worth fully $300,000.

Mr. Kent was blessed with a family of thirteen children, nine of whom were living at the time of his death, and of whom four survive at this time, viz: Marvin, Frances E., Emily K. and Amelia L. Mr. Kent died suddenly at his residence at Kent on the 4th of October, 1865, in the eightieth year of his age. His remains were interred in Woodlawn cemetery—Cleveland's beautiful city of the dead. In a lovely spot overshadowed by the cypress and the willow, by the side of the wife of his youth and the companion of his mature years and green old age, reposes all that death left of this noble man.

ON. MARVIN KENT, retired capitalist of Kent, Portage county, Ohio, projector and ex-president of the Atlantic & Great Western (now forming the four western divisions of the Erie) railroad, was born in Ravenna, Portage county, September 21, 1816, a son of Zenas and Pamelia (Lewis) Kent, both of Connecticut birth and of ante-Revolutionary descent—the father of each having borne arms in the struggle for American independence.

Hon. Marvin Kent, whose name opens this memoir, passed his early years in his father's store and in attendance at Tallmadge academy, E. T. Sturtevant, A. M., principal, and at Claridon academy, under Rev. Sherman B. Canfield.' In his nineteenth year he was dispatched to Philadelphia and New York to purchase a stock of spring goods for his father, with instructions to rely on his own judgment as to his investments, and the sagacity he displayed on this mission was very gratifying to the parent. The year after attaining his majority he was admitted into partnership with his father at Franklin Mills, now Kent, but precarious health caused him early to relinguish this business. He then assumed the management of the tannery built by his father for John Brown, of Osawatomie fame, and while thus engaged married Miss Maria Stewart, daughter of Col. William Stewart. 1844 he resumed mercantile pursuits, and at the same time became largely interested in the manufacture of flour, continuing in the latter for nearly twenty consecutive years.

In the history of Portage county it is written:

In the early days the pioneers devoted themselves to the task of building up a town on the Cuyahoga river with remarkable energy; not, however, until the various enterprises were taken hold of by the master hand of Marvin Kent did theories of progress put forward by the old settlers assume practical shape.

In 1850, in connection with others, he erected and put in successful operation the extensive window-glass factory at Franklin Mills, and the same year entered upon the most important enterprise of his life, which has secured to him a business reputation co-extensive with the inauguration and completion of a great public transportation route between the east and west—devising and projecting the Atlantic & Great Western railroad, designed to connect the Erie with the Ohio & Mississippi railroad, thus forming a grand trunk line, with uniform gauge throughout, from New York to St. Louis. In 1851 the necessary legislation was procured, but in order to secure the charter he was obliged to subscribe for the full amount of stock required by law for the organization of the company, as well as to indemnify some of the first board of directors for the payment of one share subscribed by each to render them eligible for election, which fact furnishes a significant illlustration of the want of faith in the success of an undertaking of that magnitude at that time. The organization of the new company was completed and Mr. Kent made its first president. The position he filled with a success characteristic of his great business tact, energy and ability, until the final completion of the road in 1864, save an interval of about three years. On the 21st of June of that year, he had the proud satisfaction of looking back over many years of unremitting labor and anxiety at last crowned with success, and also of driving home the last spike in the last rail. In his maiden speech on that occasion, he referred to the fact that on the fourth day of July, A. D. 1853, he broke ground for the new road by removing the first shovelful of earth with his own hands. There were none then to withhold from Mr. Kent a most generous compliment for the completion of this road, which, uniting the Erie and Ohio & Mississippi railways, formed a grand continental line from New York to St. Louis. A meeting was called, on the completion of the Atlantic & Great Western railroad, at Dayton, Ohio, June 21, 1864. President Marvin Kent announced the object of the meeting and T. W. Kennard, William Reynold, president of the Pennsylvania and New York division of the road; H. F. Sweetser, general superintendent, and Mr. Kent proceeded to lay the last rail; the ceremony of spiking was introduced with considerable merriment, Mr. Kennard driving the first spike in the last rail at four sturdy blows. Others followed in succession, one or two driving home in three, but the major portion from four to a dozen sledge-hammer strokes each. Those who participated in the ceremonies are included in the following list: T. W. Kennard, engineer, vice-president and general manager of the A. & G. W. railroad; Marvin Kent, president of the Ohio division; William Reynold, of Meadville, Pa., president of the New York and Pennsylvania division; Jacob Crall, Jacob Riblet and O. Beach, directors of the A. & G. W. railroad; H. F. Sweetser, general superintendent; William Lee, superintendent of construction; James Reynold, track master; F. W. Commins, master machinist; J. W. Tyler, secretary of the Ohio company; D. C. Coolman, resident engineer; R. J. Dukes, assistant resident engineer; C. E. Blakesley, secretary of the general manager; R. M. N. Taylor, general superintendent of the dining department; R. M. Shoemaker, vice-president of the Dayton & Michigan railroad; Lieut.-Governor Charles Anderson, of Ohio; Maj.-Gen. A. McD. Mc-Cook, Valentine Winters, T. A. Phillips, R. D. Phillips and W. D. Bickham, (editor and proprietor of Dayton Journal); S. S. L'Hommedieu; president, John W. Ellis; vice-president; D. McLaren, superintendent; F. H. Short, secretary; C. H. Hill and George T. Steadman, William Becket and John Young, directors of the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Railroad company; Gen. William H. Clement, president of the Little Miami Railroad company; Joseph C. Butler, director; Hon. M. R. Wait, Toledo; William Rietsel, editor of the Western Reserve Chronicle, Warren, Trumbull county; Paul F. Nicholson, correspondent of the New York World; George C. Harding, correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial; I. C. Bollman, correspondent of the Cincinnati Enquirer. At ten o'clock, A. M., President Kent took the sledge and addressed the company briefly as follows:

Gentlemen: Before proceeding to drive the last spike, I desire to call your attention to the fact that on the fourth of July, 1853, in company with several warm friends of this enterprise, we proceeded to the line of this railway, and broke the first ground; and as I had the pleasure of removing the first earth, it is especially gratifying to me to be present on the occasion of laying the last rail and driving the last spike; but, before performing this last service, permit me to express my obligation to the gentlemen who have contributed so largely to the success of this enterprise; I allude to T. W. Kennard and James McHenry, Esqrs.; those gentlemen, by their energy, their perseverance and great financial ability, have achieved the great end which we had in view, and had it not been for the success that attended their efforts in prosecuting this great work, we would not be assembled on an occasion so important and interesting as this.

Before closing these remarks, I should do great injustice to one other gentleman by omitting to acknowledge my obligations for the valuable service he has rendered. I refer to my friend here, J. W. Tyler, Esq., who has been my confidential legal adviser from the incipiency of the project, and who has ever been a steadfast and efficient co-operator in this work—I desire, therefore, that he should drive the spike preceding the last, deeming it befitting that, having commenced the work together, we should together conclude it.

After which Hon. J. W. Tyler made the following remarks:

Gentlemen: However undeserving the compliment conferred upon me by Mr. Kent, the president of the company, I must proceed to the accomplishment of the work. But before doing so, allow me to say that the early friends of the road have a right to congratulate themselves upon the final completion of this great enterprise, connecting the tide waters of the Atlantic with the Mississippi river; particularly has Mr. Kent, who conceived the project, cause for congratulation. He, to my knowledge, in the fall of 1850, was the first man to trace the line of the road on the map, and, having fully satisfied himself of its importance, drew the charter under which the company is now acting and which passed the legislature verbatim as submitted by him.

On his first report he suggested the name which the company now bears, a name which it must be admitted is at least eminently proper. At first the people along the line in Ohio acknowledged its importance, gave it encouragement, and subscribed largely to its stock. But financial difficulties coming on, they generally became discouraged, and but few friends adhered to the enterprise. I recognize some here to-day who have risked their fortunes and reputations on the accomplishments of the great enterprise, conspicuous among whom is Marvin Kent, who risked his own means and those of his relations.

Those, indeed, were the dark days of the road, even portending utter night. At that critical juncture Mr. Kennard, arriving in this country from England, saw at once its great advantages and immediately made favorable representations to European capitalists, securing James McHenry, of London, as financial operator and contractor of the great work; since which there have been no great difficulties in financial matters, nor in the completion of the main line and all its tributary branches. May the friends of this road live to see the day when this cruel war is over and and the country restored to new life, that the west and her thriving cities may yearn for greater facilities than the lines now constructed can furnish, and this road require its double track; then, and not until then, will be fully appreciated what has been accomplished by those who conceived and prosecuted to completion this immense artery in the commercial world. We hope to make, not many years hence, the first trip to San Francisco over this road and the Union Pacific.

At the close of these remarks Mr. Tyler accepted the sledge, and with four sturdy whacks he sent home his spike. Only one, an Irish track layer (James Reynolds), had yet sent home a spike in three blows, but this was professional; President Kent, with nervy grasp struck straight—one, two and three—and the welkin rang with applause. The work was well done, and the last rail of the Atlantic & Great Western was laid and the last spike driven to the head.

The construction of this road encountered, perhaps, more obstacles and greater opposition than any other in the country. Yet Mr. Kent showed himself equal to any and every emergency, and with heroic faith and one purpose, he made success possible and victory a verity. The Portage County Democrat (now the Ravenna Republican) of June 3, 1863, contained this truthful tribute:

The location of the shops at Franklin Mills is doubtless due to the position and influence of Marvin Kent, Esq., the president of the road, who resides at that point. If any man ought to be gratified and benefited by the location of the shops it is President Kent. He was not only the friend of the road, but, if we are correctly informed, he originated the idea of its construction. In carrying forward this great improvement to its completion, he has toiled and struggled for over twelve years amid doubt and discouragement, amid jeers and sneers and obloquy. While others hesitated, he stood fast; when the faint-hearted turned aside, he persevered with unfaltering nerve and courage; when timid friends forsook, he succeeded in raising up other friends, and in attracting capital to this great work; and thus, with a patience, a courage, and assiduity, and unswerving fidelity to a single aim that reaches the point of real heroism, he has held on his way through twelve laborious years of fluctuations, vicissitudes and uncertainties, neglecting or abandoning his private business, pledging or imperiling, or at least casting into the hazard of success, his large private fortune, for the benefit of his cherished enterprise. And yet he has labored all this time without general appreciation, the select few more intimately associated in official relations with him only knowing and appreciating his trials and his toils. But it is time the man to whom more than to any other the country is indebted for this great and leading road should be understood and appreciated, for every man and every community benefited by the construction of this road owes to Marvin Kent a debt of gratitude. He is to be congratulated on the success which the intelligence, the ability and the fixed and resolute purpose which he has brought to bear on the enterprise have accomplished.

The Kent Saturday Bulletin, June 26, 1880, had the following complimentary article regarding this great enterprise:

The "Broad Gauge" is no more. Its name and local characteristics no longer exist, but it has a history that ought not to entirely perish from the earth. The real original projector of the road was our own distinguished citizen, Marvin Kent. In 1850 he conceived and inaugurated the project of building the Atlantic & Great Western railway, designed to connect the Erie with the Ohio & Mississippi railroads, forming a grand trunk line of six feet uniform gauge from the city of New York to Saint Louis.

March 10, 1851, the charter was secured, which required a special act of the legislature, as it was under the old constitution, and this was among the last thus granted, since which time all incorporated companies are organized under the general laws of Ohio. In order to save the charter, a paid-up subscription of $20,000 was required, which Mr. Kent himself took. At that time no one had sufficient faith in the enterprise and courage to take more than one share; this was required and taken by a sufficient number to render them eligible as directors. From that time on in the varied history of its construction it became a heroic struggle to "sink or swim" with Mr. Kent. He shouldered the responsibility and went bravely in. He lifted the first shovel of earth and drove the last spike, and between these two events twelve long years elapsed, and they were years of unfaltering nerve and courage and fidelity to a single aim and purpose on the part of Mr. Kent, and which alone was the secret which crowned the effort with complete success. The construction of the road and location of the shops at Kent means a village now of over 3,000 people full of energy, push and enterprise, giving employment to hundreds of people, and more than doubling the value of every rod of land within a mile of the center of the town, and in many cases the increase has been a hundred fold. Beside what it has done for us, the road with its connections became one of national importance. We quote an extract from an editorial in the New York Tribune of June 19, 1864. It says:

By the completion of this enterprise, now assured, Cincinnati, Louisville, Saint Louis, etc., will be brought into more direct and easy communication with our city, while Columbus, Dayton, Indianapolis and nearly the whole of Ohio and Indiana have received a new and in many respects superior outlet to the seaboard. The value of the Erie railroad to its stockholders and to our city is nearly doubled by it (the A. & G. W.) as the rapid and vast appreciation of its stock for the past year sufficiently indicates. Ultimately the rapidly growing states of the central gold mining region, but especially that of Arizona and the head springs of the Arkansas, the Rio Grande and the Gila, will reach us in good part over the Atlantic & Great Western railroad. This city could well afford to pay the entire cost of this work rather than do without it; yet we think less than $1,000,000 in all have been paid by New Yorkers toward its construction. The more urgent, then, is the duty of honoring those by whose forecast, faith, energy and public spirit so magnificent a result has been noiselessly and frugally achieved.

Among the prominent coadjutors of Mr. Kent in the enterprise we may mention James McHenry and T. W. Kennard, of England; Henry A. Kent, Dr. W. S. Streator, Henry Doolittle, E. P. Brainard and William Reynolds. Mr. Kent was the first president of the company, but in the varying vicissitudes of its subsequent history he sustained to the road no official relations. As an investment for the original stockholders the road has not been a success. For the development of the country and as a servant of the people it has been eminently successful. By a recent sale of the road and change of ownership a complete re-organization of the company was the adopted policy, the most conspicuous of which was the change of name; the reduction of the "broad gauge" to the standard of the roads throughout the country, the present very efficient management, however, to be retained.

Preparations for narrowing the road have been going on along the line for some months, and on Tuesday, June 22d, the appointed day, at four o'clock in the morning, three thousand men began work, and at 6:25 A. M. an engine was run from Kent to Akron, and at 8:25 an engine came in to Kent from the Cleveland & Pittsburg road. At 11:10 A. M., engine No. 134, John Bull engineer, came in with baggage car and coach, bearing Chief Engineer Latimer. At 11:30 A. M., regular train No. 7, from the east arrived, only one hour late, regular time. In six hours the entire line from Levittsburg to Dayton was narrowed up —the shortest time was made on the section between Urbana and Dayton, being two hours and fifty-five seconds-and we close as we begun: The "broad gauge" is no more.

Upon the successful completion of this road, Mr. Kent substantially retired from active business, to the enjoyment of private life. Upon the death of his father in 1865, he became his successor as president of the Kent National Bank, which position he has held ever since. In October, 1875, he was elected state senator from the Twenty-sixth district of Ohio, and he served his constituents for two years with credit and ability. Mr. Kent is a gentleman of varied experince and of varied business qualifications—equally capable as an engineer or as financial manager to conduct a great public work. He has remarkable tenacity of purpose, and once resolved as to the value of an enterprise, no ordinary obstacle can prevent him from carrying it out. He is a man of liberal views and generous impulses, and has, in a great variety of ways, aided in advancing the material welfare of those among whom he lives. He has been a generous promoter of every business enterprise in the city of Kent, which bears his name. There are enduring monuments of his public spirit on every hand in the community in which he lives, such as public and private edifices, business blocks, mills and factories, and about them all there is an evidence of permanency and durability, of exactness in details, and adaptability to the uses designed.

To the union of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Kent have been born two children—Henry L., the elder, is now deceased, leaving a widow and two children: Ella Southwick, wife of John W. Reed, and Grace Emily, wife of Charles E. Curtis. The younger son, William S., is vice-president of the Kent National bank. The city of Kent is named in honor of Marvin Kent, and is one of the most thriving towns of Portage county; and it may well be said that the names of both are imperishable.

ILLIAM V. ALFORD, lecturer, of Garrettsville, Ohio, is a representative of one of the pioneer families of Windham township. The family is of English origin, and the first members that came to America were among the early settlers of the Massachusetts colony. The history of the family can be traced back only to Elijah Alford, who was born in Massachusetts, and was there married in 1725. His son Elijah was born in the town of Becket, Mass., where he became a prominent deacon in the Presbyterian church. He also became a member of the coony which purchased the tract of land now forming Windham township. He reared a family of seven children-Elijah, Oliver, Levi, Ruth, Sally, Anna, and Olive.

In March, 1811, Elijah and Oliver went to Ohio to prepare a home for the family, which followed later, traveling the entire distance with an ox-team. After being several weeks on the road they arrived at their journey's end in July and began the erection of a dwelling. This was a log cabin and was the first house built in Windham township. A momument has since been erected to commemorate the place. Of the children of Elijah Alford, mentioned above, Levi, grandfather of the subject of this sketch, was born in Becket, Mass., in 1789, and on April 6, 1814, was married to Edna C. Conant, who was born October 8, 1795. After his marriage he settled on a farm in Windham township, and followed the occupation of farming the remainder of his life.

He was an energetic man, always taking an active interest in public improvements, and working for the welfare of the community in which he lived. His character was so well appreciated that he was elected to many local offices of trust and honor. He died February 12, 1869. His wife followed him January 23, 1873. Their children were Elizabeth Olive, who was born January 8, 1815, married Lyman Wright, resided in Nelson township, and died in October, 1896; Rebecca E., now Mrs. Henry Palmer, a resident of Windham township; Sidney L. is now an inmate of the Odd Fellows' Home, at Cincinnati, but was a resident of Portage county; Samuel Newell lived in Putnam county, Ohio, and died in Leipsic; Edward lost his life October 23, 1836, at the age of eleven, being consumed in a burning building; Elijah resides on the homestead first occupied by the family in 1811; Darius M., father of the subject of this sketch, and the youngest son, was born August 3, 1832. He still lives on the farm where he was born. He married Cathaline Brewster, a lineal descendant of the Elder Brewster who was one of the Pilgrims who came to America in the Mayflower in 1620. In the line of descent she is of the eighth generation. Mr. Alford has followed the business of farming all his life. In the Civil war he was in the 100 days' service. He is an ardent supporter of the principles of the republican party, with which he has affiliated since its organization.

William V. Alford, the subject of this sketch, is the only son of Darius M. and Cathaline (Brewster) Alford who has lived to attain his majority. He was born October 7, 1858. From infancy to manhood his home was on the farm. His education was of the character usually received by boys in the country. After leaving the common school he entered the high school in Garrettsville, from which he graduated in 1879. After leaving school he became a civil engineer. He followed this business for several years, being engaged in railroad work in many states.

In 1887 he went to Central America as assistant engineer on the Nicaragua canal. was engaged in this work for a period of one year, when he returned home and began the study of photography, in which branch of art he prosecuted his studies for four years, becoming thoroughly proficient in the business. In the autumn of 1895 he again returned to Central America, this time to obtain photographic views of its ancient ruins, its strange aboriginal peoples, and its grand and romantic scenery. Of these he obtained about 1,000 He crossed the country from ocean to ocean fourteen times between Panama and the Mexican boundary. He climbed eight of the highest volcanoes and examined their craters, and enjoyed the novelty of sleeping in three of them. Without doubt he was the first white to visit certain of the aboriginal tribes, and was fortunate in obtaining many photographs of these people. In his journeys he nearly always traveled alone, except when accompanied by Indians. The last 400 miles of his journey was made on foot.

In the latter part of 1896 he returned home and has since given illustrated lectures before colleges in Ohio and Pennsylvania. These lectures are instructive and ought to encourage the scientist to pursue his investigations, to induce the ethnologist to enter into a deeper study of the races and tribes of men inhabiting that country, and to prove an incentive to the archæologist to a more thorough research among the relics and monuments of that ancient Indian civilization whose glory long antedated the arrival of the Spaniards in Central America.

Mr. Alford was married August 23, 1883, to Libbie Barnes, daughter of Peter and Julia (Stone) Barnes. She was born in Crawford county, Pa., on April 7, 1858. Her father was a native of New Jersey, an agriculturist in Crawford county, Pa., a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and a republican Mrs. Barnes was from Erie, Pa., in politics. They had a family of five children: William died in Crawford county, Pa., from wounds received in the Civil war. He was a member of a Pennsylvania regiment and became a veteran; Francis, died in Erie, Pa., in 1896; Emily married James Proctor, of Crawford county, Pa.; Joseph died in 1895.

To the union of Mr. and Mrs. Alford have been born three children: Carrie, born September 27, 1885; Marguerite, born February 27, 1888; William Brewster, born November 24, 1891. Mr. Alford is a member of I. O. O. F., and Mrs. Alford is a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal church. The family live in Garrettsville, where they are numbered among its most respected citizens.

HE KENT COURIER was founded in 1886 by Charles H. Scott, who conducted the journal until April, 1891, when William S. Kent assumed the business management, with J. G. Paxton as editor, and with the exception of three months this arrangement has existed until the present day. The Courier is a six-column eight-page paper, is all home print, and in politics is emphatically republican. It has a large circulation throughout Portage and adjoining counties, an extensive advertising patronage, is ably edited, and under the management of Mr. Kent has been financially successful.

William S. Kent, son of Marvin and Maria (Stewart) Kent, whose biographies will be found on an adjacent page, was born in Ravenna, Ohio, August 24, 1847. He was primarily educated in the schools of Kent, then attended the preparatory department of Westtern Reserve college at Hudson, Summit county, Ohio, and concluded his studies at the Polytechnic institute of Philadelphia, Pa. His first business venture was in the grocery trade at Kent; his second was in the hardware trade, which business he disposed of in 1886 and engaged in the dry-goods trade until 1893, since when he has devoted his attention to the management of the Courier and to banking, being now vice-president of the Kent National bank, of which full mention is made in the biography of Marvin Kent.

William S. Kent was united in marriage October 9, 1875, with Miss Kittic, daughter of W. C. North, of Cleveland, but Mrs. Kent died May 28, 1886.

As will easily be inferred, Mr. Kent is strongly republican in politics.

DWARD G. LEWIS, farmer and exsoldier, is a native of Brimfield township, Portage County, Ohio, where he still resides, and is a son of John and Alphena (Bassett) Lewis. The father was a native of Connecticut, who came to Ohio when a young man, engaged in farming, and to his marriage with Miss Bassett were born six children, of whom four are still living, viz: Hannah, wife of L. Edson; Frank, Edward G., the subject of this sketch, and William. The deceased were named Maria and Mary, and of these Mary died in 1871. The father of this family died in December, 1882, but had been preceded to the grave by his wife, who died in May, 1881, aged seventy-six years, both being consistent members of the Congregational church.

Edward G. Lewis was born July 21, 1839, was reared on his father's farm, and at the age of twenty-two years went to Illinois, where he was at work on a farm when the Civil war broke forth, when he enlisted. November 20, 1861, in the Sixty-fourth Illinois volunteer infantry, and performed faithful service for four years. At the battle of Charlton, 1862, he was wounded in the side by a shot, which disabled him for a short time, but he veteranized in the same company and continued in the service until long after the cessation of hostilities. He then went to Missouri. where he remained until 1870, when he returned to his native township, farmed a year, then went to Indiana, and for twelve years was engaged in the lumber business, and then finally returned to Brimfield township and settled on his present farm.

The marriage of Edward G. Lewis took place February 17, 1870, to Miss Amelia Fenn, who was born November 10, 1840, daughter of Gibe B. and Jane (Wakeman) Fenn, which union was blessed with one daughter—Nellie June—a bright young stenographic graduate, but who has been teaching school the past four years. The parents of Mrs. Lewis were both natives of Connecticut, and her mother was a daughter of John and Ruhamah (Goodsell) Wakeman. Mr. and Mrs. Fenn had born to them one other daughter, Mabel, who was educated a physician and is now the widow of Dr. Robert King; a son, Berry Fenn, died in infancy. Gibe B. Fenn was a clock-case maker, was a faithful member of the Episcopal church, and died December 29, 1893, at the age of eighty-five years, his estimable wife having died October 22, 1870, when sixty-three years of age. Archibald Fenn, paternal grandfather of Mrs. Lewis, was a native of Watertown, Litchfield county, Conn., and was one of the pioneers of Portage county, Ohio. To his marriage with Miss Mabel Beecher were born two children, Gibe B. and Julia. To the marriage of John Wakeman, the maternal grandfather of Mrs. Lewis, with Miss Goodsell were born seventeen children, of whom sixteen were reared to maturity, viz: Medad, Gideon, Elihu, Orman, Austin, Uriah, Amelia, Ellen, Adelia, Ruhamah, Maria, Jane, Susan, Henry, Ellen and Medad, Ir.

Edward G. Lewis is greatly respected for his splendid military record, and his civil life has been such as to place him high in the esteem of the community in which he was born and in which he still lives.

ILLIAM H. LOVE, a rising young attorney at law, of No. 168 South Main street, Akron, Ohio, was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., September 2, 1865, a son of Washington and Sarah (Hamilton) Love, natives of the north of Ireland and of Scotch-Irish descent, and who came after marriage to the United States, early in the infities, residing in Brooklyn until 1867, when they came to Ohio and settled at Salem, Columbiana county, where the father still resides. He is a republican in his politics and has always been active in local party affairs. To the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Love were born ten children, four of whom are dead.

William H. Love, who was an infant when his parents settled in Salem, Ohio, was reared in that town and educated primarily in its dis-He next attended Mount Union trict school. college, and after graduating passed some four years in Colorado, Wyoming, Kansas and other parts of the west, prospecting and teaching Returning to Salem, he read law with Hon. J. A. Amber until admitted to the bar in June, 1893, when he opened an office for the practice of his profession in Leetonia, Columbiana county, Ohio, meeting with the most flattering success in his private practice, and where he was elected solicitor of the town, in which capacity he served until August, 1896, when he resigned his office to come to Akron, where he has also met with abundant success.

In politics Mr. Love is a stanch republican, and in the fall campaign of 1896 took a very active part, making many eloquent speeches in advocacy of the principles of his party and materially aiding its success. Fraternally, Mr. Love is a member of K. O. T. M., No. 289.

Mr. Love was united in marriage, in 1891, with Miss Ella Bawman, of Wooster, Ohio, and one child—Ralph A.—has blessed the happy union. The residence of the family is at No. 807 South High street. Mr. Love has made his mark as a lawyer, and it is only a matter of time as to when he will stand in the front rank of the Summit county bar, as he has already manifested a superior knowledge of the technicalities of the profession which he has chosen to be that of his life.

EWIS MELVIN LONG, sheriff of Portage county, Ohio, was born in Elkhart county, Ind., June 17, 1849, a son of John and Lydia Ann (Frank) Long, natives of Pennsylvania. The father, who was a farmer, was twice married, and to the latter marriage there were born, beside the subject, three children. viz: David, in 1851;

Jacob H., in 1853, and Eva L., now Mrs. Lot B. James, in 1857. Both parents died in Vandalia, Cass county, Mich.—the father in 1886 and the mother in 1896.

Lewis M. Long was educated both in the common and high schools of Bristol, Elkhart county, Ind., and at Vandalia, Mich., and after finishing his education became a telegrapher. In 1872 he was given employment, as a substitute, by the Michigan Southern Railway company at Dowagiac, Mich., and for two years filled the places of "regulars," during their temporary absence from their posts of He then came to Ohio and for a short time worked in the wholesale grocery store of W. P. Southworth & Co., on Ontario street. In 1880 he came to Suffield, Port-Cleveland. age county, and was employed by the C., C. & S. Railroad company as station agent and operator, also served as mail messenger, and later became a retail coal dealer.

The marriage of Mr. Long took place April 6, 1880, in Suffield, to Miss Mary Creque, a native of the village, born November 4, 1862, and a daughter of Ferdinand and Anna E. Creque, natives, respectively, of France and Mr. Creque died in Suffield in Germany. 1869, and there his widow died in April, 1897. Mrs. Long was educated in the common schools of her native town and in the graded school at Marlborough, Stark county, and for a time was herself a school-teacher. Two children have blessed the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Evalena, born April 18, 1883, Long, viz: and Mabel, born May 5, 1884, both in Suffield, and both now attending the high school in Ravenna.

In politics Mr. Long is an active republican, served for some time as constable in Suffield, and in the fall of 1896 was elected sheriff of Portage county by a majority of 124 over his opponent, Thomas Griffith, of Cyclone, Paris township. Fraternally, he is a member of Mogadore lodge, No. 568, Knights of Pythias; in religion he and family are consistent members of the Methodist Episcopal church. Since residing in Ravenna, Mr. Long has secured many warm friends, and he and family enjoy the respect and society of the best people of the city.

ARK G. McCASLIN, eminent as an attorney at law in Kent, Ohio, was born in a log house near Mercer, Pa., November 8, 1851. He passed his boyhood days largely in Mercer and Lawrence counties, but extensive details of his life career will be given further on.

Andrew McCaslin, grandfather of subject, was born in the north of Ireland, of Scottish ancestors. He came to the United States early in the year 1800 and settled in Venango county, Pa., where he followed mercantile pursuits and also owned and operated an iron furnace, was elected sheriff and was, in many other ways, closely identified with the official, industrial and moral progress of the county.

George B. McCaslin, father of subject, was born in Venango ceunty, Pa., was there reared to manhood and married Eliza J. Gray, a native of the same county, and shortly after this event moved to Mercer county. 1861, although then forty-five years of age, he offered his services as a soldier to do battle for the preservation of the Union, which were accepted, and he was mustered into company B, One Hundredth Pennsylvania volunteer infantry (otherwise known as the Roundhead regiment), and was sent to the front. He died in the service, and his remains lie interred in the National cemetery, at Lexington, Ky.; his widow now makes her home in Kent, Ohio. To George B. McCaslin and wife were born nine children, of whom eight lived to reach the years of maturity, viz: William, a farmer and contractor in the state of Washington; Mary, wife of Sylvester Preston, of Cuba, Ill.; Angie, married to L. D. Harris, of Omaha, Nebr.; Josephine, married and residing in Stockton, Cal.; Mark G., of this notice; Elizabeth; wife of C. L. Whitney, of Walla Walla, Wash.; George A., a lawyer, who died in Butler county, Pa., and Lydia Muse, now dead.

Mark G. McCaslin was educated in the public schools near his home and in the academy at Sewickley, Pa. He next read law under Hon. Joseph N. McClure, at Sharon, Pa., and then entered the Ohio Union law college at Cleveland, from which he graduated in 1872, receiving the degree of B. L., and was admitted to the bar at Mercer, Mercer county, Pa., at the September term of court preceding his arrival at his majority, and at once entered upon the practice of the legal profession in Mercer and Butler counties. He was licensed to preach in 1877, graduated from the Drew Theological seminary at Madison, N. J., in 1882, receiving the degree of B. D., and for a time filled the Methodist pulpit at Linden, N. J., and in 1880 was admitted to the East Ohio conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, and thenceforward devoted his whole attention to the preaching of the gospel until 1884, having received the degree of B. S. from the Wesleyan university of Bloomington, Ill., on examination; in 1884 he withdrew from the conference and resumed the practice of law at Colville, Stevens county, Wash. The same year he received the nomination by the republican party for joint assemblyman to represent Stevens and Spokane counties in the legislature, but, although he ran ahead of his ticket, was defeated by forty-nine votes. This defeat was occasioned, beyond all doubt, by his strict adherence to the cause of temperance, in which he had always been an earnest worker, and could not be swerved from his convictions of right, even through the reward of an elective office. In 1886 Mr. McCaslin returned to Ohio and settled in Kent, where he has since largely devoted his time to law practice, with most flattering success. 1891 he has somewhat modified his political views and has affiliated with the prohibitionists-although he has always been independent and never bound by strictly party tiesand in 1893 was the prohibition candidate for secretary of state of Ohio. He has ever sought to do the right and to aid the weak, and although the work of reform has been slow, discouraging, attended with financial loss and at times with danger, he has never faltered in his adherence to the cause of humanity. When he left the republican party he was township chairman of the republican committee and a member of the county committee for Portage county, and naturally in the way of political preferment, and when it was known he was about to leave the party this fact was ably urged upon him, but feeling it to be his duty to help the little band of prohibitionists in their battle against what he regarded as the arch enemy of humanity, and his country, he cast all political ambition and personal considerations behind him and united with a party whose success he recognized to be very far in the future, if it came in his day or generation, thus laying all hope of preferment upon its altar.

Mr. McCaslin was twice married; by his first wife he had two children, Nellie, who lives in the west, and Paul, who is a student at Buchtel college, and is a very brilliant and promising young man.

May 15, 1891, Mark G. McCaslin was united in the bonds of matrimony with Miss Mary Bradrich, daughter of Rev. I. B. Bradrich, of Columbus, Ohio, and this union has been blessed with three children—Wendell Phillips, Mark Donald, and Edith Louise, all of lovely personality.

H. McCONNELL, M. D., physician and surgeon of Brimfield, Portage county, Ohio, was born in Washington county, Md., June 6, 1831, a son of John and Ellen (Moore) McConnell, both natives of Pennsylvania and of Scotch-Irish descent.

James McConnell, father of the doctor, was a blacksmith by trade, but later became a farmer in his native state. He married Miss Ellen Moore in Pennsylvania, and eleven children were born to this union. The father of this family reached the advanced age of ninety-eight years, and the mother attained the extraordinary age of 101 years. Both were life-long members of the Presbyterian church, of which the father was an elder.

Dr. McConnell received his preliminary education in the district schools of his native county, subsequently attended Florence academy, in the same county, and Hopetown academy in Beaver county, Pa. In 1853 he came to Ohio, and read medicine with Drs. Day & Willson for three years, and then entered Jefferson Medical college, of Philadelphia, from which he graduated in 1857, and at once located in Bolivar, Ohio, where he practiced one year; he then removed to Stark county, where he practiced his profession for twenty years. After a seven months' service in a hospital at Louisville, Ky., during the Civil war, he concluded to go west, and sold out, with the intention of settling in Kansas, but, on account of the advanced age of his parents, decided to remain in Ohio, and the same year located in Ravenna, Portage county, where he practiced one year, and then came to Brimfield.

The doctor was united in marriage, November 5, 1863, with Miss Savilla Royer, the union resulting in the birth of three children, viz: Carrie B., wife of Merritt Russell; Clarence L. and Estella. In politics the doctor is a republican, and fraternally is a Mason and a member of various medical societies. Socially he and family stand very high, and he is as much respected in society as he is esteemed in professional circles.

NTHONY McFARLIN, one of the most highly respected agriculturists of Bath township, Summit county, Ohio, was born here January 24, 1835. John McFarlin, father of the subject, was a native of Bristol, Ontario county, N. Y., born July 27, 1805, and when a young boy was brought to Ohio by his parents, who located in Sharon, Medina county, at first, but in 1819 came to Bath township, Summit county, and purchased 165 acres in the wilderness, which the elder Mr. McFarlin cleared up and improved with substantial buildings. Here John McFarlin grew to manhood and first married Miss Azubah Lowe, who was born in Canandaigua county, N. Y., and came to Bath township in 1830. To this marriage were born five children, viz: Anthony, Adeline, Emily, Eliza Jane and Harriet, of whom Anthony, the subject, is the only survivor, and is living on the old homestead. Mrs. McFarlin was called away October 11, 1862, and on October 13, 1863, Mr. McFarlin married Mrs. Elsie A. Swan, of Medina county, who bore him one child-Jessie E., born February 20, 1865, and died March 21, 1869. Mr. McFarlin was a thrifty farmer and a public-spirited citizen, and was elected to several positions of trust and honor, among which may be mentioned that of justice of the peace, which office he held many years. He was also twice elected county commissioner—first, in 1858, for three years, and again in 1864, for the same length of time, and was a member of the board when the present extensive infirmary buildings were erected. He died September 14, 1877, at the age of seventy-two years, honored as one of the best citizens Bath township ever had.

Anthony McFarlin was educated in the district schools and reared to manhood on his father's farm, which he now owns. November 15, 1860, he married Miss Frances M. Hurd, the third child born to Asa and Sarah (Beebe) Hurd, her birth occurring March 25, To this union have been born three children. in the following order: July 10, 1864—now the wife of Jason Sumner, a prosperous farmer of Bath township; May A., May 30, 1869, and John H., December 20, 1871—both residing on the homestead. Mrs. McFarlin is an active member of the Disciples' church, at East Granger, and in politics Mr. McFarlin is a stanch republican, and cast his first presidential vote for Honest Abe Lincoln. He has twice been elected township trustee, is at present a member of the school board, and for fourteen years has been a member of the Summit County Agricultural association. is an upright, honorable gentleman in every respect, and no one in the township is more highly esteemed. The old family homestead is situated on the highlands in the western part of the township and contains all modern improvements and up-to-date buildings, and is one of the best cultivated farms in Summit county. Mrs. Sumner has been a student at Hiram college and at Buchtel college, at Akron, Ohio. Miss May was educated in Buchtel college and at the old time-honored college of Oberlin. John was a student at Hiram college for three years.

Mr. Hurd, the father of Mrs. McFarlin, was born in Dutchess county, N. Y., and was reared to the life of a farmer. He emigrated to Ohio about 1835, and died at the age of seventy-two. Politically, he was a republican. Mrs. Hurd, the mother, was also a native of New York. She died at the age of seventy-three. In religious faith the Hurds were Baptists. There were only four children, three sons and one daughter, in the Hurd family, and three of the four are living.

SAAC MADLEM, one of the most substantial farmers and respected citizens of Springfield township, is of German descent. His grandfather, Thomas Madlem, was a native of Lancaster county, Pa., where he married and reared a family, later moving to Lake township, Stark county, Ohio, where he passed the remainder of his He was a leader in the German Lutheran church, and a Jacksonian democrat in The subject's father, George Madpolitics. lem, was born in Lancaster county, Pa. received a common-school education and married Catherine Hocker, who was born in that county in April, 1817. To Thomas Madlem and wife were born the following children: John, Isaac, Lena, Daniel, William, George. Susannah and Sarah. George Madlem moved to Stark county, Ohio, and after a few years' residence there located in Suffield township, Portage county, Ohio, where their permanent home was made, the father dying at the age of forty-one years. The mother is still living at a hale old age. Their pioneer days were full of privations and hardships of which the present generation have little or no conception, but they endured and braved all, and were fairly successful in the end. The father was engaged in the woolen manufacturing business, and was highly regarded as a man and as a citizen in the community in which he He was a democrat in politics, and a member of the Reformed church. death the widow was left with four children, whom she reared as best she could, giving them the advantages of the rather limited common-school system of that day.

Isaac Madlem, the subject, was born in |

Lancaster county, Pa., October 7, 1841. He was nine years of age when his parents moved to Portage county. He remained on the farm until he was seventeen years of age, when he was bound out to the carpenter trade, in which he became a competent craftsman, engaging in the same for two years before the war and for eight or nine years after his service in the army. Since retiring from his trade he has lived on his present farm. On September 30, 1861, he enlisted in company G, Twentyninth Ohio volunteer infantry, and served through the war, being mustered out July 13. 1865. He was a participant in some of the most notable engagements of the war. regiment was engaged in Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Tennessee, Kentucky, New York and Indiana, and saw some very hard service, being in the main line of battle at Cedar Mountain and Chancellorsville, where heavy loss was sustained by the regiment. At Gettysburg this regiment was in the right wing of battle and suffered heavily. At Culp's Hill it was in the main line and met a heavy loss, and also at Buzzard's Roost, Ga., where carelessness resulted in a large and unnecessary loss to the regiment. service at the battle of Lookout Mountain. was in the campaign before Atlanta and marched with Sherman to the sea, and was distinguished as one of the finest in that host. Mr. Madlem was appointed corporal July 1. 1864, and on the 23d of the same month was promoted to the position of sergeant. He is now a member of Hill post, No. 218, G. A. R.

On November 12, 1865, Mr. Madlem was married to Catharine Royer, who was born June 15, 1846, the daughter of John and Hettie (Royer) Royer, both natives of Lancaster county, Pa., the former being born November 12, 1808, and the latter January 3, 1809. John and Hettie Royer were married in that county and afterward moved to Stark county, Ohio, where they settled on a fine farm, which they improved highly. They were the parents of the following children: Elizabeth, Martha, Maria, Daniel, Sarah, Catherine, Leah and Salina. Mr. Royer was an old-line whig, afterward a republican.

Joseph Royer, paternal grandfather of Mrs. Madlem, was a native of Lancaster county, Pa., was an agriculturist, and he and wife were devoted members of the German Baptist church. He was one of the earliest advocates of republicanism. His death took place February 11, 1890, at the age of eighty-two years, two months and twenty-six days, and the interment of his remains was made February 14. His wife was also a native of the Keystone state, and died July 13, 1891, aged eighty-two years, six months and ten days, her interment taking place July 15.

To Mr. and Mrs. Madlem were born the following children: C. Etta, wife of Alvin Wearstler, and residing on the Madlem homestead; Emma B., wife of Gustus Mishler, of Springfield township; and Dora May, at home and attending school.

After their marriage they lived in Portage county for six years, and then moved to Springfield township, buying their present farm of sixty-six acres, the larger part of which is well improved, and on which there are very valuable deposits of fine potter's clay. These clay banks, covering about thirty-five acres, have been developed until at present Mr. Madlem is taking out about 3,000 tons per year. is a stanch republican politically, and cast his first presidential vote for "Honest Abe," and takes an active part in the affairs of his party in this county. Officially Mr. Madlem has been director of the schools of his district for years. He was township trustee for one year, and also treasurer of his township for three years. His wife is a member of the German Baptist Brethren church, and is a great help in that body. They are well-known and highly respected people.

ETER LEPPER, a wealthy and honored citizen of Springfield township, Summit county, Ohio, and a successful farmer and live-stock raiser, and a self-made man of business, was born in Milton township, Trumbull (now Mahoning) county, Ohio, October 7, 1826, and is a son of John A. and Magdalena (Stine) Lepper, of whom mention will be made in full toward the close of this biography.

At the age of three years, Peter Lepper was taken by his parents to Suffield township, Portage county, where, his parents being in somewhat indigent circumstances, and the country covered with forest growth, he began, at the age of twelve years, to make his own living by chopping wood and by assisting the neighbors in clearing up their lands. He next engaged as a driver for a canal-boat for three summers, and in 1840 went on the Mississippi river as a cabin boy, and in the fall returned to Suffield township, where he attended school three months, and in the spring of 1841 reengaged in boating on the canal, as bowsman, under Capt. Woodard, filling the position throughout the summer. Being yet a boy, he thought himself fortunate when he had accumulated sufficient cash to buy himself an ax and saw, which he took to what is now the city of Akron, and for two years went from house to house, sawing and chopping cord wood, and in this way earned enough money to pay for a two-horse team, and for two years engaged in general hauling. In 1845 he sold his team and for the following two years employed himself in peddling groceries, cigars, etc. About this time an elder sister started a grocery store in Suffield, and induced Mr. Lepper to form a partnership with her, he to do the purchasing, in conjunction with his peddling, and she to manage the store.

In 1847 Mr. Lepper bought a tract of forty-seven acres in Suffield township, adjacent to twenty-six acres owned by his parents, who, however, were well advanced in years and their property under mortgage. began cultivating his land, and also made an agreement with his parents, conditional on the transfer of their property to himself, to release the mortgage and to care for the parents the remainder of their existence-conditions he faithfully complied with, clothing them and providing them with every necessary until their decease. Mr. Lepper continued farming, also dealing extensively in live stock, in Suffield township, until 1855, in the meantime marrying, May 20, 1848, at Hartsville, Stark county, Miss Catherine Sausaman, daughter of Isaac and Catherine (Jarrett) Sausaman, the union being blessed with seven children, viz: John H., who is conducting a large grocery in Brittain, Summit county, and is married to Miss Anna Kling, daughter of George Kling; Louisa, still at home; B. Frank, unmarried and proprietor of a large sheep range in Montana; Margaret A., wife of Henry Swartz, a farmer of Edinburg, Portage county, Ohio; Mary Elizabeth and Jefferson, twins, Jefferson having been twice married—the first time to Ollie Smith. daughter of Orren Smith, but who died January 1, 1890, the mother of one son; his second marriage was to Maria Adams, daughter of Horace Adams; Catherine is the wife of Frederick Hawk, who resides on a farm belonging to Mr. Lepper, in Brimfield township, Portage county.

Mr. Lepper, while still a resident of Suffield township, in addition to farming and stockraising, also ran a threshing machine for fourteen years, and after a residence in that township of nearly forty years came to Springfield township in 1869, and purchased the farm of 255 acres, then known as the Philip Kramer farm, and situated on the road running from Mogadore to Akron, and now one of the finest farms in the county. Here Mr. Lepper has lived ever since, and has principally but not entirely devoted his attention to general farming and sheep raising, and is today one of the largest shippers of stock in this section of the country. For twenty-five years he has handled farm machinery and agricultural implements, and for many years has been a member of the Agricultural society, of which he has served as president, director and superintendent of stock.

In politics Mr. Lepper is a tariff democrat, and in the affairs of his party takes an active interest, and, although not an office seeker. has filled, as a matter of public duty, several important local offices, such as township trustee and assessor of Suffield township, and in 1890 was elected real estate appraiser of Springfield township, and has been a member of the school board for many years. He is a member of the Reformed church of Suffield. and while a resident there filled the office of deacon. In this faith his wife died July o. 1896, her death being a sad blow to himself and the surviving members of the family. She was a loving wife, a kind mother, a true Christian, and a woman possessed of many rare virtues. Their daughter, Louisa, is now managing the household for her father, and manages it well.

The parents of Peter Lepper were natives of Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany. John A. Lepper, the father, was born in June, 1779, was a miller by trade, and married, in 1803, Miss Mary Magdalen Stine, who was born in April, 1780, a daughter of Henry and Louisa (Von Writtenhousen) Stine. To John A. and wife were born the following children, of whom Peter Lepper is the only survivor and the only one born in America. The deceased were Elizabeth, who died an infant on the ocean; Adam, died at the age of seven years in New Lisbon, Columbiana county, Ohio; Philip, who owned a farm in Missouri, was shot dead in the Civil war, in 1864, at the age of fifty-one years; Goodhart died, at the age of fifty-two years, ten months and twenty-one days, January 11, 1865; Catherine died the wife of Joseph Crase; Louisa, the wife of Philip Hommel, died in Germany in 1893.

On the eve of embarkation of the Lepper family from the port of Bremen, Germany, after the passage to America was paid, which amounted to about $510, and whilst the colony of emigrants were waiting, a man by the name of Philip Damm found a bullet, about the size of a small walnut, in the street, and gave it to the third child of the Leppers, Philip by name, who, boy like, attached a string to the bullet and was swinging it in a circle, when the string broke, and the bullet flew at a tangent and crashed into a large mirror, valued at $400. This was unfortunate for Mr. Lepper; the company owning the building immediately attached the passage money, which caused great consternation in the minds of the family, for Mr. Lepper had determined to come to free America. The pieces of the mirror were gathered up and many of the colonists purchased pieces, paying a goodly sum, which greatly aided Mr. Lepper in liquidating the damage, but the balance yet amounted to over $200. The lamily were in a peculiar condition.

The captain of the outgoing vessel had taken a liking to Mr. Lepper, since he was an educated German, and would have been very useful on board, should an insurrection arise during the voyage. He however said to Mr. Lepper, "Sir, I am very sorry for your mishap, but I cannot take you at all, unless the balance of your passage is made up and you will be compelled to remain." The old gentleman said--"No, sir; I am going to America," and seeing the decision and candor in the person of Lepper, he said, "Come back in a few days and I will decide whether I will take you across, and upon what conditions." Upon the the return of Mr. Lepper, the captain said, "Lepper I will take you to America with this understanding, hard as it may seem to you-that upon the arrival of our vessel at Baltimore, you and family be placed on the block and be sold for the balance of the passage money." Mr. Lepper immediately answered-"I accept the proposition," and when the ship reported at Baltimore, the sale of a family for passage across the Atlantic was promulgated through the streets, and the daughter Catharine, a maiden of fourteen years of age, was put up and sold at the stipulated price, to remain in a family till her majority, twenty-one years of age, the family then resuming their westward bound trip to Northumberland county, Pa., where the father soon secured employment in his trade, that of a miller. people were in great sympathy with the Leppers, so a subscription was taken up, the requisite amount raised and a messenger sent to Baltimore to secure the release of the daughter, but he being a villain and a dishonest man, hypothecated the money. Another subscription was taken and a citizen and merchant of the village was then delegated to Baltimore to bring the daughter Catharine home, which was accomplished to the delight and unsurpassable joy of the family. This incident is presented to show the determined will of the Leppers, which is still apparent in the life of Summit county's honored citizen, Peter Lepper of this sketch.

The family reached America in 1819, being ninety-one days on the water, during forty-one of which they never saw daylight, and at the termination of this tempestuous voyage disembarked at the port of Baltimore, Md., whence they went direct to Northumberland county, Pa., where the father followed milling three years, and then came to Ohio with his family. Here for three years he followed his trade in New Lisbon, then at Milton one year, and then for one year at Tinker's creek, near Cleveland; he next came to Akron, worked two years, then came to Springfield township and worked one year at Millheim, and then bought twenty-six acres of land in Suffield township, and also took charge of the Randolph flouring-mill, his family working the farm until it was transferred to his son Peter. as mentioned in a preceding paragraph. the age of seventy years he retired from active work, and died at the home of Peter, in Suffield township, December 11, 1868, a faithful member of the Lutheran church. His widow survived until December 11, 1871, when she passed away in the same faith, also at the home of her son Peter, who had come to Springfield township.

John A. Lepper, grandfather of Peter Lepper, our subject, was also a native of Hesse-Darmstadt, was a miller, and was the father of eleven children, of whom three served in the German army—John A., father of Peter, having enlisted at the age of fourteen years and serving ten years, and John and Anthony, who were members of the same regiment with John A., and who were both killed on the field of battle.

Henry Stine, maternal grandfather of Peter Lepper, was also born in Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany, was a sutler, a wealthy man, and to his marriage with Miss Louisa von Writtenhousen were born four children, of whom Mrs. Lepper was the eldest; the others were named Catherine, Margaret and Goodhart.

Isaac Sausaman, father of Mrs. Peter Lepper, was born in Union county, Pa., was a saddler by trade, and on coming to Ohio, about 1842, located in Union township, Stark county, where he followed his trade many years, and then purchased twelve acres of land in Suffield. Portage county, where he passed the remainder of his life. To his marriage with Miss Catherine Jarrett, daughter of John Jarrett, were born nine children, of whom four are still living, viz: Henry and Frederick, twins, residing in Fulton county, Ind.; Amelia, wife of Joseph Dickerhoof, of Akron, Fulton county, Ind., and Isaac, of Suffield township, Portage county, The deceased were named John; Daniel; Esther, who was married to Aultman Heinman; Lydia, who died in Indiana, the wife of David Long, and Mrs. Peter Lepper, who was born September 25, 1818, and died at the date mentioned above.

Peter Lepper has done an immense amount of work toward the development of Springfield township, morally and temporally, and has given a helping hand to many of his less fortunate fellow-citizens. A man of most generous impulses, he has lost thousands upon thousands of dollars in saving others from ruin, or in helping them to repair their shattered fortunes, although he was but a poor boy himself when he began his business career, becoming through his own industry, sagacity and temperate life one of the wealthiest men in the county. has given, and will yet give, with an open hand and cheerful heart, to those in distress, and the people of Springfield may well feel proud, as well as grateful, that they have in their midst so munificent a philanthropist.

ENJAMIN F. MANDERBACH, chief of the Akron, Ohio, fire department, was born in New Berlin, Stark county, Ohio, January 1, 1844, and is a son of Jacob and Anna (Davis) Manderbach.

The earliest paternal ancestor of whom the subject has any knowledge was his great-grandfather, who was stolen by gypsies in Germany, brought to America, and reared to manhood in Lancaster county, Pa. Manderbach, grandfather of subject, was born in the county named, and there died. son Jacob, father of subject, was born in the same county in December, 1816, came to Ohio in 1842, and kept a hotel in New Berlin, Stark county, and later at Union Town, in the same county, until the breaking out of the late Civil war, when he engaged in distilling, an occupation he followed until 1865. He then came to Akron with his son Benjamin F., and was here engaged in the flour and feed trade, under the firm name of Manderbach & Son, for fourteen years, when he retired. his four children two still survive—Benjamin F., the subject, and Hattie E., the wife of William H. Miller.

Benjamin F. Manderbach was reared in New Berlin and Union Town, Ohio, attending public school until about seventeen years old, when he enlisted, September 30, 1861, in company G, Twenty-ninth Ohio volunteer infantry, and was discharged in December, 1863, to veteranize in the same regiment. ticipated in the first battle of Winchester, Port Republic, Cedar Mountain, Chancellorsville, Va., and Gettysburg, and was then transferred to the western army, where he took part in the battles of Lookout Mountain, Dug Gap, Resaca, Pine Knob, Dallas, New Hope Church and Kenesaw Mountain, and in the last named was wounded in the head, June 27, 1864. He was a brave, faithful and true soldier, was promoted from private to corporal and to first sergeant, and, January 15, 1865, was commissioned first lieutenant, with which rank he was honorably discharged July 4, 1865. On his return to Ohio he united in business with his father in Akron, as related in the foregoing paragraph. Since 1868 he has been a member of the Akron fire department, and since 1883 has been its efficient and able chief. He is also a member of the I. O. O. F., K. of P., G. A. R. and Loyal Legion, and in politics is a republican. As a useful citizen, enterprising business man and sagacious disciplinarian of the fire brigade of Akron, he has won and deserves the respect of the public, and this is freely accorded to him.

DWARD A. MONTENYOHL, M. D., a native of Akron, Ohio, was born June 5, 1873, and is a son of Henry L. and Mary E. (Atwood) Montenyohl, at present residing at No. 137 Bluff street, with an office at the southwest corner of Main and Exchange streets. The father is in the employ of the Standard Hardware company, and has spent twenty-five years in the hardware business.

Dr. Montenyohl was educated in Akron and graduated from its high school; he then entered the office of Dr. J. V. Cleaver, under whom he read medicine until prepared for a higher course of study. He then entered Bellevue Hospital Medical college of New York city, remained there during the years 1892 and 1893, and then entered the Medical college of Ohio. at Cincinnati, from which he graduated in the class of 1895, and later took a special course in the treatment of diseases of the eye and ear, and then, after passing a competitive examination, was appointed house surgeon of the Jewish general hospital at Cincinnati, where he spent one year, and while there became a member of the Hamilton county Medical society and was appointed a clinician in the department of the diseases of children in the Medical college of Ohio. The doctor is a genial, whole-souled gentleman, well fitted by nature for the profession he has adopted as his life pursuit, as he carries, as it were, sunshine into the sick chamber, and it is a well-known physiological or spiritualistic fact that a radiant countenance, working on the sympathetic patient, accomplishes as much, at times, as therapeutics. The doctor keeps thoroughly posted on the advances made daily in his science, and both as a practitioner in general medicine and as an oculist has met with more than ordinary success for one of his age. The doctor is now a member of the Union Medical society of Northeastern Ohio.

ULIUS D. MARSHALL, of Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio, springs from an old colonial New England family, of Scotch descent, and was born September 2, 1828, at Bolton, Conn., son of Samuel and Mary (Cook) Marshall.

Julius D. Marshall was but three years old when his father came to Ohio in 1831, located in Twinsburg, Summit county, but later removed to Cuyahoga Falls, and here subject received his early education. He went to Michigan with his father when about fifteen years old and attended school in Berrien county. He married, when twenty-one years old, in Saint Joseph county, Mich., Julia A. Campbell, who was born in Canada, and to Mr. and Mrs. Marshall were born two children—William R. and Freddie E. Mr. Marshall returned to Cuyahoga Falls in 1861, learned the carpenter's trade, and here enlisted, March 28, 1864, in battery D, First Ohio light artillery, Capt. James J. Cockerell, to serve three years or during the war, but was honorably discharged, on account of disability, September, 1864. His services were at Nashville, Tenn., but he was taken sick at Knoxville with chronic bronchitis, caused by exposure, and was in hospital one week there. His first wife died in Berrien county, Mich., and he next married Johanna Bennett, and they had one child-Charles G. Marshall. The second wife also died in Berrien county, Mich., and he next married Harriet Clement, and they had three children—Anna B., Nellie E. and Hattie V. The third Mrs. Marshall died, and he next married Sarah H. Beckley; she died, and his fifth marriage took place June 3, 1884, to Anna B. Staufer, born June 16, 1850, near Lancaster, Pa., a daughter of Ephraim and Sarah (Kurtz) Staufer, of sturdy Pennsylvania Dutch stock, and Mennonites in religion. Mr. Staufer was a tailor by trade and settled in Stark county, Ohio, in 1856-7, there passed his remaining days, and died aged thirty-nine His children were Martin K., Anna B., Emma and Elizabeth. Mr. Marshall is a member of the G. A. R., Eadie post, Cuyahoga Falls, in which he has held the office of post commander. In politics he is a stanch Mr. Marshall is greatly disabled republican. and has not followed his trade for eight years, but previously was always an industrious, respected citizen, and still stands high in his community.

Samuel S. Marshall, father of subject, was born in Connecticut and early left an orphan. He became a shoemaker, and married in Connecticut Mary Cook, who, like him, was early left an orphan. Their children were Libbens R., Julia A., Elizabeth L., Esther A., Laura, Gilbert R., William G. and Julius D. Mr. Marshall was a soldier in the war of 1812, a member of the Presbyterian church, an upright and industrious man, and in politics a whig, and died in Michigan at the age of seventy years. He had two sons, Julius D.

and William G., soldiers in the Civil war. William G. was in an Ohio infantry regiment, served two years, and was at one time guarding prisoners on Johnson's Island, Lake Erie.

Julius D. Marshall's sons are named as follows: Wilfiam R., who married Ella Camp, of Cuyahoga Falls, where he is in the grocery business and has one child; Frederick E. married Dora Ulmer, is a street-car conductor, resides in Cleveland and has two children; Anna B. married F. OHN SPENCER MARVIN, of the firm of Robert Smith & Co., lumber dealers of Ravenna, Ohio, was born in Lancaster, Erie county, N. Y., sixteen miles east of Buffalo, May 30, 1831, a son of John C. and Lydia (Phillips) Marvin, both natives of the town of Saybrook, Litchfield county, Conn., where the Marvin family were among the first settlers, long before the Revolutionary war. To John C. and Lydia Marvin were born three children, viz: Sarah Ann, widow of Cyrus H. Norcut; John S., the subject, and Franklin Norton Marvin, of Rockford, Ill.

Joseph Marvin, the paternal grandfather of subject, was a native of Connecticut, was a soldier in the Revolution, and was a carpenter and builder by trade. He married a Miss Hutchinson, reared a family of four sons and seven daughters, and died in his native state at the age of sixty-five years. The maternal grandfather of subject was also a native of Litchfield county, Conn., was a farmer by calling, and died in middle life.

John C. Marvin, father of John S., the subject, was a carpenter and builder, and was extensively engaged in contract work. He was first married to Lydia Phillips, and with her passed a few years in the west, and it was during this period that subject was born; and during which, also, that Mrs. Marvin died in Lancaster, N. Y., in 1835. Mr. Marvin, however, always considered his native state to be his home, and after his bereavement returned thereto, married Maria Thomas—by whom no children were born—and died in 1875, at the age of seventy-three years, a member of the Methodist church, to which denomination his family also belonged.

John S. Marvin, whose name opens this biography, was reared in Litchfield county, Conn., from the age of four until nineteen years, having been placed in charge of an uncle after his mother's death. While yet a boy he was bound out to a shoemaker and worked four years for his board and $20 per annum, from which sum he paid for his His schooling was obtained at night. He then went to New Haven, Conn., learned cutting, receiving $4 per week the while, and later was paid $25 per week after he had attained proficiency. He then spent four years in New York, and afterward went to Baltimore, Md., then to Morris county, N. J., and in June, 1855, came to Ravenna, Ohio, and here worked as a journeyman on the bench for a year. In 1856 he went to Tennessee and to Kentucky, and in 1857 returned to Ravenna, formed a partnership with Ira W. Enos in the shoe and leather trade, which was continued for about ten months, after which Mr. Marvin conducted the business alone for about twelve years, then sold out and bought a farm, which he cultivated for four years, and in July, 1874, returned to Ravenna and engaged in his present business, which has since received his entire attention.

Mr. Marvin was united in marriage, November 20, 1859, with Miss Sarah M. Woodruff, daughter of Chauncey and Paulina (Bray) Woodruff, and this union was made the more happy by the birth of eight children, viz: Anna L., Fannie C., Paulina L., Charles L., John C., Edward W., Roland H. and William Of these, Anna L. and Paulina L. are still living with their parents; Fannie C. died in infancy; Charles L., a paper-hanger and decorator, married Miss Minnie Cushing, and is the father of four children—Earl Faxter, Raymond, Harold and Lilah; John C. is rate clerk for the American Cereal company of Chicago, Ill., and is married to Miss Maud Kaylor; Roland H. died January 4, 1895; William died September 26, 1895, thus leaving Edward W. as the sole survivor, who married Elizabeth Hartlerode, and now resides in Wooster, Ohio. The mother of this family was called away February 2, 1895. She was a lady of infinite worth and truly a helpmate to her husband; a loving mother and a warmhearted friend, she was mourned alike by her bereaved family and a large circle of acquaintances.

Mr. Marvin is in politics a republican, and is a master Mason fraternally. He is a shrewd business man and knows thoroughly the ins and outs of the lumber trade, as he before knew the shoe and leather business. Strictly conscientious in all his transactions, a customer, once secured, never quits him. Personally he is pleasant and agreeable in his deportment, and since his residence in Ravenna, now of some forty years' duration, he has drawn to himself many devoted friends.

AVID LESLIE MARVIN, of Akron, one of the most eminent young attorneys of Summit county, Ohio, was born in Kent, Portage county, November 17, 1862, and is a son of Hon. Ulysses

In March, 1895, he was re-elected circuit judge for the full term, and still fills the office.

The marriage of Judge U. L. Marvin took place November 24, 1861, to Miss Dorena, daughter of Hon. David L. and Mary L. (Palmetter) Rockwell, of Kent, and this marriage has been blessed with four children, viz: David L. (subject), George U., Charles A. and Francis R.

David L. Marvin was reared in Akron from the age of five years, was educated in the public schools of this city, and in Kenyon college. and was graduated from the law department of Columbia university, Washington, D. C. In November, 1882, he was appointed an examiner in the United States pension office at Washington, and was the youngest man ever appointed to that position, but resigned in June, 1884, to engage in newspaper work during the cotton exposition at New Orleans, La. He passed the year 1885 in Chicago, Ill., then returned to Ohio, and February 9, 1886, was elected assistant engineer of the public works of Ohio, and was re-elected in 1888 and 1890. During his incumbency of this office he read law during leisure hours, and was admitted to the bar in December, 1889; February 15, 1891.

he resigned his office as assistant state engineer and returned to Akron, where he has ever since been employed in the active and successful practice of the legal profession. On his resignation of his position as assistant state engineer, the superintendent's board adopted a resolution, expressing their regret at parting with Mr. Marvin "both as a friend and officer," and stating that he had discharged his duties with marked ability and fidelity, and that he had manifested uniform courtesy in all his relations with them.

Mr. Marvin was most happily married May 16, 1888, to Miss Frances Saxe Fish, daughter of Cortes F. and Helen (Carlisle) Fish, of Shelby, Ohio, this mnion being made the more happy by the birth of one child, March 24, 1892, who bears the euphonious name of Helen Dorena. Mr. and Mrs. Marvin are consistent members of the Episcopalian church, and fraternally Mr. Marvin is a member of the Loyal Legion, and Iota chapter of Psi Upsilon collegiate society. He is a stanch republican in politics, but has never been an office seeker. Professionally Mr. Marvin has made a most marked success, and his social standing is decidedly with the best in the city.

DGAR W. MAXSON, one of the fore-most attorneys at law of Ravenna, was born in Geauga county, Ohio, February 3, 1844, a son of William and Salina C. (Mumford) Maxson, natives of Connecticut and New York respectively, and parents of two children—Edgar W. and Victor R., the latter a resident of Hiram, Ohio.

Joshua Maxson, paternal grandfather of subject, was a native of Connecticut, served in the war of 1812, and died at Hiram, Ohio, at the age of eighty-four years, a deacon in the Baptist church. William Mumford, the maternal grandfather, was born in New York, was a farmer, and died in Troy, Ohio, aged seventy-seven years.

William Maxson, father of Edgar W., was about twelve years of age when brought to Ohio, in 1825, by his parents, who settled in Hiram township, Portage county, where he was reared to manhood on the home farm, and later followed farming on his own account. He died in 1876, at sixty-two years of age, his widow surviving until September, 1894, when she died at the age of seventy-four.

Edgar W. Maxson received his preliminary education in Hiram in the Western Reserve Eclectic institute, afterward Hiram college, and at the age of fifteen entered Hiram college; he next entered Michigan university, at Ann Arbor, from which he graduated, in 1865, in the literary and law courses, following which he spent five years in Springfield, Ill., as a school-teacher, and then traveled three years as state agent for the New York Underwriters' agency, an insurance company. In 1870 he commenced the practice of his profession in Garrettsville, Portage county, Ohio, where he found active employment for his talents until 1886, when he came to Ravenna, where his field for practice would have a broader scope.

The first marriage of Mr. Maxson took place November 7, 1867, with Miss Elizabeth C. Mull, of Galesburg, Ill., a daughter of B. S. and Harriet (Voorhis) Mull, of Otsego county, N. Y., and this union has been blessed by the birth of one daughter, Maud M., who is a graduate of the Cleveland School of Music, and a teacher of music in Ravenna. Mrs. Elizabeth C. Maxson was called from earth September 10, 1875, and on the 14th day of December, 1876, Mr. Maxson united with his second life-companion, Miss Dora E. Lockwood, a daughter of Philander and Mary (Voorhis) Lockwood.

Mr. and Mrs. Maxson are consistent members of the Congregational church, while

Mr. Maxson is a member of Tyrian chapter, No. 91, royal arch Masons, and of Unity lodge, No. 12, F. & A. M., of Ravenna; he is also a member of the Royal Arcanum, and is regent of lodge No. 376, of Ravenna. Politically Mr. Maxson is a stanch republican, and served as prosecuting attorney of Ravenna from 1887 until 1890. As a lawyer he has achieved an enviable reputation, and as an official his name has never been tarnished by the slightest suspicion of dereliction in duty or corrupt practices. Socially his standing is very high, and his wife enjoys, with himself, the esteem of all with whom they exchange the courtesies of life.

county, Ohio, is a native of Ithaca, N. Y., and was born May 16, 1836, a son of Rufus I. and Amelia (Root) Mason. Rufus I. Mason was born in Castleton, Vt., and Amelia Root was a native of Watertown, N. Y. Their marriage took place in Ithaca, and in 1840 they came to Ohio, settling in Franklin county, where they lived for ten years. Of their three children, one son died in infancy; their daughter, Mrs. Seraph C. Young, resides in Hiram, and the third, Theodore R., will be duly referred to a little further on.

The Mason family is of English origin, and the American branch was founded in New England prior to the Revolution, in which the great-great-grandfather of subject served as a soldier; the paternal grandfather of subject was a drum-major in the war of 1812, and other ancestors were active in the early Indian wars. In fact, the Mason family may be considered as Americans for more than two centuries, as many of its members were instrumental in founding the settlements of the country at the east as well as in the west.

a good common-school education in Rayenna. and then was engaged as clerk and salesman until the breaking out of the Civil war aroused the patriotic spirit he had inherited from his ancestors. He enlisted in Cleveland in September, 1862, and served in Com. Porter's fleet on the lower Mississippi river, for awhile on board the gunboat Mamora, on which he was steward, and then as steward of the receiving boat at Cairo, Ill., for two months: then again on board the Mamora as steward, was promoted to be paymaster's steward, and served until December, 1863, when he was discharged, having served three months over the term of his enlistment. He returned to Ravenna, and in September, 1864, enlisted in company G. One Hundred and Seventy-seventh Ohio volunteer infantry, in which he served until the close of the war. In this arm of the service he was placed as clerk in the quartermaster's department, medical directory, army of the Ohio. At the surrender of Gen. Johnston's army, subject was detailed to take account of the rebel camp equipage, etc., and to write the paroles of the Confederate prisoners-a task that required two and one-half days of constant labor. He was next detailed to take account of the camp and garrison equipage of the Third brigade, Third division, Twenty-third army corps, and then, this duty ended, came his discharge as clerk of the medical directory of the army of the Ohio, as noted above.

On his return home from the war, Mr. Mason was employed for about ten years as a commercial traveler, after which he was appointed as a railway postal clerk, but, the position being uncongenial, he resigned shortly afterward. He next served five years as marshal of Ravenna, health officer, constable of the city, and then as deputy United States marshal, and has filled some of these offices, Theodore R. Mason, the subject, secured | also, since he was appointed deputy sheriff of bod common-school education in Ravenna, | Portage county fourteen years ago.

In 1859 Mr. Mason was united in marriage with Miss Mary C. Rood, a native of Portage county, Ohio, and of the two daughters born to this union, Kittie, the elder, died at the age of twenty-one years; Clara, the younger is the wife of Joseph Davis, a prominent attorney at law of Youngstown, Ohio.

Mr. Mason has been prominent in G. A. R. circles, being past post commander of David McIntosh post of Ravenna, and for the past eleven years its adjutant, and being one of the organizers of the post. He has been secretary of the National Union for the last ten years, and in no position that he has ever held has he failed to give the utmost satis-As a member of the G. A. R. he has been a delegate to several national encampments, representing, notably, the posts of Portage and Summit counties in the national encampment at Saint Paul, Minn., in 1896; and for three years he also acted as aid-decamp on the staff of the department commander. In politics he is a stanch republican, and in religion he sympathizes with his wife, who is a devout member of the Congregational church.

OHN E. MERKEL, an old soldier of the Civil war, the head of a respected family and one of the most enterprising farmers of Stowe township, was born in Hudson, Ohio, December 2, 1838.

Stephen Merkel, father of John E., was born December 24, 1809, in Baden, Germany, and came to America when about twenty years of age, landing in New York city. He was a farmer and lived two years in Connecticut and then came to Hudson, Ohio, and worked at farm work. He married, in Hudson, Barbara Fillius, who was born about 1811 in Bavaria, Germany, a daughter of Philip Fillius, who came from Germany to Hudson at an early day. Mr. Merkel bought forty acres of land in Stowe township and lived here until 1852, when he moved to Hudson township. 1857 he moved to Minnesota and bought 160 acres in Rice county and lived there fifteen or sixteen years, then moved to Faribault county, Minn., and bought 160 acres, where he lived until he retired, and now lives with his son, Curtis S. Merkel, in Minn. His children were John E., Jacob and Curtis S. and Mrs. Merkel are members of the Methodist church and in politics Mr. Merkel was first a democrat but later in life became a republican. He was a hard-working industrious man and prospered well.

John E. Merkel received a common education, became a farmer and went to Minnesota in 1857 with his father. August 4, 1862, he enlisted, at Cannon City, Minn., in company C. Sixth Minnesota volunteer infantry, to serve three years or during the war, and was honorably discharged May 23, 1865, at New Orleans, La., by general order, as the war was closed. His service, the first year, was in fighting the Sioux Indians, under chief Little Crow, who made a raid on the Minnesota frontier in 1862 and massacred many settlers, especially at New Ulm. Mr. Merkel's regiment was sent to Fort Ridgley and pursued the Indians to Wood Locke, where they had a hard fight. After this service the regiment went to Arkansas in the spring of 1864 and guarded Helena for three months and there Mr. Merkel was taken sick with malaria typhus fever and was in hospital in Jefferson Barracks, Mo., for three or four months, came near death, and has never recovered from this disability. After partially recovering, he joined his regiment at New Orleans. He was then detailed a clerk for a while at St. Louis, and February 14, 1865, was detailed from his regiment as clerk at headquarters, adjutant-general's office, department of the Gulf, New Orleans, and was transferred February 23, 1865, to headquarters of military division of the West Mississippi at New Orleans and here served as clerk until discharged. Until taken sick, Mr. Merkel was an active soldier and performed his full duty promptly and cheerfully.

After the war, Mr. Merkel returned to Ohio and married, in Stowe township, July 20, 1865, Frances Eleanor Walker, who was born in Stowe township, December 16, 1843, a daughter of Samuel and Sarah (Robinson) Walker. Samuel Walker was born January 26, 1809, in Stowe township, a son of one of the original pioneers of the township. William Walker, who was born in Virginia, came to Summit county in 1802 and built a log cabin the same year, which is believed to have been the first in Stowe township. He lived to be sixty-two years old. His wife was Rachael Stewart and they were married in Virginia. Samuel Walker owned two farms and had a good education for his day and taught school several terms in Columbiana county, Ohio. He married Sarah Robinson, of Columbiana county, Ohio, a daughter of John and Eleanor (Hueston) Robinson. John Robinson was a soldier in the war of 1812. Samuel Walker settled in Stowe township and cleared up a good farm of ninety acres, which he bought of Leonard Case. Mr. and Mrs. Walker were the parents of two children—Frances E. and Mr. Walker lived to be sixty-five years old and died on his farm February 21, 1874. In politics he was a democrat, held the office of trustee of township, and was an honored citizen. Mrs. Merkel has a conch shell which was given to Sarah Robinson (her mother) by her mother, Eleanor Hueston. This shell was used during the war of the Revolution by members of the Robinson family to give notice when returning home, and when blown upon emitted a loud sound much like a dinner horn, and was thus used in the family for generations. Mrs. Merkel also had an old-fashioned bear trap used in olden times, and at one time a man was caught by accident in this trap and held for several hours. She also had a surveyor's chain used in this county by George Walker in surveying land in early times, and several other interesting relics.

After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Merkel settled in Faribault county, Minn., and bought eighty acres of land, lived there nine years, when they came to Stowe township in January, 1870, and bought fifty acres of their present farm, and added to it until they have 169 acres; they built a substantial house in 1884, and have a very nice home. Their children are Edward C., John, Frank, Fannie A. and Charles E. In politics Mr. Merkel was first a republican but is now a populist and free-silver democrat. He is a prosperous citizen and has a fine farm.

Edward C. Merkel, son of John E. Merkel, married Ella Stanley, is a machinist in Beaver Falls, Pa., and is the father of one child, Eleanor. The second son, John F., is an electric engineer of Chicago. Mr. Merkel is a man of strictly moral character and integrity and stands high in the esteem of his fellow-citizens.

DWIN H. MERRILL, deceased, was born in Painesville, Ohio, February 9, 1808, and was a son of Abijah Merrill, who was born in Connecticut in 1777. Abijah was a potter by trade, married Miss Abigail Scott, who bore him six children, and came to Ohio at a very early day, established a pottery, and died in Middlebury in 1854, aged seventy-seven years.

Edwin H. Merrill learned the potter's trade from his father, and was educated in the com-

At the age of twenty-two years mon schools. he came to Springfield township, Summit county, Ohio, where, after working a short time for various potters, started in business for himself, about 1835, inventing machinery for the production of beer bottles, for which he secured letters patent; and soon afterward commenced the manufacture of tobacco pipes, also by machinery. In 1847 he moved to Middlebury, Summit county, where, in conjunction with his brother, Calvin J. Merrill, he engaged in the manufacture of waterpipe and beer bottles, to which industry the manufacture of stone pumps was added and continued from 1851 to 1856—he being then interested in the respective firms of Hill, Merrill & Co., and Merrill, Powers & Co. He then engaged in the manufacture of vitrified sewerpipe—the initiation of the present immense sewer-pipe industry of Akron and vicinity, and the first of the kind west of the Alleghany mountains. In 1860, Mr. Merrill removed his bottle, pipe and stoneware works to the corner of South Main and Center streets, Akron, where, in 1887, it was incorporated as the E. H. Merrill company, which is now one of the leading establishments of its kind in Summit county.

Mr. Merrill was married, in 1838, to Miss Emily Gleason, of Bedford, Ohio, the union resulting in the birth of seven children, of whom two only are still living—Henry E., president of the above-named company, and William G., in the pottery business in Pampton City, Va. Two of his seven children were daughters, of whom Emma died at the age of thirty years, and Grace A. became the wife of F. W. Butler, and is now also deceased. The death of Mr. Merrill took place January 25, 1888, at the age of seventy-nine years, eleven months and sixteen days; his widow, who was born in 1817, survived until February 22, 1893. In politics Mr. Merrill was first a whig, but later became a republican and served as a member of the city council for a number of years.

As illustrative of the enterprise and pertinacity of Mr. Merrill, it may be stated that when he located in Springfield township there was but one pottery there, owned by Mr. Fisk; but, soon afterward, a Mr. Purdy started another factory, which discouraged Mr. Fisk, and at the end of about eighteen months became very anxious to sell. Mr. Merrill seized the opportunity, and thus became proprietor of the first pottery establishment in this part of the country. It was while operating this plant that he invented his machinery for the manufacture of beer bottles and water-pipe. He and his brother, Calvin J., built the first screw press for making sewer-pipe, and later went to New York city, and secured plans for a steam press—the first to be introduced in this part of the country for manufacturing pipe by the aid of steam. In 1857 the financial crisis prostrated him, and he was compelled to start anew, on a very small scale, but he overcame all difficulties, and the present plant on Main and Center streets is the result of his indomitable perseverance. This plant has a frontage of 217 feet and a depth of 300 feet. Its output consists chiefly of meat tubs from fifty gallons down, beer and ink bottles, corroding pots for white leadmakers, white, glazed and other kind of stone-The company employs some sixty hands and its officers are Henry E. Merrill, president and superintendent, Frederick W. Butler, secretary and treasurer, and the capital stock is $50,000.

Henry E. Merrill, the president of this company, was born July 1, 1839, and was educated in the public schools of Middlebury, Ohio. He learned the pottery business from his father, and in 1860 became a member of the firm. In 1875 he became a partner of the firm of Merrill & Ewart, in the manufacture of roof tiling, and in 1882 sold his interest. He was a soldier in the late Civil war, having enlisted May 2, 1864, in company F, One Hundred and Sixty-fourth Ohio volunteer infantry, for the 100-day service, and is a member of Buckley post, No. 12, G. A. R., and of the Red Cross. In politics he is a stanch republican. He was married in May, 1877, to Miss Bell Bartges, daughter of Dr. S. W. Bartges (deceased), of Akron. This union has been blessed with two children—George B., a student in the university school at Cleveland. and Catherine E., at home. Mrs. Merrill is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and the family residence is at No. 106 Fir street. Akron.

Frederick W. Butler, secretary and treasurer of the E. H. Merrill company, of Akron, Ohio, was born in Worcester, Mass., June 25, 1851, a son of Horace W. and Sarah J. (Newell) Butler, both families being of English origin, and early settlers of Massachusetts, several of the earlier members having been soldiers in the Revolutionary war.

Horace W. Butler owned and operated a sash and blind factory in Worcester, Mass., and was twice burned out. In 1864 he came to Akron, Ohio, and entered the employ of W. B. Doyle, as foreman of his sash and blind factory, and later was employed in the pattern department of the Webster, Lane & Camp establishment. He and wife were parents of three children—Frederick W., Albert B., deceased, and Charles J., of whom the last is secretary of the Peoria Rubber Manufacturing company. Mrs. Sarah J. Butler was called away from earth August 13, 1891. Mr. Butler is now living retired at the age of seventy-six years.

Frederick W. Butler was educated in the public schools of Akron, and at the age of sixteen became a clerk for Hall & Bros., with whom he remained four years, and then accepted a position in the First National bank, where he remained nine years as bookkeeper, teller and correspondent, consecutively, and then for eighteen months was cashier of the City National bank, when he resigned to accept his present position with the E. H. Merrill company. He has been identified with this concern since 1880, when it was conducted as a co-partnership, and in 1887 became one of the incorporators, since when he has been the means of greatly advancing its prosperity. Merrill, but had the sad misfortune to lose his wife, May 18, 1888, when she died at the age of thirtyone years, leaving three children-Henry Karl, Merrill W. and Frederick W., Jr. Mr. Butler and his children reside at No. 503 West Market street.

HRISTIAN MEYER, of Tallmadge township, Summit county, Ohio, was born in Allegheny City, Pa., September 27, 1845, and is a son of Christian and Eva Maria (Breitenstein) Meyer, who settled in Portage county, Ohio, in 1856, where Christian, the son, was reared to farm work and general labor.

Christian Meyer, Sr., father of subject, was born in Alsace, France, March 12, 1808, and was the son of Christian, a merchant, but was himself taught the tailor's trade. He served five years in the French army, and later married, in Alsace, Miss Breitenstein, to which union were born the following-named children: Philip, John, Magdalen, Eve M., Mary Elizabeth and Joseph. Stephen Coddington, and served until mustered out at Bladensburg, Md., receiving an honorable discharge at Columbus, Ohio, June 18, 1865, the war having been brought to a close. He was with Sherman on his famous march from Atlanta to the sea, and was in the battle at Savannah, Ga. this campaign he was taken ill with malarial fever, was confined in camp one month and in hospital three months, rejoining his regiment May 19, 1865—although he still suffers from the effects of malaria. Mr. Meyer was united in marriage, at Alliance, Ohio, July 9, 1867, with Miss Mary Sawer, who was born in Carrollton, Ohio, October 7, 1845, a daughter of John and Frances (Linn) Sawer. UCIUS C. MILES, treasurer of Summit county and of the city of Akron, Ohio, is a native of Brookline, Mass., was born February 3, 1859, and is a son of Lucius K. and Frances P. (Plimpton) Miles, who came to Akron about the year 1870.

Lucius C., the subject of this memoir, was educated chiefly in the public schools of Akron, and at the age of eighteen years entered the employ of Aultman, Miller & Co., with whom he remained about five years, and then was employed for two years by I. F. Seiberling & Co., after which he was engaged in the cement, flour and feed business, in partnership with Maj. Charles Dick, which partnership lasted five years, after which he entered the employ of the Seiberling Milling company. Always an ardent republican, Mr. Miles was elected, in 1894, treasurer of Summit county by the sweeping majority of nearly 700 votes, and in 1896 was re-elected by a majority of 801—running far ahead of his ticket—an evidence that he was fully competent to fill the responsible position and that the general public keenly appreciated the value of his services. He is now, also, a member of the Summit county republican executive committee and is a prime factor in the management of republican politics in the county. He has been a member of the board of education a number of years, and fraternally he is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Knights of Pythias. In 1888 Mr. Miles was united in marriage with Miss Harriet M. Seiberling, and their social relations are most select and genial.

ICHOLAS MILLER, a retired farmer of Suffield township, Portage county, Ohio, was born in Elsass (Alsace), Germany, in 1828, a son of Anthony and Delia Miller, and has lived in Suffield township since he was about five years of age.

Anthony Miller had been a hotel-keeper in Germany, also had been a soldier under Napoleon Bonaparte seven years, and in one of his campaigns against Russia was twice wounded within a half-hour. In 1833 he brought his wife and eight of his ten children to the United States and was one of the first settlers in Portage county, where he engaged in farming and where there were two additional children born to him. Of the ten, three only are now living, viz: Nicholas, our subject, who is the eldest; Clara, widow of Dr. Shuck. and John. Those who have been called away were Anthony; Catherine, who was married to L. Rhoads, also deceased; Meldi, who was the wife of D. Weldy; Andrew, who died of yellow fever on the Mississippi river; Joseph, George, and one who died in Germany. The father of this family died at the age of eighty-three years on his Suffield township farm, which was close to that on which Nicholas, his son, the subject, now resides, and the mother passed away at the age of eighty-two, both in the faith of the Roman Catholic church.

Nicholas Miller, the subject proper of this biography, was reared on his father's farm, but in his early days opportunities for a scholastic education were quite limited, so that he did not fare very well in this particular, but he learned the practical details of pioneer farm life completely and thoroughly. On attaining his majority he hired out to the farmers of his neighborhood and soon accumulated sufficient means to purchase a small place for himself. and when he found himself to be the possessor of $700, he purchased his present farm, on which he has since erected a large and handsome residence and a substantial barn, with all necessary outbuildings, and has now one of the best farms in the township, consisting of 112 acres.

The marriage of Mr. Miller was solemnized, in 1844, with Miss Barbara Memmer, daughter of David and Margaret (Earhart) Memmer, and this marriage has been blessed with one daughter, who is still unmarried and makes her home with her parents. Mrs. Barbara Miller is a native of Bayern, Germany, and was quite young when brought to America by her parents, who were early settlers of Suffield township, where the father became one of its most substantial farmers. Of the eight children born to Mr. and Mrs. Memmer, five are still living, viz: Margaret, wife of Frank Culp; Mary Ann, widow of Matthew Shultz; Barbara, now Mrs. Nicholas Miller; Maria, wife of George Miller, and John. Of the deceased, George died at the age of thirty years; Joseph died when about twenty-three years old, and Lawrence died in 1896, when sixty-six years old. David Memmer, the father, passed away November 28, 1871, at the age of seventyseven years, and his wife died aged seventynine years-both faithful members of the Catholic church.

In politics, Nicholas Miller is a stanch silver democrat and has served his fellow-citizens as school director for many years, and also as township trustee. In religion he is a true Catholic, and has been a very liberal contributor to the support of his church. He has always been an industrious, temperate and useful citizen, is highly respected, and well deserves the esteem in which he is universally held.

HARLES MERTS, president of the First National bank, Ravenna, Ohio, and a very prominent citizen of Portage county, was born in Pittsburg, Pa., October 1, 1833, a son of Frederick and Elizabeth Merts, who were the parents of six children, of whom three still survive, viz: Philip, of North Benton, Ohio; Frederick, of Illinois, and Charles, the subject of this biography. The father of this family was a shoemaker by trade, and both he and wife died in Pittsburg, when Charles, the subject, was but three years of age.

Charles Merts, having been thus early bereft of his parents, was placed in charge of a kind Irish farmer, who reared him until seventeen years of age, inculcating the thrifty and industrious habits of farm life and giving him the advantage of a district-school education. At the age mentioned, young Merts began an apprenticeship of five years at carriage-bodymaking-a trade he followed, all told, for over forty years. In 1855 he came to Ohio, worked first in Warren, and in the fall of the same vear came to Ravenna, where he continued to work as a journeyman until the breaking out of the late Civil war, when he and his brotherin-law, H. W. Riddle, formed a partnership and leased the carriage manufactory of N. D. Clark for five years, at the end of which time they purchased the factory and for some years confined their output to buggies, but gradually merged into heavy work and turned out coaches, hearses, etc., employed eighty to 100 hands, and produced so superior a class of vehicles that they came into demand throughout most of the states and territories. In 1892 Mr. Merts sold his interest in the concern to H. W. Riddle, who still carries it on. In the year 1892, also, an eastern firm came to Ravenna and started a shoe manufactory, employing 250 hands, but failed at the end of six months. Mr. Merts, being a stockholder. assumed charge of the concern, and he and F. M. Rumbaugh conducted it jointly for some time, and then organized a joint-stock company, which is now doing an excellent trade, Mr. Merts having extricated the concern from the slough of disaster and placed it upon a sound foundation of profit and prosperity. The company at first manufactured about 150 pairs of shoes per day, but now turns out 500 pairs and gives employment to about ninety hands all the year round, holidays excepted. Merts has also been a stockholder in the First National bank of Ravenna for twenty years, has been a director for fifteen years, and has been its president about five years. Mr. Merts was one of the organizers of the Ravenna Gas. Light & Coke company, and is now the president of that corporation.

Prior to his coming to Ravenna, Mr. Merts was united in marriage, in Pittsburg, Pa., in the fall of 1855, with Miss Mary A. Riddle, daughter of Hughey and Elizabeth Riddle, and this union was blessed with two children -Lida H. and Catherine M. Lida H. is married to C. W. Franzheim, president and manager of the Wheeling Pottery company, and a director of the German Bank of Wheeling, W. Va., and his wife is now the mother of five children—Charles M., George, Mary, Catherine and Kenneth; Catherine M. is the wife of J. Holcomb, of Ravenna, and has borne her husband two children-Lida and Mary Catherine. Mrs. Mary A. Merts, a member of the Congregational church, died in April, 1887. Fraternally Mr. Merts is a master Mason. In politics he is a republican, and for seven or eight years was a city councilman.

Mr. Merts has been a resident of Ravenna for forty-two years, and has had much to do with the building up of the city and in advancing its prosperity. He is regarded as one of the foremost citizens, a reputation he well deserves as the result of his free expenditure of his means and his activity in promoting his own line of business, thus giving employment to large bodies of men, and his generosity in advancing the means to promote works of a more comprehensive and public character-being. in truth, a factor in the development of one of the prettiest little cities in the state of Ohio. He is highly esteemed by the people at large for the good work he has done, and for his genial disposition, manly sense of justice and gentlemanly deportment. He is a blessing to the community, being tender hearted and kind, and holding a just regard for the rights and feelings of his fellow-men. While the present generation will honor and esteem him, generations to come will cherish his memory long after he shall have been called away from the cares and vicissitudes of life.

IRAM M. MILLER, a well-known blacksmith, was born in Greensburg, Summit county, Ohio, July 29, 1866, and Greensburg has always been his home.

John Miller, grandfather of Hiram M., came from Maryland to Ohio and settled on a farm in Franklin township, Summit county, near Manchester, to which town he retired in advanced years and there passed the declining days of his long and useful life. His son, Isaac, father of subject, was born in Maryland January 18, 1832, was reared a farmer, and

In politics he is a strong republican, but prefers his genial farm life to the precarious pursuit of public office.

Hiram M. Miller received a good commonschool education and was thoroughly trained to blacksmithing in his father's shop, becoming an excellent mechanic. October 14, 1893, he married Miss Annie Thursby, who was born August 5, 1873, a daughter of G. I. and Laura (Buchtel) Thursby. Her father, however, is now deceased, and her mother is married to Aaron Swarz. Mr. Miller is acknowledged to be one of the best blacksmiths in Summit county, and has prospered in his business, to which he adds the sale of buggies in the proper Beside his shop, he owns a nice twostory brick dwelling, and is in quite comfortable circumstances. He is a stanch republican in politics, is very popular, and is now township treasurer of Green township, having been elected by a majority of seventy votes out of a total of 500. Fraternally, he is a member of Hadassa lodge, I. O. O. F., and also of lodge No. 313, Jr. O. U. A. M., in which he has passed all the chairs. He is progressive and public spirited, and enjoys the respect of the entire community.

APOLEON J. A. MINICH, proprietor and editor of the Saturday Bulletin, of Kent, Portage county, Ohio, was born in Columbia, Lancaster county, Pa., October 7, 1849, and is a son of Henry G. and Ann Catherine (Albright) Minich, natives of the same county.

Jacob Minich, great-grandfather of subject, came from Germany to America prior to the Revolutionary war and settled at Landisville, Lancaster county, Pa., where he followed farming until his death, at the age of sixtythree. His eldest son, also named Jacob, was the grandfather of subject. He was born in Landisville, Pa., was a farmer, distiller and proprietor of the Minich hotel, on the stage route from Philadelphia to Pittsburg. hostlery was noted for its excellent accommodations generally, and especially for its extensive stables adapted to the requirements of the six-horse teams then in use. He reared a family of fourteen children, and died in 1841, at the age of fifty-eight years.

Henry G. Minich, youngest child of Jacob last mentioned and father of subject, was born May 25, 1817, and lived in Lancaster county, Pa., all his life. He was a dealer in live stock, was an extensive contractor in meats during the Civil war, and also kept a meat market. He was very successful financially, owned much valuable real estate, and was a very public-spirited citizen, being largely instrumental in establishing the Columbia Classical institute and in promoting many other important public enterprises. In politics he was in early life a democrat, but at the outbreak of the Civil war became a republican. Although he never sought public office, he yet did his duty as a good citizen and filled several local official positions. his marriage with Miss Albright were born eight children, viz: Jabob A., proprietor of a meat market in Columbia, Pa.; Thomas J., a real estate dealer in Chicago, Ill.; Charles W., also meat market proprietor in Columbia, Pa.; N. J. A., subject of this biography; Benjamin F., a veterinary surgeon of the same city; Henry J., proprietor of a meat market in Tampa, Fla., and two children that died in early life. The father of this family died May 19, 1895, an honored and respected gentleman; the mother, who was born in Lancaster city, Pa., in 1819, still survives and resides in Columbia.

The maternal ancestors of Napoleon J. A. Minich also came from Germany and settled in Pennsylvania in the colonial days. John Albright, the great-grandfather of subject, was born in Philadelphia, whence he moved to Lancaster, Pa., where he founded the first newspaper issued in that city. It was printed in the German language and bore the title Volks Freund. At his death, the publication of this journal was continued by his son, Anthony Albright, grandfather of subject, and after he had passed away his son continued the publication.

Napoleon J. A. Minich graduated from the Columbia Classical institute in 1868 and then entered the office of the Columbia Spy and served an apprenticeship at the printing business until 1871, when he went to Chicago, Ill., but the great fire which swept that city in October of the same year caused a change in his plans and he returned to Pennsylvania, and worked at his trade in Lancaster until May, 1872, when he went to New York; September 17 of the same year he came to Ohio and worked at case for a short time on the Akron Beacon, when he was promoted to the editor-He left his establishment to aid in founding the Akron Daily Argus, on which he did editorial work, but in 1875 sold his interest in this journal and returned to the Beacon.

Mr. Minich had now lost all his property and was not worth a dollar; nevertheless, two weeks after his return to the Beacon office he married, August 3, 1875. Miss Lottie E. Mc-Masters, who was born in Akron, a daughter of Henry and Emily McMasters. This happy marriage has resulted in the birth of one son, Harry S., born October 11, 1877, and now a student in the Akron Commercial college. He continued on the Beacon until May, 1876, when, having accumulated $400, he came to Kent and purchased the Saturday Bulletin, then a very small affair.

The Saturday Bulletin was established in 1866 by Marshall Dewey, and its publication had been suspended about five weeks when the plant was purchased by Mr. Minich in The paper had been a four-page six columns to the page journal, but is now an eight-page paper, with seven columns to the page, a fact which clearly indicates that Mr. Minich thoroughly understands his business. He has never solicited anyone to subscribe to nor to advertise in the Bulletin, yet it has a subscription list containing 1,500 names, and its columns devoted to advertising are filled. It is independent in politics and is devoted to the material interests of Kent, as well as to that city's moral and intellectual improvement, and is recognized as one of the best local newspapers in northeastern Ohio. In 1880 Mr. Minich built the Bulletin block, in which the office of the journal is located, and which also contains three large stores or salesrooms for retail mercantile purposes.

In politics Mr. Minich is a republican. Fraternally he is a member of the I. O. O. F., the Royal Arcanum and the Protected Home Circle. As a citizen he has always been an advocate of improvements for the public good, and has used the Bulletin in successful efforts to secure good sidewalks, electric light and water works for the city of Kent. Beside the Bulletin building, he owns several residence properties in the city, and is a stockholder in several manufacturing concerns. He is full of energy and enterprise, and has ever been active in promoting the best interests of his adopted city, both as an individual and as an editor.

A. MILLER, senior proprietor of the Actual Business college at Akron, was born near the town of Hudson, Summit county, Ohio, January 21, 1871, a son of Charles A. and Celinda (Werntz) Miller, but, on account of the early death of both their parents, little can be traced of the family history further than to the great-grandfather on either side.

Perry Miller, great-grandfather of subject, was a native of Massachusetts, of Puritan stock, and was one of the original settlers of Hudson township, Summit county, Ohio, and it is thought that his calling was that of a blacksmith. His father, also named Perry, and likewise a settler of Hudson township, was either a blacksmith or tavern-keeper-probably both. Mrs. Celinda (Werntz) Miller was one of a large family of children born to Charles and Elizabeth Werntz, the former of whom died in Clinton, Ohio, November 28, 1850, at the age of forty-four years, and the latter in Canal Fulton, July 6, 1847, aged thirty-six years. Charles Werntz was a tailor and his father a blacksmith, and Charles and his wife both came from Lancaster county, Pa., being of what is known as Pennsylvania-Dutch stock.

H. A. Miller received his early edcuation in the public schools of Akron, but did not quite finish the full course. At the age of thirteen years he was employed in the shipping department of the Enterprise Manufacturing company of Akron, but a little later he returned to the public schools to spend another year in study; then became associated with George C. Himmelman, the druggist. At the end of a year thus employed, he went to Oswego, N. Y., in March, 1889, to attend the Chaffee Phonographic institution. In September, 1889, he returned to Ohio, and secured employment with the Otis Steel company, limited, of Cleveland. The following January he removed to Warren, Ohio, for more lucrative employment in the office of the Paige Tube company, then under the management of A. T. Paige, of Akron. In June, 1892, he removed to Toledo to accept a position with the Gendron Wheel company, and afterward became the manager of one of the departments of that factory. This work was given up the following January for the purpose of establishing a commercial college in Akron. It was formally opened under the name of the Akron School of Standard Phonography, February 15, 1893, bearing the firm name of Miller & Booth—Booth retiring before active operations were begun. From that time until the first of April, 1895, phonography was the only branch taught. On that date the school name was changed to the Akron Commercial college, and bookkeeping and pen art under the direction of A. F. Regal were added. March, 1896, the school quarters in the Arcade building on South Howard street, being too small, were abandoned and removal made to the I. O. O. F. Temple on South Main street. and the name changed to the Actual Business A new corps of teachers was added, making the faculty as follows: Miss Lulu E. Parker, physical and voice culture, elocution and reading; Miss Eva A. Taylor, vocal culture; Miss Clara B. Smith, piano; W. A. Willmot, commercial and English branches and pen art; H. A. Miller, shorthand and typewriting; and in September of the same year W. A. Willmot was admitted as a partner.

Mr. Miller has made a grand success of his enterprise and now stands at the head of one the finest educational institutions in northeastern Ohio, it being more especially notable for its thorough system of business instruction.

AMSON MOORE, one of the oldest and most substantial farmers of Coventry township, Summit county, Ohio, was born in county Antrim, Ireland, February 22, 1819, of English ancestry, and has been a resident of America since three years of age.

Samson Moore (first), grandfather of subject, a native of England, was appointed by Esquire Harrad superintendent of the latter's large estates in Ireland, and there Samson (second) was born, in Ballymena, county Antrim. He married Jane Kerr, and to this union were born the following-named children: Robert, Mary (wife of Elisha Veirs), James, Margaret, William and Samson (the subject). In 1822 the parents of subject sailed from Belfast, Ireland, for America, in the good ship Atlas, and after a passage of nine weeks' duration, safely landed in New York city, with their family. They immediately came to Ohio, and at Fairport the father started out to buy land, got wet, and died nine days later. His widow married, in Fairport, Lake county, Ohio, 'Squire James Hall, and in March, 1826, the family came to Summit county and here subject has since made his home. farm on which the family settled was in the primitive wilderness of Coventry township, and there was not a house between it and New To 'Squire Hall and wife was born one child—Nathaniel—and here the 'squire died the year following their arrival (in 1827), and his widow on the 5th day of September, 1855.

Samson Moore, the subject proper of this memoir, was educated in the old pioneer school-house in district No. 2 of Coventry township, and here learned his letters seventy years ago. He was reared to all the hard work of a frontier farm, and January 10, 1864, married Miss Mary E. Shutt, who was born June 5, 1846, a daughter of Abraham and Catherine (Gregg) Shutt. Her father, Abraham Shutt, was a native of Washington county, Md., and her mother, Mary E. Shutt, was a native of Jackson township, Stark county, Ohio, and a daughter of James and Catherine (Crum) Gregg, who were early pioneers of Jackson township. The father died in 1855, and the mother married John Sorrick and still lives on the old farm in Jackson township. By her first marriage she became the mother of the following children: Mary E., Simon J., James T., William H., Adam M. and George W.; to her second union were born Thomas J., Clara, Manias H., Minnie, John and Robert. To Samson and Mary E. (Shutt) Moore have been born Jennie C., Emma T., Louisa M., James S. and Scott C.

Samson Moore, since his earliest manhood, has been identified with the progress of Coventry township, but he has never aspired to public office. In politics he was first a whig and voted for Henry Clay, for president, in 1844; for Salmon P. Chase for governor in 1855, and for Abraham Lincoln for president, in 1860 and 1864—and is still a stanch republican. He has been a high steward in the Church of Christ since 1849, and liberally contributed to the erection of the church edifice in that year. He has lived on his present farm of eighty-five acres for seventy-one years, and has done as much as any man in the township toward its development, and is now one of its most highly esteemed pioneers.

Mr. Moore has in his possession many heirlooms that have come from as far back as the days of his grandfather, such as silver kneebuckles, shoe-buckles, a clock, etc., that today are veritable curiosities, and silver wedding-spoons, with other articles of antiquity seldom guarded so carefully by families of America, even when they had them, and of these venerable relics of the past he is justly proud.

ULIUS A. MORRIS, M. D., a native of Portage county, Ohio, was born at Kent February 13, 1848, and is a son of Henry and Susannah (Jackson) Morris, natives of Lincolnshire, England, where they were married, and in the earlier part of 1835 came to the United States, stopped for a short time in Utica, N. Y., and in the fall came to Ohio and located, first, in Akron, and then, in 1837, settled in Franklin Mills, now Kent.

Henry Morris, father of the doctor, was born June 8, 1801, and by trade was a slater and plasterer. He was twice married, and had born to him by his first wife (who died in England) two children, one of whom, Eliza, came to the United States with her father, was married to William Musson, of Akron, and is now deceased. By the second marriage of Mr. Morris, to Susannah Jackson, there were born nine children, viz: Ann, who was first married to George Reed and next to Lewis Bryson, and died in Benton county, Iowa; John, who was for many years attorney for the Union National bank of Chicago, Ill., and later succeeded Culver, Page, Hoyne & Co., in the printing and publishing business, and conducted the establishment under the style of the John Morris company from about 1882 until 1895; James, who died in Vinton, Iowa; Josephine, who is married to M. L. Robinson, of Kent, Ohio; one child that died in infancy; Henry, who was an assistant surgeon in the Forty-fifth regiment, United States regular army, and was drowned in the gulf of Mexico, in 1865, while in the service; Dr. Julius A., the subject of this memoir; Adeline E., married to George Bivin, of Indiana, and Lois, who died in infancy.

When Henry Morris first located in Portage county the population of Akron numbered about 700, and that of Franklin Mills less. He plastered the first county jail at Ravenna, and also did a great deal of work for Zenas He was a good manager, observed due economy and accumulated considerable property, including a number of residences in Kent and two farms, one of which adjoined the city. He was a man of positive views, never contracted a debt, and never was a member of a secret society or religious body. fear as to the future life, being inclined to Universalism, and was of a uniformly cheerful disposition, enjoying a good joke up to his last days. He was a devoted student of astronomy even after seventy-five years of age, and his religious impressions were derived directly from Nature herself. In politics he was a democrat, and at times held various local offices. His wife died in 1881, in the faith of the Episcopal church, of which she had been a member over fifty years, and his own death took place at his residence in Kent March 17, 1885.

Dr. Julius A. Morris passed his boyhood days in Kent and received his elementary education in its public schools. He commenced the study of medicine under Dr. P. H. duties, he has found time to be of service to his fellow-citizens. He affiliates with the democratic party, and is now serving his second term as president of the United States pension examining board for Portage county. He was elected three times to the city council, but at the last term resigned at the close of a year, his professional calls demanding all his attention. While in the city council, Dr. Morris was untiring in his endeavors to improve the condition of the city permanently, and was the originator of its present system of stone sidewalks, now covering over twelve lineal miles; also originated the waterworks system and the introduction of electric lights-all of which he succeeded in making realities, notwithstanding the opposition of many prominent The fact is, the doctor has filled citizens. office for the good he might accomplish, rather than from a desire to enjoy the flimsy honors that many people suppose are attracted thereto. His name stands accordingly high, not only as a physician, but as a public benefactor.

HARLES MOTZ, one of the younger members of the bar of Summit county, Ohio, was born on a farm in Northampton township, this county, September 10, 1865, a son of Jacob and Eva (Schank) Motz, natives of Bavaria.

Jacob Motz and wife were married in their native country of Rhine, Bavaria, and came to the United States in 1851. They lived for some time in Germantown, Pa., then came to Ohio, and lived in Hartville, Stark county, until 1864, and then came to Summit county and settled on a farm in Northampton township, and Mr. Motz became one of its substantial citizens, although he was a quiet, unassuming gentleman and a lover of law and order. He followed his vocation of farmer until his death, September 4, 1896, at the age of seventy-five years, leaving his wife, who still survives, to mourn his loss. They were the parents of eight children, viz: Daniel, a farmer of Northampton township; Katie, deceased wife of Robert Quinn; Jacob and Henry, both deceased; William, also a farmer of Northampton township; Lizzie, deceased; Charles, the subject, and Carrie, a teacher in Summit county. All the children, with the exception of the eldest two, were college graduates, and all, with the same exceptions, were school teachers. Mention may especially be made of Jacob and Henry, of whom the former was a graduate of Buchtel college and one of its trustees; he read law with Judge Greene, and practiced at the Summit county bar about five years, was active in the Young Men's Christian association work, of which association he had served as president, was a Knight of Pythias, a stanch republican and a rising young attorney when overtaken by death.

Charles Motz, the subject, was primarily educated in the district schools and later attended Buchtel college; he read law in the office of Judge N. D. Tibballs, was admitted to the bar in March, 1893, located at No. 102 South Howard street, Akron, and has already made his mark as a general practitioner. He is a member of the State Bar association, and in politics is an active democrat.

ARVEY MUSSER, the head of the law firm of Musser & Kohler, in the Arcade building, Akron, is a native of Millheim, Centre county, Pa., was born August 30, 1858, and is a son of P. T. and Mary J. (Mumbauer) Musser, of old Pennsylvania-German stock.

P. T. Musser, M. D., father of subject, was a graduate of Jefferson Medical college, Philadelphia, and was in active practice for many years. He was one of the early abolitionists of Centre county, Pa., and was ardent in his advocacy of the liberation of the slaves of the south. His death took place December 31, 1891, but his venerable widow still has her home in the Keystone state. Their children are three in number and are Ella, wife of Rev. A. J. Irey, in charge of the Baptist church at Warren, Pa.; Dr. Charles Summer Musser, a graduate of Jefferson Medical college of Philadelphia, and of the Wills eye and ear hospital of the same city, a post-graduate of medical colleges in Berlin and Vienna, and since 1890 a practicing physician at Aaronsburg, Pa.; and Harvey Musser, the subject of this memoir.

Harvey Musser, the youngest of the above family, was primarily educated in the public schools of Millheim, and this education was supplemented by attendance at Aaronsburg academy and at Missionary institute, Selin's Grove, Pa.; he then entered Franklin & Marshall college, at Lancaster, from which he graduated with the degree of A. B. in 1879; he then read law with Hon. A. O. Furst, of Bellefonte, Centre county, Pa., after which he entered the law department of the university of Michigan at Ann Arbor, from which he graduated in 1882 with the degree of LL. B., and was admitted to the bars of Michigan and Ohio in May of the same year. came to Akron and practiced alone until July, 1886, when (having established an enviable reputation) he formed a partnership with R. W. Saddler, which was continued for about eighteen months. January 7, 1888, he became associated with Judge J. A. Kohler, under the firm style of Kohler & Musser, which obtained until December, 1895, when it was dissolved because of Judge Kohler's assuming his duties on the bench. The present firm of Musser & Kohler was then formed, a son of Judge Kohler becoming the associate of Mr. Musser, and this is now recognized as one of the ablest law firms in the city.

In politics Mr. Musser is an active republican and has served on the county republican executive committee for several 'years. Fraternally he is a member of the Ohio State Bar association, of Summit lodge, No. 50, I. O. O. F., and of his college society, Phi Kappa Psi. In promoting the interests of Akron in a business way, he was one of the incorporators and is now a director of the Citizens' National bank, and also an incorporator of the People's Savings bank.

The marriage of Mr. Musser occurred October 4, 1888, with Miss Elizabeth Hammond Huston, daughter of James and Mary J. Huston, of Nittany, Pa., the union being blessed with three children, viz: Harvey Huston, James Coburn and Philip Sumner. Mr. Musser is a member of Grace Reformed church, while his wife is a Presbyterian, and they have their home at No. 140 Ash street.

Mr. Musser has been very successful professionally, and has achieved a fine reputation both as a general and as a criminal lawyer. He was retained by the defense in the celebrated Cotell murder trial and also in the equally famous Carrier libel suit; he is now retained as attorney for the Citizens' National bank, by Robinson Bros. & Co., by the Crown Fire Clay company, and by the Whitmore & Robinson company, while the miscellaneous business of the firm is sufficient to occupy the attention of both partners from morn until night.

ON. CHARLES B. NEWTON, attorney-at-law of Kent, Ohio, and one of the foremost in professional standing, was born in Portage county, April 11, 1850, a son of Justin B. and Eugenie (Babcock) Newton, natives, respectively, of Massachusetts and Ohio.

Rufus P. Newton, grandfather of subject, was the first of the Newton family to come from New England to Ohio, and to settle in Franklin township, Portage county, about 1823, bringing his wife and six children, the latter named Justin B., Lamira, Alanson, Emily, Burtley and William. He prospered here and dealt largely in live stock in association with Bert King, and, under the firm name of Newton & King, shipped extensively to the eastern markets, the result being that he became the owner of a large amount of real estate in Portage county, where he passed his declining years in peace and comfort, respected by all who knew him.

Justin B. Newton was a boy when he came to Ohio with his parents, and here the major portion of his life was passed in farming, he being the owner of a tract of sixty acres of good arable land. To his marriage with Miss Babcock there were born seven children, in the following order: Emily, who died in childhood; Perry, who died at the age of fifteen years; Charles B., the subject of this notice; Frances, married to Root Baker, of Medina county; John, a resident of Kent; Henrietta, the wife of E. C. Allen, of Kent, and Burtley, also of Kent. The father of this family died in 1884, at the age of sixty-three years; the mother makes her home in Kent.

Charles B. Newton, the gentleman whose name opens this biographical notice, was reared on his father's farm through his boyhood years, and at the age of fifteen years entered the Union school in Kent, and later was two years under instruction in the private school of Prof. Suliot; he first read law in the office of Hon. S. P. Wolcott, of Kent, and later studied under W. B. Thomas, of Ravenna. He was admitted to the bar at Warren, Ohio, in 1874, and has always practiced on his sole account.

For ten years he did a successful general business at Newton Falls, Trumbull county, establishing an excellent reputation, and since 1885 has been a member of the Portage county bar, with his office in Kent.

The marriage of Mr. Newton took place in 1875 with Miss Emma L. Hartle, daughter of A. B. Hartle, a farmer of Portage county. Mrs. Newton was born in Ravenna, and has borne her busband one daughter, Lulu, who graduated from the Kent high school, with second honors, in a class of twenty-eight, of which she was the salutatorian.

In politics Mr. Newton is a stanch democrat and has always taken an active part in the promotion of his party's success, advocating its principles in eloquent speeches through several campaigns and representing it in numerous conventions. While at Newton Falls he was for six years a member of the school board, having been elected without opposition, although the town was indubitably republican, and for six years, also, he was a member of the school board of Kent, and notwithstanding the fact that he was its youngest member, he was its president. Mr. Newton also served two terms as mayor of Kent, and during his administration of this office many valuable improvements were made in the city, chiefly at his suggestion or on his recommendation, and he still takes a deep interest in its progress. He is at present a member of the board of charities of Portage county, but is not connected with any church or secret society.

Mr. Newton devotes his time exclusively to his professional duties, which are extensive as well as multifarious, and holds an indisputable position among the foremost members of the bar of Portage county. He is a gentleman of unflinching integrity, and has the implicit confidence of the entire community. He has led an industrious life, and has earned his fortune through his personal exertions, being possessed of an indomitable determination, which was manifested even in his early manhood, when, unaided, he earned the means to defray the expenses of his education. He has built for himself a fine residence, in which the hours not devoted to business are passed in unalloyed domestic felicity.

ILLIAM H. MYERS, a thriving farmer of Norton township, Summit county, was born in Wadsworth township, Medina county, Ohio, March 21, 1846, and is descended from a Pennsylvania family of German origin.

Alpheus Myers, father of subject, was born in Bucks county, Pa., and at the age of four years was brought to Ohio by his parents, who settled in Wayne county, where he was reared to manhood and taught the millwright's He married Salome Myers, by whom he became the father of the following children: Mary M., wife of Isaac Tinsman; William H., subject of this biography; Lavina C., wife of S. K. Kraver; Harvey A.; Joseva A., who was first married to Septimus Siberling and is now the widow of J. J. Slanker, the youngest child being Owen F. Mrs. Salome Myers was born in Bucks county, Pa., December 24, 1819; Alpheus Myers, who became a farmer of Norton township in 1843, died here March 1, 1878.

William H. Myers, the subject of this biographical mention, passed his early life on his father's farm, then worked seven years in a flouring-mill in Wadsworth, then for two years lived in Akron. He bought his present farm in Norton township seventeen years ago, which consists of fifty-eight acres, is well improved, and affords, through his industry, a comfortable and happy home.

Mr. Myers was united in marriage, in December, 1866, with Miss Emeline Johnson, who was born April 15, 1845, in Summit county, Ohio, a daughter of Joseph and Mary A. (Hartzell) Johnson. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson came from Northampton county, Pa., two years after marriage, and settled in Summit county, Ohio, where the death of Mr. Johnson occurred October 31, 1894, leaving two children-Emeline and Fayette E., the former the wife of Milton Siberling. The union of Mr. and Mrs. Myers has been blessed with the following-named children: Nellie V., Ira E. (married to Ida Everhart), Laura M., Corman A., and Nellie V., who is the wife of O. E. Mr. Myers is a republican in politics, as was his father before him, and he and wife are members of the Christian church, in the faith of which they are leading consistent lives.

APT. SUMNER NASH, secretary and treasurer of the Akron Belting company, is a native of Bath township, Summit county, Ohio, was born May 10, 1836, and is a son of Hophni and Lovisa (King) Nash, both natives of Hampshire county, Mass., where their marriage took place.

The Nash family is of Scotch-Irish origin, but for many years several of its members resided in England, whence, early in the history of the United States, two brothers came to this country, one of whom settled in Massachusetts and the other, it is supposed, found a home in the sunny south. From the Bay state immigrant the subject of this biographical review descends, and many other of his descendants attained eminent positions in the learned professions and in the legislative halls of Massachusetts. The King family was also among the early settlers of Massachusetts and was of Scotch-Irish extraction. Hophni Nash, shortly after his marriage at Chesterfield, Mass., April 28, 1825, to Miss Lovisa, daughter of Eleazer and Mercy King, came from their native state to Ohio and located on a farm in Bath township, Summit county. Mr. Nash taught school during the winter of 1827-28, at or near Ghent, served as clerk of Bath township for many years—this office being afterward held by each of his three sons-and followed farming until his death, at Akron, April 17, 1882, at the age of eighty-five years, his wife surviving until January 6, 1892, when she died at Montrose at the age of ninety years. children numbered five, as follows: who was first married to Curtis D. Barber and then to a Mr. Williams, and now, a widow the second time, is residing with a daughter in Pipe Stone, Minn.; E. King Nash, M. D., of Montrose, Ohio; Nancy Ellen, widow of R. D. Pierson, of Lincoln, Neb.; Thomas W., a bookkeeper for A. M. Barber, of Akron, and Sumner, the subject of this biography.

Sumner Nash was reared on the home farm and was educated in the district schools and in the academy at Richfield. When about nineteen years of age he went to Wisconsin and drove stage between Oshkosh and New London, while the country was still wild and occupied to a great extent by Indians. He next took a contract at Plymouth, Wis., for clearing the timber from the surveyed line of the Sheboygan & Fond du Lac Railroad company, then being built from Plymouth west, by making the suitable timber into ties and by cutting the refuse into cord-wood. In the fall by 1856, at Oshkosh, he took charge of a hardware store during the absence of the proprietor at the south. In the fall of 1857 he returned to his old home, attended the Richfield academy for a time, taught school several winters, and in the summer seasons worked his father's farm, and other leased land until August 6, 1862, when he enlisted in company G, One Hundred and Fifteenth Ohio volunteer infantry, and served until July 7, 1865, when he was mustered out as first lieutenant, although for months he had held the captaincy of a company. After his return from the war, in July, 1865, he purchased a farm in Livingston county, Ill.; March 8, 1866, he married Miss Rebecca M. Means, of Northfield, working the Illinois farm until 1868, when he returned to Summit county, Mrs. Nash dying July 18, 1869, leaving one child-Spending two years on his father-Maud M. in-law's farm in Northfield, and one season in Illinois, as agent for a lightning rod company, in the winter of 1872-73 he was appointed deputy county clerk by Clerk John A. Means, serving the balance of the term, and also through two terms for Clerk George W. Meeks, being himself elected clerk in 1878, and holding the office two full terms of three years each. Mr. Nash is now secretary and treasurer of the Akron Belting company, fully written of elsewhere. June 23, 1874, Mr. Nash was again married—this time to Miss Linnie A. Cross, of Columbus, Ohio.

ILTON J. NICOLA, of the popular "Pearl Steam" laundry firm of Nicola & White, Ravenna, Ohio, was born in Allentown, Pa., November 24, 1866, a son of John and Susannah (Geise) Nicola, the former of whom was a native of France and the latter of Germany.

After quitting the common schools, where he had been quite well educated, Mr. Nicola learned carriagemaking in Allentown, at which he worked three and a half years, and then went to Philadelphia and for three years there continued at his trade. He next came to Ohio, eventually secured a position in the carriage and hearse factory of Merts & Riddle in Ravenna, where he remained seven years, then returned east, and for a year was engaged, in partnership with his brother, in the laundry business at Bethlehem, Pa. Returning to Ravenna he formed a partnership with his now father-in-law, Charles White, and in March, 1895, purchased the laundry then owned by F. D. Pitkin and located in the Riddle block. In November, 1896, the plant was removed to its present location, at the corner of Spruce and Prospect streets, the building being known as the New Laundry block. It is completely equipped with the most improved modern machinery, and is patronized, not only by the best people of Ravenna, but by residents of the surrounding country, even, indeed, as far as Cleveland, and ten agencies are necessary to attend to the outside patronage.

March 18, 1890, at Kent, Ohio, Mr. Nicola was united in marriage to Miss Ida Minerva White, who was born in Franklin, Pa., December 4, 1866, and in 1867 was brought to Kent, Ohio, by her parents, Charles and Mary White. One child, George M., came to bless the union of Mr. and Mrs. Nicola May 20, 1892.

Charles White, the father of Mrs. Nicola and the business partner of her husband, was born in Beaver county, Pa., January 15, 1842, a son of David and Mary Jane White, the former of whom was a native of Scotland and the latter of Maryland. Charles was educated in the public schools of Beaver and Venango counties, Pa., and after leaving school worked in the oil fields of the vicinity several years. In 1865 he married Miss Mary C. Schaffer, who was born in Butler county, Pa., May 11, 1843, a daughter of Henry and Catherine Schaffer, natives respectively of Pennsylvania and Germany. In 1867, as already mentioned, Mr. White came to Portage county, Ohio, bought a farm about a mile and a half from Kent, and followed agriculture until March, 1895, when he came to Ravenna and joined Mr. Nicola in the laundry. To the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. White have been born eight children, viz: Ida Minerva, Lizzie Jane, David, John, Alfred, Flora, Mabel and Bertha; of these, David, John and Alfred are deceased. The family are members of the Congregational church, and in politics Mr. White is a republican. For thirty-one years Mr. White has been a member of Rockton lodge, No. 316, A. F. & A. M., of Kent, while his son-in-law, Mr. Nicola, is a member of Crescent lodge, No. 225, K. of P., and of the Roval Arcanum of Ravenna.

TIS & OTIS, a prominent law firm of Akron, Ohio, with its office in the Arcade building, is composed of the two brothers, Edward P. Otis and Ellsworth E. Otis, natives of Tuscarawas county, Ohio, and sons of Rezin P. and Catherine (Bair) Otis, both natives of the Buckeye state, and respectively descended from New England and Pennsylvania ancestry.

James Otis, the most remote of the American ancestors of these brothers, was one of the early patriots who first protested against the tyranny in New England of George III, of Great Britain, about 1764, and afterward became a soldier in the Revolution, losing his life through his patriotism. His descendants have in many instances achieved celebrity in the legal profession, in the ministry, and in the arena of politics-in the halls of congress, and in the government of the state. The name is prominent all through the history of Massachusetts and New England generally. Bair family was also very prominent in the local affairs of Pennsylvania.

Edward P. Otis received his elementary education in the district schools of his native county, then attended Oberlin college, next taught school awhile, and in 1877 entered Wittenberg college, from which he graduated in 1882, and at once began reading law with a legal firm of Mansfield, Ohio; next, studied under Nealy & Patrick, lawyers of New Philadelphia, and in the winter of 1884-85 attended the Cincinnati Law school. In June, 1885, he was admitted to the bar, and in August of that year came to Akron, where for two years he was associated in practice with W. E. Slavbaugh, a former classmate. upon the graduation of his brother, Ellsworth E., from the Ann Arbor (Mich.) Law school, the firm of Otis & Otis was formed—Ellsworth E. having been admitted to the bar prior to graduation. The preparatory and literary education of the younger brother had been acquired at Wittenberg college and the Wooster university, after which he had entered the law department of the Michigan university, and was graduated as above mentioned. The firm has secured a lucrative general practice, and to some extent makes a specialty of commercial cases, its patronage in these coming largely from abroad. They are young men of decided talent and ability, and are fully deserving of the growing prosperity which attends them.

In politics both the brothers are republicans; fraternally, Edward P. is a Freemason, and Ellsworth E. is an Odd Fellow and a Knight of Pythias, while both are active members of their college society, Beta Theta Pi, Edward P. being president of the local chapter, and Ellsworth E. its secretary. Both brothers are members of the English Lutheran church, of which for several years past Edward P. has been superintendent of the Sundayschool, and for the past eleven years he has been a member of the board of directors of Wittenberg college.

The marriage of Edward P. Otis took place September 21, 1887, with Miss Jessie L. Wolfe, a college acquaintance, a resident of Springfield, Ohio, and a daughter of Henry H. Wolfe. This union has been blessed with one child—Catherine Louise. Mrs. Otis is a highly accomplished lady and is one of the brightest ornaments to the society of Akron; she is widely known for her proficiency as a vocalist, and is frequently called upon to lend her musical talents to secure success to public entertainments. She is an active member of the social musical society known as the Tuesday Afternoon club of Akron, and is to a great extent the essence of its success. The pleasant home of Mr. and Mrs. Otis is at No. 121 Adolph avenue.

Ellsworth E. Otis was married June 27, 1894, to Miss Mary Louise Guth, of Akron, the accomplished daughter of Jacob R. Guth, and they have their cheerful home at No. 986 East Market street.

DWARD OVIATT, one of the oldest and most experienced of the attorneys at law of Akron and the head of the firm of Oviatt, Allen & Cobbs, No. 102 North Howard street, has been a resident of the city since 1842. He was born in Hudson, Summit county, Ohio, May 19, 1822, a son of Marvin and Mary (Foote) Oviatt.

Capt. Heman Oviatt, grandfather of subject, was a native of Connecticut, of French descent, and came from Goshen, that state, to Ohio, in 1800, and settled at Hudson with his wife and two children. Although reared to mercantile pursuits, he at once imbibed the spirit of progress exhaled by the pioneers and entered about 200 acres of land in the township, and, with another gentleman, purchased a large tract of land in Richfield township. He opened a store in Hudson and had a large trade with the Indians, but suffered many of the hardships of frontier life, among others that of being compelled to go, by means of an ox-cart, all the way to Pittsburg, Pa., for his merchandise. But he was a man of great progressiveness, and a man of and for his day.

He was a friend of religion and education and one of the founders of Hudson college, to which he made several munificent donations—one being for $3,000, a second for $10,000, and also several others of less amounts; he promoted the cause of foreign missionary work whenever practicable, and was ever prompt in aiding the public weal. In politics he was an active whig.

Capt. Oviatt first married Miss Eunice Newton, who bore him four children, viz: Marvin, father of subject; Orson M., who for some time was a merchant in Richfield, Summit county, but later was for a long time a beef-packer of Cleveland, became quite wealthy and was widely known; Harriet, who was first married to a Mr. Bronson, and later to Rev. D. A. Randall, and died in Columbus. Ohio; Louisa, the youngest child, married Ephraim Sturtevant, and died in Tallmadge, The second marriage of Capt. Oviatt was with Miss Kilburn, of Hudson, who bore two children-a son, Heman, who for thirty years was a farmer in Summit county, but spent the latter part of his life in Cleveland, in the produce business; and a daughter, Elizabeth.

Marvin Oviatt, father of subject, was born in Connecticut in 1797, and came to Summit county, Ohio, with his parents in 1800. some years he was here engaged in farming, but later went to Cleveland and embarked in mercantile trade; in 1825 he built a large block at the corner of Superior and Water streets, and other buildings in various parts of the city; in 1828 he went to Indiana, but in 1833 returned to Summit county, Ohio, and located on a farm in Richfield township; in 1850 he went to California, and was on his way homeward in 1853 when he met with an accident that resulted in his death. led a very active life, was a man of great public spirit, and in politics was a whig. His wife died in May, 1876, at the age of eightyone years. The family of these parents consisted of six children, viz: Schuyler, who was a farmer of Richfield township for years, served as county surveyor and then as county treasurer four years each, and then removed to Cleveland, where his son held a position in the city engineer's office, and where he now has his home at No. 765 Genesee avenue; Tracy M., who was a graduate of Hudson college, was a teacher in Elyria academy, where he prepared Gen. Gilmore for West Point and Judge Burke for his legal career, and is now a retired minister of the Congregational church and is residing in Gilroy, Cal.; Edward is the subject of this memoir; Celia M., who died in 1894, was the wife of Baxter Wood, formerly a merchant of Richfield, but now in the lumber trade in Medina and Lorain counties, Ohio; Virgil L. graduated from Hudson college, but lived one year only thereafter, and Don Carlos, the youngest, died in Oil City, Pa., in 1865.

Edward Oviatt, the subject proper of this biography, was educated at the Richfield academy, also at Granville, and at the Western Reserve college, and at the age of twenty years, in May, 1842, came to Akron and entered the law office of Carter & Bliss, under whose instructions he studied assiduously four years, and in 1846 was admitted to the bar. He was fully equipped for the practice of his chosen profession, and for a number of years conducted it alone, or until its increasing volume called for help. He was retained in some of the most noted trials that ever took place in the county, and was the counsel for Akron a number of years before its incorporation as a city. In May, 1864, he answered his country's call for volunteers and enlisted in the 100-day service; he was appointed colorbearer and stationed on Arlington Heights (in Virginia, across the Potomac river from Washington, D. C.), and served until late in the following September.

In politics he was a whig until the disintegration of that party, when he united with the republicans. He was a member of the board of education for many years, and in 1864 was elected prosecuting attorney, in which office he served four years, his name becoming a terror to criminals of all degrees, and during his long service in this capacity failed in two instances only in convicting the culprits whom he prosecuted. He is to-day recognized as one of the ablest members of the bar in the state.

Mr. Oviatt is a member of the G. A. R., and of the American and State Bar associations; he is a stockholder in several national banks and is vice-president of the First National bank of Akron; he is also a stockholder in the Canadian Copper company, which supplies the government with nickel for coining, etc., and has many investments in other industrial enterprises.

The first matrimonial alliance of Mr. Oviatt was celebrated in 1847, with Miss Anna, daughter of Frederick Wadsworth. This lady died in August, 1854, leaving one child, Emma, now the wife of Calvin Edgerton, of Los Angeles, Cal. His second marriage was consummated in December, 1855, with Frances A. Lansing, who died in August, 1881, the mother of two children—Edward A., manager of and stockholder in the Linoleum company of Akron, and Olivia, wife of George Allen, attorney, and member of the firm of Oviatt, Allen & Cobbs.

Mr. Oviatt has been one of the most progressive and enterprising of the citizens of Akron, and the firm of which he is the senior member are attorneys for many of the leading corporations and business firms of the city and surrounding country, and certainly stand at the head of the profession.

A. PALMER, a prominent business man of Akron, was born July 16, 1851, and is a son of William and Sophia (Brock) Palmer, the former of whom settled in Tallmadge, this county, in 1851, and here followed agricultural pursuits until his death, in 1876, leaving a widow whose death occurred in March, 1897—both dying in the faith of the Methodist Episcopal church. Ten children were born to them, all of whom survive, viz: William, Nellie, Clara, Fannie, Annie, Alfred, John, Harry A., Sadie and Charlie-ranging in ages from sixty to thirty-five years respectively. The eighth child in order of birth in the above-named family, H. A. Palmer, was married, in 1873, in Onargo, Ill., to Miss Mary C. Risser, formerly of Ashland. Ohio, and this union has been blessed with five children, viz: Lottie S., Theron R., Willie (deceased), Nellie May and Harry Guy. Of these the eldest two are graduates of the high school of Akron, in the classes of 1805 and 1896, and Theron R. is now foreman of the soft rubber department of the B. F. Goodrich Rubber company, of Akron.

H. A. Palmer came from Ashland, Ohio, to Akron in 1878, and established himself in the artificial stone business, which he conducted two years; he then became associated with the J. F. Seiberling Mower & Reaper company, and for seven years was superintendent of the harvester and binder department, and for two additional years was general agent of the company for territory covering three different states. In 1891 he became a member of the Akron Electrical Manufacturing company as business manager, and in 1895 was elected secretary and general manager—a position he resigned in 1897.

A republican in politics, he was elected, in 1894, a member of the city council of Akron from the Second ward, was elected its vice-president, and on the death of its president, in the fall of 1894, became its president. The following spring he was again elected president of the council, which office he filled with dignity and impartiality until the close of his term. Fraternally, Mr. Palmer has been an Odd Fellow since 1880 and is at present a member of Akron lodge, No. 547, of which he is a past grand, and is also a member of Akron encampment No. 18, as well as of Colfax Rebekah lodge, No. 8, and grand canton Akron No. 2, patriarchs militant, and is a past representative to the grand lodge of Ohio. In 1895 he was appointed major on the staff of J. C. Whitaker, commander of the patriarchs militant of Ohio.

Mr. and Mrs. Palmer are members of the Trinity English Lutheran church, in which Mr. Palmer has been teacher of a bible class for the past twelve years. Mr. Palmer is an upright and energetic citizen, progressive in his views and public spirited in an eminent degree, and is honored and esteemed by the entire community.

OHN F. MOORE, county commissioner, and one of Summit county's most prominent agriculturists, was born in Springfield township, this county. November 22, 1837. His great-grandfather, Joseph Moore, of Scotch-Irish extraction, was a pioneer of Lake township, Stark county, Ohio, who moved with his family from Pennsylvania, and whose son John assisted in improving the farm on which they settled in Ohio. John Moore, grandfather of the subject, continued to reside on this farm until the year 1832, when he moved to Springfield township, Summit county, and established the home which was for so many years the homestead of the Moores. His wife was Nancy Graff, who bore him three children: Joseph, Betsey (Mrs. Wm. Johnson) and Sarah J.

(Mrs. Wolcott Hitchcock). Joseph Moore was born December 6, 1815. He was reared as a farmer and remained on the old homestead until about 1872, when he rested from the active duties of life and moved to Akron, where he is living at present in a green old age a happy and retired life. His wife was a daughter of John and Elizabeth (Snyder) Fulkerson, natives of Germany and pioneers of Springfield township. She bore him four children: John F., James G., Victoria (Mrs. Samuel Steese) and Watson M.

John F. Moore was reared on the old homestead in Springfield township. He received all the common-school advantages of the neighborhood, to which was added a supplemental course at the Greensburg academy. He remained on the old farm until 1862, when he purchased a farm in Copley township, upon which he has ever since resided, and which he has greatly improved and beautified, making of it a very pleasant and comfortable home place.

On February 25, 1862, he married Mary L., daughter of James and Elizabeth (Sawyer) Chamberlain, of Springfield township. To this union have been born five children: Arthur A., Jennie (Mrs. Jay Hawkins), Edwin D., Harry and Nellie.

Mr. Moore is a very active and public-spirited citizen. He has given largely of his time to public affairs and the good of his community, and his devotion to the interests of the commonwealth has commanded the attention and recognition of the people of Summit county to the extent that he was, in 1895, called to serve in the responsible and important capacity of county commissioner. His interest in local educational affairs is such that for twenty years he was a member of the school board, much of the time being the presiding officer thereof, and upon several occasions he was called to serve as township trustee. For thirty years he has been a member and director of the county Agricultural society, of which he was president for some time and also vice-president. In politics he is an ardent republican and is a respected and valued counselor in the deliberations of his party, his sagacity and judgment in political matters being given the heed that his advice on other public matters of a local nature commands, and by reason of which he wields so large an influence in the community interests of Copley township.

ILLIAM HAMILTON CLARKE PARKHILL, cashier of the Kent National bank, of Portage county, Ohio, was born in Brownsville, Pa., September 24, 1852, a son of William and Mary (McSherry) Parkhill. The father has been a bank cashier all his life and is still in the banking business in Brownsville; the mother died when the subject of this memoir was a small boy, and of her three children one died in infancy, and a daughter, Margaret, and the subject still survive. The father remarried, but to his second union there has been no issue.

David Parkhill, great-grandfather of subject, came from Ireland to America when about sixteen years of age, but soon went back to his native country; two years later he returned to America and was preparing for the ministry, but his health failed and he resumed his original trade—that of weaver. He married Martha Morrow, and his first child was born in 1769. William Parkhill, grandfather of subject, was born in 1782, and William, father of subject, was born near Brownsville, Pa., in 1825.

W. H. C. Parkhill resided in his native town until he reached his majority, meantime attending the common schools and later taking a two-years' course in the Washington & Jefferson college at Washington, Pa., and also a business course at Eastman's Commercial college in Poughkeepsie, N. Y. His first employment was as clerk on a steamboat on the Monongahela river, and he next came to Kent, where he has ever since been identified with the Kent National bank—first, in 1881, then as cashier, then as stockholder, and for two years as a director—but his position as cashier has never changed since he first assumed the duties of that office.

The Kent National bank was organized late in 1864, its charter number being 652, with a capital stock of $100,000, and began business January 2, 1865, with Zenas Kent as its president and E. L. Day as cashier. Zenas Kent died October 4, 1865, and was succeeded by his son, Marvin, who still retains the position; Cashier Day was succeeded in January, 1866, by James S. Cooke, and he by Charles K. Clapp, and he by W. H. C. Parkhill, in May, 1891. The bank is now officered as follows: Marvin Kent, president; W. S. Kent, vice-president; W. H. C. Parkhill, cashier. The capital stock has been reduced to $60,000, the surplus is $12,000, and its deposits reach nearly $100,000, and it is to-day one of the strongest financial institutions of northeastern Ohio.

Mr. Parkhill was united in marriage, in October, 1876, in Brownsville, Pa., with Miss Helen A. Wells, daughter of George W. and Frances E. (Kent) Wells, and granddaughter of Zenas Kent, through her mother. Mrs. Parkhill was born in Kent, but at the age of twelve years was taken to Brownsville, Pa., by her parents. The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Parkhill has been blessed by the birth of one child—Frances Kent. The family reside in a handsome frame dwelling, erected by Mr. Parkhill to suit his own taste. In politics Mr. Parkhill is a republican, and while he always performs his duty at the polls as a citizen, never permits politics to distract his mind from business, but spares sufficient time to act as treasurer of three building and loan associations. He is not a member of any church or secret society, but he and family are highly esteemed in social circles.

HARLES TUTTLE PARKS, the well-known funeral director, of No. 342 South Main street, Akron, Ohio, and an ex-soldier of the Civil war, is a native of Summit county, Ohio, and was born October 27, 1844, a son of George and Ruth (Tuttle) Parks, the latter of whom was called to her resting place in the bosom of the earth about the year 1873. The father is still a resident of Summit county.

Charles T. Parks, the subject, received a very good education in the common schools of his township, which he attended until near about the time of his enlistment, April 27, 1861, in company C, Sixteenth Ohio volunteer infantry, in which he served four months, and then veteranized by enlisting in company H, Sixteenth Ohio volunteer infantry, in which he served three years and three months, making a total service of three years and seven months, during which time his only serious injury was sustained at the siege of Vicksburg, Miss., where he lost the index finger of his right After his return from this service he was for about seven years engaged in the lumber business at Wooster, Ohio, and in 1874 entered into the undertaking business at the same place. In 1880 he relinquished undertaking, and came from Wooster to Akron, and was here employed in the Buckeye works until 1888, when he resumed undertaking, having in the meantime taken a full course of instruction in embalming at Clark's school—the embalming department of the Western Reserve university at Cleveland. His present place of business is one of the best equipped for the purpose in the city of Akron, and, as a consequence, he commands a large share of the patronage of those who, in the course of nature, are bereaved of their relatives.

In 1865 Mr. Sparks was united in wedlock with Miss Margaret Curry, of Wooster, Ohio, who died in 1891. August 2, 1893, Mr. Parks was again married, choosing for his bride Miss Leora Allyn, of Akron. This lady is also a graduate from Clark's school for embalming, and is the only lady in Akron, or in Summit county, skilled in this art. In politics Mr. Parks is a republican, and fraternally he is an Odd Fellow and a Knight of Pythias. He has been very successful as a business man, maintains an excellent name as a citizen, and socially he and Mrs. Parks are recognized in the best circles of Akron.

DWARD A. PARSONS, treasurer of the Railway Speed Recorder company, Kent, Ohio, was born in Northampton, Mass., January 25, 1829, and is a son of Edward and Clementine (Janes) Parsons, who settled in Brimfield, Portage county, Ohio, in 1831.

Edward Parsons, father of subject, was born in Northampton, Mass., March 14, 1797, a son of Moses and Esther (Kingsley) Parsons, also natives of the Bay state and of English extraction. He learned the trade of carpenter, and when about twenty-nine years old married Miss Clementine (or Clementina) Janes, a school-teacher of Northampton, a daughter of Peleg Cheney and Martha (Coy) Janes, the former of English and the latter of Irish extraction—the marriage taking place January 1, 1828. Two and a half years later Mr. Parsons, with his wife and son, Edward A., came to Ohio and first located in Brecksville, Cuyahoga county, but one year later went to Cleveland, and six months still later settled in Brimfield township, Portage county. He there owned over 200 acres of land, on which he passed his life until 1868, when he retired to Kent, and here ended his days, April 6, 1874, a member of the Episcopalian church, and the father of six children, viz: Edward A., the subject; Timothy G., whose memoir appears below; Harriet J., born in Brimfield township June 24, 1835—died October 2, 1876; Martha Kingsley, born April 1, 1838; William Cheney, born February 19, 1841, and Clementina, born September 20, 1843.

Edward A. Parsons, with whose name this biographical notice opens, was an infant in arms when brought to Ohio by his parents. He was reared on his father's farm, was well educated in the common schools, and so well availed himself of his advantage that, on quitting his studies, he was competent to teach, and for three terms conducted schools in Portage county. He continued to reside on the farm until 1853, when he married, September 25, of that year, Miss Mary J. Underwood, daughter of Freeman and Mercy Amelia (Lincoln) Underwood, who came from Massachusetts and settled in Brimfield township, Portage county, Ohio, in 1818. Mrs. Parsons was born in Brimfield township in December, 1832, and was there reared to womanhood.

After marriage, Edward A. Parsons, with his wife, settled on a farm which he had previously purchased, and which had been partly improved, and which he continued to improve until he owned one of the best in the township. In 1860 he removed to Kent (then Franklin Mills), and for some time was a produce merchant. In the latter part of 1863 he embarked in the lumber trade, and in 1864 formed a partnership with Porter B. Hall, under the firm name of Parsons & Hall, built the first planing mill in town, continued the business a year or so, then formed a partnership with his brother, Timothy G., and carried it on under the style of E. A. Parsons & Bro. until 1869, when he withdrew, the brother succeed-Mr. Parsons then associated with ing him. George O. Rice, under the firm name of Parsons & Rice, in the produce trade, but the year after Mr. Parsons sold out his interest in this concern. In 1875 he re-engaged in the produce business as a member of the firm of Parsons & Foote, but a change was again made, and Mr. Parsons was for a time alone in the same line. In 1875, also, Mr. Parsons became interested in the patent covering the railroad speed recorder, and the first machines in this interest were constructed at his residence under the supervision of his son-in-law. I. B. Miller.

In January, 1877, the Railway Speed Recorder company was formed as a joint-stock concern and a factory built. Of this company Mr. Parsons was elected secretary, and in 1878 was also elected treasurer, and filled the double office until 1887, when he was released, to some extent, of his overweighing duties and elected to the single office of treasurer, to which he has since given his entire attention, with the exception, perhaps, of three years. The company has a capital stock of $250,000, gives employment to about fifty men, and is one of the most prosperous industries of the city of Kent.

In politics Mr. Parsons was in his early manhood a democrat, but at the outbreak of the Civil war became a republican. His first public office was that of clerk of Brimfield township; he then became assessor, and later a justice of the peace, and still later was elected township treasurer after his removal to Kent. In 1874 he was elected county commissioner to fill an unexpired term, and in 1875 was elected for a full term, having proved himself to be efficient in the performance of the duties of this office as well as of those he had previously filled, and in this position was the projector of the fine arch bridge which spans the Cuyahoga river at Kent, his service ending in 1878. He has since served as a member of the city council five terms, and in this body was one of the strong advocates of the legislation which gave to Kent her electric lights, waterworks and permanent sidewalks. He has also served five terms as a member of the school board, and in that capacity was always forward in promoting the efficiency of the public schools.

Mr. Parsons is a member of Rockton lodge, No. 316, F. & A. M., and attends the Universalist church, with which his wife is united. They occupy a fine residence which Mr. Parsons built in 1868, and here have reared, beside their own children, Effie, the wife of J. B. Miller, a farmer near Kent. Mrs. Parsons, for a long time a school-teacher prior to her marriage, and a most estimable lady, has been a faithful helpmate in aiding her husband to reach his present exalted position in the community of Kent.

UIMOTHY GRAVES PARSONS, planing mill proprietor and lumber dealer at Kent, Ohio, was born in Brimfield, Portage county, September 17, 1832, a son of Edward and Clementine (Janes) Parsons, natives, respectively, of Northampton and Brimfield, Mass., were there married in 1828 and in 1830 came to Ohio, stopped in Cleveland a year and then came to Brimfield township, where they cleared up a farm, on which they resided until 1863, when they came to Kent, where the father died at the age of seventy-six, April 4, 1874, and the mother in 1892, at ninety years. To their union were born six children, viz: Edward A., of Kent; Timothy G., subject; Harriet J., who was married to Sherman M. Blake, and died in Richwood, Union county, Ohio; Martha K., wife of Hon. George W. Crouse, of Akron; William C., of the same city; and Clementine, married to Charles H. Barber, of Kent.

Edward Parsons, father of subject, beside being a farmer, had in early life learned the carpenter's trade, and while in Cleveland assisted in the erection of the American House. now an old landmark in that city, but after coming to Portage seldom worked at his trade, but, in connection with his farming, kept a store and was for a number of years postmaster of Brimfield. In politics he was a whig, and in religion an Episcopalian. Moses Parsons, father of Edward, could trace his ancestry back to Cornet Joseph Parsons, who came over from England in 1635 and settled in Massachusetts, in which state he passed his entire life.

Timothy G. Parsons, until eighteen years of age, passed his time on the home farm and in his father's store, and received his education in the common schools with the exception of one term in the academy in Franklin Mills and one term in Bissell's academy at Twinsburg, and then engaged as a clerk in a store in Akron. At the age of twenty years he went to California via New York and the isthmus of Panama, and for about seven years was engaged in mining most of the time, and the remainder of the time in agriculture, and then returned, via the isthmus and New Orleans, to Brimfield, Ohio, purchased a farm, and for about a year employed himself in its tillage.

In September, 1861, Mr. Parsons enlisted in company A, Forty-second Ohio volunteer infantry, for three years, took part in the campaign under Garfield up the Big Sandy in eastern Kentucky; afterward under Gen. George W. Morgan in the Cumberland Gap campaign; afterward, in the Thirteenth army corps, took part in the battles of Chickasaw Bayou, Arkansas Post, Champion Hills, Black River Bridge, and siege of Vicksburg. In November, 1863, he was honorably discharged at Vicksburg on account of disability caused by As soon as he had recuperated, sickness. however, he re-entered the service as clerk in the quartermaster's department and served until July, 1865. Returning home, he thence made a trip to Kansas with a view to locating, but, dissatisfied with the country, returned to Ohio and engaged, in partnership with his brother. Edward A., in the lumber business at Kent, in September, 1865; a little more than four years later, in January, 1870, he purchased his brother's interest, and since that date has been doing a most prosperous trade on his own sole account.

The marriage of Mr. Parsons took place December 12, 1866, to Miss Eleanor M. Sawyer, daughter of Henry and Susan (Hall) Sawyer, of Brimfield, and to this union have been born five children, of whom one died in infancy, and one, Susie O., died at the age of seven years. The surviving three are named Edward S., John T. and Dwight L. family worship at the Congregational church, have a fine home, and their domestic relations are very pleasant. In politics Mr. Parsons affiliates with the republican party, and has held several offices, but has never aspired to political honors. Fraternally he is a Freemason, and is a member of A. H. Day post, G. A. R. He is public spirited and liberal as a citizen, and ever ready to lend his aid, financially and otherwise, to the promotion of the interests of Kent, and as a business man he bears a pure and untarnished name.

LBERT E. PECKHAM, superintendent of the Ravenna Shoe Manufacturing company, is a native of Petersham, Mass., was born December 4, 1860, and is a son of Benjamin and Sarah (Sprague) Peckham, the former of whom was born in Phillipston, Mass., and the latter in Petersham.

Benjamin Peckham, a stonemason and contractor, died in March, 1881; his widow now resides with her son, the subject, in Ravenna. Mr. and Mrs. Peckham had a family of ten children, of whom four only are now living, viz: Louis, Edwin, Albert E. and Ella, the last named being the wife of Arthur King, of Cleveland, Ohio. Some of the best stone work in Massachusetts stands to-day as an evidence of the skill and integrity of Benjamin Peckham, especially the bridge work between Athol and Springfield, on the Boston & Albany railroad, all of which he constructed and finished.

Albert E. Peckham, after quitting school, was employed for six years by the New Home Sewing Machine company, at Orange, Mass., which position he resigned, at the urgent request of a brother, in order to learn blacksmithing under the latter, with whom he remained four years when he sustained a spinal injury by the kick of a vicious horse, and this injury kept him idle for nearly two years. He then entered the employ of the W. H. Burt Shoe company, at Brookfield, Mass., and, at the close of a year, had become master of the trade. He was then offered and accepted a situation, at an advanced salary, with the E. M. Dickinson Shoe company in Fitchburg, Mass., where he remained five years, when, hearing that a shoe factory had been started in Ravenna, Ohio, and being desirous of seeing the west, he wrote to the new firm, known as the Jordan & Goodrich Shoe company, which company, finding by correspondence that Mr. Peckham was an expert, appointed him its foreman. The new company, however, remained in business one year only, when it disposed of its building and machinery to Merts & Rumbaugh, who at once founded the Ravenna Shoe company, of which Mr. Peckham was made superintendent in 1892. Since his appointment to this responsible position, Mr. Peckham, through his energy and ability, has been largely instrumental in placing the factory on a substantial basis. During the recent stagnation in business it was not closed a single day, and it now gives employment to ninety-three hands, turns out 500 pairs of shoes per day, and for the past fifteen months has been in operation day and night. Seven traveling salesmen are kept busy, and their sales are made chiefly in the western states.

In October, 1886, Mr. Peckham was united in marriage with Miss Emma L. Snow in Athol, Mass. Her parents are Daniel and Madora Snow, both natives of the Bay state, where they still reside, and in Grafton, in the same state, Mrs. Peckham was born in November, 1868. The union of Mr. and Mrs. Peckham has been blessed with two children-Ralph Edgar, born June 15, 1888, and Ruth Gladys, born November 23, 1896. Mr. Peckham is a member of the Senior Order of United American Mechanics, and also of the Ancient Order of Foresters, of Ravenna, and in politics is a stanch republican. Socially he has attained a very high position and enjoys the respect of a wide circle of personal friends as well as the esteem of the general public.

ALTER W. PATTON, a prominent citizen of Kent, Portage county, and eminent as an educator, was born in Trumbull county, Ohio, November 10, 1834, a son of John and Mary M. (McKain) Patton, natives, respectively, of Pennsylvania and of the Buckeye state—the paternal great-great-grandfather of subject having come to America from Scotland.

John Patton, father of subject, passed his early life in the Keystone state, was there married, and had born to him one daughter, and there his wife died. He then came to Ohio and located in Trumbull county, where he married Miss McKain, the result of this union being five children, of whom Walter W. is the eldest. Some time after his second marriage Mr. Patton removed to Mahoning county, then newly erected (1846) from Trumbull and Columbiana counties, where he passed the remainder of his days, having been an honest and industrious farmer all his life.

Walter W. Patton was reared on his father's farm until sixteen years of age, when, in 1850, he entered what is now Hiram college, studied assiduously, and at the age of seventeen taught his first school-in Millin township, Mahoning county. For several years he attended school in the fall, taught school in the winter, and in the summer worked at anything he could find to do-chiefly farm work, at $14 per month—his clothing being all homespun in those early days. But he possessed an indomitable determination to become an educator or to enter one of the learned professions as his life work, and completed his studies at Mount Union college, having earned with his own hands the means of defraying his expenses. After graduating he resumed his vocation and taught district schools in Mahoning, Trumbull and Ashland counties, and in 1859 came to Portage county, was placed in charge of the graded school of Rootstown, and taught with most flattering success four terms—this being a select school part of the In 1861, he went to Ravenna and taught one year, at the same time read law in the office of Hart & Reed, and was admitted to the bar the same year. He then came to Kent and had charge of the schools one year, but declining health compelled him to relinquish the confinement of the school-room, and he engaged in mercantile trade for a short period. He then again assumed charge of the schools of Kent and continued in charge seven years, or until 1878. He then engaged in the practice of law for some time, when he embarked in fruit growing, although he yet keeps up a desultory practice of the legal profession.

Since 1861 Mr. Patton has been an ardent republican in politics and an eloquent advocate of the principles of that party, having "stumped" through several campaigns in its behalf and having been a delegate to county, district and state conventions of the party. He has served as a member of the county board of elections; has been a member of the school board for six years and has served as cemetery trustee and was postmaster of Kent during Harrison's administration.

Mr. Patton was united in marriage, in 1863, with Mrs. Harriet Daly, née Beech, whose two children by her former husband have assumed the name of Patton, in honor of their step-father. These children are named Emma B., who is a music teacher, and John B., who for twelve years has been a commercial traveler for the firm of Mills & Gibbs, of New York city. In his societary relations, Mr. Patton is a knight templar Mason, and is also past worshipful master of Rockton lodge, No. 316.

Mr. Patton is a gentleman who has known how to make his way through the world, and having been born with innately strong sense, has not permitted his opportunities to idly slip by. He has hosts of friends who admire him for his true integrity and manly worth, and his prosperity through life has been of his own making.

S. PELL, superintendent of the Sterling company's boiler works at Barberton, Summit county, Ohio, is a native of Pennsylvania and was born in Lykens, Dauphin county, July 23, 1846, and is a son of William M. and Ambia (Shouff) Pell. The grandfather of subject, James Pell, was born in Wilmington, Del., was a hero of the Revolutionary war, and served in the United States army ten years. He was a millwright by trade, married a Miss Hatch, and died in Delaware county, Pa., where he had resided a number of years, an honored and highly respected citizen.

William M. Pell, father of subject, was born in Harrisburg, Pa., was a civil engineer by profession, and for many years was employed as such by various coal mining companies, but later became a mining contractor and handled and delivered immense quantities of coal, accumulating a handsome competence.

H. S. Pell, at the early age of ten years, began to work for his living, and from sixteen to twenty years served an apprenticeship at the machinist's trade. Between the ages of twenty and twenty-six years he was employed in superintending and erecting rolling-mills and blast-furnaces, and erected and put in operation at LaGrange, Tenn., the first mill constructed after the close of the Civil war, and also a mill at Waynesboro, Tenn.; he also erected a mill at Carondelet, Mo., from which was turned out the first T rail west of the Mississippi river. From twenty-six to thirty-three years of age he was foreman of the Totten company machine shops, a large plant at Saint Louis, and from thirty-three to thirty-five had charge of the Carondelet plant alluded to The next three years were passed by Mr. Pell in Minnesota, where he employed his time in hunting, fishing and other out-door exercises and amusements for the recuperation of his health, and then, from thirty-eight to forty-three years of age, was superintendent of the Witherow works at New Castle, Pa., which works have built eighty-three per cent of the modern blast-furnaces and steel plants in the United States. Since 1891 Mr. Pell has held his present position as superintendent of the Sterling works at Barberton, which employ 115 men at the plant and keep eighteen men on the road, constantly erecting boilers all over the country. The output of the concern likewise reaches Africa and all the South American republics, and, indeed, nearly all parts of the world, and Mr. Pell is entitled to much credit for the excellence of the product.

Mr. Pell was united in marriage December 24, 1872, with Miss Sarah M. Wallaker, a native of Pittsburg, Pa., born June 23, 1854. To this union have been born four children, viz: Daniel W., who is an assistant to his father as a mechanical engineer; James B., a student in the Michigan university at Ann Arbor; Irene M. and Harry S., attending a private school. In religion the family affiliate with the Methodist Episcopal church. In politics Mr. Pell is a republican, but the engrossing cares of his responsible position precludes his taking any particularly active part in local politics.

OL. SIMON PERKINS (deceased) was born in Warren, Ohio, February 6, 1805, a son of Gen. Simon and Nancy (Bishop) Perkins, who were natives of Norwich, Conn., of Puritan descent, and who settled in Warren, Ohio, in 1803. Gen. Simon Perkins, during the war of 1812, was in command of the troops of northern Ohio, and at Warren was the agent of the Connecticut Western Reserve Land company. He was himself a very extensive landowner, and, as will be readily inferred, a personage of much prominence and influence.

Col. Simon Perkins was reared in Warren, was educated in its public schools, and began his business life as clerk for his father, with whom he later became associated in real estate transactions. In 1835 he came to Akron, where his business relationship with the general still continued, and, being himself also the owner of large tracts of land, was greatly interested in everything that pertained to the growth and development of Akron and the surrounding country. He was also extensively engaged in farming and live stock breeding, and in the latter capacity was instrumental in introducing some of the best breeds in the country and in creating a commendable competition in this line of industry. In 1839-40 Col. Perkins was a member of the state senate, and it was largely through his influence that the new county of Summit was erected in 1840. In 1841-42 he was representative from Summit county, during which term he secured the passage of the bill which submitted to the popular vote the question of locating the county seat. For ten years, between 1839 and 1877, he was a trustee of Portage township. was a charter member of the Akron Rural Cemetery association and one of its most active promoters from 1839 until his voluntary resignation in April, 1880, a period of fortyone years.

Col. Perkins was also one of the pioneer railroad promoters of Summit county, and was president of the Cleveland, Zanesville & Cincinnati (now the Cleveland, Akron & Columbus) company from March 11, 1851, to November 3, 1864, and then general superintendent until November 4, 1869, and sacrificed nearly all of his private fortune in upholding the credit and advancing the interests of the road; he was likewise a liberal contributor of land and money for parks and other public grounds, as well as to all the industrial, educational and benevolent enterprises, and most of these contributions were made voluntarily.

The marriage of Col. Perkins took place in September, 1832, to Miss Grace I. Tod, daughter of Judge George and Sally (Ingersoll) Tod and sister of the late governor of Ohio, David Tod. This marriage was blessed with eleven children, ten of whom reached the years of maturity, viz: Anna, George I., Simon, Alfred, Henry, Maria A. (Mrs. Charles Rawson), Grace T. (Mrs. Albert Lohmann), Thomas, Charles and David T. Of these children seven still survive.

The lamented death of this philanthropist and patriot occurred July 21, 1887, at the age of eighty-two years, five months and fifteen days, while that of his wife took place April 6, 1867, when fifty-six years and six days old. July 4, 1895, the city of Akron, in grateful remembrance of the deceased, erected a granite monument in Grace park, Akron, not as enduring, however, as the cherished names of Simon Perkins and Grace I. Tod, his wife.

W. PERRY, a well-known citizen of Barberton, Summit county, Ohio, was born in Scioto county, February 14, 1843, but passed away June 2, 1897. He bore a name made glorious in American history by his grandfather's uncle, Com. Oliver Hazard Perry, who won the signal naval victory over the British, near Sandusky, on lake Erie. September 13, 1813, in what is known as the second war for American independence.

Samuel Perry, grandfather of subject, was a farmer of Scioto county, and there was born his son, Nelson Perry, the father of subject, who received a good academic education, and for the major portion of his life was foreman of what was familiarly known as the Scioto iron furnace, and was also a contractor and shipper of pig iron.

He was also with Sherman on his march to the sea, and at Sharon, N. C., twice sustained gun-shot wounds while attempting to cross the river at that point, and thus manfully maintained the reputation of his family Ior warlike deeds until honorably disharged July 26, 1865, shortly after the close of the war.

August 30, 1865, Mr. Perry was united in wedlock with Miss Mahalia Dunlop, daughter of David and Sophia (Graves) Dunlop, and this happy union was blessed with the following children: Lorin, Congress, James E., Irene, Charles and Alhlining. For twentyfive years after his marriage Mr. Perry was engaged in canal-boat life, and in the fall of 1891 settled in Barberton, whither his good name and the fame of his brave deeds had preceded him, and where, as a republican, he was soon appointed deputy town marshal, and later night watchman of the Diamond Match factory, in which his sons are still employed in various capacities. Mr. Perry was a member of Lincoln commandery, U. V. U., and of the G. A. R., and although his family are comparatively but recent additions to the social circles of Barberton, they stand very high in the esteem of its members.

living, viz: Thomas G., William, Evan and Mary, the wife of Evan Jenkins. Of the deceased, John was a soldier in the Civil war.

Caleb Phillips, who was a farmer by vocation, brought his family to America in 1837, and first located in Milton, Trumbull county, Ohio, where he lived until about 1857, when they removed to Paris township, Portage county, where the father died March 23, 1869, at the age of seventy-seven years, having lost his wife January 7, 1866, at the age of seventy, members of the Congregational church, although the father had formerly been a deacon in the Baptist church.

Thomas G. Phillips was fourteen years of age when his father located in Trumbull county and was sixteen years old when he began learning the cabinetmaker's trade in Ravenna. His marriage took place in Freedom, Ohio, May 1, 1844, to Miss Delia Marion Hill, daughter of Rev. John and Laura (Bushnell) Hill, which union has been blessed with five children, of whom George M. is cashier of the First National bank of Northfield, Minn., which position he has held for twenty-five years; Morton H. married for his first wife Bertha Bethel, to which union was born one child, Clara Mabel, the mother dying when the child was still an infant; the second marriage of Morton H. was with Victoria Burleigh, who died December 30, 1896. To this union were born two daughters-Laura and Alice-now attending school at St. Catherine's, Canada, and the father is now a resident of Philadelphia; Laura M. is the wife of D. B. Beers, cashier of the First National bank of Bowling Green, Ohio, and is the mother of two children-Morris and Ella May; Lucy is the widow of Watson Smith, and has one son-Arthur Bushnell; Lizzie, the youngest child of Mr. and Mrs. Phillips, died in infancy. Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Phillips are members of the Methodist Episcopal church, and politically he is a republican. He has been a successful business man, and carried on the furniture trade from 1846 to 1872, with the exception of three years-1859 to 1862-and has also dealt extensively in real estate, purchasing lots, improving them and then selling. 1872 he was appointed agent for the Equitable Life Assurance society of the United States for Portage and Trumbull counties, and July 1, 1874, was appointed general agent for the state of Ohio. In speaking of his work Mr. Phillips remarks: "In 1872, at the age of fifty years, I entered the service of the Equitable Life Assurance society as a local agent in Ravenna, Ohio, and now, in 1897, report that during that time 1 have written 2,500 policies, of which I have settled 380fifty-two being death claims, the others being matured tontines, and settled with the persons assured." That equity has been the leading purpose of its managers from its inception, thirty-seven years ago, to its colossal proportions at the present time, is evidenced by its history being without a parallel in the history of the world; and, being conducted on principles indicated by its name, the Equitable is destined to bless the world for ages to come.

Mr. Phillips has been strictly honorable in all his dealings, and bears a reputation that is a credit to himself and family, as well as to the company he so ably represents.

Heman Buck, grandfather of subject, was born in Massachusetts December 16, 1792, and came to Ohio in 1811, with his father, Denton, who settled in Richfield township, Summit county. Heman Buck married the widow Worden, whose maiden name was Polly Mace. She was born in Schoharie county, N. Y., April 14, 1795, and died in Richfield, Ohio, April 16, 1874, having lost her husband October 11, 1852. The last named was a member of the One Hundred and Seventy-seventh Ohio volunteer infantry and died, from illness contracted while in the service, at Goldsboro, N. C., in 1865.

James E. Buck, father of subject, has lived on the Richfield township farm since his birth, and has here followed the peaceful pursuit of farming from boyhood, now owing 160 acres of excellent arable land, improved with all modern appliances, and equally excellent build-Mrs. Josephine Cynthia (Watkins) was the fourth daughter of a family of eight children by Lemon Watkins and Fanny A. (Kent) Watkins, viz: Sarah L. Becker, of Daytona. Fla.; Mary A. Ashlev, who died in Joliet, Ill.; Elvira F. Oviatt, of Lansing, Mich.; Josephine C. Orson Harry Buck, the subject proper of this memoir, passed through the common school of his district, and at the age of thirteen years entered the high school of Richfield Center, where he passed the better part of five years, passing his examination for a school-teacher in 1884, but, on account of his youth, was not granted a certificate until March, 1885, when he at once began the practice of the vocation at Osborn's Corners, and at the termination of his second term re-entered the high school for the winter term; the following fall and winter he taught in Northampton, then took a course in the Normal university at Ada; and then taught in Springfield township during the winter terms of 1888 and 1890, but declined further service in this capacity, and returned home. March 26, 1890, he married Miss Cora LaQuincy Randall, a former schoolmate of the high school in Richfield Center, born in Bath township February 21, 1868, and a daughter of Dr. Rufus and Eliza M. (Roberts, née Hull) Dr. Randall, a very popular physician of Bath township, was born in Medina county, Ohio, July 7, 1834, and was united in marriage with Mrs. Eliza Roberts in May, 1863. His health giving way somewhat, he renewed his vocation of teacher and taught in Ghent in 1894-95, and is now again teaching in the Bath Center school. While in Cleveland, Mr. and Mrs. Buck became members of the Epworth Memorial church, and Mr. Buck also joined Oak lodge, No. 77, K. of P. DDISON L. BOUGHTON, a highly respected and retired farmer of Bath township, Summit county, Ohio, was born on the farm he still occupies September 3, 1836, a son of Holley W. and Elmina (Miller) Boughton.

H. W. Boughton was a native of Victor, Ontario county, N. Y., was born November 4, 1806, and married Miss Elmina Miller, November 13, 1832. This lady was born in Massachusetts, March 17, 1811, and bore her husband two children-Romazo, November 12, 1834, and Addison L., the subject—born in the state of Ohio, as the parents came to this state immediately after marriage, arriving in Bath, May 31, 1833. On arrival Mr. Boughton bought and settled on the farm in Bath township now owned by Addison L., part of which he cleared and improved with the necessary buildings, and, although he began life a poor man, succeeded in realizing a competency, and died October 26, 1877, a republican in politics; his widow survived until October 30, 1892, when she passed away in the faith of the Baptist church, of which society she was a member from her earliest girlhood days.

Addison L. Boughton has never lived elsewhere than on the farm on which he was born and reared to manhood. December 22, 1861, he married Miss Melissa Thorp, who was born on January 5, 1840, a daughter of Manville B. and Fanny W. (Clark) Thorp, the former of whom was a native of the state of New York, was born February 7, 1808, and the latter, a native of Massachusetts, was born May 7, 1811. Mr. and Mrs. Thorp were married in the state of New York, November 1, 1832, and two years later came to Bath township, Summit county, Both the Boughton and the Thorp families are of patriotic stock, the paternal grandfather of our subject, John Boughton, having served in the American army in the war of 1812, and the paternal grandfather of Mrs. Boughton, Jeremiah Thorp, having served in the same war, and her great-grandfather, Nathan Thorp, in the war of the Revolution. Manville Thorp died March 9, 1891, and his wife on March 16, 1886, after having reared in respectability five children, viz: Junius M., born November 25, 1833; Lucien G., born August 6, 1835; Francis M., born January 2, 1837, and Oliver N. and Melissa L. (twins), born on January 5, 1840. The union of Mr. and Mrs. Addison L. In politics Mr. Boughton is a stanch republican and cast his first presidential vote for Lincoln; he and his wife are members of Osborn Corners grange, No. 1079, of which they were among the first. Mr. Boughton has always been very industrious and attentive to his business, and in consequence has been very successful in all his undertakings. During his active days on the farm he made a specialty of sheep-raising and was always fond of a good horse. He has now retired from very active work and is living in quite enjoyment of the competency earned in the days of his activity, enjoying the unfeigned esteem of all his fellow-citizens, which esteem is equally shared by his wife and child.

Officially, he has never aspired to office, but has served as member of the school board for years. Mr. and Mrs. Boughton are devout members of the Methodist Episcopal church, of Mura's chapel, West Bath, in which he has occupied several offices and has been a class leader for years. Mr. and Mrs. Boughton reside on the old homestead one mile west of Hammond's Corners, five and one-half miles from the city of Akron. They are comfortably located amid friends and expect to spend their remaining days in peace.

★ HAFER CARR, a well-known and highly respected citizen of Bath township, Summit county, Ohio, is a native of the Buckeye state, and was born in Lawrence township, Stark county, March 11, 1817, a son of Samuel and Catherine (Shafer) Carr. Samuel Carr was thrice married, Catherine Shafer being his first wife, who bore him eight children-William, Philip, Maria, John, Joseph, Samuel, Shafer and By his second wife, who bore the maiden name of Betsey Brown, he became the father of three children—Catherine, Jacob and Lucinda. His third marriage was with Mrs. Catherine Waltenberger, who bore him two children—Benjamin and Abraham.

Shafer Carr was but two years of age when his mother died, and he was thereafter taken care of by his grandmother Evans who was to him a true and kind second mother until her death. At the age of fifteen years, Shafer Carr began learning the cabinetmaker's trade under Thomas Cunningham, a contractor, served an apprenticeship of two years, and then learned carpentry under a brother, and alternated the winters and summers in the two trades until his coming to Bath township, Summit county, in the last week of November, 1839. Here he married, February 27, 1840, Miss Electa King, who was born April 3, 1816, in Chesterfield, Hampshire county, Mass., and is a daughter of Eleazer and Mercy (Kingsley) King, both natives of Massachusetts, born, respectively, February 2, 1776, and August 23, 1774, and settlers in Bath township, Summit county, Ohio, in 1833. The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Carr has been blessed with three children, viz: Mercy, born December 2, 1841, and married to Samuel Tilton, a farmer of Lincoln, Neb.; Lucy, born November 27, 1842, now the wife of James W. Ellsworth, a business man of Cleveland, Ohio, and Ozro B., born June 18, 1845, and now residing on the homestead with his parents.

Just after marriage Mr. Carr bought thirty acres of wild land, hewed from it the logs with which he erected his cabin and other necessary buildings, but in 1854 sold the place and bought his present home. He has made all he possesses by his own hard labor, beginning carpentry work at fifty cents per day and walking from four to ten miles daily to and from his work; later he began contracting, and is now one of the wealthiest men in the township. Mr. and Mrs. Carr are Baptists in religion, and Mr. Carr in politics is strongly republican, and his first presidential vote was cast for "Tippecanoe and Tyler, too."

Ozro B. Carr, youngest child of Shafer and Electa Carr, was reared on the home farm, was educated in the district and high schools of Richfield and at Berea college, and later took a business course at Cleveland. mained at home until 1863, when he enlisted in the "Pioneer" brigade, but at the end of five months was honorably discharged at Murfreesboro, Tenn., on account of sickness. May, 1864, he re-enlisted, was assigned to company A, One Hundred and Sixty-second Ohio volunteer infantry, was mustered in at Camp Chase, Ohio, and served until the close of the war. In 1865 he began learning the jeweler's trade at Massillon, Ohio, and then started in business in Richfield. October 17, 1872, he married Miss Mary A. Viall, who was born July 20, 1849, a daughter of Burrill and Jane (White) Viall, the former of whom was born October 2, 1821, and died April 12, 1895, and the latter born February 7, 1823, and died July 15, 1894—the parents of seven children, viz: Sarah I., Mattie J., Mary A., Julia F., Lucy E., Kittie E. and Jennie M. The marriage of Ozro B. Carr has resulted in the birth of two children, viz: Burrill V., who was born November 3, 1873, and died October 8, 1881, and Lucy E., born November 10, 1879—now at home and studying voice culture and being, indeed, already an accomplished vocalist.

In 1877 Mr. Carr removed his stock from Richfield, where he had done business for six years, and opened a jewelry story in Cuyahoga Falls, where he did the leading business in his line for thirteen years, and in 1890 removed to Kokomo, Ind., where he had the misfortune of losing his left eye by the breaking of the main spring of a motor he was handling. He then sold out his stock, in 1893, and returned to the homestead in Bath township, Summit county, Ohio, and this he has since made his home, being engaged in the roofing business.

Mrs. Carr is a member of the Congregational church of Cuyahoga Falls, and in politics Mr. Carr takes an active part in supporting the republican party, and cast his first presidential vote for Gen. Grant. Fraternally he is a member of Goldwood post, No. 104, G. A. R., at Richfield, Ohio. The male members of the Carr family are noted for their magnificent physical proportions and for their longevity, and socially the entire family stand with the most select of the inhabitants of Bath township, being universally held in the highest esteem.

ARK HEATH DAVIS, one of the most active and prominent business men of Kent, is a native of Portage county, Ohio, and was born in Freedom township May 24, 1858, a son of Joseph C. and Augusta M. (Gray) Davis, natives, respectively, of Massachusetts and Pennsylvania.

The great-grandfather of subject was a gallant soldier in the war of the Revolution, and was captain of a company of patriots in the continental army who served throughout that victorious struggle for American independence. Isaac C. Davis, the grandfather of subject, married Marie Heath in New England, and in 1828 came to Ohio and settled in Freedom township, Portage county, where he became the owner, in course of time, of 3,000 acres of land. He was a mighty hunter and an expert rifle-shot, and in one winter killed thirty-seven deer, near his dooryard, so plentiful were the animals at that early day in Portage county. He was a democrat in politics and a leader of the ranks of his party in Freedom township.

Joseph C. Davis, father of subject, was reared a farmer, but in early manhood became a manufacturer and also a traveling salesman. He finally settled down to the noble calling to which he was reared, and is now a prosperous agriculturist of Hiram township, where he and wife are passing their declining years. Beside Mark Heath, the subject, they have two other children, viz: Addie, married to George Kent, of Freedom township, and Plymmon, agent for the Erie Railway company.

Mark Heath Davis was reared on the home farm until about thirteen years of age, when he started out in life on his own responsibility, and for ten years made a livelihood as salesman. During this period he supplemented his common-school education by an attendance at Hiram college. In February, 1882, he came to Kent and purchased a small clothing store, and from this germ has grown his present colossal trade, on North Water street, where, about 1888, he permanently located. spacious block in which his stores are located he bought some four years ago. This block is two stories high, and on the first floor there are two finely appointed storerooms, one occupied by a stove firm and the other by himself. The one he occupies is 116 feet long and twenty-two wide; it is heavily stocked with a finer collection of men's garments and ladies' and gentlemen's leather footwear than is ordinarily found outside of the metropolitan emporiums. Only the finer makes of shoes, including Edwin C. Burt for ladies and Burt & Packard for men, are handled; and in the immense stock of clothing carried nothing shoddy is to be found, all the garments being of durable quality and stylish pattern; and there is not a mercantile mart of any kind in this section of greater magnitude or presenting truer signs of a wide-awake and intelligent management. It is artistically finished in quartered oak, is finely lighted at night by electricity, and in the cold weather is heated throughout by steam. In fact, this was the first store in Portage county in which steamheating apparatus was adopted.

November 9, 1881, Mr. Davis was united in marriage with Miss Ella Tilden, a native of Hiram township and daughter of DeWitt Clinton and Catherine (Vrooman) Tilden, natives of Herkimer county, N. Y. The greatgrandfather of this lady, when a member of the Massachusetts legislature, was the author of the free-school laws which now prevail over the United States. Her parents early came to Ohio and settled in Hiram township, Portage county, He was a hotel-keeper and also a tanner, and in the latter pursuit realized a fortune, and retired, in 1885, to his extensive farm, on which he died in 1895. He was prominent as a democrat; and in 1876 was elected a presidential elector. Naturally, he cast his ballot in the college for his kinsman, Samuel J. Tilden. His widow now lives in Troy township, Geauga county, Ohio. the marriage of Mark H. Davis and wife have been born two children—Jessie and Grover.

Fraternally, Mr. Davis is a member of the I. O. O. F., holding a degree in the encampment and the patriarchs militant, and also is a member of lodge No. 18, Benevolent & Protective Order of Elks. Politically he is a natural-born democrat, but has never sought office for the glory of the thing, yet has served as a member of the board of improvements. As a business man he has been one of the most energetic and successful in Kent. He is a director in the City bank, was one of the originators of and is a fourth owner of the Kent opera house, which was built in 1889 at a cost of $23,000, and has a seating capacity of 1,000, of which he is also manager. The Odd Fellow lodge and Cycle club rooms are also in this building. He is vice-president of the Shattuck Chair company, a stockholder in the Miller Keyless Lock company, secretary of the Odd Fellows' Building association, a member of the local board of health, a director of the Portage county Agricultural association, and has always been a leader in public improvements and a thorough representative of our later civilization, and enjoys the respect and good will of the entire community, and because of his genial nature wins hosts of friends and patrons.

DeWitt Clinton Tilden, the father of Mrs. Davis, came to Ohio in 1853, and purchased property in Geauga county, once owned by his grandfather, Col. Daniel Tilden, who was a renowned leader in the Revolutionary war, and who also surveyed the western reserve of northeast Ohio for the Connecticut Land company, and was likewise the member of the Massachusetts legislature who introduced the free-school bill alluded to in a preceding para-In 1865 DeWitt C. Tilden retired to Troy, Geauga county, and still later came to Portage county, and here his earthly career came to a close December 31, 1894. He was a man of sound judgment, business tact, industry and integrity, and void of all hypocrisy. In politics he was a democrat and stood firm on all subjects that came within the range of his reasoning faculties. He discarded all church creeds, choosing rather to find salvation through good deeds and a well-spent life, than through pinning his faith to church dogmas. He was prompt to commend the right and to censure the wrong; was a reliable friend, a loving husband and kind father, and reared his four children to correct habits and in respectability. These all reached maturity and three still survive, viz: Rose, wife of Prof. W. P. Cope, of Hamilton, Ohio; Ella, wife of Mark H. Davis, and George, a resident of Hiram, Ohio.

ILLIAM DAVIS, the well-known justice of the peace of Bath township, is a native of England, a Lincolnshire man, born October 27, 1839, son of William and Ann (Sewell) Davis, information concerning whom is contained in the biographical sketch of George S. Davis. There are few better known or more personally popular men in the county than "Squire". Davis, and his life has contained some very interesting incidents. He came to this country with his parents, about 1844 or '45, when he was but five years of age, and remained with them until he was of age. In 1861 William Davis began to learn the carpenter's trade, but was almost immediately diverted from this intention by the call of his adopted country, and he enlisted, on October 3, 1861, at Akron, Ohio, in company H, Twenty-ninth Ohio volunteer infantry. This regiment went into camp at Giddings, Ashtabula county, Ohio, and first saw the actual conflict of war at Winchester, Va. Its next engagement was at Fort Republic, Tenn. While on guard duty over the railroad at Lavergne, Tenn., Mr. Davis was captured by the rebels and taken to Meridian, Miss., being transferred thence to Cahaba, Ala., where he was compelled to remain until April, 1865, at which time he was paroled and taken to Vicksburg. Being taken on board the side-wheel steamer, "Sultana," Mr. Davis made his escape from the crowded boat at the time its boilers exploded by leaping from the top of the wheel-house into the river below. Being a tireless swimmer and a person of great physical endurance, the daring man eluded detection by remaining in the water a remarkable length of time, quietly floating down stream. He finally landed safe and free from detection at Memphis, having floated down the stream nine miles. Mr. Davis' soldier's record was almost four years' actual service, during which time he spent about four months in the rebel prison pens. He received his honorable discharge May 23, 1865, at Columbus, Ohio. After his army experience Mr. Davis returned home and resumed his work at the carpenter's bench, taking up the trade with his old comrade, Perry Alexander.

On Christmas day, 1866, Mr. Davis was united in marriage to Miss Mildred L. Martin, who was born in Bath township, March 2. 1847, the daughter of Alexander and Sarah (Neely) Martin, the former of whom was a carpenter and who was born in Washington county, Pa., in 1801, the son of Robert Martin, who came from Ireland when a lad of fifteen and settled in Pennsylvania; the latter was born in Belmont county, Ohio, in 1808, and they were married in Pennsylvania in 1834. Mr. and Mrs. Davis are the parents of the following children: Ruby S., born August 29, 1871, wife of Wilbur Burgan, and resides at Ghent; Carl L., born February 20, 1874; Neale M., born May 16, 1881, died November 11, 1882; Walter Ray, born April 25, 1884. and one child who died in infancy. Both are active members of the Disciples' church at East Granger and charter members of Bath grange, lodge No. 1331. Mr. Davis is a member of Buckley post, No. 12, G. A. R., of Akron, Ohio. He is a strong republican, and cast his first presidential vote for Lincoln. Beside his present office of justice of the peace he served as township treasurer for nine years and has been a member of the school board for about eighteen years. His fine farm of sixty acres is a model one, and with its recent improvements in the way of new buildings and modern appliances affords him and his excellent family an admirable and very pleasant home, ten miles from the city of Akron.

Mrs. Davis received her education in the common schools. There were only two daughters in her father's family: was the wife of Henry Duryee, wedded in Bath. She died in 1857, leaving one daughter, Nettie, wife of G. B. Shaw. They are residents of Bath township. Alex. Martin, her father, was a native of Washington county, Pa., born September 12, 1801, and died July 5, 1855. He was educated in the common schools, and was a self-made man. He was a carpenter by trade and a farmer by occupation. He came to Ohio May 12, 1839, and located in Bath township. Politically he was a whig. He was, as well as his wife, a charter member of the Disciples' church of East Granger.

EORGE S. DAVIS, the largest farmer and stock dealer in Bath township, and one of the most influential and widely respected citizens of Summit county, was born in New York state, November 21, 1845. His father, William Davis, was born in Burns, Lincolnshire, England, April 14, 1809, and on May 16, 1833, married Ann Sewell, who was born at the same place about 1814. They came to this country in July, 1845, locating in New York state. The following children were born to them in England: Jane, April 10, 1843, wife of I. S. King; Mary, February 16, 1836, wife of S. E. Taylor; John,

January 21, 1838; William, October 27, 1839; Thomas, December 2, 1841; Ann, November 15, 1843, widow of I. H. Miller, and now widow of L. V. Wyckoff. Following are the American-born children: George S., the subject of this sketch; Sarah D., December 13, 1847, wife of George Bisbee; Elizabeth, December 25, 1849, wife of Abraham Spencer; Emma E., September 6, 1852, wife of Sylvester Vallen; Alpha, December 3, 1854, wife of Frank Pierson; Clara B., January 6, 1857, wife of Charles Deitz. This large family of children are all living except Thomas, who was killed in the service of his country at the battle of Pine Knob, Ga., June 15, 1864, after having done valuable service with Sherman in all his battles from beginning to end. after their arrival in this country the family came to Summit county and purchased a farm in Bath township, which was partly cleared. On this Mr. Davis erected a new house and barn and made a very pleasant, comfortable home for his family. He was a strong republican, and a niember of the Odd Fellows both in England and America, and they were both earnest members of the Disciples' church. They were excellent people, active in advancing the social and moral welfare of the community, and their memories will live long after He died August 14, 1888, his wife having preceded him to the grave nearly twenty years, dying March 12, 1867.

George S. Davis was reared on the farm and received a good common-school education. As a young man he worked at the carpenter's trade, continuing in that occupation for six years. On February 12, 1873, he married Miss Mary Barker, who was born September 10, 1848, daughter of Jared and Eleanor (Munson) Barker. Facts relating to the genealogy of Mrs. Davis are contained in the biographical sketch of Jared Barker. To Mr. and Mrs. Davis have been born the following children: Eleanor Belle, born January 30, 1874, died October 30, 1883; Jay, December 31, 1879; Jeddie, April 21, 1882; Mary, February 27, 1884; George, September 15, 1885; Anna, August 10, 1887; Paul, May 2, 1889. Upon his marriage Mr. Davis abandoned the carpenter's trade and began farming. He now owns one of the very best farms in the county, comprising 300 acres, improved in a strictly up-to-date manner. He gives a large degree of attention to the breeding of fine cattle, the excellence of his sheep and cattle strains being widely recognized. To facilitate this important industry he has on his farm five large barns, arranged with every convenience for the care and proper raising of stock. He has lately turned his attention to raising fine horses, and now has some very fine Morgan and English coach horses. He probably owns more fine stock than any man in Bath township. His farm buildings are models of their character, and his home is not only delightfully situated, but is extremely pleasant, and is much sought in the community. Mr. Davis is a strong republican, and cast his first presidential vote for Gen. Grant, but is of a retiring disposition and mingles little in politics. and wife are both members of the Congregational church at Bath, and he is a member of the board of education.

ALTER J. DICKINSON, a retired merchant and a prominent citizen of Rootstown, was born in Randolph, Portage county, Ohio, January 27. 1832, and was educated in the common schools. His parents were Alpheus and Mary (Johnson) Dickinson, the former of whom was born in East Granville, Mass., in 1794, and was brought by his parents to Randolph township, Portage county, Ohio, July 17, 1805, where his father, Oliver Dickinson, bought 600 acres of wild land. This land Oliver farmed, in conjunction with his three brothers, until his death, May 12, 1887, when the property descended to his four sons and three daughters, and representatives of the family still occupy the original homestead.

Walter J. Dickinson was reared in the family of an uncle, who was a merchant, and grew to manhood in an atmosphere of trade, alternately attending school and acting as clerk. At the age of twenty-one years he engaged in merchandizing on his own account in his native town, and there continued until his retirement in 1888, having, however, removed to Rootstown in the fall of 1887, and here since occupied his present commodious home. Mr. Dickinson first married, January 28, 1853, Miss Almina H. Chatfield, who was born in Killingworth, Conn., May 11, 1834, a daughter of Lewis and Rachael Chatfield. Mrs. Dickinson died July 17, 1882, the mother of six children, two of whom died in infancy. The eldest of those living is Mary Elmina, who was born July 1, 1856, and was married in October, 1892, to James H. Chatfield, a real estate agent, police justice and notary public, of Littleton, Colo.; Alpheus Lyman was born November 17, 1859, married Ida Cavender December 1, 1880, and is bookkeeper in the Seiberling Empire works, at Akron, Ohio; Selden Curtis was born June 5, 1864, was educated in Oberlin college, taking a thorough philosophical and theological course, was ordained minister of the Congregational church and was stationed at Rico, Colo., in 1890-92; in the fall of the latter year he returned to Ohio, and since May, 1893, has been preaching for the Presbyterian church in Willoughby; he married, in October, 1892, Miss Kittie Sharp, of Montrose, Colo. Rachel, the youngest of the family, was born August 20, 1869, and is still at home with her Dickinson took place August 31, 1887, to Miss Dotha C. Seymour, a native of Rootstown, Ohio, and a daughter of James W. and Charlotte N. Sevmour.

Mr. Dickinson has always taken an active interest in the affairs of Portage county, and to him is largely due the excellent article on Randolph township, published in the history of the county in 1885, which he is now preparing for re-publication. He has been an ardent republican and has labored hard for republican success. He served about twentyfive years as township trustee of Randolph township; he also served as justice of the peace in that township and is now serving in same office in Rootstown township, and was also postmaster of Randolph eight years under Lincoln. Mr. Dickinson and his family are members of the Congregational church, of which he became a communicant in Randolph in 1852, and he and wife are now united with the congregation of that denomination in Rootstown, Mr. Dickinson being a trustee and also clerk of the same, and treasurer of the society. He was formerly a member of the know-nothing society, the Temple of Honor and the Sons of Temperance. He has been an active worker in the temperance cause, and is a gentleman of the strictest integrity and uprightness of character, and no man in Portage county bears a better reputation than he, and no one better merits it. It may be added, to the credit of subject, that his ancestry is traceable to England, and that the first American, by adoption, landed in Massachusetts about 1632, and bore the name of Nathaniel Dickinson. The great-grandfather of subject, Richard Dickinson, was a direct descendant of Nathaniel, and died in East Granville, Mass., in 1815, at the age of eighty years. The family has been characterized, physically, of medium height and of fair complexion, and father. The second marriage of Walter J. | mentally with that peculiar fixedness of purpose which, although not combined with obstinacy, is determined, and never wavers in either politics or religion.

H. GRAHAM, M. D., of West Richfield, Summit county, Ohio, is a native of Iowa, was born December 7, 1860, and is of English descent. The family were Quakers, or members of the Society of Friends, and their genealogy is traced in England back to 1694, the record being as follows: Robert Graham, born first month, twenty-fifth day, 1694; married 1728; date of death unknown. John Graham, son of above, born 1735; married to a Miss Hodgson, and lived in Highburn Thwaite, parish St. Cuthbert, near Carlisle, Cumberland county, died at an unknown date, leaving ten children. Thomas Graham, son of the above John, was born eleventh month, sixteenth day, 1788, came to Halifax, N. S., in 1816, moved to Welland county, Ont., in 1817; married Hannah, daughter of Jesse and Anna Willson, twelfth month, eighth day, 1819, lived in the town of Thorold, in the same county, until 1838, when he moved to the township of Boyham, now in the county of Elgin, Ont., whence he moved to Yarmouth, Elgin, in March, 1847, lived near the city of St. Thomas on the farm now owned by Robert Graham, where he died March 16, 1873, leaving a family of five sons and two daughters. Jesse Graham, son of Thomas, was born in the town of Thorold, Welland county, Ont., April 13, 1829, was married, in 1850, to Eleanor, daughter of Samuel and Martha Hathaway, and about 1855 came to the United States and settled in Dyersville, Dubuque county, Iowa, where he died April 20, 1864, leaving five sons, viz: born August 18,1851; Alfred W., March 14, 1855; Edward B., March 4, 1857; Dr. Samuel H., subject, and Jesse, born November 21, 1862.

Dr. S. H. Graham was primarily educated in the district schools of Dubuque county, Iowa, and at Coe college at Cedar Rapids, entered the university of Michigan at Ann Arbor in 1887, and graduated from the medical department in 1890. He immediately began practice in West Richfield, Summit county, Ohio, where he has won a host of friends and is recognized as one of the ablest physicians and surgeons of the county. He married Miss Emma E. Palmer, daughter of Frederick and Mary (Harris) Palmer. This lady was born in Richfield, August 3, 1867, was educated in the district school and at Baldwin university, of which she is a graduate, and is now the happy mother of one bright little daughter—Mary Ellen, born September 22, 1892.

IRAM HART, a prosperous farmer of Richfield township, Summit county, Ohio, is a native of Windham county, Vt., and was born November 4, 1833, a son of Hiram and Mary (Hyde) Hart, both natives of Vermont and the parents of five children, viz: Hubbard L.; Jennette L., who was first married to James Murphy, and next to Frank Adams, a fruit grower of Florida; Mary L., wife of Charles Crosby, of Boston, Mass., an attorney at law, now deceased; Hiram, the subject of this notice, and Amos, employed in the patent office at Washington, D. C.

Hiram Hart, father of subject, was born in 1803, and was a son of Amos Hart, a native of England and a blacksmith by trade. Hiram Hart was a well-educated gentleman, was a strong republican, and was sheriff of Windham county, Vt., at the time when the last culprit in the county was executed before the law abolishing capital punishment in the state went into effect. He died in 1865, in the faith of the Episcopalian church, and the death of his widow took place in Washington, D. C., in 1878.

Hiram Hart, the subject, was employed in farming in his native state until nineteen years old, and then worked in a store for a year. In 1852 he went south, and for a year drove stage between Savannah and Darien, Ga., a distance of sixty-two miles. On his return home, he first married, November 7, 1854, Miss Jeannette Stearns, a daughter of Isaiah and Jemima (Hines) Stearns, natives of the Green Mountain state. In the spring of 1855, Mr. Hart came to Ohio and purchased the farm of 127 acres in Richfield township on which he still resides, and the most of which he has cleared up and improved with modern buildings. To his marriage with Miss Stearns were born two children, viz: Emma E., July 20, 1864, now the wife of Henry Gargett, a farmer of Richfield township, and Elmer S., January 8, 1866, now residing in Spokane Falls, Wash. In July, 1866, Mrs. Jeannette Hart was called from earth, and for his second life companion Mr. Hart chose Miss Arlette A. Clark, whom he married January 8, 1867. This lady was born August 12, 1839, in Twinsburg, Summit county, a daughter of Park B. and Nancy (Peck) Clark, and granddaughter of Leverett and Amy (Warner) Clark, who came from Connecticut in 1823 and settled in Twinsburg township, Summit county, Ohio, bringing their nine children—Ann, John, William, Burke, Phila, Park B., Mabel, Elmore W. and Leverett. To the second marriage of Mr. Hart have been born six children, viz: Arthur C., February 3, 1869, a veterinary surgeon of Richfield; Dana H., December 17, 1870; Kenneth Roy, February 24, 1873—died February 18, 1888; Carroll P., September 15, 1874; Gratia C., February 3, 1876, and Mary, February 28, 1882.

In politics Mr. Hart is a very popular republican, and has held several offices of honor and trust, among which is that of county commissioner, to which he was elected in the fall of 1879 and re-elected in 1882, serving six consecutive years, and proving to be one of the best officials Summit county ever had. The family are all well educated and Mr. and Mrs. Hart mingle with the best circles of Richfield township, among whom they have many warm friends.

OSWELL HOPKINS, one of the largest land owners and most successful citizens of Bath township, was born on the farm which he now owns. December 18, 1872. He is a descendant of an early pioneer family and is as honorable a representative of his day and generation as were his ancestors of theirs, and is rightly entitled to consideration as one of the best young citizens of the township. His grandfather, Isaac Hopkins, was a New Yorker by birth and lived in that state until he was of age, when he went to Pennsylvania, where he met and married Susan Harrison. On the 10th of October 1813—that memorable day which witnessed Perry's notable victory on lake Erie-Isaac and his bride took up their journey westward, bound for a location in Bath township. Traveling in those days was not done by palace car, and it took them six weeks to reach their destination with their slow-plodding oxen. They located in the southwestern portion of the township, where they purchased quite a tract of land, and then began the struggle with primeval conditions, rendered all the more severe by the period of financial depression which marked that time. By the greatest care and strictest economy, however, he was able to maintain his property and a large measure of success finally attended his This worthy pioneer died in 1852, full of honor and respected throughout the whole region. His wife followed him to the grave ten years later. They had reared a family of eight children. Roswell, the father of our subject, was born April 3, 1825, and the struggles and environments of his youth precluded any other than a limited education, of which, however, he made the most. October 8, 1846, he was married to Miss Elizabeth Lee, a native of New York state, born December 18, 1828. His wedding suit was of homespun, and the other conditions surrounding his early married life were in keeping. He kept to the farm until 1870, when he engaged in the lumber business, at which he was quite successful. To this union were born ten children, viz: George, Wait, Ira, Burt, Ami, Cecil, Edna, Irene, Grant, Emma. Of these Ami is the sole survivor. His wife having died, he married, May 1, 1870, Emily (Briggs) Case, widow of George Case. Mrs. Hopkins was born in New York state May 6, 1833. She was the daughter of Truman and Abigail (French) Briggs, both natives of Taunton, Mass., the former born November 8, 1792, and the latter July 11, 1792. They were married at Taunton in 1820, and died, the former at Sharon, Medina county, Ohio, June 13, 1874, and the latter January 7, 1871. They had the following children: Henry, born May 9, 1821, now residing in Illinois; Sophia, born March 3, 1823, wife of L. Chatfield, now living in Kansas; Abigail, born July 15, 1824died in Michigan August 1, 1866; Otis, born in 1827, now residing in Iowa; Samuel E., born March 30, 1830, now a resident of Iowa; Emily A. (our subject's mother), born May 6, 1833; Melissa A., born May 14, 1839, died February 1, 1895. The Briggses settled at Wadsworth, Ohio, in 1835 and in 1851 moved to Sharon township. Our subject's parents were both members of the Disciples' church. Mr. Hopkins was a strong republican until a few years before his death, when he changed his views in favor of the prohibition party. He died November 25, 1894 and his wife January 7, 1886.

Roswell, our subject, has all his life lived on the home farm, which is now his. trict-school education was supplemented by a course in the high school at Richfleld, and he keeps thoroughly informed and abreast of the His farm comprises 256 acres of excellent land, which he has taken pride in improving highly. In addition to his farming interests he owns a well-equipped saw-mill, which forms an important industry in that community. His home is pleasantly situated one mile west of Ghent, where he is surrounded by latter day comforts to his taste. On June 6, 1894, Mr. Hopkins was united in marriage to Miss Ossie Pierson, who was born August 31, 1875, the daughter of Frank and Alfa (Davis) Pierson. To this union have been born Cecil, March 5, 1895, and Ruth, April 12, 1896. Both Mr. and Mrs. Hopkins are members of the Disciples' church, and are active in all the works of that organization. They are a greatly admired young couple and stand very high in the esteem of the community in which they dwell.

LPHONSO HART HALLOCK, chief bridge builder and contractor on the Cleveland & Pittsburg branch of the Pennsylvania railroad, which position he has held since 1884, was born in Rootstown, Portage county, Ohio, his present place of residence, February 15, 1857, a son of Gibbs and Mary Meliss (McKelvey) Hallock.

Gibbs Hallock was a native of Palmyra township, Portage county, and was born in 1824. He was educated in the district schools of Palmyra, was a contractor and bridge builder, and did a great deal of bridge work for the counties of Portage and Summit, being an expert in his profession. July 13, 1849, he married Miss Mary M. McKelvey, the union resulting in the birth of ten children, viz: Alphonso, William Hiram and Blanche, all of Rootstown; Mrs. Williams, Mrs. Hardin and Mrs. Bow, of Ravenna; Mrs. Cope, Nelson and Lawrence G., of Wheeling, W. Va., and Edith Irene, who died in infancy. The father of these children was called from earth in 1873, and was, at the time of his death, one of the oldest members of the Odd Fellows' lodge at Ravenna, and one of the most respected citizens of his township. His widow, who was born in Palmyra, Portage county, January 6, 1830, survived until December 29, 1896, when she expired in the faith of the Methodist church.

Alphonso Hart Hallock attended the district schools of Rootstown until thirteen years of age, when he began learning the trade of stonecutting under his father, acquired a thorough knowledge of the art, and for many years was an assistant of his father in carrying on his heavy contracts in Portage and Summit counties. Since beginning business on his own account, Mr. Hallock has built a number of bridges for the Connotton Valley railroad, now known as the Cleveland, Canton & Southern railway; the masonry work on the Ohio River road from Parkersburg to Wheeling, W. Va.; also for the Pittsburg & Harrisburg railroad. The latter was abandoned nine months after commencing it, but not until Mr. Hallock had fulfilled his contract with the company. In conjunction with his brother, L. G. Hallock, of Wheeling, W. Va., under the firm name of Hallock Bros., subject built the large cantilever bridge of the Central Bridge company across the Ohio river at Cincinnati, connecting that city with Newport, Ky., which bridge is considered to be one of one of the best in the country; he also built the stone arch bridge at Main and Sixteenth streets, Wheeling, W. Va., over the Wheeling creek. This is the third largest stone arch bridge in the world—its total length being 313 feet, and length of arch 159 feet; width, forty-eight feet, cost, $129,000. These constitute but a small fraction of the contracts filled by Mr. Hallock, and are mentioned merely to show what class of work he and his brother are capable of executing.

The marriage of A. H. Hallock took place at Ravenna December 3, 1879, to Miss Rose Palin, who was born in Rootstown December 13, 1859, a daughter of Adam and Eve (Bouch) Palm, the former of whom is deceased. this union four children have been born, viz: Dwight Raymond, October 1, 1882; Mary Lewis, April 8, 1886; Grover Cleveland, March 4, 1889—died December 26, 1896, from injuries incurred from a fall from a wagon; Gibbs Palm, born November 23, 1893. Hallock is a member of the Royal Arcanum, Ravenna council, No. 396. In politics he is a democrat, but has never aspired to public office; and while he is not united in memberbership with any religious body, he leads an upright life and is honored by all who know him for his strict integrity.

ENRY P. KLINE, a prominent and prosperous young agriculturist of Randolph township, Portage county, Ohio, of which he is a native, was born June 22, 1868, a son of George A. and Mary (Rettig) Kline, whose biographical record will be made in paragraphs yet to follow.

Henry P. Kline, whose name opens this memoir, received an excellent education in the district and high schools of Randolph, and was reared to manhood on his father's farm. At the age of twenty-two years he went to Canton, Ohio, and served an apprenticeship of five years at iron and steel roofing, which he still follows, to some extent, in addition to his farming operations. October 20, 1891, he married Miss Clara Straub, a daughter of Alois and Elizabeth (Eisenhauer) Straub, the result of the union being the birth of Louretta M., October 30, 1892, Alvin A., December 15, 1894, and Emma L., June 3, 1897. three years after marriage Mr. Kline continued exclusively to follow the roofing business and then settled on his present farm, which he had purchased in 1893, and now has one of the best cultivated places of its dimensions in Randolph township.

George A. Kline, father of Henry P., was born in Suffield, Portage county, Ohio, October 10, 1840, a son of George Kline, who was born in Germany. George A. passed his early days, after a due course of education in the district school, in coal mining, but later became a farmer. September 17, 1867, his first marriage took place in Randolph to Miss Mary Rettig, daughter of Andrew and Theressa Rettig, and to this marriage were born four children, viz: Henry P., the subject of this sketch; Edward G., born January 18, 1870; Lewis A., born December 20, 1872, and John D., born December 24, 1873. The mother of these children was called from earth, in the faith of the Catholic church, June 6, 1877, at the early age of twenty-seven years, deeply mourned by her bereaved husband and orphaned children, all then in tender years. To guard over these and to assist in rearing them properly, the father selected for his second bride Miss Mary Horning, a daughter of Andrew and Mary (Rothermel) Horning, to whom he was united in matrimony October 30, 1877, and this union has resulted in the birth, also, of four children, viz: Leo, born April 16, 1879; Clara, August 3, 1880; Frona, June 24, 1882, and Lizzie L., October 23, 1884. In connection with farming, George A. Kline has for the past five years been employed by the Peerless Reaper company, of Canton, and is as good a business man as he is a farmer. In politics he is a democrat and has served as township supervisor, and for the past twenty years has beed a member of the board of school directors; he has also been a member of the board of councilmen, and is in every way a good and useful citizen. In religion he is a true and sincere Catholic.

George Kline, paternal grandfather of Henry P., was born June 6, 1811, and came to the United States a single man. He settled in Suffield township, Portage county, and walked with his intended bride twenty miles, in order to have the ceremony performed at Canton. To his marriage were born five children—John, Peter, Barbara (Mrs. Adam Rothermel), George A. and Betsey—the last named dying October 31, 1894, the wife of George Ley, who is also deceased. Grandfather Kline died August 23, 1870, at the age of fifty-nine years, and his widow March 26, 1886, aged seventy-six years, both in the faith of the Catholic church.

Peter Kline, great-grandfather of subject, was born September 8, 1804, and his wife March 1, 1806, came from Germany to America, and were among the early settlers of Randolph township, Portage county, Ohio, and here died October 6, 1885, and June 20, 1890, aged, respectively, eighty-one and eighty-four years.

Andrew Rettig, maternal grandfather of Henry P. Kline, was born in Baden, Germany, July 12, 1821, and his wife June 7, 1828. He married Theressa Rothermel June 9, 1846, who bore him two children, both now deceased. Andrew Rettig died February 23, 1893, aged seventy-one years, but his widow is still living in Randolph at the age of seventy.

Mrs. Clara (Straub) Kline, wife of Henry P., our subject, was born in Akron, Ohio, November 7, 1871. Her father was a native of Baden, Germany, was born September 11, 1826, and at the age of sixteen years began work as a manufacturer of musical instruments, continuing at this business four years. He also learned cabinetmaking, and after serving a while in the army came to America in 1845, and to Akron, Ohio, in 1851, where he worked for a short time as a cabinetmaker, and then for five years was employed by Horton & Rose in the manufacture of musical instruments, but his health failing him in the spring of 1857, he was employed by the same firm as a traveling salesman. Later, he opened the first store in Akron for retailing musical instruments, and in 1870 and 1871 commenced the manufacture of instruments, which he continued until the date of his death. His marriage to Miss Elizabeth Eisenhauer took place January 5, 1857, and resulted in the birth of five children, of whom only one survives-Mrs. Kline. The deceased four were Charles W., born August 29, 1858, died September 23, 1859; Lewis J., born February 22, 1865, died August 25, 1867; Albert, born April 28, 1867, died December 7, 1867; and Mary M., born December 23, 1869, died August 1, 1870. The mother of this family died January 18, 1876, aged thirty-eight years, and the father January 4, 1883, at the age of fifty-six years, both being devout Catholics.

Henry P. Kline, the subject of this memoir, although still a young man, has been very successful as a farmer, has always been temperate and industrious, and through his genial disposition and kindly nature has made many warm friends, who highly esteem him for his personal merits and excellent traits of character. He and family belong to St. Joseph's Catholic congregation of Randolph, and are ever ready to respond when called upon to aid the church or to assist a neighbor.

 ON. FRANCIS MYERS, representative to the state legislature from Summit county, and an active business man of Mogadore, Springfield township, and senior member of the well-known pottery firm of Myers & Hall, is a descendant of a worthy German family, which dates its transplanting in this country a century and a half ago. His father, Joseph Myers, was a native of West Earl township, Lancaster county, Pa., and a son of Christian and Magdalene (Hoover) Myers, representative agriculturist, of the "old Keystone state." He grew up a farmer lad, and, although his scholastic training was necessarily limited to the opportunities of the time, acquired a commonschool education of more than average breadth. Tiring of farm life he learned the tailor's trade, which he followed for some years, and afterward engaged in mercantile business for himself, opening a country store in which he carried a general line of merchandise. He continued this business for ten years with considerable In 1838 he emigrated to Wayne county, Ohio, thence to Springfield township, in Summit county, where he spent the remainder of his days. During his business career he amassed a comfortable fortune and was one of the highly respected citizens of his county. He took an active interest in local affairs and was an earnest political worker, although he never aspired to holding any He was an intense abolitionist and an ardent temperance man, and in those exciting days, when the agitation of the slavery question was uppermost in the public mind, his home was one of the most important in a long chain of "Underground railroad stations."

In 1825, in Lancaster county, Pa., he married Miss Susan Winger, daughter of Joseph Winger, a worthy neighbor and large farmer, whose right to his acres extended back to the year 1741, seven generations of Wingers having been reared on the homestead. The founder of the Winger family was Christian Winger, who came from Switzerland to America in 1727. There were born to Joseph and Susan Myers the following children: Louisa, wife of Jacob Mishler; Maria, wife of Samuel Shoemaker-Mrs. Shoemaker is now deceased; Francis W., the subject of this biography; Amos; John; William; Joseph and Meno, who is the wife of John Longnecker. There were also born two sons, Isaac and Michael, who died in infancy.

Hon. Francis Myers also claims Pennsylvania as his birth state, having been born in Earl township, Lancaster county, December 4, 1830. His boyhood days were spent upon his father's estate, and during his early life, whilst there, at intervals received the rudimental education common with many of the farmers' lads of those days. His education being very limited as to courses of training under tutors, he can be freely classed as a self-educated man. At the age of eighteen he entered as an apprentice to learn the trade of a potter in a factory in Springfield township, Summit county, and his business life has been spent in that particular calling.

Mr. Myers celebrated his marriage with Miss Lydia M. Mishler, a native of Springfield township, Summit county, a daughter of Joseph and Mary (Palmer) Mishler. They were married in September, 1852, and to this union has been born five children—three died in infancy; the eldest living is Maria Louise, wife of Dr. W. C. Steele, residents of Berlin, Stark county, Ohio. She was educated in the common schools, also was a student at the academy at Smithville, Ohio, and also Akron Buchtel college. She received a training in instrumental music and was one of Summit county's honored teachers. Grace Eugenie resides at home. She is a graduate of the Mogadore high school and graduated at Findlay college in music, at Findlay, Ohio. She has been a successful teacher in instrumental music also.

Hon. Francis Myers has been all his life a devotee to his belief in political liberty. He cast his first presidential vote for Gen Winfield Scott in support of the old-line whig party, and at the birth of the republican party, when Gen. John C. Fremont was the champion of that political faith, he espoused those sterling principles of republicanism.

Officially, Mr. Myers has served for almost five years in the responsible capacity of chairman of the county election board, resigning this office in 1895, when he was called to represent his county in the state legislature. There were seven candidates in the field for this office before the county nominating convention that year, but Mr. Myers received on the first ballot a large majority of the votes of the delegates, a gratifying mark of the honor in which he is held throughout the county. His record as a legislator has but further exemplified his fine personal and executive qualities, and his service in this capacity has given the utmost satisfaction to his constituency. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Mishler, the parents of Mrs. Myers, were people of sterling integrity and worth, were early and respected pioneers of Stark county, were prosperously engaged in agricultural pursuits, and noted for their zealous work in the church. Socially, the subject of our sketch is a member of the K. of P. lodge, Mogadore, No. 482. He and wife are ardent supporters of the Disciples' church at Mogadore, and have always been prominent in the upbuilding of this particular society as well as the Sunday-school.

Officially in the church Mr. Myers has been both an elder and deacon. Mr. and Mrs. Myers have been honored residents of Mogadore for almost one-half a century, and their sterling lives have been as monuments to their general worth as citizens.

LOYD HINMAN, a retired farmer of Rootstown township, Portage county, Ohio, was born in Hartford county, Conn., December 17, 1826, a son of Zerah and Miriam (Moses) Hinman, the former of whom was born in Hartford county, Conn., in 1800, and the latter in Litchfield county, same state, in 1797, their marriage taking place in Hartford county in 1822. The Hinman family is traceable to England, the founder of the family in America, who had been a sergeant in the body-guard of Charles I, having settled in Saybrook, Conn.; Martin Moses, maternal grandfather of subject, served all through the Revolutionary war, and the paternal grandfather was a teamster in the war of 1812, while his son, Luman, was an officer in the same struggle.

Of the three sons born to Zerah and Miriam Hinman, Judge Julius S. Hinman, late of Cambridge, Henry county, Ill., studied law with Gen. Beirce, later with Tilden & Ranney, and was admitted to the bar at Ravenna, Ohio; he served for twenty years as county judge of Henry county, Ill., and died at Cambridge in 1883. Llody Hinman was the second in order of birth, and Rufus M., ten years his junior, served three years in the Civil war, but has not been heard from since 1878.

Lloyd Hinman, the subject, came with his parents to Rootstown township in 1835, and this has since been his home, with the exception of four years spent in Hardin county, Ohio, and three years in the Union army. He received a good common-school education, and, his father being a blacksmith, he partially learned the trade, and also taught school two years in his early manhood, as well as vocal music, but his calling has chiefly been that of a farmer. He married, in Brimfield, Ohio, October 1, 1846, Miss Mary C. Lewis, a native of Connecticut, and a daughter of John G. Lewis, who located in Brimfield, Portage county, Ohio, in 1833. The union of Mr. and Mrs. Hinman was blessed with five children-William L., L. Ada, Althea, Louis and Jennie M. Of these, William L. resides in Tallmadge; L. Ada, now Mrs. William Mc-Kean, resdies in Lewistown, Pa.; Althea, married to Willis P. Fenn, lives in Tallmadge, Ohio; Louis is in San Francisco, Cal., and Jennie M. is the wife of Zerah Hinman, who occupies the farm once owned by the paternal grandfather of subject in Canton, Hartford county, Conn. Mrs. Mary C. Hinman was called from earth in February, 1872, and Mr. Hinman was next married, in March, 1873, to Miss Charlotte H. Camp, a native of Litchfield county, Conn., and a daughter of Lacey Camp. To this union was born one child— Warren C., who now resides in Amite City, La., and is engaged in raising fruit for the New Orleans market. Mrs. Charlotte Hinman passed away October 10, 1892, and for his third helpmate Mr. Hinman married, November 14, 1896, Mrs. Harriet Seymour, of Windham, Portage county, Ohio, but a native of Jamestown, N. Y., born October 7, 1831.

The enlistment of Lloyd Hinman took place August 12, 1862, in company I, One Hundred and Fourth Ohio volunteer infantry, and served faithfully until mustered out, as sergeant, at Jonesboro, N. C., June 19, 1865. He took part in all the marches and engagements in which his regiment, which was attached to the Twenty-third army corps, participated, and was never absent from his command one day during his three years' service. He nevertheless was stricken with serious deafness while on duty and otherwise suffered from general debility, and for these serious disabilities has been awarded a pension. In politics Mr. Hinman was formerly a republican, but now affiliates with the prohibition party. He is a member of David McIntosh post, G. A. R., at Ravenna, and he and wife are members of the Congregational church at Rootstown. The family enjoy the full esteem of the community, and Mr. Hinman is in all respects entitled to the high regard in which he is universally held.

ENRY KILLEFER, of West Richfield, Summit county, Ohio, one of the veteran soldiers of the Civil war and a respected citizen, was born May 16, 1838, in Richfield, a son of Henry and Jane (Curtis) Killefer. Henry Killefer, (father of subject) was born in Pennsylvania a son of Christopher Killefer, or, as he spelled the name, Killhefer, a native of Germany. The Curtis family was of old colonial Connecticut stock.

Henry Killefer received a common-school education and learned the blacksmith's trade at Richfield, where he enlisted August 13, 1861, in company A, First Ohio light artillery, to serve three years or during the war, and served until he re-enlisted as a veteran in same organization, at Cincinnati, Ohio, in 1864, again for three years, or during the war, and served until honorably discharged July 31, 1865, his service lasting four years, lacking thirteen days. He was in the battles of Pittsburgh Landing, Corinth, Perryville, Stone River (and many minor battles and skirmishes), Chickamaugua, Dalton, Dallas, Resaca, Peach Tree Creek, Buzzard's Roost, Pumpkinvine Creek, Kenesaw Mountain, and the battles in front of Atlanta and Jonesboro, after which his battery followed Gen. Hood, and took part in the second battle of Franklin, which was one of the hardest-fought of the war, and later was at Nashville. He was taken prisoner at the battle of Stone River and held twentyeight days in Libby prison. He was paroled at Annapolis, Md., not being obliged to do military duty for United States government until exchanged; so he and Andrew Finch of Medina county, Henry Barr of Cuyahoga county, comrades of the same battery, took French furlough and walked from Annapolis, Md., to Richfield township, Summit county, Ohio, a distance of 400 miles, without money except $1, which a comrade gave Mr. Kill-The people on the road entertained them and they had no trouble. Mr. Killefer was not wounded but narrowly escaped, his blouse being cut by bullets several times. He was always an active soldier and prompt and cheerful in the discharge of his duty, and was not sick in hospital, but suffered from sciatic rheumatism contracted in the service in 1864, when he marched with his battery from Strawberry Plains, Tenn., to Nicholasville, Ky., a distance of about 300 miles in cold, wet weather.

After the war Mr. Killefer returned to Richfield, where he has followed blacksmithing since 1858, except while a soldier. He married, October 17, 1867, at Richfield, Ohio, Aurelia Spafford, born January 27, 1842, a daughter of Martin and Mary (Brown) Spafford, and to Mr. and Mrs. Killefer were born two children—Mary E. and Henry B. Mrs. Killefer died October 4, 1894, a woman of many virtues. Mr. Killefer is a member of A. N. Goldwood post, G. A. R., and is a non-affiliating Mason of Richfield Meridian Sun lodge. In politics he is a republican and is a respected citizen, owning a pleasant home.

Christopher Killefer, grandfather of Henry, came from Germany and settled at Millersburg, Pa., where he followed farming until his death. He had a family of fourteen children and was a highly respected citizen. Henry Killefer, father of subject, was born in 1800 in Pennsylvania at Millersburg, was a cooper by trade, and came when young to Richfield township, Summit county, Ohio, and married Jame Curtis, daughter of Solomon Curtis. Solomon Curtis came from Connecticut in early pioneer days and was a shoemaker by trade, lived in Richfield many years and died a respected citizen, having attained the great age of ninety-two years. Henry Killefer was the father of John, Henry and Elizabeth by his first wife, who died, and he next married Abigail Foot, a widow, née Coleman, and the children born to this union are William and Mary.

Jeremiah Kreider, the subject of this memoir, at the age of two years, had the misfortune to lose his father. He nevertheless had the oppurtunity of attending the district school in his native township until seventeen years of age. In the meantime he assisted his mother on the home farm, and when his brothers, who were his elders, left the place to assume the responsibilities of life on their own account, he was placed in full charge and worked the farm for his mother until he reached his twentysecond year, when he engaged in farming for himself in his native county of Stark. cember 18, 1880, Mr. Kreider married, in Pike township, Stark county, Miss Catherine Royer, daughter of Samuel and Lydia (Kurtz) Royer, natives of Pennsylvania, but early settlers of Stark county, Ohio, where they still reside, and where the father is still engaged in farm-Mr. and Mrs. Royer have had born to them six children, of whom four are still living, viz: Elizabeth, wife of Samuel Light; Willcastor county, Pa., to Miss Mary Bucher, who liam, Moses and Henry; the deceased were Mary and Catherine. Mr. Kreider has since remained a widower, and, with his only child, boards with a family in his own house, by special arrangement. Mr. Kreider has been principally engaged, since he came to Portage county, in farming, threshing and sowing, and owns a handsome property. ILLIAM HENRY KIMBALL, postmaster at New Milford, Portage county, Ohio, and station agent at Rootstown station for the Cleveland & Pittsburg Railroad company, is a native of Hamlin, Monroe county, N. Y., was born November 28, 1858, and is a son of William Henry and Sarah (Burch) Kimball, both natives of the Empire state.

The Kimball family was founded in America by six brothers who name from Scotland just prior to the Revolutionary war, and were all soldiers in the glorious struggle for American independence, but whose actual fate was never known; while that of one of their descendants, a brother of subject's father, and named Horace Kimball, was equally shrouded in mystery, inasmuch as he started for California, via the plains, and was never heard of afterward. The subject is of the fifth generation of the Kimballs to bear the Christian name of William Henry, and his son is of the seventh. Of the family born to his parents there were two sons and four daughters, of whom Ira T., the eldest, is now on the old homestead in Hamlin, N. Y.; Sarah L. is married to Charles B. Kocher, of Brockport; Henrietta L. is the widow of H. F. Austin and resides in New York city, and the subject is the youngest; of the two deceased daughters, one died in infancy, and one—Helen—died at the age of fourteen years.

William H. Kimball, the subject, received a good common-school education in his native county and graduated from the state normal school at Brockport in 1879. He then studied law two years in Brockport, but failing health precluded his entering upon active practice, and for some months, in 1882, he traveled the "long eastern" route for the Hiram Sibley company, of Rochester, visiting many points of interest in the United States, and now looks back with satisfaction in this experience as familiarizing him with the manners and customs of the people over a wide extent of territory. He then engaged in farming for several years, and in 1889 came to Ohio, and for a short time was employed in an installment house in Cleveland. He next entered the employ of the Cleveland & Pittsburg Railway company in a subordinate capacity—that of clerk in the "car service" department, which he held until April 1, 1896, when he was placed in charge of the Rootstown station, and on July 15, following, was appointed postmaster of New Milford, the post-office being in the station.

Mr. Kimball was united in marriage, in New York state, July 10, 1881, with Miss Mary E. Miller, a native of Cooperstown, N. Y. Mr. Kimball formed the acquaintance of this lady while in the normal school, and for two years prior to her marriage she was engaged in school-teaching. This union has been blessed with two sons and three daughters, viz: William Henry, Jr., Mary Elizabeth, Arthur Leroy, Marie Isabel and Ednaall still living beneath the parental roof. Kimball, wife and elder son are members of the Methodist Episcopal church; the parents are also connected with the various social orders within the pale of this church, and both are active workers in the Sunday-school, of which Mr. Kimball is the present superintendent-having previously had five years' experience in similar work while in Cleveland. where he served as secretary and treasurer of his Sunday-school. Mr. and Mrs. Kimball are also members of the Protective Home circle, and Mr. Kimball is a member of the Junior Order of American Mechanics. political sentiments, Mr. Kimball is strongly republican. The family stand very high socially, and Mr. Kimball is greatly respected for his urbanity, gentlemanly deportment and unflinching integrity.

LEMEN N. JAGGER, a native of Bath township, Summit county, Ohio, was born June 3, 1827, the eldest in a family of four children—one son and three daughters—born unto Elmus and Hannah M. (Noah) Jagger, of whom there are three living, viz: Clemen N., Lucy Ann, wife of S. H. Webster, a commercial traveler of Shelbyville, Ill., and Mary, wife of H. L. Martin, editor of the Shelbyville (Ill.) Union, a republican organ, and Rebecca, deceased.

Elmus Jagger, the father Clemen N., was a native of Massachusetts, was reared to farming and was educated in the common schools, and for a time was a school-teacher. He came at an early date, and located in Richfield township, Summit county, where his father at one time owned about 500 acres of land. Politically he was a whig, and he and wife were Methodists. Mr. Jagger's mother was a native of Ohio and her parents had to work for seven years to pay for their passage from Germany to America. Her father was a merchant tailor by trade.

Clemen N. Jagger's education was obtained in the pioneer school-house, and is quite limited. He early learned the wagonmaker's trade in Boston township, and about 1852 he came to Hammond's Corners, and here he has resided as an honest and upright citizen and mechanic since. He married Miss Jane Perry, a native of Ohio, who was born February 8, 1836. To this union there were born the following children: Elmus H., September 13, 1858, now a resident of Greensburg; Ella, April 29, 1866, and wife of Frank Turner, of Akron; Charles Elmer, January 29, 1873, with his father.

Mr. Jagger was called on to mourn the death of his companion in life March 4, 1895. For almost thirty-five years had they lived together sharing the sorrows and joys of life. She had been a loving mother and wife, was a lady who had led a life of usefulness, and was dearly beloved by all who knew her.

In politics Mr. Jagger has always been a republican, and has held several offices of trust, such as school director, etc., and probably imbided much of his political proclivities from the late Gen. James A. Garfield, of whom he recalls many pleasing and interesting incidents that occurred when they were playmates together. Although the early education of Mr. Jagger was not very comprehensive, and this is proven by the fact that he has been, in all respects, the maker of his unaided way in the world and secured for himself a fortune. He has won the respect of his neighbors, who fully recognize his many good qualities, and cheerfully accord to him the esteem in which, as one of the oldest residents of Bath township, and as one of its most substantial citizens, he so justly deserves.

ILLIAM E. HURD, state food inspector, residing in Ravenna, Portage county, Ohio, was born in Jefferson county, N. Y., August 20, 1852, and is a son of Joseph and Arminda (Pool) Hurd, natives of the same county and state, and the parents of four children, viz: William E., the subject of this memoir; J. D.; Esther A., wife of Charles Benton, of Oswego county, N. Y., and Anson P., of Adams, Jefferson county, N. Y.

Jarvis Hurd, paternal grandfather of subject, was born in Connecticut, of Welsh descent. He was an extensive farmer and served in the war of 1812, and at his death was about seventy-two years old, his widow living to be eighty-one. David Pool, the maternal grandfather of subject, was a native of Jefferson county, N. Y., was also a farmer, was likewise a soldier in the war of 1812, and died in his native county at the age of seventy-five years; his widow survived until seventy-seven years old, and the family born to this couple was quite large.

Joseph Hurd, father of William E., was a farmer in early life, but for many years has worked at masonry for the Rome, Watertown & Ogdensburg Railroad company. He lost his wife in 1868, when she was but thirty-seven years of age. She was a very amiable lady and a devout member of the Baptist hurch, and dearly beloved by her husband and children. Mr. Hurd now lives in Pulaski, Oswego county, N. Y., and is an industrious, hard-working man, although beyond the reach of want, and is highly respected by all who know him.

William E. Hurd, the subject of this memoir, was reared a farmer and was educated primarily in the district schools of his native county, which he attended until fifteen years of age; he then attended Union academy until he was prepared for teaching, and this vocation he followed during the winter seasons, employing his time, during the summer, in the making of cheese, until 1876.

In April, 1876, Mr. Hurd was united in marriage with Miss Imogene S. Tousley, a daughter of Hiram and Catherine (Graves) Tousley. In 1879 Mr. Hurd and his wife came to Ohio and for one year lived in Geauga county, then came to Aurora, Portage county, where Mr. Hurd taught school two terms, and then for ten years was superintendent of the cheese factories operated by Frank Hurd, of the same place. In May, 1893, Mr. Hurd was appointed, by the state food commissioner, Dr. F. B. McNeal, food inspector for the state of Ohio, a position he still most effectually fills.

Politically, Mr. Hurd has always been a republican, and while in Aurora served as township clerk for one year, and has been township committeeman ever since coming to He has been a resident of Portage county. Ravenna for the past three years, and here has made hosts of friends; but here, also, he had the great misfortune of losing his wife in August, 1895—a loss he has never ceased to deplore. In March, 1897, he was married to Miss Georgia A. Towne, of Orange, Cuyohoga county, Ohio, daughter of Sylvanus and Lenora Towne. Mr. Hurd has no children. His residence is at No. 319 Elm street, and his official headquarters are also at Ravenna.

Wayne county, Ohio, February 7, 1826, the fourth in a family of ten children, four sons and six daughters, born to Aaron and Eleanor (White) Harris. There are only three of the ten living: Elizabeth, wife of Nicholas H. Long, of Wadsworth, Ohio, and an agriculturist; Vincent G., our subject, and Eleanor, wife of Joseph Shoemaker, a farmer in Bath township.

Mr. Harris, the father, was born either in Virginia or Maryland, was reared to the life of a farmer and educated in the common schools, and he and wife were members of the old-school Presbyterian church. The mother was a native of Ohio and her parents were born in Ireland. Mr. Harris received a rudimentary training in the pioneer log-cabin school-house, and when he commenced life the battle was fought empty handed as regards financial support, but, with the aid of his estimable wife, he has accumulated a competency which places them both in such circumstances that their remaining days may be happily spent in ease and comfort.

Mr. Harris chose for his companion in life Miss Magdelana Long, a daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth (Creese) Long. She was born March 1, 1829, in Medina county, Ohio, and received her education in the common schools. They were married September 13, 1849, and by this union have been born nine children, viz: Rebecca Belle, wife of Moses Huger, of Midland county, Mich., a farmer with five children; Mary, wife of John M. Hoertz, of Loyal Oak, Summit county, a farmer with two children; Joseph, a minister in the church of Christ, who has been a worker in the vineyards of the Lord in Illinois and Ohio, and is at present in Michigan; he married Miss Augusta Van Vorhis, a native of Ohio, is a student of Bethany college, in Virginia, and has one child living; John died in infancy; Elizabeth, wife of Jacob Shook, a stonemason by trade, resides in Akron, Ohio, and is the mother of five children; Eliza J., who resides with her parents at Copley Center, was educated in the Copley high school and was a successful teacher in Summit county; Charles F., of Loyal Oak, married Miss Rosa Wertman, a native of Ohio, and has one child; Alice S. is the wife of Alvin Freid, a mechanic in Blake, Medina county, Ohio; and Andrew J., the youngest, is a farmer in Copley township, and is married to Metta Robinson, a native of Ohio.

Mrs. Vincent Harris' parents were natives of the Keystone state, and died in Wadsworth, Father Long was a miller by trade, but devoted much of his later life to farming. He and his wife were members of the Presbyterian society. Their family comprised fourteen children, seven sons and seven daughters, only four of whom are living-two in Nebraska and two in Ohio. The first presidential vote our subject cast was for Gen. Winfield Scott, but since the organization of the republican party has advocated its principles. He served many years as school director, and was township trustee for sixteen to eighteen years. He is a true respector of all religious teachings, and his wife is a member of the Reformed church. Mr. and Mrs. Harris have a beautiful estate of 146 acres within one mile of Copley and a comfortable home in the village, where they are surrounded by many friends, who esteem them highly for their sterling integrity.

ENNIS MONEGAN, an exceedingly well-to-do farmer of Richfield township, Summit county, Ohio, is a native of county Wexford, Ireland, and was born December 25, 1819, a son of John and Mary (Rhine) Monegan, who were the parents of four children—Dennis, Lawrence, Mary and Catherine.

At the age of seven years Dennis Monegan lost his father and was sent to England to learn the tanner's trade under his uncle William, whom he served six years for his board.

While serving his apprenticeship he united with a club, which, when he had learned his trade, furnished him with means for making a trip through England and France. He then worked at his trade for a year in Manchester, then came to the United States, worked a few months in New York city, and then made a general tour, working at Newburgh, N. Y., New York city, Philadelphia, Pa., Boston, Mass., again in New York city, Albany, N. Y., where he lived six months, and then came to Cleveland, Ohio, at a time when the site of the present union railroad depot was a mere barnyard; there he was taken sick and went to Chicago, Ill., but the cholera becoming epidemic at that point, he returned to Cleveland, whence, shortly afterward, he came to Summit county, and at Hudson laid the foundation of his present fortune, although he had but ten cents on his arrival. For eight continuous years he worked in Hudson at his trade, and then for a short time in Akron for James Christy, but returned to Hudson, and was united in marriage, November 25, 1851, with Miss Lavinia Hill, who was born in Johnstown, Pa., in 1830. The father of this lady was William Hill, a very pious and highly educated gentleman and a school-teacher. marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Monegan has been blessed with eight children, born in the following order: Lawrence, September 29, 1852, and James, March 20, 1856, both of Richfield township; George, September 18, 1857, a prominent physician of St. Louis, Mo.; Morris, December 9, 1860, in the drug business, in New York state; Ella, January 6, 1863, wife of Edward Murton, of Richfield, Ohio; Charles, of Bath, Ohio; Lillian, January 26, 1869, attending college at Oberlin, Ohio; Edgar, assisting on the home farm. Mr. Monegan has provided his children with collegiate educations, although his own early opportunities in this respect were not over abundant, yet he is a diligent student, and has been since reaching his majority, is fully impressed with the importance of a sound scholastic training, and has seen to it that his children have been well grounded in knowledge.

In 1857, Mr. Monegan came from Hudson to Richfield and bought a farm, on which he erected all the buildings, and later purchased his present home place, on which he has over three miles of tiling. His acres number 336, and he is to-day one of the most successful farmers of Richland township. His buildings are all new and of modern construction, and his live stock is of the choicest grades. greatly respected in his township and county, and very popular with the republican party, of which he is a stanch supporter and by which he has frequently been honored by offers of nomination for offices of honor and trust, but these offers he has invariably declined to accept, preferring to follow the more congenial pursuit of husbandry.

KING NASH, M. D., one of the oldest and most highly esteemed members of the medical profession in Summit county, is a resident of Montrose, Bath township, and no history of this region would be complete without mention of this venerable physician. His father, Hophni Nash, one of the pioneers of this section of the state, was born at Williamsburg, Mass., January 10, 1797, and came to Bath in 1817. His life was devoted to farming and in pursuit of that occupation it was well spent. He cleared his farm in Bath township, lot No. 45, then moved to Richfield, where our subject was born, but after a sometime residence there returned to Bath. In 1825 he married Miss Lovisa King, daughter of Eleazar and Mercy (Kingsley) King, who was born December 30, 1801. To them were born five children: Harriet, April 4, 1826; E. King, our subject, April 20, 1828; Ellen, October 20, 1830; Thomas, December 7, 1832; Sumner, May 10, 1836. Mr. Nash died at the home of his son, Sumner, at Akron, in 1882, and his widow survived him until January 6, 1891, when she passed away at the home of our subject in Bath.

E. King Nash passed the early years of his life on the farm with his parents, with whom he remained for thirty years. He was educated in the schools at Richfield and Granger. Turning his attention to the study of medicine he took a course in the medical department of the Western Reserve school, graduating therefrom in 1861. He began the practice of his chosen profession in the spring of 1863, and almost immediately afterward was appointed by Gov. Tod to the position of assistant surgeon in the Fourteenth regiment, Ohio volunteer infantry. This appointment was dated April 10, 1863, and in November, 1864, he was promoted to the rank of surgeon, remaining with this regiment in that capacity until the close of the war.

On December 12, 1861, he was married to Mary A. Sloan, daughter of Robert and Sarah (Fuller, Sloan, Mr. Sloan was born in Scotland December 26, 1808, and came to this country when he was a lad and learned the trade of blacksmith in New York. was a native of the Empire state and was born September 22, 1814. They had the following children: Emily, born April 26, 1833, wife of N. Hanson, of Copely; Mary A., born May 3, 1839; Alice, August 25, 1841, wife of M. Hulbert, of Bath. To Mr. and Mrs. Nash have been born two children: Nellie Maud. born October 12, 1562, who married Frank Smalley, a government employee, and residing in Chicago; and Claude Bernard, born April 27, 1870, now a resident of Cleveland.

Both Dr. Nash and his wife are active members of the Disciples' church, and the doctor is a teacher in the Sunday-school and a leader in all good works. He is a member of Buckley post, No. 12, G. A. R. The venerable doctor has a good and lucrative practice, and is a power for good in the community, his youthful devotlon to his honorable profession being lessened not a whit by reasen of the lightly borne weight of his three-score years and ten. The doctor was in early years a whig, but at the birth of the republican party cast his vote for John C. Fremont, who championed the new cause, and has always ardently supported its principles ever since.

ARTIN MILLER, one of the most experienced and prosperous farmers of Rootstown township, Portage county, Ohio, was born in Hessen, Germany, November 13, 1822, a son of John and Gertrude (Bassel) Miller, who came to America in 1848, and settled in Rootstown. The father, who was a weaver by trade, followed this calling for a short time after coming here, and then purchased the farm on which Martin Miller now resides, which he cleared up from the wilderness and cultivated until his death, which occurred in 1870, at the age of seventy-five years, his widow following him to the grave in 1871, at the age of seventy-three—both being sincere Catholics. To their marriage were born three children, viz: Martin, the subject of this notice; Catherine, who is the wife of Valentine Reis, of Rootstown, and Frances, who died at the age of two years.

Martin Miller received a limited education in Germany, and on coming to this country with his parents assisted his father in clearing up his farm from the woods and in cultivating it—being now the owner of the place. He has been twice married—first, to Miss Eva Reis, daughter of Valentine and Eva (Derr) Reis, of Rootstown, and to this union one child—Katherine—was born. Mrs. Miller was called away in 1853, at the age of thirtyfive years, and Mr. Miller was next married, in 1854, to Miss Barbara Andes, daughter of Nicholas and Katherine (May) Andes, and this union has been blessed with nine children, of whom eight are still living, viz: Andrew, Elizabeth (wife of Henry Bauer), Valentine, Martin, Joseph, John, Mary and Barbara; the deceased child, Anna Mary, was taken away at two years of age. Mrs. Barbara Miller was born in Hesse Darmstadt, Germany, April 16, 1836, and came with her parents to the United States in 1850. The family settled in Rootstown, where the father, who was a weaver by trade, for a short time followed his calling, and then bought a farm, which he cultivated several years and then returned to Germany and lived there until his death, which occurred in 1873, at the age of seventy-three years; his wife had died at the age of forty-nine years, and both were devout members of the Catholic church. Of their nine children but one survives—Mrs. Miller. The deceased were Adam, Katherine, Nicholas, John and Philip, and three that died unnamed.

Mr. and Mrs. Miller are consistent Catholics and contribute freely to the support of the church, and are among the most highly respected residents of Rootstown township.

ENRY L. NAPP, an ex-soldier of the Civil war, and a highly respected farmer and small-fruit grower of Richfield township, Summit county, Ohio, was born in Franklin county, Pa., January 19, 1837, a son of Casper and Catherine (Miller) Neeb—which was the original German spelling of the name, the parents being of German extraction—but in America the name is variously spelled, as, for instance, Neeb, Napp and Knapp.

Casper Neeb was born in Hesse-Darmstad. Germany, July 7, 1800, was the son of a hotel-keeper, and was married in his native province, the result of the union being three children-J. N., Catherine and Elizabeth. In 1833 Casper, the father of these children, sailed from Hamburg for America with his wife and German-born children, and landed in Baltimore, Md. His first wife having died, probably in Baltimore, he married, for his second wife, Elizabeth Baker, who also bore him three children-Elizabeth, Charles and Susan—and likewise died in Baltimore. Neeb then settled in Mount Hope, Pa., where he worked as a cooper and where his third marriage took place to Miss Catherine Miller, who was born in Germany and who was nineteen years old when she came to America in company with her parents, John and Adelia Miller. To this third marriage of Mr. Neeb were born eight children, viz: Henry L., William, John, Augustus, Adelia, Mary, Daniel and Julius. John Miller, father of Mrs. Catherine Neeb and her brother, Conrad, was killed while working on a railroad at Shippensburg, Pa., an embankment caving in and falling upon him.

Casper Neeb came to Ohio in 1842, lived in Akron until 1843, and then settled in Richfield township. Summit county, where he passed the remainder of his days, dying December 2, 1881, at the age of eighty-one years, a member of the Lutheran church, although his wife was a Presbyterian. In politics he was a democrat, but a strong Union man, and had four sons in the Civil war, he having himself been a soldier in the German army. These four sons were Charles, Henry L., Augustus and John. The military record of Henry will be given in full further on: of the others it may be briefly stated that Charles enlisted in the One Hundred and Fifteenth Ohio infantry for three years, took part in many battles and was a prisoner in Cahaba, Ala., for six months; after his release from his rebel prison, and while on his way home, he was blown overboard by the explosion of the boilers of the steamer Sultana and floated down the Mississippi river, on a cabin door, nine hours before being rescued; Augustus was in the One Hundred and Seventh Ohio infantry, fought many battles, including Fort Fisher, and died a natural death at a New York hospital, his remains being interred in the soldiers' cemetery at Cypress Hill; John was a member of company I, One Hundred and Twenty-eighth infantry and served chiefly as a guard on Johnson's island.

Henry L. Napp was nearly seven years of age when his parents settled in Richfied township, and here he was reared to farming and also learned the cooper's trade. October 18. 1861, he enlisted at Richfield Center, in company G, Sixty-fourth Ohio volunteer infantry, for three years, fought at Shiloh, but shortly afterward was attacked with chronic diarrhea, and was confined to hospital at Tuscumbia and Huntsville, Ala., and Nashville, Tenn., altogether about three months, and was so emaciated and exhausted, that he was honorably discharged for disability, at Nashville, Tenn., October 30, 1862- his weight having been reduced from 172 pounds, at the time of his enlistment, to ninety-one pounds at his discharge. After partial recovery Mr. Napp re-enlisted at Cleveland, Ohio, December 10, 1863—this time in company I, Capt. Austin McDowell, One Hundred and Twenty-eighth Ohio infantry, for three years or less, if the war should be ended, and served until honorably discharged at Columbus, Ohio, July 13, 1865, the war having been brought to an end in April. During his last term of service, Mr. Napp acted as guard on Johnson's island, lake Erie, at the barracks erected for the detention of rebel officers captured in battle. there were 2,762 then within the stockade, in rank ranging from major-generals to second lieutenants. Their rations were better than those of the guards, as they had good bread and beef, served out in liberal measure three times per day; vegetables in abundance; coffee, rice, sugar, molasses, clothing, shoes, straw beds, with white ticks, wood for heating and cooking purposes, and weathertight sleeping apartments. There were some, of course, who died from sickness incurred before capture, but their funeral services were performed by their own chaplains and interment made by their own comrades. the rebels were possessed of valuables when imprisoned, but these were carefully inventoried and deposited with the United States Express company at Sandusky and returned to their owners at their release. The captives were also permitted to purchase extras from the sutler at the stockade, or to send to Sandusky for what trifles they desired. Of course they did their own laundry work and cooking, but they were liberally supplied with soap and all necessary appliances. So generously were they supplied with food, they were able to play ball within the inclosure of fifteen acres, using stale loaves of bread and wilted cabbage-heads In the summer evenings they would dance to the music of the band which played every night at dress parade, and when discharged all were fat and hearty, well clothed, and in strong contrast with the emaciated Union skeletons who had been confined in Libby, Andersonville and other southern prison holes. "Thrice armed is he whose cause is just," and the north had justice on its side, and always was blessed with plenty, while the south, fighting for an unholy cause, could hardly feed its own soldiers, let alone its prisoners of war.

Mr. Napp, while on Johnson's island, had charge of 110 prisoners, and, ranking as corporal, called the roll every morning, received the requests of the captives for any extras they needed, made a record of any complaints they had to make, and reported in full to his colonel in command. John Davis, a rebel conspirator, who made an endeavor to release the prisoners, was for a time one of his charge, but, as it was Mr. Napp's duty to post the sentinels, he frustrated the scheme of that contumacious rebel.

The marriage of Mr. Napp took place in Peninsula, Ohio, December 15, 1863, to Miss Anna N. Hardesty, who was born in Stark county March 11, 1842, a daughter of James and Sarah (Black) Hardesty. James Hardesty was born in Pennsylvania, was a worker in iron, and was so employed for several years in Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio. He was three times married, his first wife bearing him seven children, viz: Elizabeth, Susan, Thomas, Matilda, Martha, Alexander and Phebe. His second marriage was to Mrs. Sarah Black, whose maiden name was Brant, and who, by her first husband, was the mother of James, Jere and Martin Black. Mrs. Sarah Hardesty died in Stark county, Ohio, and Mr. Hardesty next married Catherine Ackinson, of Stark county, and to this union two children were born-Frank L. and Ann Eliza. Mr. Hardesty was a soldier in the war of 1812, and had one son, Thomas, in the Civil war. Hr. Hardesty died in Copley township, Summit county, at the age of sixty-four years, a member of the Methodist church and a highly respected citizen.

Mrs. Anna N. Napp was reared from the age of two years until eighteen by Mrs. Abigail Lockwood, of Akron. After her marriage to Mr. Napp she accompanied her husband to Johnson's Island, and can vonch for the good treatment of rebel prisoners, as has been previously mentioned. Since the war Mr. and Mrs. Napp have lived in Richfield, where for years Mr. Napp followed his trade of cooper, but has now a fine tract of forty-seven acres, on which he raises small fruit and esculent vegetables. To the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Napp have been born two children—Austin and Kittie. Of these, Austin is a graduate of the high school at East Richfield, and is a member of the Christian Endeavor; Kittie is married to Frank E. Force, a jeweler of Cleveland, and has one child.

In politics Mr. Napp is a republican, and is an ex-member of A. N. Goldwood post, No. 104, Grand Army of the Republic, at West Richfield, in which he served as junior vice-commander and quartermaster. He is a moral, industrious and useful citizen, and he and his family stand deservedly high in the esteem of the entire community in which they live.

R. A. M. POWERS, one of the oldest and most experienced physicians and surgeons of Rootstown, Portage county, was born in Milton township, Mahoning county, Ohio, January 28, 1837, a son of James and Rebecca (Windle) Powers, also natives of the Buckeye state, whose genealogy will be narrated in the following paragraph.

Abraham Powers, grandfather of the doctor, was a native of New Jersey and came to Ohio in 1800. He settled at Briar Hill, in what is now Mahoning county, but then a part of Trumbull county, where he bought a farm, his brothers, Isaac, Jacob and John, coming with him to this state, and all marrying and settling in Trumbull county. Abraham was a carpenter by trade, which he followed principally on coming to Ohio, but passed his later days on his farm. He married Elizabeth Woodruff, to which union were born Isaac, who lived and died in Mahoning county;

James, the father of Dr. A. M., the subject of this biography; Milton, who died in Mahoning county; Madison, who lives in Trumbull county; Washington, whose death took place also in Mahoning county, as did that of his brother, Abraham; Phebe A., was married to A. McCoy, and both are now deceased; Nancy resides in Youngstown, Ohio; Mary and Eliza are also dead. Abraham, the father of these children, was quite prominent in public affairs, was deeply interested in the welfare of the Methodist Episcopal church, of which he was a life-long member, and died in that faith in 1852; his widow survived him many years, and was called away at the age of eighty-six.

James Powers, the father of the doctor, and the second son of Abraham and Elizabeth Powers, was born in Youngstown, Ohio, September 11, 1819. As he was the eldest member of the family at the death of his father, the care of the homestead devolved upon him, and, in consequence, his early education was limited, as far as schools were concerned; but he was studious in his habits, became well informed through self-education, and, after he had reached his majority, clerked in a store at Vienna, Ohio, and later embarked in merchandizing on his own account at Milton. the meantime, in 1832, he had commenced the study of medicine with Dr. T. Bronson, of Newton, and later practiced the profession several years. He was prominent as a democrat in his county and enjoyed an extended popularity, and in 1846 was elected sheriff of Mahoning county, filled the office two terms, and in 1855 was elected justice of the peace; he also held a commission as colonel of the state militia, served as brigade quartermaster, brigade aide-de-camp, and brigade inspector. While serving as justice of the peace he resided on the old homestead until 1860, when he purchased a farm near Lordstown, Trumbull county, to which he removed, and in 1861 enlisted in company H, Twentieth regiment, Ohio volunteer infantry, was elected, on organization, captain of his company, and served one year, when he was honorably discharged on account of disability. He then returned to his Trumbull county farm and followed agriculture until 1871, when he retired to Rootstown, where his son, Dr. A. M. Powers, was located.

The marriage of Col. James Powers took place December 16, 1834, to Miss Rebecca Windle, daughter of Francis and Eleanor Windle, of Milton township, Mahoning county, the union resulting in the birth of the following children: One who died in infancy; Dr. A. M., the subject; Mary E., who died in 1864, and Libbie J., wife of B. Chapman, of Ravenna, Ohio. Col. Powers was prominent as an Odd Fellow, and was also a member of the Grand Army of the Republic post at Ravenna; he was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church for nearly half a century, was a trustee and steward of his congregation, and died in that faith February 3, 1890; his wife died August 21, 1882, and no more worthy couple ever graced the county of Portage.

Dr. A. M. Powers received his elementary education in the district schools, which he attended until seventeen years of age; he then entered the Poland academy, and also took a course at a commercial college in Cleveland, but remained on the home farm until 1860, in the meantime reading medicine with Drs. William H. and Charles Brown, of Lordstown; in in 1860 he entered the Western Reserve Medical college, remained one term, then practiced his profession in Lordstown until November, 1869, when he removed to Rootstown; in 1869, also, he graduated from the Eclectic Medical institute of Cincinnati. Dr. Powers has been very successful in his practice at Rootstown, where his abilities are well recognized and his skill fully appreciated, and he stands in the front rank of his brother-professionals of Portage county.

The first marriage of Dr. Powers occurred in October, 1858, with Miss Cynthia, daughter of William and Polly Sherwin, of Trumbull This lady was born in 1839, and died in Rootstown September 11, 1874, the mother of the following children: Frank R., of Ravenna, born in 1859; Dr. W. H., a resident of Amherst, Ohio, born in 1863; Jessie A., born in November, 1869; John E., born September 10, 1874, died June 25, 1875. Dr. Powers chose for his second helpmate Mrs. Sarah L. Barlow, whom he married May 10, 1875. This lady was born March 3, 1838, and is a daughter of Nathan L. and Eliza (McCann) Bingham, of Ellsworth, Mahoning county, Ohio.

In politics Dr. Powers is a democrat and has served as township trustee; he has been a member of the Methodist Episcopal church since 1855, and for years has been a steward and trustee. For ten years he has been a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and is also a member of the Royal Arcanum. The doctor's social association is with the best people of the township and county, and he and wife enjoy the esteem of all who know them, while his children have attained positions in life that may well be considered matters of complacency, if not pride, to any parent.

ILLIAM REDDING, architect and supervising builder, No. 248 South Howard street, Akron, Ohio, is a native of the Buckeye state and was born near Mansfield, Richland county, May 6, 1858. His parents, Philip H. and Elizabeth (Dinges) Redding, were both born in Grenstadt, Germany, came to America when young, were married in Ohio, and both are still living at the respective ages of eighty-five and eighty-three years. The father, during the years of his business activity, was a contractor and carpenter in Ashland and Richland counties, and to him and wife were born eleven children, viz: Katy, wife of Joseph Martien. of Mansfield; Peter, proprietor of a planingmill and factory, and also a contractor, of Ashland; Mary, deceased wife of John Moore: Frank, who was a conductor on the Erie railroad and was killed in an accident in 1884: Lena, widow of Philip Hauseman, of Pavonia; Philip, a carpenter of Ashland; George, in the same business at the same place; William, the subject of this sketch, and three others, that died in infancy.

William Redding, the subject, early learned the trade of carpenter under his father-a trade that seems to have been the peculiar mechanical feature of the male members of the family, as the great-grandfather, grandfather, father, subject and all his brothers learned and worked at this industry. He was well educated in the public schools and at the age of nineteen years started to work on his own account; two years later he began contracting, and in this capacity passed two and a half years in Ashland; he then entered the employ of Shearer & Kagey, planing-mill proprietors and contractors, for whom he did all the drafting and construction superintending for four and onehalf years, and then came to Ashland in 1886, and for six and a half years was employed by Weary & Krasmer as draftsman; in the spring of 1893 he again opened business on his own account, and of the many structures he has superintended may be mentioned the Wilcox, the Kempel, the Kubler & Beck, the Clerkin and the Christie blocks, the white wire works, several of the rubber works buildings, and many others too numerous to mention in de-He also made the drawings for the Akron gas plant, and has been an acknowledged leader in this line since he has been in business in Akron.

Mr. Redding is a member of McPherson lodge, No. 63, K. of P., and of uniform rank, K. of P., No. 21, of which he is commissary sergeant, second battalion, of the second regiment, also a member of Ben Hur lodge, No. 11, in which he holds the office of chief.

Mr. Redding was married, January 14, 1881, to Miss Emily M. Parks, daughter of Edwin Parks, of Mansfield, and this union has been blessed with one child—Edwin Floyd. AMES NESBIT, county commissioner of Summit county, Ohio, and a prominent farmer of Northfield township, was born in the Ligonier valley, Westmoreland county, Pa., December 5, 1828, the son of John and Ann (Matthews) Nesbit, both natives of the Keystone state. His paternal grandfather, William Nesbit, was a native of Scotland, and was one of the pioneer farmers of Westmoreland county, Pa. About the year 1834 he moved to Northfield, Ohio, and died The maternal grandfather of our subject, William Matthews, was a native of Ireland, and was also a pioneer resident of Westmoreland county, where he died. Our subject's father settled in Northfield, in what was then Portage county, Ohio, in the early 'thirties, and cleared and improved a farm of 160 acres upon which he lived and died and which is now occupied by his son John. He was a man of much influence in his community; was justice of the peace several terms and was also an elder and a prominent member of the United Presbyterian church. His death occurred in 1861. He was the father of nine children, viz: Martha (Mrs. H. Alexander), Esther (Mrs. A. A. Rinear), William, Archibald, James, John, Mary J. (Mrs. Alexander McConnell), David, and Margaret A. (Mrs. Horace Palmer).

James Nesbit was reared as a farmer on the parental homestead and enjoyed all of the advantages of the common schools of that He responded to his country's call to arms in the dark days of the nation's peril, enlisting August 4, 1862, as a corporal in company G, Onc Hundred and Fifteenth Ohio volunteer infantry. At the battle of Nashville, while guarding a bridge, he was captured and taken to Meridian, Miss., ten days later being transferred to that awful prison at Andersonville, where for five months and twelve days he suffered all the historic terror of that loathsome pen. Without shelter, without even a blanket, and with but little clothing, he suffered all but death, during that miserable period of cruel confinement. The fearful sufferings of the Andersonville prisoners are now historically familiar to all, and Mr. Nesbit's experience need not be enlarged on in this connection. Upon the declaration of peace he was honorably discharged by special order, June 21, 1865, at Columbus, Ohio,

Mr. Nesbit's has been a busy and a useful life. He is largely interested in all the good works of his own community and of the county at large. For eleven years he served as trustee of Northfield township, and was elected to the office of justice of the peace, but refused to qualify for this position. He is a stanch republican and his political work and counsels are of much value to his party in Summit county. His capabilities as a man of affairs and his excellent executive qualities have been recognized by the people of the county, and he is now serving his second term as county commissioner, and is discharging the duties of that responsible position faithfully and well.

dent of the Second National bank of Ravenna, was born in Rootstown, Portage county, Ohio, July 3, 1838, a son of Horace and Lois E. (Baldwin) Reed, who were the parents of four sons and three daughters, viz: Melissa, wife of E. E. Chapman; Ann Janette, married to Alfred Baldwin; John H., Edward A., Cornelius A., Horace L. and Julia A., wife of H. O. Reed.

Abram Reed, the paternal grandfather of subject, was a native of Connecticut, of Scotch parentage, came to Portage county, Ohio, in 1804, and kept a tavern in Rootstown until his death at an advanced age. He was also a farmer, was classed among the hardy pioneers, and was widely and favorably known throughout the county: his children were seven in number and were all reared in respectability and usefulness. John Baldwin, the maternal grandfather of subject, was a native of Massachusetts of English descent, was a farmer by calling, came to Portage county, Ohio, in 1811, and located in Charlestown, where he followed his vocation until his death, also at a very advanced age; his children were four in number- three sons and one daughter-and were likewise among the most respected residents of their township the daughter, Lois E., having been a teacher of many years' experience.

Horace Reed was born in Rootstown in 1805, and was the first white male native of the township. He was reared a farmer, and actively engaged in large business enterprises all his life, and died where he was born at the age of eighty years; his widow, who was a native of Massachusetts, survived him some few years, and died at the extreme age of eightynine years, in the faith of the Congregational church, and was, like her husband, honored and esteemed by all who knew her.

Judge C. A. Reed was reared on his father's farm and received his preliminary education in the district school, which was supplemented by an attendance at an academy in Lebanon, and subsequently at that of Hiram. In early life he met with a severe accident, which so crippled him that he could not continue the work of a farmer; neither could he enlist in the military service of his country. At the age of twenty years he left the home farm and engaged in teaching school, first in Warren and then in Portage county. gan studying law in the spring of 1861, at Mansfield, Ohio, in the office of Burns & Dickey, was admitted to the bar in the summer of 1863, and at once entered upon the practice of his chosen profession in Ravenna. In September, 1863, he formed a partnership with ex-Gov. Hart, which remained undissolved for twelve years, during which time he constantly advanced both in reputation and in accumulation of this world's goods. For some time Mr. Reed practiced on his sole account, and having early adopted the principles of the republican party as his measure in politics, he was elected, in 1870, prosecuting attorney, a position he filled, with unsurpassed ability, for four years; he then adhered to his private and lucrative practice until 1883, when his party again called him into the public service by electing him probate judge, the functions of which office he filled with honor and credit to himself for six years. In the minor offices he served as a justice of the peace and also as a member of the county school board of examiners for a number of years, but on withdrawing from the bench eschewed politics and also relinquished his law practice as speedily as circumstances would warrant, and turned his attention solely to his business and farming interests and to the affairs of the Second National bank, of which he has been the president for the past three years.

Judge Reed was united in matrimony, February 1, 1865, with Miss Phebe F. Ray, daughter of Capt. Albert and Mary (Folger) Ray, the result of the marriage being two daughters-Lorena B. and Julia Mae-both at home. Capt. Albert Ray, father of Mrs. Reed, came from the island of Nantucket, Mass., and settled in Portage county, Ohio, in 1850, his daughter (Mrs. Reed) being then seven years of age. He had been an old sea captain, and with him came quite a number of sea-faring people, with their families, who all settled in the same neighborhood in which the captain made his home. He proved to be a useful and influential citizen, and here followed agricultural pursuits until his death, which occurred about the year 1888.

Judge Reed, his wife and daughters are members of the Congregational church, of which the judge is a deacon and also superintendent of the Sunday-school. Fraternally he is a member of the Akron commandery, F. & He has been a resident of Ravenna since September, 1863, and in 1876 erected his elegant residence at the corner of Meridian and Oak streets. He has been fully identified with the development of the city since his residence here, has aided liberally in all movements having that object for their aim, and is recognized emphatically as a leading citizen. The social standing of the judge and his family is as a matter of course with the best people in the city and county, and the public at large hold him in the highest esteem and place in him their implicit confidence.

ALENTINE REIS, a prosperous farmer of Randolph township, Portage county, Ohio, is a native of Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany, and was born September 23, 1837, a son of Valentine and Eva (Derr) Reis, who were born in 1800 and 1796, respectively, and came to Ohio in 1853, settling in Portage county on the farm on which Valentine, the son, now lives. They were the parents of five children, of whom Eva, wife of Martin Miller, died in 1858, at the age of thirty years; the survivors are Catherine, wife of Francis Bassel; Valentine, the subject of this notice; Margaret, married to Philip Heims, and Elizabeth, wife of Frank The father of the family died in Shueman. 1872, at the age of seventy-two years; the mother is also deceased, and both were devout members of the Catholic church.

Frank Reis, paternal grandfather of subject, also reared a family of five children, of whom four came to America, viz: Valentine, father of subject; Magdalena, who was married to Michael Kissel; Margaret, married to John Yaner, and Bardlea, all now deceased; Catherine, who was the wife of John Sharpe, passed away in the old country.

Valentine Reis, the subject, came to Portage county with his father, being then about sixteen years of age, and assisted in clearing up the farm his father had purchased, and worked in his father's interests until twenty-one years old, when he bought the homestead, the father retiring to private life. In August, 1862, subject married Miss Catherine Miller, daughter of John and Gertrude (Bassel) Miller, and this union has been blessed with three children—Martin, Adam and Catherine—the last named being the wife of John Kline. The parents of Mrs. Reis were natives of Germany and came to the United States in 1850; the father was a weaver by trade, and followed this calling to some extent after reaching America, but his chief occupation here was farming, having purchased a tract of land in Randolph township. His family comprised three children, two of whom were born here—Mrs. Reis and Martin. Both parents are now deceased.

In politics Mr. Reis is a democrat, and has served as township supervisor and as school director for several years. He and family are conscientious members of the Catholic congregation at St. Joseph, in which Mr. Reis has held the office of councilman for five years or longer. Beside general farming, Mr. Reis has given considerable attention to live stock, and is regarded as one of the most intelligent and substantial husbandmen of the township.

ETER J. RIEDINGER, a retired farmer and a highly respected citizen of Randolph township, Portage county, Ohio, was born in Baden, Germany, March 19, 1819, a son of George P. and Mary (Weigold) Riedinger, who were parents of four children, of whom two are still living-Eva, widow of Adam Wetzel, and Peter J. Of the deceased, Mary died in Germany; Jacob, who was born in 1812, was burned to death on lake Erie, in 1841, three other members of the Riedinger family losing their lives on the burning vessel, which was bound for Cleveland. George P. Riedinger, the father, died when over sixty years of age, and his widow in 1872, aged eighty-two years, both in the faith of the Reformed church.

Peter J. Riedinger attended the common schools of Germany until fourteen years of age, learning, in the meantime, the trade of shoemaking, at which trade he worked in the old country until 1840, when he came alone to the United States, arriving in Cleveland, Ohio, without a cent or a friend. He succeeded in securing board, however, at a hotel for a week, when he secured work at his trade, receiving as compensation fifty cents per day. He remained in Cleveland but a short time, and then came to Randolph township, Portage county, and for some time worked among the farmers, clearing up land, etc., finally accumulating sufficient means for the purchase of a small place for himself, which he also cleared up, and for several years cultivated his place with the aid of two oxen. His crops he hauled to Akron, a distance of sixteen miles, where he received fifty cents per bushel for wheat and ten cents per bushel for oats; his butter he carried on his shoulder to Ravenna, a distance of ten miles, and there he disposed of it at five cents per pound, receiving payment in trade, calico being valued at twenty-five cents per yard, and other articles at equally high rates.

The marriage of Mr. Riedinger took place in Randolph, December 8, 1840, to Miss Mary Leitwein, daughter of Adam and Margaret (Fuhr) Leitwein, and to this marriage have been born seven children, of whom five are still living, viz: Rev. Philip J., born November 24, 1844, and now minister of the Presbyterian church at Richville, Ohio; Peter D., born April 1, 1848, and a resident of Kent; Martin, born March 30, 1852, and still on the homestead in Randolph township; Mary, born June 26, 1856, is the wife of Virgil J. Crockett, and John, born May 12, 1861, resides in Kent; two others died in infancy. The parents of Mrs. Riedinger were also natives of Baden, and came to the United States in 1831; they resided in Pennsylvania until 1835, and then came to Randolph township, Portage county, Ohio, and here the father engaged in farming until his death, which occurred December 31, 1859, at the age of seventy-four years, while his widow lived until June, 1869, when she was called away at the age of seventy-five—both members of the Reformed church.

Mr. Riedinger came to Randolph a poor young man and has worked his way upward until he is now the owner of two excellent farms and is one of the most substantial citizens of Randolph township, living in retirement on the fruits of his early industry. In politics he is a democrat, and has served as supervisor and school director, and he and wife are members of the Reformed church, in which he has filled all the lay offices, and there is no one more honored than he is in Portage county.

EIDIGH H. RHODES, a well known and prosperous farmer of Franklin township, Portage county, Ohio, was born in Medina county, Ohio, December 12, 1843, a son of Frederick and Barbara (Hausley) Rhodes.

George Rhodes, grandfather of Leidigh H., was born in Pennsylvania, was a farmer by occupation, and was among the early setters of Stark county, Ohio. To his marriage with Miss Margaret Smith there were born seven children, of whom three are still living, viz: Frederick, Joseph and Polly—the last being the wife of Henry D. Daley. The deceased were named Sallie, Magdalen (Mrs. Henry Wenderhoof), Hannah and David. The father of this family died in February, 1843, when sixty years of age, but his widow survived until 1872, when she expired at the advanced age of eighty-five years—both in the faith of the Lutheran church, of which they had long been faithful members. The father of George, and the great-grandfather of Leidigh H., bore the name of Frederick, was a native of Germany, and came to America some time in the latter part of the eighteenth century, had a family of six children, and eventually came to Ohio, where his death took place in 1820, at a very advanced age.

Frederick Rhodes, father of Leidigh H. Rhodes, was born in Stark county, Ohio, [anuary 13, 1816. He was educated in the subscription schools of his native county and has nearly all his life been engaged in farming, although for about twenty-two years he has operated a threshing machine. December 8, 1842, he married Miss Barbara Hausley, a daughter of Levi and Mary (Luman) Hausley, and to this union were born eight children, of whom the following five are still living: Leidigh H., whose name opens this biography; Mary, wife of George Meachem; Lewis; Catherine, who is married to John Newton, and Frank, who is employed by the Standard Oil company The deceased were named at Cleveland. Daniel, who died in 1859, aged two years; Henry, who was aged fourteen years at his death in 1862, and Annie, who was married to J. B. Wilcox, and died in September, 1896, at the age of thirty years.

In 1859 Frederick Rhodes bought his present farm in Portage county, on which he settled in 1860. Here he lost his wife in 1881, who died at the age of sixty years, a devout and earnest Christian, a faithful wife and devoted mother, and a kind neighbor. Mr. Rhodes is a consistent member of the Lutheran church, and now, at the age of eighty-one years, is remarkably well preserved, with the exception of his eyesight, which is beginning to fail.

Leidigh H. Rhodes was reared to farming and remained with his father until twenty years old, when he took charge of a farm on his own account; in 1882 he settled on his present place, which is known as the Celery farm, one and one-half miles from Kent, inasmuch as he devotes about one-third of his place to the cultivation of this edible, growing the nnest in the state of Ohio. He has been very fortunate in his farming, which has been his occupation through life, with the exception of three years, during which time he was employed on the Atlantic & Great Western railroad as brakeman.

Mr. Rhodes was united in marriage. December 23, 1863, with Miss Catherine Gross, born July 8, 1838, a daughter of Christian and Elizabeth Flickinger Gross, and this union has been blessed with three children, viz: Amanda A., wife of J. H. Reidinger; F. E., who married Miss Lillian Kreager, and Charles E., who graduated from the Kent high school, and at present makes his home with his parents. In politics Mr. Rhodes is a republican, and for eight years has filled the office of town supervisor: his religion is that of the Lutheran church, of which he and wife have been members for many years.

Christian Gross, father of Mrs. Rhodes, and his wife, Elizabeth Gross, were both natives of Portage county, and to their marriage were born four children, viz: Elizabeth, John, Priscilla and Catherine (Mrs. Rhodes). The father died at the age of seventy-three years, and the mother, aged seventy-five—both in the faith of the Dunkard church.

Mr. Rhodes and family stand very high in the social circles of Franklin township, and Mr. Rhodes is individually very popular with his fellow-citizens, who esteem him for his thoroughly upright course through life.

EORGE O. RICE, the well-known real-estate and insurance agent of Kent, Ohio, is a native of Brandon, Vt., was born April 22, 1819, and is a son of Hastings and Nancy A. Bates Rice, who were born in Massachusetts, but were married in Brandon, Vt., where both passed the remainder of their lives—the father dying in 1829, and the mother many years later, at the age of seventy-eight.

George O. Rice, the subject, was the only child of his parents, and at the early age of about ten years lost his father. He was reared on a farm, but received a good common-school education and for a few terms was himself a school-teacher. He next engaged in farming on his own account, and at the age of twentyfive years married Miss Joanna P. Lincoln, daughter of John H. Lincoln, of Pittsford, Vt., and to this union were born three children, none of whom now survive. In the meantime Mr. Rice had learned harnessmaking, and in 1850 came to Ohio and opened a harness shop in Kent, which he conducted nearly ten years, and then, for a few years, was engaged in the coal trade, and then in the general produce business, which he followed until about 1875, when he became interested in insurance and real estate.

The death of Mrs. Rice occurred in Kent, December 19, 1874, and on June 19, 1877, Mr. Rice married Miss Helen E. Parmelee, daughter of Luther H. Parmelee, of Kent. Mr. and Mrs. Rice are members of the Congregational church, in which Mr. Rice is a deacon and was for eighteen years Sabbathschool superintendent. In politics Mr. Rice was in his early days a whig of the strongest anti-slavery proclivities, and on the formation of the republican party became one of its stanchest adherents. Although he has never had a desire for public office, he has done his duty as a citizen by serving in the city council of Kent.

In the insurance and real-estate business Mr. Rice has made a success, and is probably one of the best-posted men in Kent to-day as to realty. To facilitate his many real-estate transactions he secured, nearly twenty-five years ago, a commission as notary public, which, in his line, is a very convenient document to have. As a citizen Mr. Rice is enterprising, liberal and public spirited, and is ever among the foremost in contributing to all projects designed for the public good or the improvement of his adopted city of Kent. He has been attentive to every line of business in which he has been engaged, and through his own efforts has realized a competency and earned the universal respect and esteem in which he is held.

NDREW B. RINEHART, general manager of the Akron Belting company, was born in Allen county, Ind., near Fort Wayne, November 14, 1862, a son of Andrew and Mary E. (Trimmer) Rinehart, both natives of Knox county, Ohio. The father, while yet a single man, left his home in Knox county, went to Allen county, Ind., purchased his farm, then returned to his home and married, went back to his new home and followed farming until some time prior to his death, which occurred in the mountains of California November 18, 1889. His widow then returned to her native county of Knox, where she still resides. They had born to them four children, viz: Florence A., wife of J. B. Wright, of Rich Hill, Knox county, Ohio; Ida J., wife of Elwood Montgomery, also of Rich Hill; Ellis F., farmer of the same place, and Andrew B., the subject.

Andrew B. Rinehart was born on his father's farm and attended the district schools of Allen county, Ind., regularly until twelve years of age, and from that age until fifteen attended during the winters only, working on the home farm in the summers. At the age of twenty-one years he began to learn telegraphy, but continued his work on the farm morning and evening, walking a considerable distance to receive instruction in his art, which he soon mastered and was given a position at night work. He worked alternately at farming and telegraphing at various points as opportunities presented themselves, and finally was appointed to day work at Cuyahoga Falls, where he remained until February 21, 1887, when he associated himself with the Akron Iron company as shipping clerk and timekeeper, which position he held six months, and did general office work until October, 1888, when he was appointed traveling salesman for the territory of the United States east of the Rocky mountains. For this class of work he was especially fitted, and became one of the most successful salesmen on the road. While thus engaged, in the fall of 1891, he became salesman, also, for the Brigger Belting company of Akron, and the following year bought stock in this concern and then became its president, holding the position until its consolidation, in 1893, with the Akron Belting company.

The Akron Belting company was incorporated October 1, 1885, by A. M. Barber, C. E. Sheldon, Samuel Findley, Sumner Nash and Charles T. Bodifield, for the purpose of manufacturing leather belting and mill supplies. Its present officers are George W. Crouse, president; A. M. Barber, vice-president; A. B. Rinehart, general manager; Sumner Nash, secretary and treasurer; George Wince, assistant secretary, and Webster Thorpe, superintendent. The plant is located at what is known as the Allen mills, at the corner of Cherry and Canal streets, and it employs some thirty-seven people. Its output is disposed of all over the United States and much of it taken by foreign purchasers, and has been constantly increasing, notwithstanding the stagnation in trade from 1893 to 1896. Mr. Rinehart has been a prime factor in the success of this concern, and his ability as a business man, and especially as a salesman, is universally conceded. In 1893 Mr. Rinehart also became connected with the Whitman & Barnes company as manager of the advertising and credit department, and later as sales manager, which position he now holds.

Mr. Rinehart is a republican in politics, but has never been an office seeker. Fraternally he is a member of Adoniram lodge, No. 517, F. & A. M., and of Washington chapter; he is also a member of Akron commandery, No. 25, K. T. His marriage took place January 23, 1889, to Miss Minnie M. Miller, daughter of Virgil T. and Helen S. Miller, and this marriage has been blessed by the birth of one child—May Irene. Mr. and Mrs. Rinehart are consistent members of the Congregational church, and their pleasant residence is at No. 204 South Forge street.

AVID L. ROCKWELL, president of the City bank of Kent, Portage county, Ohio, was born in Franklin township, May 13, 1843, of good old New England descent, his grandfather, Harvey Rockwell, having been born in East Windsor, Conn. About 1808 or 1809 the latter gentleman came to Ohio and settled in Ashtabula county, where he engaged in farming. He was also a soldier in the war of 1812, was a true American and died in his new home, the father of nine children.

Hon. David L. Rockwell, Sr., son of this patriot and father of the subject of this memoir, was born in Pierpont, Ohio, November 22, 1812, was reared a farmer, and there married Miss Mary E. Palmiter, who was born in Bridgewater, N. Y., a daughter of Ephraim Palmiter. Mr. Rockwell came to Portage county in 1838 or 1839, and for a year kept a hotel in Brimfield, and then moved to Franklin Mills (now Kent), and for two years kept the hotel known as the "old Woodard stand;" later, he kept the Franklin exchange for a year, and then engaged in merchandizing, which he followed until his death, February His widow survived until 1875. 28, 1868. when she died at sixty years of age. were members of the Episcopal church. politics Mr. Rockwell was first a whig, but afterward became a republican, and for a number of years served as justice of the peace. In 1848 he was elected a member of the Ohio general assembly, and in 1861 was re-elected to the same office. Fraternally he was a Freemason and Odd Fellow, and was prominent, and, it may be said, distinguished throughout his useful life. Of the six children born to Mr. and Mrs. Rockwell, four grew to mature years, viz: Dorena A., wife of Judge U. L. Marvin, of Akron; David L., the subject of this memoir; Charles Henry, a graduate of West Point, who held a commission as captain in the United States army, and died in Washington, D. C., in 1888, and Orlo Scott, an attorney of Kent, Ohio.

David L. Rockwell, whose name introduces this sketch, was educated primarily in the public schools of Kent and then attended Hiram college, after which he taught school a year or more, and also passed some time in his father's store. He read law in the office of Judge Marvin, then of Kent, but now of Akron, and was admitted to the bar in April, 1866, and was in partnership with Judge Marvin for two years, or until the judge removed to Akron, after which he practiced alone until a stroke of paralysis, in 1884, forbade him longer continuing in the profession. During this period he had law offices in Kent and Ravenna, and since 1878 has had his residence in the latter city.

Mr. Rockwell was one of the directors of the Kent Savings bank from its organization until 1878, when he sold his stock, and in 1881 associated with himself other citizens and organized the City bank of Kent, with a capital of $50,000, and of this bank Mr. Rockwell has since been president. This institution has always had the confidence of the public, and has been well managed, as has been proven by the fact that its deposits exceed $100,000; that it has always declared its dividend and has a surplus. Its present officers are David L. Rockwell, president; John H. Williard, vice-president; M. G. Garrison, cashier, and C. M. Davis, assistant cashier.

Mr. Rockwell was most happily married, May 30, 1867, to Miss Mary E. Metlin, a daughter of Samuel Metlin, of Summit county, and this union has been blessed with three children-Mollie E., Dorena A. and David L., In politics Mr. Rockwell is a democrat, but, while he has never desired public office, still takes an active part in forwarding the interests of his party and has represented it in various state conventions and in the national convention at Chicago in 1896. Fraternally he is a Freemason. He has made his own way through life, being wonderfully energetic and enterprising, and has acquired considerable property in Portage and other counties, and has also erected several buildings in Kent, for renting purposes, and has done much otherwise toward promoting the growth of the city by freely aiding all projects designed for its He is, indeed, what is usually debenefit. nominated a useful citizen, and has won the highest esteem of the whole population of Kent and surrounding country.

RLO S. ROCKWELL, attorney at law, of Kent, was born in Franklin township, Portage county, Ohio, March 26, 1851, a son of David L. and Mary E. (Palmiter) Rockwell, also natives of the Buckeye state. His preparatory education was acquired in the public schools of Kent, and his legal instruction was imparted by his brother, David L. Rockwell, of whom mention is made in full on an adjoining page, and this instruction was supplemented by a course of study under Judge U. L. Marvin, of Akron. In 1873 he was admitted to the bar of the district court, before the establishment of the circuit court. In 1873-74 he held the office of deputy clerk of probate court of Summit county, and in 1875 engaged in the active practice of his profession in Kent, and here he has since built up a lucrative legal business, which has claimed his entire attention up to the present time, with the exception of two years—one year in the early part of his legal career—1876—when he went to Fort Hayes, Kans., where his brother, Charles H., was an officer in the regular army, and where Orlo S. himself served for the time as civilian clerk in the quartermaster's department—and one year, 1883, which he passed in Akron in partnership with Judge Marvin. With this exception he has always been alone and has done an extensive general practice.

Mr. Rockwell was united in the bonds of matrimony in September, 1876, with Miss Nellie M. Sawyer, daughter of Francis and Margaret (McMean) Sawyer, of Brimfield township. Mrs. Rockwell was born October, 1857, in Davenport, Iowa, at which place her parents made their home one year, all the remainder of their lives having been passed in Portage county, Ohio. The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Rockwell has been crowned by the birth of two children—Mary Dorena and Charles Henry.

From 1883 to 1885 Mr. Rockwell found time between his professional engagements to manage and edit the Kent News, a democratic organ, but when he resigned the chair editorial of the journal the plant was sold and removed to Ravenna and issued as the Graphic for a short time, and was finally absorbed by the Ravenna Republican. Mr. Rockwell, it will easily be inferred, is in politics a democrat. He cast his first presidential vote for Horace Greeley in 1872, and has since acted lovally with the democracy. Under the auspices of this great party he served one term as city solicitor of Kent, and has twice been elected as mayor, serving from 1882 to 1884, and from 1892 to 1894. From 1888 to 1892 he was postmaster of Kent under President Cleveland. In this last office he was ably assisted by Mrs. Rockwell as his deputy until her death, which occurred in 1890, in the faith of the Episcopal church, a most highly esteemed and accom-Mr. Rockwell has also served plished lady. as clerk of the county board of election, and has ever been alert in advancing the interests of his party during campaigns, and has invariably held a position on some one of the important committees, but has never slighted his legal business for the sake of politics, and is recognized as an attorney of unblemished integrity. Fraternally, he is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and of the Royal Arcanum, and is as highly respected socially as he is professionally.

OBERT M. RISK, of Kent, county commissioner, was born in Brimfield township, Portage county, Ohio, November 8, 1840, and is a son of George and Isabella (McCauley) Risk, natives of Londonderry, Ireland.

George Risk, father of subject, was a farmer by vocation, was married in Ireland and had born to him in that county one child. In 1829 he brought his little family to America and first located in Stowe township, Summit county, Ohio, where he purchased and cultivated a farm for a few years; he then came to Portage county, and bought a partially improved farm of 100 acres in Brimfield township, which he fully improved and lived on thirty odd years; he lost his wife in 1866, then removed to Franklin township, where he purchased a small place; his own life was spared until 1886, when-he also died, respected by all who knew him. To George Risk and wife were born eight children, viz: Samuel, a farmer of Brimfield township, who died and left two children, one of whom is also deceased; George, who was crippled with rheumatism at the age of six years, was never able to walk afterward, but nevertheless accumulated considerable property in Kent, and there died, universally respected; Eliza died in childhood; Sarah Jane is the wife of Wilber Sapp, of Carroll county, Ohio; Martha, married, resides in Allegheny, Pa.; John is a stock dealer and farmer, of Battle Creek, Neb.; Robert M. is the subject of this sketch; William, a soldier in the Union army, died in the pursuit of the rebel raider, John Morgan, at the age of twenty years. Of this family, four sons served in the Civil war, viz: Samuel, John, Robert M. (subject) and William.

Robert M. Risk, with whom this biography has most to do, was reared on the home farm in Brimfield, Portage county, and received something more than the education usually youchsafed to farmers' lads, and himself taught school several years in the states of Michigan and Indiana. April 19, 1861, before reaching his twenty-first year, he enlisted in company F, Seventh Ohio volunteer infantry, and was mustered in for three months at Camp Taylor, Cleveland, and after having served his term was honorably discharged, but re-enlisted for three years at Camp Dennison. Under this enlistment his first engagement was at Cross Lane, W. Va., and he was kept at marching, skirmishing and fighting until he entered the conflict at Cedar Mountain, Va., where he was shot through the left thigh by a rifle ball, which effectually brought his fighting days to a close. He was again honorably discharged March 5, 1863, and on his return home and after recovery from his wound he employed his time in farming on his father's land until he rented a farm in Ravenna township, in 1865, in which year he married Miss Mary Madole, a native of Franklin township and a daughter of George and Sarah Madole. Some little time after marriage he purchased a farm of fifty acres in Ravenna township and ran in debt for the full amount of its cost, but was industrious, managed well, and soon paid off his obligation; later, he sold this farm and bought the old homestead in Brimfield township, and also purchased another farm of fiftyfive acres, both of which he still owns. also purchased a home in Kent, and in September, 1894, moved to the city. To the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Risk have been born eight children, in the following order: Sarah Isabell, a teacher; Josephine married Edward Elliott and lives in Ravenna; May, a teacher; Harry W., also a teacher; George, a street-car employee, who married Belle Bushnell and resides at Cuyahoga Falls; Edward, also a street-car employee; Maud and Iva.

In politics Mr. Risk has always been a republican, and cast his first presidential vote for Abraham Lincoln. In 1893 he was elected county commissioner, and during his incumbency it was that the electric street-car line was run through the county. So satisfactorily did Mr. Risk perform his duties in this office, he was re-elected in 1896, and is now filling his second term, having been nominated for re-election in convention by acclamation, without a dissenting vote, the public falling into full accord with the action of the convention. Mr. Risk has also served as delegate to several county and district conventions of his party, and has well shown himself able to be a party leader.

The subject of this sketch lost his wife January 13, 1891, and was married again August 18, 1895, to Miss Julia Blake, daughter of Buel and Sallie Blake; to this marriage has been born one child, Dorothy.

UCIUS E. RODENBAUGH, a noted builder and contractor of Kent, Ohio, was born in Springfield township, Summit county, June 3, 1844, a son of John and Laura A. (Purdy) Rodenbaugh, the former a native of Pennsylvania and the latter of Vermont.

Peter Rodenbaugh, grandfather of subject, was a German by birth and early settled in Pennsylvania, where he married and reared a family of four sons and four daughters, of whom the following reached the years of maturity: Isaac, a potter and farmer of Springfield township, Summit county, Ohio; John, the father of subject; William, a farmer of Parke county, Ind., where he followed his calling until his death; Peter, who was a potter by trade and died in Akron, Ohio; Eliza, whose second husband is a Mr. Hummiston and a resident of Iowa. Peter Rodenbaugh, the father of this family, soon after marriage, came to Ohio and followed his trade of potter and his vocation of farmer, but eventually came to Portage county, and died in Franklin township at the advanced age of nearly eighty years. Solomon Purdy, the maternal grandfather of subject, on coming to Ohio from Vermont, first located in Summit county, where he, like the paternal grandfather, followed his callings of potter and farmer, and eventually came to Portage county and continued in the same vocations until his death, at the age of eighty-four years.

John Rodenbaugh, father of subject, on coming to Ohio, located in Summit county, was there married, and there followed his trades of potter and millwright until 1853, when he came to Portage county, where he became a farmer and auctioneer, and in the latter capacity was widely known, not only in Ohio, but in adjoining states. He owned a good farm, a portion of which is now used as the meeting ground of the Spiritualistic association. He was universally popular, but met with a sudden and tragic death. October 24, 1865, when returning home from Kent in his wagon, he was assaulted with clubs on his wagon-seat by demoniacal ruffians, brutally murdered for his valuables, and despoiled of $285 in cash and his watch. For this heinous crime Jack Cooper was hanged at Ravenna in April, 1866, and his partner in the nefarious act, Joel Beery, was sentenced for life to the state's prison, where he died in 1879. John Rodenbaugh and wife were born five sons and one daughter, viz: John Milford, a railroad employee, in Kent; a son that died in infancy; Henry Clay, will be again mentioned in the following paragraph; Calvin Perry, a grocer in Denver, Colo., and also an auctioneer; Lucius Edward, the subject, and Emma R., wife of Jerome Converse, of Denver, Colo. The mother of this family died May 7, 1888.

Henry Clay Rodenbaugh, mentioned above, was a turfman and had purchased the hotel Woodford at Versailles, Ky., for his son James, who was a cripple, aged twenty-three years. A short time after the purchase had been effected an intoxicated Kentuckian named Lane came into the hotel August 5, 1865, and shot both father and son, who expired immediately. This Lane, a very wealthy man, has never had a final trial for the commission of the dastardly crime.

Lucius E. Rodenbaugh, at the age of seventeen years, left the home farm and enlisted in company D, Eighty-fifth Ohio volunteer infantry, served seven months, and was honorably discharged at Annapolis, Md., on account of physical disability. August 8, 1862, he re-enlisted and was mustered into company I. One Hundred and Fourth Ohio infantry, which was assigned to the Twentythird army corps, under Gen. J. M. Schofield. He fought at Knoxville and was in the Atlanta campaign as far as Lovejov Station, Ga., when the regiment was ordered back to intercept Hood's rebel corps, which was encountered at Columbia, Tenn; then followed the sanguinary struggle at Franklin, November 30, 1864, and the two days' fight at Nashville, December 15 and 16, when Hood's army was The One Hundred and Fourth was then sent to Cincinnati and thence by railroad to Washington, D. C., and by gunboats to Wilmington, N. C., which city was captured, and at Goldsboro was received the news of Lee's surrender. The regiment was here detailed to take charge of the munitions of war, and to parole Johnston's army, which closed its service, and Mr. Rodenbaugh was mustered out at Cleveland, Ohio, June 17, Twice during the war Mr. Rodenbaugh was wounded—both times, however, accidentally—the first being through the discharge of a gun in the hands of a comrade at Dallas, Ga., which sent him home for sixty days, and the second by the awkward handling of a hatchet on the part of another comrade.

After the war Mr. Rodenbaugh became a brakeman on a passenger train of the Atlantic & Great Western railroad, in which capacity he served seven years, and while in this employ was united in marriage, September 29, 1867, with Miss Flora Buzzell, who was born near Ravenna, Ohio, a daughter of Ozias Buzzell, but of this marriage there is no offspring. AMUEL G. ROGERS, of the law firm of Sauder & Rogers, Akron Savings bank building, is a native of this city, was born November 6, 1865, and is a son of Joseph M. and Sarah J. (Graybill) Rogers, of English and German extraction.

Joseph M. Rogers, father of the subject, was a mechanic, and settled in Akron early in 1865, where he followed his vocation until his death, in 1888, at the age of fifty-five years. He was a republican of the stanchest kind in his earlier political associations, but afterward became one of the organizers of and leaders in the union labor party and was one of its first candidates for congress, but, not being an office seeker, was nominated on his own merits and as a mark of recognition for the service he had rendered to the new organization. As a patriot, he fought in the war of the Rebellion, as a member of the First Nebraska volunteer infantry, company C, in which he enlisted in 1861, and served for two years, when he was discharged as a sergeant for disability, after having bravely fought at Forts Henry and Donelson, and at Pittsburg Landing. To his marriage were born five children, in the following order: Samuel G., subject of the present memoir; Ella M., a teacher in the Akron public schools; Francis E., a stenographer in New York city; George S., a lettercarrier in Akron, Ohio, and Gertrude M., at home with her parents.

Samuel G. Rogers, the especial subject of this biography, was primarily educated in the public schools, worked thereafter in the molding rooms of the Buckeye company until he had secured the means of self-education preparatory to entering the office of Judge U. L. Marvin, a student at law, in 1885. He then took a full course in the Cincinnati Law school from which he graduated in 1887, with honors, was admitted to the bar the same year, and at once began practice in Akron. He held the position of clerk under Mayors Seward and Miller, under whom it was part of of his duty to act as prosecutor in the police court during the years of 1889-90-91, and in 1892 was elected prosecuting attorney of Summit county, which office he filled with marked ability for three years.

Since 1891 he has been a conspicuous figure in the ranks of the democratic party, and to-day stands foremost in its ranks, having been a delegate to its conventions each year since that date and an effective orator in its campaigns.

The legal firm of which Mr. Rogers is a member was formed January 1, 1893, and has now the management of some of the most important law cases in which the citizens of Akron are interested; and already, in one case, before the supreme court of Ohio, involving the validity of the government of the city itself, it has won a signal victory as attorneys for the city.

March 6, 1895, Mr. Rogers was united in marriage with Miss Chloe Faust, daughter of Joseph Faust, of Akron, and they have been blessed by the birth of one child—Virgil E. The societary relations of Mr. Rogers are with the American Bar association, the Summit county Bar association, the Summit lodge, No. 50, I. O. O. F., Ætolia lodge, No. 24, K. of P., and Akron division, uniform rank, K. of P. The residence of Mr. Rogers is at No. 424 Buchtel avenue.

From his illustrious ancestor, Morgan Rhydderch, is descended more than forty ministers. There are now in America more than one hundred of this Rhydderch's descendants, among them being the Hon. Horatio Gates Jones, of Philadelphia, now dead, and Maj. General Gershon Mott, of New York. He united with the Congregational church at Iwan chapel, and was received by the renowned Rev. Morgan Jones, Trelech. Much attention was given to his early education, and his advantages in that line were better than most boys of his time, so that he became an efficient school-teacher. In 1843 he commenced preaching; in 1845 he was united in marriage to Miss Rachel Williams, born in 1815. They emigrated to America in 1852, and, in the same year, he was ordained at Paris, Portage county, Ohio. During his long and useful ministry he labored at Tallmadge, Thomastown, and Brookfield, Ohio. He died at the age of seventy-one, August 2, 1888, at Paris (Wayland) Portage county, where his ministry began. His widow died September 19, 1895. His son, Rev. D. Davies, is a successful minister connected with the East Ohio conference of the Methodist Episcopal church. His eldest daughter, Mary, is the widow of James Geer Brewster, of Thomastown, near Akron, and his youngest daughter, Rachel, resides with her sister, Mrs. Brewster.

He was a man of distinct and prominent characteristics, and was familiarly known, both in the mother country and in this, as "Dewi Emlyn." His literary and bardic productions, as well as his ministerial standing, have made him known wherever the Welsh language is spoken. His writings were confined to that language, but had he composed in English, with which he was as familiar, his genius would undoubtedly have been recognized and honored by the English press and public.

His life was devoted to the advancement of the pure and good. He was an ardent and uncompromising defender of truth and right in political and religious affairs. As a spiritual-minded and faithful minister, he was highly esteemed. His acquaintance with books was wide; he kept abreast with the times, and encouraged the progress of every legitimate reform. He was a quiet man, who shunned conspicuousness, and gladly served his Master in quiet country places where he received but moderate compensation.

His death was the result of a brief but not violent illness. He was buried with great respect, and memorial services were held in several places within the circle of his work. His last lines of poetry were composed a few days before he was taken sick. One who reads them now cannot fail to be struck by their expression of his strong aspirations after that higher, purer existence to which he was soon to be called.

ETER ROTHERMEL, a thriving and respected farmer of Rootstown township, Portage county, Ohio, was born in Germany June 24, 1835, a son of Peter and Margaret (Brotzes) Rothermel, the former of whom was a weaver by trade, and to whom was born a family of eight children, five of whom are still living, viz: Theressa, widow of Andrew Rettig; Mary, wife of Andrew Horning; Adam, Peter and Matthias. The deceased were George, who died April 3, 1897, aged sixty-seven years; John, who died March 11, 1862, aged twenty-four, and Philip, who died at the age of three. The family came to America in 1840 and settled in Randolph township, Portage county, Ohio, and here the father, for a short time, followed his trade of weaver, and then bought a farm, which he cultivated until his death, which occurred at the age of eighty years, in the faith of the Catholic church, in which faith, also, the mother was called away May 21, 1890, aged eighty-four.

Peter Rothermel was but five years of age when brought to Randolph township by his parents, and was here reared to manhood on his father's farm, receiving but a limited education. At the age of twenty-one years he hired out among the neighboring farmers as a helper until his first marriage, which took place October 4, 1858, to Miss Elizabeth Elmerich, daughter of Joseph and Mary Elmerich, but to this union there was no issue, as Mrs. Rothermel was called away July 12, 1859, in the faith of the Catholic church. October 5, 1859, Mr. Rothermel was united in wedlock with Miss Mollie Weidaman, who was born in Randolph township June 27, 1842, a daughter of of John and Magdalena (Spellman) Weidaman, and this union has been blessed with ten children, viz: Margaret, Frank, Henry, Andrew, Annie, Otto, Clara, Joseph, Edward and Leo.

John Weidaman, father of Mrs. Mollie Rothermel, is a native of Germany and a carpenter by trade. He began life a poor man, but was very industrious and economical in his earlier days of labor, and is now one of the most respected and substantial citizens of his township. Politically he is a democrat, and for many years has served as supervisor of his township and as school director, and in religion is a Catholic, to which faith all his family devoutly adhere.

In his professionally fraternal relationship, the doctor is a member of the Northeastern Ohio Medical society—his only other fraternal connection being with the Knights of Pythias. In politics he is a democrat, and during the last administration of President Cleveland he was a member of the board of Portage county pension examiners; he has also served as a member of the school board for several years, and in both positions has fully and creditably attended to his duties.

This venerable lady died July 9, 1897, at the extreme age of 103 years.

In 1867 he quit railroading and spent a year in the law department of the university of Michigan, at Ann Arbor. 1868 he was admitted to the bar at Ravenna, Ohio, where he practiced until September, 1870, when he came to Akron. As a republican he was elected, in 1872, prosecuting attorney, and served one term; in 1876 was elected city solicitor; in 1887 was elected to the state legislature and re-elected in 1889, when he introduced and secured the passage of numerous important bills.

January 19, 1857, Mr. Sanford was married, in Lorain county, Ohio, to Miss Emily J. Fairchild, a native of that county and a daughter of Elam and Lydia (Wilcox) Fairchild, and this union was crowned by the birth of three children, viz: William H., attorney and real-estate dealer; Burton J., grocer of Akron, and May F., who is a graduate of the Cleveland Art school, and who possesses superior art qualities. The mother of these children died January 6, 1890, a member of the Congregational church, and was a woman filled with charity and good will toward mankind and of more than ordinary mental ability. Mr. Sanford, in his fraternal affiliations, early became a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. Outside of his regular practice, he is the attorney for the Peoples' Savings bank.

William H. Sanford, elder son of Hon. Henry C. Sanford, was born in Lorain county, Ohio, February 2, 1859, and was eleven years of age when his parents came to Akron. Here he was graduated from the high school in 1877, after which he attended Buchtel college two years, and then entered the Cincinnati Law school, from which he was graduated in 1883, since which time he has been engaged in legal practice in Akron, making a specialty of real estate. He is associated with his father in business, and, like him, is a republican.

Aaron Sackett, father of our subject, was born January 7, 1891, on the old Sackett homestead, received the usual common education and became a school-teacher. He followed farming all his life and married in Warren, Conn., Hulda C. Tanner, a native of Warren and daughter of Deacon William Tanner, a lieutenant of the Revolutionary war, who fought under Gen. Anthony Wayne at Stony Point. In 1836 Aaron Sackett moved to Canandaigua, N. Y., where he lived two years in order that his children might attend its excellent academy and seminary.

In 1838 he came to Ohio and settled in Tallmadge township, Summit county, where he bought a farm of 160 acres, but in 1868 retired and lived with his son William, at Copley, until his death, in 1872, at the age of eighty-four years. In politics Mr. Sauder is a democrat, and for three years was a member of the library board, two years of the time being its secretary. He had always been a devoted student of literature and was admirably well fitted for the position. In 1893 he was nominated for the probate judgeship, and in 1896 was renominated. The great-grandparents of subject were Benjamin and Margaret (Haynes) Sawyer, who were the children of English colonists. Their children were Thomas, William, Hannah Peters and James.

Thomas, paternal grandfather of subject, was born in Dauphin county, Pa., in 1782, and was married to Elizabeth Day, March 6, 1806. In 1810 they moved to Union county, Pa., and in October, 1829, they moved to the "Old Sawyer" farm in Springfield township, Summit county, Ohio, bringing with them their ten children. The trip was made in covered wagons and they were on the road fourteen days. Their children were James S., Thomas H., Matilda M., John B., Ann E., Robert V., father of subject, Hannah S., William G. W., Benjamin F. and Mary J. Margaret C., was born after her parents came to Ohio.

The children of James and Mary (Fife) Sawyer were Benjamin, Margaret Kelly, Martha Sawyer, mother of subject, Hannah, Mary, Thomas, William, John and Isabel List.

William T. Sawyer was reared on his father's farm in Springfield township, where he attended the district school. After his father's death his mother moved to Akron, so that the children could have better educational advantages. After spending two years in the city schools and two years in the preparatory department of Buchtel college he was admitted to the college proper, where he studied four years and graduated with his class June 23, 1887.

He then made an extensive trip through the west and south, visiting nearly twenty states, and finally settled down at Knoxville, Tenn., where he read law under the direction of the firm of Kornic & Caldwell. After passing the examination for admission to the bar of Tennessee, in May, 1888, he returned to Akron, making the trip on a bicycle. He was employed as a reporter on the Akron Daily Telegram for about six months, at the same time diligently prosecuting his studies of law, and was admitted to practice at the Ohio bar in June, 1890. He at once opened an office, and some months later formed a partnership with James V. Welsh, his present associate. They transact a general law business and are meeting with more than ordinary success. Their firm ranks well up toward the head of the Summit county bar, and they are known throughout northeastern Ohio as conscientious and successful lawyers.

Fraternally, Mr. Sawyer is an Odd Fellow and is a member of Summit lodge, No. 50. Politically, he is a democrat, is particularly active in his party, and has done earnest work in its behalf. His voice has been heard on the hustings in every campaign since 1884. He is a fluent speaker and has frequently held the attention of his audience for two hours and a half at a time. He has repeatedly served his party as a member and twice as chairman of the county executive committee. He has held the office of police prosecutor, and in 1895 was elected treasurer of Portage township and re-elected to that office in 1897.

At the solicitation of his ardent party friends he made the race for state representative in 1895 and has ever since rejoiced in the fact that he was defeated. In 1896 he was the nominee of his party for representative in congress, made a thorough canvass, and received twice as many votes as any other democratic nominee for that office ever received in the district since its organization.

He was instrumental in the establishment of the Daily Democrat in 1892 and is still a director and treasurer of the company by which it is published. For several years after the paper was started he was frequently referred to as the "Daddy of the Democrat."

He is a member of the Akron club and is a trustee of Buchtel college.

Mr. Sawyer was married October 15, 1889, to Miss Bessie C. Voris, youngest daughter of Gen. A. C. Voris, and their union has been crowned by the birth of one child, Lucy Martha.

Mrs. Sawyer is a woman of artistic and literary tastes. The walls of her home are covered with pictures from her brush, in oil and water colors, which show much more than ordinary ability. In addition to her familiarity with all the standard authors, she has written a number of short stories, which her friends have fruitlessly urged her to offer for publication. She is a member of the Universalist church and the Daughters of the American Revolution.

The family residence stands on the brow of North Hill and is surrounded by spacious rustic grounds, upon which many of the native forest trees still flourish. Mr. Sawyer and his wife are among the most respected residents of Akron.

factor, and his counsel along this line was much sought after.

May 25, 1870, James Geer Brewster was united in marriage with Miss Mary Davies, daughter of Rev. David and Rachel (Williams) Davies, natives of Wales, where Mrs. Brewster was also born. To Mr. and Mrs. Brewster were born nine children, of whom eight are living—Albert James; Martha V., now Mrs. John Shaffer; Mary I., Rose V., Modena R., Louise M., David Davies, and James Geer. Of these children, Laura S. is now deceased, and Mr. Brewster, it is sad to add, died January 1, 1897.

To better educate her children Mrs. Brewster has removed from the homestead at Thomastown to Akron, and now resides at No. 119 Johnson street, where she will readily be enabled to secure the means, through the excellent educational institutions of the city, of carrying out the commendable purpose which brought her to Akron.

The Davies family, from which Mrs. Brewster descends, came to the United States in 1852 and settled in Portage county. Her father, of whom a sketch is given in full on another page, was born in 1817 and died at Paris (now Wayland) in Portage county, August 2, 1888. He was prominent as a Congregational minister and noted as the Welsh poet and wrote over the nom de plume of Dewi Emlyn. His wife was born in 1815 and died September 19, 1895. Of the nine children born to Rev. and Mrs. Davies three survive: Mary, Rev. David and Rachel, and no family of Portage county was ever more closely endeared to the population.

REDERICK W. SCHUMACHER, one of the best known, most prosperous and most highly respected farmers of Bath township, is a native of Germany, and is a descendant of an old and honored family in that country. His great-grandfather, Henry C. Schumacher, born June 12, 1749, in Wiensen, county of Usler, province of Hanover, was in the seven-year war with Frederick the Great, joining the military in November, 1767, and serving for six years and a half. Following this service he went to Hanover and turned his attention to letters, thoroughly equipping himself for the profession of teaching. In 1775 he was tendered a position as teacher in the village of Marienhagen, in the county of Lauenstein, which he occupied with honor for forty years. The next in line was George Henry Ludwig, born September 13, 1780, in Neuhaus, province of Hanover. He was a merchant, an extensive landowner and speculator, and had amassed a large fortune, which by unfortunate investments he lost. His son, Albert, the father of our subject, was born at Bevern, in the dukedom of Brunswick, Germany, July 30; 1827. He began the active duties of life as a merchant, and later as a traveling salesman, after several years of which experience he entered the military service, in 1848, serving two years in the artillery. After this duty to his country he established a cutlery factory and store, which he conducted and is still conducting with much success. He married Louisa Buse, who was born September 14. 1835, a daughter of William Buse, and to them were born three sons: Frederick William, our subject, born April 15, 1858; Theodore, born in 1860, now a leading jeweler in Germany; and Hermann, born in 1868, a prosperous merchant in his native country, whose army services were performed in the infantry between the years 1894-1896.

Frederick William Schumacher received his education in the public schools of his native town of Bevern and at the normal school at Holzminden. After a brief experience in the mercantile way he entered the army when he was sixteen years of age, serving in the cavalry until 1879. He then had charge of his father's business for a year. Determining that there were wider possibilities in this country, he decided to come to America, and in 1880 landed in New York city. directly to this county, and has managed the farm on which he now resides in Bath township, and also owns a residence in Akron. This farm consists of 200 finely-kept acres of rich river bottom land, well improved, and possesses good buildings and excellent apple and peach orchards. Mr. Schumacher stocked the farm well with full-blooded Holstein cattle and fine horses. He is a special lover of a fine horse, and has a number of which he may well be proud.

On April 14, 1880, Mr. Schumacher was united in marriage to Miss Frances, daughter of William and Mary Cranz. To them were born two children: Katie, born August 1, 1881, and Ferdinand, born September 26, 1882. A sad bereavement to this household was the death of the wife and mother. Mr. Schumacher afterward married Miss Clara Emig, daughter of Martin and Sophia (Wehrly) Emig, who were the parents of the following chidren: Clara, born November 19, 1868; Edward, January 11, 1870; Charles, December 1, 1872; Mary, July 11, 1879; and Albert, March 5, 1881. Martin Emig was a veteran in the late war, serving with company C, One Hundred and Seventh Ohio volunteer infantry. To our subject, by his second marriage, four children have been given: Herbert O., born July 8, 1890; Helen S., March 12, 1892; Hermine E., March 19, 1894; and Louisa, February 9, 1896.

Mr. Schumacher and his family are delightfully situated in their pleasant home, and he is well liked by all who know him. In addition to the superior education he received in his native tongue, he has acquired a competent knowledge of English and keeps well informed on current affairs. Incidentally, he is a nephew of Ferdinand Schumacher, the oatmeal magnate.

In politics Mr. Schumacher is an ardent supporter of the principles of the republican party. He is a member of the Knights of Maccabees, lodge No. 281, and a member of the German military organization at Akron, Ohio. Both he and Mrs. Schumacher are members and earnest supporters of the German Lutheran church at Akron, Ohio.

OUIS G. SCHWEITZER, a well-known business man of Ravenna, Portage county, was born in Cleveland, Cuyahoga county, Ohio, January 4, 1856, and is a son of Frederick and Catherine (Engelhorn) Schweitzer, natives of Bavaria, Germany, born, respectively, June 18, 1829, and January 3, 1829.

Frederick Schweitzer received a good education in his native land, and in 1847 came to the United States with his parents, who settled on a farm near Parma, about nine miles from Cleveland, Cuyahoga county, Ohio, and there he remained until twenty-one years of age, when he went to Cleveland and for three years served an apprenticeship at the blacksmith's trade in the shop of Mr. Burrows. For the seventeen years following he was employed as foreman in the John Drum Carriage works, and then moved to Marquette, Mich., where for three years he was employed by a brother, and in 1867 returned to Cleveland, where he took charge of Goodfellow's hall and conducted a wine, liquor and restaurant business until September 25, 1871, when he moved into his own building, known as Schweitzer's hall, at the corner of Pearl and Bridge streets, and here conducted a large billiard room, in conjunction with a sample room, until his death, which occurred July 24, 1893. To the marriage of Frederick Schweitzer with Miss Engelhorn were born five children, viz: George, now deceased; Louis G., the subject; Lizzie, now Mrs. Metzger; Frederick, Jr., and Catherine, now Mrs. Lang.

Louis G. Schweitzer attended the public schools of Cleveland until thirteen years old, and then worked for his father until his marriage, November 30, 1887, with Miss Lena Gretzinger, of Ravenna, a daughter of Martin and Lena Gretzinger, old and respected residents of Portage county. Martin Gretzinger was the owner of the oldest tannery in the state of Ohio, it having been started in 1810 by Jared Mason, who came from Beaver county, Pa., and did a lucrative business for three years, dying in 1813. In 1815 J. T. Wells married the widow of Mr. Mason, and thus became possessor of the tannery, which, in partnership with Jesse R. Grant, father of Gen. U. S. Grant, he conducted for several years, when it passed into the hands of Mr. Gretzinger, who ran it for many years, or until 1867, when it was disposed of to C. F. Goeppinger. This old tannery was located southeast of the court-house grounds, and some of the vats are still to be seen in the cellar of the original building on Jefferson street, Ravenna. To the marriage of Mr. Schweitzer with Miss Gretzinger have been born two children—Karl Frederick, June 20, 1892, and Fritz Lewis, October 5, 1894.

Mr. Schweitzer is engaged in the wine and liquor business at No. 117 Chestnut street, the building having once been occupied by a school taught by Mrs. President Garfield in her younger days, but now owned by the parents of Mrs. Schweitzer, and here he is doing a prosperous trade. He is a member of Lake Shore lodge, No. 6, K. of P., of Cleveland; of lodge No. 295, B. & P. O. E., of Warren, and of the Ravenna Gun club—being an enthusiastic sportsman. In politics he is a republican, and is a useful and popular citizen. Mrs. Schweitzer is a consistent member of the Congregational church and is a most estimable lady in every respect.

ON. AARON MORGAN SHERMAM,
M. D., of Kent, Portage county,
Ohio, was born in Brimfield, Mass., March 24, 1826, and descends from one of the very old English families of New England. Of two brothers and a cousin of the name who came to America in 1634, one brother settled in Massachusetts, the other in Connecticut, and the cousin in Providence,

R. I. From the settler in Massachusetts the doctor is descended, while Gen. W. T. Sherman and Senator John Sherman descend from the settler in Connecticut. The great-grandfather of subject, Dr. John Sherman, was one of the two brothers who came from England; the great-grandfather of subject was named Thomas; and the grandfather, also named Thomas, lived and died on his farm in Brimfield, which farm is still owned by the family of the late Elijah Sherman.

Capt. Harris Sherman, father of the doctor, was born February 22, 1790, was reared on the home farm, and married Sally Morgan, a native of Brimfield, Mass., born June 30, 1790, a daughter of Aaron Morgan. After marriage he purchased a farm near the old homestead and continued in the pursuit of agriculture. In early life he had been a member of a military organization, in which he held the rank of captain, and during the war of 1812 was twice commissioned to recruit a company of soldiers, in which he was successful, but did not enter into the war himself, owing to the severe illness of his father. In 1831 Capt. Sherman disposed of his home farm and took in exchange, as part payment, a tract of 250 acres in Brimfield, Portage county, Ohio, of which he took immediate possession, and brought hither his wife and six children. This farm is now one of the best improved and best cultivated of any in its immediate He was always active in politics, being first a whig and later a republican, and held several local offices. He was one of the founders of the Pioneer association of Portage and Summit counties, and he and his wife were pioneer members of the Universalist church, in the faith of which his wife died August 3, 1870, and he February 14, 1878, the parents of eight children, viz: Lewis M., a resident of Kent, Ohio; Caleb, who was a farmer and died in Kent, Portage county, in 1856; Caroline, who died unmarried; Sarah, who is married to William R. Matthews, and resides in Lynnville, Jasper county, Iowa; Dr. Aaron M., the subject; Thomas, a farmer of Jasper county, Iowa; John Warren, who was a farmer and died in Brimfield, Portage county, Ohio, and Otis S., who died at eight years of age.

Dr. Sherman was but five years of age when brought by his parents to Ohio. The trip was made from their farm to Albany, N. Y., by wagon, and by canal and lake Eric to Cleveland, Ohio (that city containing a population at that time of only 1,000), and from Cleveland to Akron by the Ohio canal. He was reared on his father's farm, and received such education as the district schools of the day afforded. He then taught school four winters, and at night taught singing school—all the family being excellent vocalists. At the age of twenty years he commenced reading medicine under Dr. John A. Knowlton at Garrettsville, Portage county, and in 1851 was graduated from the Cleveland Medical college, which was then the medical department of the Western Reserve univer-He at once entered upon his practice in Garrettsville, and there remained until 1857, when he removed to Kent, being now the oldest physician in the city. From 1857 until 1860 he was also engaged in the drug trade and met with much success both as a practitioner and as a pharmacist. In 1864-65 he was assistant surgeon in the Lincoln general hospital at Washington, D. C., but with that exception his practice has been confined to Kent and vicinity since 1857, having been surgeon for several railroad companies for many years while pursuing his general practice. The doctor is a member of the Union Medical association of northeastern Ohio, and was its second president; the State Medical society and the Portage county Medical society, before all of which he has made many interesting addresses, and has, beside, contributed many valuable articles to the better class of medical journals of the day.

In politics the doctor was originally a whig, and cast his first presidential vote for Zachary Taylor. He united with the republicans on the formation of that party, and his first public office was that of coroner of Portage county, and was acting in that capacity when the distressing railroad accident happened at Ravenna, July 3, 1891, through which twenty-three lives were lost—nineteen of the victims being burned beyond recognition. In 1884 he was elected a member of the Ohio general assembly, and served on several highly important committees, and he has, beside, held many local offices.

The doctor is now the president of the Pioneer association of Portage and Summit counties, which he assisted to organize in 1874, and of which he drew up the constitution and by-laws, having been the first secretary of the association-a position he filled twenty consecutive years. Since the association was formed there have been over 600 deaths of its members, the average longevity of whom was over eighty years, and of whom the doctor has written the biographical sketches of over 500. Dr. Sherman was made a Mason at Garrettsville, Ohio, in 1856, is one of the charter members of Rockton lodge, No. 316, of Kent, which was organized in 1858, and of which he was the first master, serving ten years. also a member of Washington chapter, R. A. M., at Akron.

The first marriage of Dr. Sherman was solemnized in 1851, with Miss Henrietta Tabor, in Garretsville. This lady was a daughter of John Tabor, and died in 1854, without issue. The second marriage was celebrated in October, 1854, with Miss Harriet A. Gray, a native of Ravenna township, Portage county, and a daughter of Watson I. Gray. This happy union has been blessed with one son, Harris G., now a celebrated oculist of Cleveland. The doctor has been an extensive traveler throughout the United States, visiting forty states and territories, and the winters of 1893-94 and 1895-96 were passed by himself and wife in Pasadena, Los Angeles county, Cal. They are members of the Universalist church and have a pleasant home, but the doctor has never had any inordinate desire for wealth, and his ambition is gratified by the fact that he stands at the head of his profession and he and his wife are deservedly esteemed by all who know them.

OHN SISLER, retired merchant and farmer of Franklin township, Summit county, Ohio, and now a resident of Manchester, was born in Lycoming county, Pa., December 16, 1817, and is a grandson of Lewis Sisler, who was a native of Germany and was there married, but about 1775 came to America, before any of his children were born, and first located in Boston, Mass., where, for a short time, he taught school; later he moved to Lancaster county, Pa., thence to Lycoming county, and, being a highly educated man, followed the profession of educator until his death, which occurred in Lycoming county about 1820. His children were born in the following order: George, Nicholas, Lewis, Houston, Betsey, and Mary.

Lewis Sisler, son of Lewis, the immigrant, was born in Lancaster county, Pa., about 1790, was a farmer from childhood, and about the year 1812 married Margaret Marsh, daughter of George Marsh, a German, and to this marriage were born eleven children, viz: George W., Houston, John, William, Thomas, Adam, Charles, Mary A., Lewis, James and Margaret. In 1824 the family moved to Erie county, N. Y., where the father engaged in farming until his death, in August, 1855, and in 1856 the mother came to Summit county, Ohio, and passed the remainder of her life with her daughter Margaret, dying on the 28th day of March, 1872.

John Sisler was reared on a farm, received a good academic education, taught school one term in York state, and on September 10, 1839, came to Franklin township, Summit county, Ohio, and here taught several years. He was married in this county, June 1, 1853, to Miss Mary C. Justes, a native of Wayne county, Ohio, and a daughter of Michael J. and Margaret (Hoy) Justes, and this union has been blessed with the following children: Ida, wife of Hiram Allen; William W., Cassius C., John M., deceased; Abbie, now Mrs. Price; Elizabeth, wife of Thomas Prout; Mary, married to Isaac Myers; Arthur, Bertha and When Mr. Sisler first came to Franklin township the country was quite new to civilization, although log cabins were numerous and all the school-houses were built of logs, as were many of the churches, and he has been an eye-witness of hundreds of changes for the better, and in these changes he has himself been a prime factor. His present homestead comprises twenty acres, to which he has retired to pass in peace the remaining vears of his long and useful life. In politics he is a republican; he has filled the office of justice of the peace many years, and has served in minor offices when called upon to do so. He and wife are members of the Disciples' church, of which he has been an elder for a number of years, and they have reared a family which is a credit to the township.

A. G. Sisler, of the firm of Sisler & Co., general merchants of Manchester, and a son of John and Mary C. Sisler, was born in Franklin township September 19, 1867, and passed his earlier days on his father's farm. He received a good common-school education, which was supplemented by an attendance of three years at the Valparaiso (Indiana) normal college. For the past four years, in partnership with his brother, William W., he has been doing a very successful retail business in general merchandise, their stock in trade being well asorted and equally well adapted to the wants of the community, while their affable treatment of their patrons make them universal favorites with the buying public. 9, 1896, A. G. Sisler was happily united in marriage with Miss Cora Reifsynder, daughter of Edward Reifsnyder, a resident of Green township, Summit county. In politics Mr Sisler is a strong republican, and in religion he adheres to the faith of his forefathers and is very liberal in his financial aid to the church.

William W. Sisler, an elder brother of A. G. and his partner in business, was born in Franklin township January 16, 1855, and is still unmarried. In politics he is also a republican, and fraternally is a member of lodge No. 173, Junior Order American Mechanics, of Clinton, Ohio. Like his brother, he is very popular both as a merchant and citizen, and the entire Sisler family stand among the foremost of the residents of Franklin township and Summit county.

Mrs. Sisler was a native of Wayne county, Ohio, and was educated in the common schools. There were nine children in the Justes family, four sons and five daughters, only five now living, of whom Elizabeth is the wife of Elijah Troxel, of Defiance, Ohio, a plasterer by trade; Ellen, wife of Lewis Farris, of Garretts-ville, Ohio; Nancy, wife of a Mr. Brown, a miller of Evansport, Ohio; Samuel, of Striker, Ohio, and a plasterer by trade; and Mrs. Sisler, of this biography. Those deceased are William, Susan, James and David. For almost one-half century have Mr. and Mrs. Sisler traveled life's journey hand in hand, sharing the joys and sorrows of life, and now in the declining years of their lives are living in peace and contentment, surrounded by their loving children and dear friends, who will be glad to read this excellent life sketch of this worthy couple.

J. M. Sisler, M. D., son of Mr. and Mrs. Sisler, was a young man of brilliant promise. He graduated from the Cincinnati Medical college March 1, 1882, and located in Manchester, Ohio, and three years after his graduation his life labors ended, he dying at twenty-seven years of age. He married Miss Ella Kaufman, a native of Manchester, Ohio. During his short but useful life he had also engaged in teaching, and was successful to a marked degree.

DAM SISLER, M. D., of Manchester, Summit county, Ohio, is a native of Lycoming county, Pa., and was born December 30, 1823. He traces his ancestry to Germany, whence his paternal grandfather came to America after marriage, and bought a farm in Lycoming county, Pa., where, after taking part in the war of 1812, he died in the faith of the Presbyterian church and in politics a whig.

Lewis Sisler, son of the immigrant mentioned above, was born in Lycoming county, Pa., in 1790, there grew to manhood and married Margaret Marsh, who was born in 1795, a daughter of George Marsh, who came from Germany, and to this marriage were born the following children: George W., Houston, John, William, Thomas, Adam, Mary A., Charles, Lewis, Margaret and James. 1827 Lewis Sisler moved his family to Erie county, N. Y., where he purchased a farm with a log cabin on it, but with no other improvement. This farm Mr. Sisler cleared from the wilderness and erected on it good, substantial buildings, and made it one of the best homesteads in the county. He became a man of wealth and influence, and gave all his sons academic educations, and, as a whig, was elected to several township offices. He died on his farm in August, 1855, in the Presbyterian faith; his widow subsequently came to Summit county, Ohio, and died March 28, 1872, in Manchester.

Dr. Adam Sisler was but four years of age when his parents removed from Pennsylvania to New York, and in the latter state attended the academy at Aurora, where he later taught school a year and then came to Manchester, Ohio, where he taught four years, in the meantime reading medicine with his brother, William. In the fall of 1847 he entered Cleveland Medical college, studied one year, then practiced three years, after which he re-entered college and graduated therefrom in 1853. He immediately returned to Manchester, and for twenty years was associated with his brother, who finally removed to Akron, and there passed the remainder of his life. In the early years of the doctor's practice here the country was new and the roads little better than trails, and he was forced to travel a radius of thirty or forty miles on horseback in order to attend to his patients; but he has been very successful, and his reputation, hard earned as it is, is as high as that of any physician in the county.

In politics the doctor was at first a whig, but is now a prohibitionist. In religion he is of the belief of the Disciples, in whose church he has for many years been an elder. April 6, 1848, the doctor married Miss Amanda E. Hoy, who was born in February, 1828, a daughter of John and Elizabeth (Troxler) Hoy, natives of Pennsylvania and early pioneers of Summit county, Ohio. Mr. Hoy ran the first stage line between Wellsville and Cleveland, Ohio, and was also the first innkeeper in Manchester. He was a leader in the whig party, held office as associate county judge, was land appraiser two terms, and for a long time a justice of the peace. He was an elder in the Disciples' church and died in that faith August 6, 1883, having lost his wife June 20, 1866. To the marriage of Dr. Sisler and wife have been born the following children: Frances E., wife of Lafayette Swigart; Charles E.; Clara A., wife of Frank Raber; Caroline B.; Lewis E.; Everett B.; John L.; Jennie L., wife of Prof. Rood, and William H. Dr. Sisler is now probably the oldest as well as the most prominent physician in Summit county, is known far and wide, and has acquired a competency in his practice, but is too closely devoted to his profession to abandon it, although he could easily afford to do so, but such a step would prove a matter of regret and an irreparable loss to a large portion of the suffering invalids in his community.

EWIS E. SISLER, M. D., and county auditor of Summit county, Ohio, was born April 8, 1860, a son of Dr. Adam and Amanda (Hoy) Sisler, the place of his nativity being the village of Manchester, in the county of which he is now the auditor.

Lewis E. Sisler was primarily educated in the district school of Manchester, graduated from the high school, next attended the Smithville academy, and then entered the Northwestern Ohio normal university at Ada. Following his graduation from the latter institution, he taught school two or more years in Manchester and its environs, and in 1879 began reading medicine. When he had been sufficiently prepared by diligent study for a full comprehension of oral utterances, he attended lectures at the medical department of the Western Reserve university at Cleveland, from which he received his diploma in the spring of 1883. He then practiced his profession, in partnership with his father, for a year or more, in his native village, whence he moved to Clinton, Summit county, where his practice was so remunerative that he remained there fourteen years, establishing an imperishable reputation for unusual skill and proficiency.

In politics Dr. Sisler is an uncompromising republican, and for eleven years has been a member of the republican county executive committee, of which he was vice-chairman three years, and chairman in 1890. In 1889 he was appointed, by President Harrison, a member of the Akron board of pension examiners, and in 1895 elected auditor of Summit county by the handsome plurality of 1,600, and was qualified for the office September 14, 1896, and up to the present writing no word of disparagement has been uttered against him, but, on the other hand, constant praise has been his, for the able manner in which he has filled the duties of his office.

The first marriage of Dr. Sisler took place in 1884, to Miss Metta B. Miller, of Canal Fulton, and to this union were born two children—Dreamond Miller and John Rutherford. The doctor was bereaved of his amiable wife May 25, 1891, and in December, 1895, he married Miss Eva Tilton, a highly accomplished lady, also of Canal Fulton. In religion Mrs. Sisler adheres to the Methodist Episcopal church, while the doctor worships with the Christian society. The fraternal relations of Dr. Sisler are broad and extended, as he holds membership with the Masonic order, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias, the Benevolent & Protective Order of Elks, and the Knights of Maccabees, in which last-named order he is medical examiner-in-chief for the state of The doctor and his amiable lady hold a very high position in the social circles of Akron, as they also did while residing in Manchester, and his professional success has ever been a matter of satisfaction to himself as well as of congratulation by his numerous friends.

Straub. Mr. Sprenkel and wife are members of the Reformed church, are greatly respected in their community, and Mr. Sprenkel has served his fellow-citizens in various official capacities.

Charles Sprenkel, paternal grandfather of Charles Oliver, was born in Germany, came to Ohio in early life, was twice married, reared two large families, and died at the advanced age of eighty-six years. The maternal grandparents of Charles Oliver were natives of England, and early settlers of Pennsylvania; they had born to them ten children, of whom Mary Ann, wife of William Crist, Charlotte, wife of Charles Sprenkel, and Margaret, widow of Henry Kessler, are still living; the deceased were Matilda, Sadie, John, George, Samuel, Martha and Maria. The father of this family died in 1881, at the age of seventy-seven years, and his wife in 1887, aged eighty-one years, and both sincere Methodists.

Charles Oliver Sprenkel was reared on his father's farm in Pennsylvania until eighteen years of age and then worked about nineteen months in a grist-mill, intending to thoroughly learn the trade, but relinquished it on account of the dust, and worked in the ore banks about eighteen months, then resumed milling for nineteen months, when, early in 1883, he drifted westward to Erie, Pa., where he worked in a saw-mill until July of the same year, when he came to Summit county, Ohio, and engaged in farming until December, 1887, when he went to Akron, where he was employed as a carpenter (having partly learned the trade in Pennsylvania) about five years, and later engaged in the jewelry business, earrying on a store until 1897, when he came to Springfield township and engaged in farming.

Mr. Sprenkel was united in marriage, in Springfield township, November 16, 1882, with Miss Catherine Stein, who was born August 1, 1860, in Green township, a daughter of John and Rebecca (Peters) Stein, and this union has been blessed with two children, Mary C. and Maud R.

Daniel Stein, grandfather of Mrs. Sprenkel, was born in Baden, Germany, was a farmer, and came to America in 1831. Of his eight children the only one living is Catherine, wife of Henry Strohman; the deceased seven were named Daniel, Peter, Elizabeth (wife of John Brown, also deceased), Henry, Magdalen, Mary (Mrs. Daniel Winkelman) and John. The maternal grandparents of Mrs. Sprenkel were natives of Pennsylvania, where the grandfather was a school-teacher for many years, and later, for a long time, postmaster in Summit county, Ohio. To his marriage with Miss Catherine Dague were born six children, of whom but one survives—Elizabeth, wife of Simon Keifer; the deceased were George Henry (who died in the army), Simon, Susan (wife of William Beaty), Mary (wife of Jonas Braucher) and Rebecca (wife of John Stein). The parents of these children died within nine days each of the other, in June, 1869.

John Stein, father of Mrs. Sprenkel, was born in Baden, Germany, July 16, 1820, and his wife, Rebecca, was born in Dauphin county, Pa., January 24, 1840. John Stein was first a shoemaker and then a farmer, in Springfield township. He first married Catherine Kreighbaum, who bore him two sons, Jacob and Andrew, the former of whom died in infancy and the latter at twenty-two years of age. The second marriage of John Stein took place February 5, 1859, to Miss Rebecca Peters, daughther of John and Catherine (Dague) Peters, and to this union were born eleven children, of whom ten are still living, viz: Catherine (Mrs. Sprenkel); Mary, born April 23, 1862, and now the wife of Charles Miller; Henry E., born December 14, 1866, married to Ellen Pontius and residing in Akron; John W., born March 8, 1869; Charles F., born March 20, 1871, and married to Nettie Metz; Ida E., born May 1, 1873; George Oliver, born June 10, 1875—now a resident of Akron; Simeon P., born August 3, 1877; Lavina May, born May 24, 1880, and Frederick, born July 30, 1883, and who makes his home with Mr. Sprenkel; Etta was born September 2, 1864, was married to William Mitchell, and died March 13, 1893. mother of this family died March 31, 1896, at the age of fifty-six years and two months, and the father December 18, 1896, aged seventy-six years, five months and three days, both being members of the Reformed church.

It was while Mr. Sprenkel was engaged in the jewelry business in Akron that the parents of Mrs. Sprenkel were called from earth, and this event led to his taking charge of the old Stein homestead in Springfield township, which is now his home, and which he has shown himself to be fully capable of managing. In politics he is a democrat, and in 1897 was elected supervisor of Springfield township, of which office he is still the incumbent. He is a member of Knights of Pythias lodge, No. 598, of Akron, and is highly respected as one of the most upright and useful citizens of Springfield township.

ILLIAM H. STAMM, an experienced and skilled blacksmith of Manchester, Summit county, Ohio, is a native of this village and was born May 21, 1856, a son of William and Louisa (Grubb) Stamm.

John Stamm, grandfather of subject, was born near Philadelphia, Pa., of German parentage, but married in Stark county, Ohio, Mary Braucher, a daughter of Jacob Braucher, and for a few years lived on a farm in Jackson township, Stark county, and then came to Summit county, where he died in the fall of 1840, when the widow returned to her former home. William Stamm, father of subject, was born in Stark county, Ohio, December 19, 1828, on his father's farm, and was educated in the pioneer log school-house. He was the eldest of the five children born to his parents, and his father's early death threw him upon his own resources, and he began life for himself by working for the pioneer farmers for four dollars per month-at that time considered to be very good wages. He first married Louisa Grubb, who was born in Summit county, Ohio, in 1830, a daughter of John and Margaret (Kintz) Grubb, pioneers from Lancaster county, Pa. This lady bore her husband four children—Almon (deceased); William, our subject; Frances died at three years, and Alice, wife of James Proctor. Mrs. Stamm died December 3, 1863, a member of the Disciples' church-and Mr. Stamm then married Margaret E. Grubb, a sister of his deceased wife. Mr. Stamm first engaged in blacksmithing in Manchester in 1848, worked here eleven years, and then moved to Canal Fulton, where he worked eight years, and thence went to Montville township, Geauga county, where he bought a farm and built a blacksmith shop, and there he still resides. In politics he is a republican, and he and wife are adherents of the Disciples' church.

William H. Stamm, the subject of this memoir, was educated in the schools of Canal Fulton and Kent, and at nineteen years of age entered his father's shop and became a thorough blacksmith. October 10, 1880, he married Miss Savila Singer, a native of Green township, Summit county, born January 22, 1857, and a daughter of Gephart and Annie (Epler) Singer, who came from Germany to Summit county in 1855; here the mother died October 9, 1889, and the father June 11, 1892, both

They are much respected in the social circles of the village, and it is an acknowledged fact that Mr. Stamm has no superior as a blacksmith in Summit county.

OE JAMES STANFORD, the well-known funeral director and scientific embalmer of Ravenna, Ohio, was born in Randolph township, Portage county, September 7, 1841, and is a descendant, maternally, of one of the oldest families of America, being a son of Orrin and Eliza O. (Coe) Stanford.

The Coe family came to this country from Suffolkshire, England, where they had resided for many generations. The earliest notice of them which can be found is in "Fox's Book of Martyrs," which states that Roger Coe, of Milford, Suffolkshire, was burned at the stake by Queen Mary in September, 1555. Little else is known of the family until the removal of Robert Coe from Suffolkshire to America, and who, in a genealogy of nine generations, represents the first. He was born in 1596, and with his wife Anna, born in 1591, and their three sons, landed in Boston in June, 1634. Thus by a direct line of descent the family can be traced, almost from the landing of the Pilgrim fathers.

Deacon James P. Coe was the maternal grandfather of the subject, and the father of Eliza O. Coe, who married Orrin Stanford. Deacon Coe was born in Granville, Mass., March 19, 1769, and married Nancy Pratt, by whom he had six children. In 1811 he removed to Randolph township in this county and resided there for a period of thirty-four years, or until his death. His numerous family married and settled in various lines of business in Portage county, and their representatives are numbered among the prominent families to-day.

The Coes were exemplary people—the office of deacon in the Congregational church being held for sixty-two years by James, Almon B. and James P., respectively, representing three consecutive generations.

Little is known of the ancestral history of the Stanford family. Orrin Stanford, father of our subject, was born in New York state, and when a child of two years, accompanied his parents to Portage county, Ohio. Here his life was spent, the township of Randolph being the location of the family home. Mr. Stanford, though possessed of a good farm, spent most of his life in mechanical pursuits. He was a carpenter by trade, a profession which our subject followed for several years.

Orrin and Eliza Stanford had a family of eight children born to them, our subject, the second in order of birth, and his sister, Stella O., being the only survivors. The eldest of this family was Celestine, who died in young womanhood. Stella resides at Randolph Center, in this county, unmarried. Hiram died at twenty years of age a young man of bright promise; Rolla died in infancy. Rosa died of atrophy of the heart—a young lady of eighteen. Flora and Cora—twins—died at the age of four years of diphtheria.

Coe J. Stanford, the subject, passed his early years on the farm and also learned the use of tools in his father's carpenter shop. He acquired a fair common-school education and had spent something over a year as a student in Hiram college when the war cloud called him from his studies to bear arms in defense of the Union. Mr. Stanford is one of the few survivors who had the honor to serve his country under command of the distinguished and lamented Gen. Garfield. He enlisted September 25, 1861, as a member of company A, Forty-second Ohio volunteer infantry, his company being made up almost of students from Hiram college. Owing to his educational abilities, Mr. Stanford was appointed to several positions on detached duty, but persistently refused all offers of promotion, and at the end of his three years' service came out of the army as he had entered it-a pri-On his return from the army in 1864 he found that his father had died in the fall of that year at the age of fifty-two years; the mother died in 1888.

Mr. Stanford now found it necessary to assume charge of his deceased father's business, which he conducted until 1877, when he engaged in the manufacture of coffins at Edinburg, subsequently purchasing a stock of undertakers' supplies. In 1880 he removed to Atwater, sold out in 1886 and went to Quincy, Ill., whence, fifteen months later, he removed to Cleveland, Ohio, where he worked eighteen months as an employee, and then came to Ravenna, where he passed a few months in unprofitable business, after which he went to New Philadelphia, where he passed a year and a half in the undertaking business as an employee. He then returned to Ravenna and established his present line of business, having in the meantime graduated from the Cincinnati school of embalming, and being the first to introduce the arterial embalming process in Portage county.

March 15, 1883, Mr. Stanford was united in marriage with Miss Nina Mendenhall, a native of Randolph township and daughter of William and Asenath Mendenhall, of Atwater, Ohio, where the father is engaged in the furniture and undertaking business. To Mr. and Mrs. Stanford have been born two children, the elder of whom, Willie, was born December 2, 1883, and died October 29, 1891; the younger, Helen, was born in August, 1886. In religion Mr. Stanford was reared a Methodist, and his wife is a Congregationalist. In politics Mr. Stanford is an uncompromising republican, but has never been a seeker of office. Fraternally he is a member of the I. O. O. F., of the G. A. R., and of the A. O. F. A. Socially, he and wife stand among the élite of Ravenna.

T. CLAIR STEELE, an old soldier of the Civil war, springs from sterling Scotch-Irish ancestry, his remote ancestry having been old colonial settlers of Pennsylvania. He was born in Stowe township, Summit county, Ohio, September 13, 1842, a son of Isaac and Margaret C. (Steele) Steele. He attended the common schools and high school until he enlisted, in April, 1861, at Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio, under Capt. A. J. Nelson, at West Liberty and Piketon, and was then with Gen. Buell on the advance from Green River, Ky., to Pittsburg Landing, Tenn., and was in the engagement at this place, where he volunteered, with others, to carry the wounded. He was later in the battles at Corinth, Munfordville, Green River, Ky., and was taken prisoner by Gen. Bragg, and paroled on conditions, but violated the parole, and a number of the party escaped to the Union lines. Afterward he was exchanged and took part in Burnside's siege of Knoxville, Tenn., Rockford, Tenn., and at Cumberland Gap, and assisted in the capture of 5,000 rebel prisoners. He was in Sherman's famous Atlanta campaign, and in battles at Dallas, Dalton, Buzzard's Roost, Resaca, Pumpkinvine Creek, Kenesaw, Mountain, and the battles in front of Atlanta, and in many skirmishes. He was sick in hospital No. 3, at Louisville, about three weeks in January, 1863. He was transferred, in January, 1864, to the Nineteenth independent battery, and served with this battery about five weeks, and then returned to his own battery, and served as a non-commissioned officer and as chief of caissons throughout the Atlanta campaign. Mr. Steele was always prompt in the discharge of his duty and served his country faithfully. After the war Mr. Steele engaged in the saw-mill business at Peninsula, Summit county.

Mr. Steele married, December 13, 1870, in Cuyahoga Falls, Sarah J. McCauley, who was born October 20, 1850, at Hudson, Summit county, Ohio, a daughter of Peter and Mary (O'Brien) McCauley. Peter McCauley was born in the north of Ireland September 5, 1812, was a shoemaker and farmer, and came to America when a young man and settled at Hudson, Ohio, where he married. He bought land and cleared up a farm of about 300 acres and became a substantial farmer and a wellto-do man. Mr. and Mrs. McCauley were members of the Episcopal church, and their children were Edward, William and Sarah J. Mr. McCauley died April 8, 1863, an honored citizen, and was an industrious, hard-working Mr. and Mrs. Steele first settled at Stowe, where he bought a farm of 120 acres and ran a saw-mill. He came to his present home about 1884, and is doing a successful business. To Mr. and Mrs. Steele have been born Harry C. and Mabel M. Mr. Steele was guard at the penitentiary at Columbus over two years, being in politics a stanch republican, and has taken an active interest in politics and has served as township trustee of Stowe township two terms and as member of the town council of Cuyahoga Falls one term. Mr. and Mrs. Steele are members of the Episcopal church. Mr. Steele stands high as a man of business integrity of character.

Isaac Steele, father of our subject, was a son of Isaac, who was a son of Adam, who was a soldier in the Revolutionary war and a farmer of Fayette county, Pa., where he was a pioneer, descended from a well-known colonial family. Col. Crawford, who was burned at the stake by Indians, was a relative of his family. Adam Steele moved with his family to Ohio, where he was a pioneer of Stowe township. AMES A. STETLER, a well-known farmer and producer of vitrified clay, is one of Springfield township's prominent citizens. He was born in Union county, Pa., May 5, 1840, and comes from an old colonial family. His great-great-grandfather, John Stetler, was a native of Germany, and was married and reared a family in that country. He came to America and settled near New York city. His son, Conrad, married in New Jersey, where he lived a short time, afterward moving to Union county, Pa., where he engaged in farming and became very wealthy, owning 1,000 acres in the rich heart of Dry Valley. He reared the following John, George, Nicholas, Mary and family: He was one of the wealthiest Elizabeth. and most prominent men in that section. John Stetler (II) was born in 1792. He married Elizabeth Baughert, daughter of Anthony Baughert, who was a native of Bucks county, Pa. Anthony Baughert removed to Columbia county, Pa., and later located in Illinois, where he died. John Stetler (II) was the father of the following children: William, Daniel, Mary (wife of Thomas Pursel), John, Isaac, Charles and Thomas. He was a whig in politics, a deacon in the Albright church, and took an active interest in public affairs, although he never aspired to office. He died September 9, 1868; his wife in October, 1876. William Stetler, father of our subject, was born in Union county, Pa., October 10, 1816. His schooling was received in the little log school-house common to that time, and remained on the farm until he was fifteen years of age. He then worked for three years in a brick yard, and then for five years worked on the construction of the public dams on the Susquehanna river, filling in the winter months at the shoemaker's bench. In 1846 he was promoted to the position of superintendent of wood work on these dams, and in that capacity did valuable service for the state. In 1848 he moved to Summit county, Ohio, settling in Green township, where he lived until seven years ago, when he moved to Stark county, where he is living in easy circumstances, having accumulated a competence in his active life. He was a whig until 1844, when he became a democrat. He has held township offices. He is a pillar in Methodism, and several churches of that denomination have received donations of $500 from him. On November 2, 1838, he was married to Salome Reichley, who was born in Union county, Pa., February 10, 1815, daughter of William and Mary (Sausaman) Reichley, who lived and died in that county. William Reichley was a soldier in the war of 1812, and was at Cleveland, withing hearing distance of the great Perry naval battle.

James A. Stetler, the subject of this sketch, was the only child of this union, and he was eight years of age when his parents moved to this county. He was reared on the farm, and received more than the average commonschool education, his advantages in this direction being supplemented by attendance at at an excellent select school. On September 2, 1860, he was married to Lovina Koons, who was born in Bloomsburg, Columbia county, Pa., November 29, 1841, daughter of Henry and Esther (Rooke) Koons, natives of Pennsylvania, who for many years lived in Norton township, this county, as farmers. Mr. Koons died March 24, 1893; his wife January 23, 1889.

To our subject and wife have been born the following children: William H. married Rose Hagerty, is an agriculturist and resides in Green township; Charles E. married Martha A. Rhodes, is a commercial traveler, and resides in Piqua, Miami county, Ohio; Marvin T. married Maud Morton, and resides on the homestead; Clarence O., unmarried, resides in Akron, and is also a commercial traveler.

Of the above-named children, William H. received, first, a good common-school education, and then attended the academy at Union Town, Stark county, Ohio. Charles E., after receiving a rudimentary education in the common schools, graduated from the Mogadore high school, became a student at Buchtel college, Akron, and then became a practical telegrapher. Marvin T. was educated in the Magadore high school and at the Union Town academy. Clarence O. passed through the common schools, graduated from the academy at Union Town, and then as an accountant and bookkeeper from the Business college at Akron. It will thus be seen that Mr. and Mrs. Stetler have spared no pains to properly educate their offspring.

Mrs. James A. Stetler was about ten years of age when brought from Pennsylvania to Ohio by her parents, whose family comprised nine children, of whom four are still living, viz: Emeline, widow of Solomon Giger, and a resident of Green township; Daniel, a tailor by trade, residing in Cleveland, and married to Miss Sophina Mowen; Mary A., widow of Allen Haring, and residing in Doylestown, Wayne county; and Mrs. Stetler, who is the youngest living member of the family.

Since 1879 Mr. Stetler has lived on his present well-improved farm of 156 acres. On fifteen acres of this land is a valuable deposit of vitrified clay. This he has developed until an important and profitable industry has been formed by him. He has been excavating this clay in some quantities for the past fifteen years, but within the past two years, particulary, has taken out large quantities of it.

Mr. Stetler is a democrat and has taken an active interest in politics, having been elected to the offices of trustee, justice of the peace, treasurer, assessor and clerk of the township. He cast his first presidential vote for Gen. George B. McClellan, but the first presidential candidate he cheered for was James K. Polk. Both he and his wife are earnest workers in the Methodist Episcopal church, and contribute largely to the support of that organization, he being one of the trustees of the church. He is prominent in the Apollo Odd Fellows' lodge, No. 61, in Akron. and is a member of the Patrons of Husbandry, being past state deputy master in that body and a pillar in lodge No. 1323.

Almost one-quarter of a century has this worthy couple been honored and respected citizens of Springfield township, Summit county, and this biography will be treasured and held sacred by their children when the father and mother have passed away.

MOS W. STOCKER, of the firm of Stocker & Slaughter, proprietors of the Ravenna Marble & Monumental works, was born in East Hampden, Me., February 26, 1851, a son of Daniel and Sarah (Bickford) Stocker.

Daniel Stocker was a native of New Hampshire, born in 1815, and in early manhood removed to Maine, in which state he married, and in 1853 came west. For one year he lived in Belvidere, Ill., and in 1854 came to Ohio, located at Brecksville, Cuyahoga county, where he was engaged in farming until 1864, when he came to Ravenna township, Portage county, purchased a farm on which he lived until the beginning of 1881, when he sold his land and built a fine residence on West Main street, Rayenna, where he died May 17, 1882, and where his widow still resides. For several years he served as trustee of Ravenna township, and in 1880 was real-estate assessor. He had been successful as a farmer, was public spirited, and was esteemed as one of the best of citizens.

Amos W. Stocker remained on his father's farm until 1872, assisting in its cultivation, attending the common schools at intervals, and securing a good education, and then came to Ravenna and followed painting as a trade until 1877, when he engaged in the marble and monument business, which he successfully followed alone for ten years, and then formed his present partnership. The business is not confined to monumental work alone, as contracts are made by the firm for mason and stone work of all descriptions.

Mr. Stocker was united in marriage, in November, 1871, with Miss Carrie L. Fox, who was born March 6, 1853, in Ravenna, and is a daughter of Griffith W. and Emily (Trowbridge) Fox, both natives of Ohio. One son, Daniel, was born to Mr. and Mrs. Stocker in June, 1873, and he is their only child.

In politics Mr. Stocker is a republican, and as such was first elected to the city council of Ravenna in 1885; was thrice re-elected, and thus served four consecutive terms of two years each, or a total of eight years. In 1893 he was elected township trustee; in the spring of 1894 he was elected water-works trustee, and in 1896 was again elected township trustee, and still holds both offices. Mr. Stocker has always been faithful to his party and has worked strenuously in its behalf. During the campaign of 1896 he was active as a member of the McKinley club of Ravenna, and gave much of his time to the promotion of the cause of sound money and the protection of American industries. He is not a member of any religious organization, but is a moral, upright man, with a business reputation untarnished and pure. He affiliates with the National Union of Ravenna, No. 188, is public spirited and ever ready to aid with his means all projects designed for the public good.

ELSON B. STONE (deceased) was born at Canfield, Mahoning county, Ohio, September 18, 1816, and was a son of Milo and Sarah (Beardsley) Stone, natives of Connecticut, who came to Ohio, by ox-team conveyance, in 1816, for the purpose of settling in Tallmadge township, Summit county, the subject being born on the way. The father cleared and improved a farm in Tallmadge township, and there the subject was reared; he was educated in the district school, in the Tallmadge acadeiny and in Allegheny college at Meadville, Pa., and then clerked several years at West Bloomfield, N. Y., and in Ravenna and Chardon, Ohio. In December, 1840, he located in Akron, clerked in a store a few months, and was then appointed as deputy under County Clerk Lucian Swift, later under Lucius S. Peck, serving until October, 1851, when he was elected county clerk—the first under the new constitution, the office theretofore having been appointive—and served three years. Although still a resident of Akron, Mr. Stone next served as deputy clerk of Cuyahoga county, and then, after a short engagement with Aultman, Miller & Co., of Akron, he became secretary and treasurer of the Weary, Snyder & Wilcox Manufacturing company, filled the position eighteen years and then retired from active business.

Mr. Stone was one of the organizers, as well as a trustee, of the First Methodist Episcopal church of Akron, was a zealous and efficient church worker, and teacher, superintendent and secretary of the Sunday-school from the time of its organization until his death, which took place November 9, 1893—a devout and sincere Christian.

Mr. Stone was first married to Miss Mary H. Clarke, daughter of William L. Clarke, of This lady died April 6, 1853, leaving one son, Nelson C., now cashier of the City National bank of Akron. The second marriage of Mr. Stone was with Miss Elizabeth H. Beardsley, daughter of Philo and Eliza (Smith) Beardsley, also of Akron, and this union was blessed with two children-Philip C. (deceased) and Dwight M. Politically Mr. Stone was a stanch republican and was a delegate to the first republican state convention held in Ohio, at which the late Salmon P. Chase was nominated for governor of the state. The memory of Mr. Stone is still revered by the citizens of Akron, as his character was that of a pure, upright man and citizen, filled with a broad charity toward all his fellow-men and devoid of malice toward any human being, high or low.

PHRAIM STUMP, a retired farmer of Franklin township, Summit county, Ohio, is a native of this township and was born May 28, 1842, being of remote German ancestry, yet still of long-ago American descent, and of the third generation to live in the Buckeye state.

John Stump, grandfather of subject, was a native of Franklin county, Pa., was there married to Elizabeth Grove, and after two children had been born to the marriage, came to Ohio and purchased a tract of 164 acres in Summit county, which tract he succeeded in denuding of the dense growth of trees with which it was encumbered, and eventually converted it into a profitable farm. His children were born in the following order: Jacob, David, Catherine, Mary, Eliza, John, Levi and Sarah, of whom David, Catherine and Mary are the only survivors. In his politics Mr. Stump was a democrat and a leader in local party management. An elder in the German Reformed church, he assisted in forming, in his own house, the first society of that denomination in Summit county. He was an industrious man and a good manager, and succeeded in acquiring a comfortable competency.

Jacob Stump, father of subject, was also born in Franklin county, Pa., and was a boy when brought to Ohio by his parents. He was reared to manhood in Summit county, on his father's farm, and married Catherine Sorrick, daughter of Adam and Mary (Raber) Sorrick, also of Pennsylvania and pioneers of Summit county, Ohio. Jacob Stump entered a tract of government land in Franklin township, developed an excellent farm, and had born to him the following children: Ephraim, Matilda, Amos (deceased) Nathaniel and William.

Ephraim Stump was reared on the home farm and agriculture has been the chief industrial pursuit of his life. November 28, 1870, he married Louisa Smith, daughter of Daniel and Eliza (Diehl) Smith, the former of whom was likewise a native of Franklin township, and prominent as a democratic politician and township office-holder. In religion Mr. Smith adhered to the teachings of the German Reformed church, in which faith he died, while his wife, who differed somewhat in religious belief, died in the faith of the Lutheran church. William Smith, father of Daniel, married Rachael Vanderhoff, and was one of the earliest pioneers of Franklin township.

Ephraim Stump, after his marriage, followed farming until 1884, when he retired to his present home of twenty acres at Nimisila, in which village he owns and occupies a modern residence and is living in peace and com-The children born to his marriage are Bertha B., wife of William Fisler; Clarence E., who is attending the high school in Fulton, and Frederick C. In politics Mr. Stump is a stanch democrat, and cast his first presidential vote for Gen. George B. McClellan, and in religion both he and wife adhere to the German Reformed church, to the support of which they liberally contribute financially. Mr. Stump is also a member of the Maccabees at Clinton, Ohio. The family is well known and respected throughout the county, and certainly Mr. Stump is well deserving of the high esteem in which he is held.

AMUEL SWINEHART, one of the most respected citizens of Suffield township, Portage county, was born in Springfield township, Summit county, Ohio, August 25, 1837, a son of Benjamin and Catherine (Garl) Swinehart, of whom further mention will be shortly made.

Christian Swinehart, paternal grandfather of Samuel, was a native of Hesse, Germany, was a school-teacher by profession, but was still a young man when he came to the United States and first located in Pennsylvania, where he taught school a number of years, and where he was married. Late in life he came to Ohio, lived a short time in Summit county, and then removed to Elkhart county, Ind., where he passed the remainder of his life. He was twice married, and by his first wife became the father of eight children; to his second marriage, with Mary Schuck, there were also born eight children, but of the sixteen there is only one now living-Moses, of New Berlin, Stark county, Ohio.

Benjamin Swinehart, father of Samuel, was born in Lancaster county, Pa., and while yet a single man came on foot to Ohio and settled in Union Town, Stark county. trade he was a shoemaker, but followed his trade in Stark county for a short time only, when he bought land and cleared up a fine There he married Miss Garl, daughter of Reuben Garl, and to this union were born seven children, four of whom are still living, viz: Samuel, our subject; Sarah, wife of Isaac Dausman; Henrietta, married to Franklin Ewell, and Daniel. Those who have passed away were Elizabeth, who died in her youthful days; Lavina, who was married to Jacob Brumbaugh and died at the age of thirtytwo years, and Levi, who died April 24, 1896, aged sixty-one. About 1834, Benjamin Swinehart brought his family to Suffield township, Portage county, and purchased the homestead on which our subject now resides. He became very prominent in local politics, and served his fellow-townsmen many years as township trustee, supervisor and school director. He was a deacon in the Reformed church, and died in this faith at the age of sixty-seven years, his wife having died at the age of sixty-one—both deaths having occurred at the present home of our subject.

Samuel Swinehart was but three and a half years old when brought to Suffield township by his parents, and, the farm being in the wilderness, his boyhood days were passed in a log cabin with neither doors nor windows. His preliminary education was acquired in the district school, and later he attended school at Kent and Greensburg until twenty-one years of age; then, in 1859, he entered the academy of which the late James A. Garfield was the principal. At the age of twenty-two years he himself began teaching, his first term He also taught in Ranbeing in Suffield. dolph township, and for eight winters he followed this vocation, assisting his father on the home place during the summer months. While thus engaged, he married, October 26, 1862, Miss Elizabeth Brumbaugh, who was born June 15, 1841, in Randolph, Portage county, and who is one of the thirteen children born to Henry and Catherine (Stiffler) Brumbaugh -all still living within fifteen miles of their birthplace. The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Swinehart has been blessed with three children. viz: Marion, who married Emma Schumacher and has three children—Ledos, Esther and Inez; Perry, who married Alice Marsh, daughter of J. J. and Rebecca Marsh, and became the father of two children-Clyde and Leon—Mrs. Alice Swinehart dying at the age of thirty-two years; Lenora, who resides at home with her parents, and is a dressmaker.

In 1863, Mr. Swinehart bought from his father the old homestead, which consisted of thirty-eight acres, but he has added to this, from time to time, until he now owns a splendid farm of 100 acres. In addition to farming he has given considerable attention to live stock, especially to sheep, and has been very successful.

In politics Mr. Swinehart is a sound democrat, and has filled most of the township offices, including those of clerk, supervisor and school director—filling the last-named office eighteen years. He is a deacon in the Reformed church, and maintains a very high position in the esteem of the community. The Swinehart family hold an annual reunion, over which the subject invariably presides, and there is no more respected family in the township than this.

UDGE GIDEON SEYMOUR, of Bonniebrook Farm, of Rootstown, Portage county, Ohio, descends from one of the oldest families in the United States, but, before entering into the details of his own eventful life, it were better to narrate his antecedents to a remote priority and to follow them up, in detail, as far as the limited scope of this volume will permit.

The Seymour family originated in Normandy (now a province of France), and the name was in that country spelled Saint Maur, and the town of the same name, in Normandy, was derived from the family name of the ancestors of subject, who held sway there in the early part of the christian era. The name of the family has by easy stages been modified and anglicized through the spellings, Saint Maurre, Saymaur and Seymour—as the street in London, England, now called Rotten Row, derives its name from Route en Roi-the route of the king. Early in the thirteenth century the present name was adopted, several of the Seymour family having gone over to England, and the student of English history will remem ber the prominence which the Seymour family obtained in Kent and Monmouthshire.

In 1607 a colony of English people came to Popham, Maine, being accompanied, as chaplain, by Rev. Richard Seymour, a younger son of Sir Edward Seymour, duke of Somerset, but this colony was not successful, and in two or three years returned to England, where Rev. Richard Seymour passed the remainder of his life. In 1639 the eldest son of this reverend gentleman came from Barry Pomeroy, Devonshire, England, and located in Hartford, Conn., but removed to Norwalk, Conn., in 1650, and there died in 1655.

John Seymour, the seeond son of Rev. Richard Seymour, returned from Norwalk to Hartford, married Mary, daughter of John Watson, and died in 1713, the father of nine children. John, the eldest son of John Seymour, mentioned above, was born June 12, 1666, was married December 19, 1693, to Elizabeth, daughter of Robert and Hannah (Treat) Webster and granddaughter of Gov. John Webster. Mr. Seymour died in May, 1748, leaving a farm to each of his eight sons; his widow survived until May 15, 1754. eldest of these boys, also named John Seymour, was born December 25, 1694, and was first married June 25, 1718, to Lydia Mason, who died in 1732, but soon after that bereavement he married Hannah Ensign. He moved from Hartford to New Hartford, Conn., in 1750, as one of the earliest settlers of that town, and there died July 25, 1758.

John Seymour, the sixth child born to John and Lydia (Mason) Seymour, mentioned in the foregoing paragraph, was born in Hartford, Conn., November 24, 1726. He was inspired with patriotism and a love of freedom (amor patriæ), as may be shown by the fact that he enlisted, at the early age of fifteen years, in the colonial army, and performed a brave and noble part in the French and Indian war; in the second war in 1756–58, against the French and Indian invaders, he also took an active part, and his military service culminated in his bearing arms in the war of the Revolution. He married June 19, 1749, Lydia Wadsworth, daughter of Sergeant Jonathan Wadsworth, of West Hartford, Conn., and died February 2, 1809—his widow surviving until 1817.

Asa Seymour, fifth child of John and Lydia (Wadsworth) Seymour, and the grand-father of the subject of this sketch, Judge Gideon Seymour, was born in West Hartford, Conn., September 16, 1757. He, also, was a soldier in the war of the Revolution, and was married, November 14, 1781, to Miss Abigail, daughter of Gideon Deming, and afterward moved to East Granville, Mass., where he died in 1840, a member of the Congregational church. His children were born in the following order: Abigail, Asa, Alexander, Laura, Ardon, William, Elijah, Ruby and Gideon D.

Gideon D. Seymour, father of subject, was born in East Granville, Mass., April 18, 1801, and in 1841 settled in Rootstown, Portage county, Ohio, but in 1845 died from an attack of black erysipelas, which at that time was epidemic throughout this section of the country. In his politics he was a whig, and in religion was a member of the Congregational church, in which he was a deacon for many years. His wife, who bore the maiden name of Corinthia Gibbons, a daughter of Bildad Gibbons, of East Granville, Mass., became the mother of two children-Judge Gideon and Deming. The latter was born May 21, 1840, and came to Ohio with his father, and here married Harriet Hallock, daughter of W. R. Hallock, of Rootstown, and died in Windham, Ohio, in 1888. the death of her husband, Mrs. Corinthia Seymour was married to Philo Stilson, but bore him no children, and died in Ravenna June 11, 1878.

Gideon Seymour, the subject of this biographical memoir, was born in East Granville, Hampden county, Mass., February 23, 1836, his parentage being given above. He was reared on the old Seymour homestead, and in 1841 accompanied his father to Ohio, and was here educated in the district schools of Rootstown, Portage county. At the early age of eighteen he began teaching school, devoting himself to this vocation in the winter months and in the summer lending his aid toward the improvement of the home farm, assisted by his brother, the untimely death of their father, after reaching Ohio, rendering this course necessary. In 1859 he purchased the interest of his brother in this homestead, and continued its cultivation, devoting himself, however, during his farm life, to the study of the law at home, with Hart & Reed, of Ravenna, as his preceptors. In 1872, prior to his admission to the bar, which did not occur until 1875, his legal ability was fully recognized, and he was elected probate judge of Portage county, an office he filled with great credit to himself for nine years. On retiring from this office he entered upen the active practice of his profession in 1881, in Ravenna, and was rapidly advancing in his profession, and had obtained a good practice, but, unfortunately, at the expiration of three years of active and onerous work, his healthfailed, and he felt it incumbent, in order to restore his shattered energies to their pristine vigor, to return to his farm and recuperate, although the law has not altogether been abandoned, as he still gives his attention to special probate business.

Among the minor offices that have been held by Judge Seymour may be mentioned that of justice of the peace of Rootstown township, which he filled twelve years, and to which he was first elected in 1864, and frequently thereafter; he was commissioned notary public in 1884, also served as township clerk several terms, and as treasurer of his township from 1859 to 1861. In his politics the judge has been a life-long republican, has always worked energetically in the interests of his party, and was a delegate to the convention that first nominated Maj. McKinley for member of congress from Ohio. Fraternally he has for thirty years been a Freemason, and is now a member of Unity lodge, No. 12, and of Tyrian chapter, R. A. M., No. 91, of Ravenna; he is also an Odd Fellow, being a member of Ravenna lodge, No. 65, and of encampment No. 129, and is, beside, a charter member of Ravenna council, No. 376, Royal Arcanum; also a member of Ravenna grange, No. 32, Patrons of Husbandry. In religion he is a Congregationalist, has been a member since 1864, both at Rootstown and Ravenna, has been a deacon up to the present time, and also has served as superintendent of the Sunday-school at both places, and was for fifteen years a singer and leader of the choir in his church.

The marriage of the judge to Lucy J. Parker, daughter of F. A. Parker, of Newton Falls, Ohio, occurred September 15, 1859. This lady led him a happy life until May 6, 1893, when she was called to a higher sphere. The children that blessed this happy union were three in number, and were named Corinthia M., Mary L. (who died in 1876) and Frederick P.—the last-named being now associated with his father on the home farm, known as "Bonniebrook Farm," where, in addition to general farming, they make a specialty of breeding Durham cattle and Oxford-down sheep.

Few men in Portage county have passed through so varied and successful a career in life as Judge Seymour, and fewer still have maintained so high a position in the esteem of their fellow-men for so great a length of time, and he is a gentleman of whom his many friends and the population of Portage county may well feel proud.

✓ EMAN SWIGART, a well-known general farmer and dairyman of Copley township, Summit township, Ohio, was born in Edinburg, Portage county, Ohio, June 30, 1871. His father, George S. Swigart, was born November 12, 1838, and March 28, 1862, married Miss Laura Oviatt, who was born March 6, 1843, and this union was blessed with six children, viz: Nellie A., born February 27, 1864, and now the wife of Charles Adams, of Cleveland; Sherman G., born June 28, 1865, and at present a prominent civil engineer of the same city; Louis A., born September 30, 1868; Heman, the subject of this biography; Freddie, born February 16, 1877, died in infancy, and Maggie, who was born May 11, 1879.

Heman Swigart was educated in the high school of Copley, and September 4, 1895, married Miss Pearl Wager, who was born in 1876, a daughter of Edward and Anna (Graham) Wager, and to this happy marriage has been born one child—George—June 24, 1896. Mrs. Pearl Swigart is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and a lady of many womanly graces and virtues.

Joseph Swigart, great-grandfather of Heman, was a native of Pennsylvania, was a farmer, married Elizabeth Peiffer, daughter of George and Catherine Peiffer, and became the father of eleven children, named George, John, Joseph, Samuel, Jacob, Catherine, Polly, Susan, Peggie, Sarah and Martha.

Jacob Swigart, grandfather of Heman, was born in Cumberland county, Pa., October 18, 1815, was reared on the home farm until fourteen years of age, and then learned the carpenter's trade; he married, in Stark county, Ohio, Miss Abigail Stover, also a native of Pennsylvania, and a daughter of George and Catherine (Dauner) Stover. To this union were born four children, viz: John, deceased; George S., father of subject, who died June 15, 1895; Alfred, and Maggie. Mrs. Abigail Swigart died June 8, 1877, at the age of fiftynine years and nine months, a devout member of the Reformed church, of which her husband was also a member.

Heman Swigart and his brother, Louis A., rent their grandfather's fine farm at Copley Center, and in connection with general farming do a large dairying business under the firm name of Swigart Bros., and have the largest milk route in Akron. Their buildings are all of modern construction, and both brothers are highly respected for their strict business integrity, as well as for their genial dispositions and social good qualities.

ALTER BRONSON TAYLOR, one of the ablest of Ravenna's salesmen, was born in Palmyra, Portage county, Ohio, September 9, 1843, a son of Salmon A. and Mary Ann (Caulkins) Taylor, the former a native of Hoboken, N. J., and the latter of Old Lyme, Conn.

Salmon A. Taylor was of English and French extraction, his mother having been a Peret, a family well known in the commercial circles of New York city, and one of the family is now the Episcopal bishop of Baltimore, Mr. Taylor, who was a merchant, opened the first store in Palmyra, Ohio, was married in Middlebury, Summit county, in 1841, and in 1848 removed to Ravenna, Portage county, opened a grocery and established the first ice business in the city. September 18, 1863, he expired in the house now occupied by subject—his death being the result of an accidental fall. The male members of the Caulkins family were mostly seafaring men, four brothers of the subject's mother having been captains of ocean-going vessels. Her father, David Caulkins, however, was a captain of land forces in the war of 1812.

death of Mrs. Mary Ann Taylor took place at the home of subject April 6, 1894, in the faith of the Congregational church. She was truly a christian woman, and spent her life for the benefit of others. Wherever there was pain, poverty or suffering, there was she, a ministering angel to the suffering. There were two children born to Mr. and Mrs. Taylor, the youngest being Catherine D., who is now the wife of Ezra Fowler, a justice of the peace and business man of Kent, Ohio. Mr. and Mrs. Fowler have two children, viz: Mary Addie, a teacher of instrumental music, with classes in Kent and Ravenna, and Lizzie Jennings, wife of John Arighi, of Kent. This lady is also a proficient instrumentalist, making a specialty of the violin.

Walter B. Taylor, the subject, attended the schools of Ravenna until seventeen years of age, and then entered the office of his cousin, Judge Taylor, as a law student. the removal of the judge from the city, Mr. Taylor placed himself under the tuition of the law firm of John L. & H. C. Ranney for two years, at the end of which period the firing on Fort Sumter took place. Mr. Taylor then promptly enlisted, in April, 1861, in company G, Seventh Ohio voluteer infantry, under Col. Barney Tyler, and for three months served within the bounds of the state. After a few months passed in the office of his former preceptors, he engaged with the government as contract nurse, and spent four months in Louisville, Ky., and it was while there his father died. On the expiration of his contract as nurse for four months, he returned to Ravenna and re-enlisted, for too days, in the One Hundred and Seventy-first Ohio national guard, and was sent again to Kentucky. Cythiana the regiment was captured by the rebel raider, John Morgan, the subject and two comrades only escaping by swimming the Lickng river. ON. NEWELL D. TIBBALS, a leading lawyer of the city of Akron, Ohio, and a member of the prominent law firm of Tibbals & Frank since 1889, is a native of Deerfield, Portage county, and was born September 18, 1833, a son of Alfred M. and Martha H. (Swem) Tibbals. The father, Alfred M. Tibbals, was born in Granville, Mass., August 4, 1797, was brought to Deerfield, Ohio, by his parents, in 1804, and here died in 1858, at the age of sixty-one years; his wife, Martha H. (Swem) Tibbals, to whom he was united in marriage in 1821, was a native of New Jersey, was born in 1800, and died in 1891. Both were strong in the faith of the Methodist church, and both were honored as pioneers of Summit county and for their sterling personal worth.

Newell D. Tibbals received a liberal education and graduated from McLain academy, Salem, Ohio, in 1853; he then read law in the offices of Otis & Wolcott and Wolcott & Upson, was admitted to the bar in 1855, at once opened an office for the practice of his profession in Akron, and the details of his professional and political career, as given in brief below, give ample proof of his capabilities for performing the duties he had selected for his life-work. An ardent republican, his party quickly recognized his legal, administrative and political merits, and elected him, in 1860, prosecuting attorney and re-elected him in 1862. In 1865 he was elected Akron's first city solicitor, and was re-elected to the same office; he was next elected state senator to represent Summit and Portage counties, and in this capacity he served in the sessions of 1866 and 1867. In 1870 he was a factor in the organization of Buchtel college, and has ever since been a member of its board of trustees. In 1875 he was elected judge of the court of common pleas, second subdivision of the Fourth judicial district of Ohio, and the duties of this office he filled so well that a reelection followed in 1880, but the demands in his practice as an attorney were so extensive that he felt it to be incumbent on him to resign his seat May 1, 1883, and resume the handling of the cases of his rapidly increasing list of clients as an attorney at law, or, in simpler terms, as a lawyer.

In the scenes of war Judge Tibbals has played his part, and in 1864 served in defense of the capital of his nation—Washington, D. C.—as fourth sergeant of company F, One Hundred and Sixty-fourth regiment, Ohio volunteer infantry. On his return to Akron he was elected major of the Fifty-fourth battalion, Ohio national guard, and was commissioned by Gov. Brough; in 1886 he was appointed judge advocate for the department of Ohio, Grand Army of the Republic, by Commander A. L. Conger, and in 1890 was appointed as aid-de-camp to Commander-in-Chief Russell A. Alger. In 1890 also he was again appointed judge advocate of the Grand Army by Department Commander P. H. Dowl-In 1894 Mr. Tibbals was elected commander of Buckley post, No. 12, G. A. R., and the same year was sent as a delegate to the national encampment of the order at Pittsburg, Pa.

October 26, 1856, Judge Tibbals was united in marriage with Miss Lucy A. Morse, the fruit of the union being seven children, of whom five are still living, viz: Martha A. (Mrs. Wilson M. Day, of Cleveland), Jessie A. (Mrs. Dr. Albert Hoover, of Akron), Newell L., Gertrude A. and Ralph Waldo. amiable and accomplished mother of these children was called to rest October 27, 1894. She was born at Randolph, Portage county, July 9, 1835, being fifty-nine years, three months and eighteen days of age, at the time of her death. She was a daughter of Huron and Alethea Morse. In 1852, together with her parents, she came to Akron, Mr. Morse keeping what is now the Empire house. Tibbals made a host of friends during the war, when she took an active part in securing food and clothing for Union soldiers. She was one of the organizers of the Dorcas society, out of which grew the Akron board of charities, and at one time was superintendent of the industrial branch of this board, and was an active member of the Woman's Relief corps as a trustee and a member of several committees. She was president of the Ladies' Cemetery association one term, and was always prominent in all its movements. Mrs. Tibbals took an active part in the formation of the Summit county children's home, the first meeting for the same being held at her residence. As a member of the First Methodist Episcopal church and Woman's Home Missionary society, she was recognized as a hard and faithful worker. Beside the numerous public charitable institutions to which Mrs. Tibbals belonged, she did a great deal of individual work that was never known outside of her home.

When the death of Mrs. Tibbals was announced at the Akron court house, a meeting of the bar was called, over which Judge A. C. Voris presided, and a resolution that its members attend the funeral in a body was unanimously adopted. Buckley post, Grand Army of the Republic, and the Woman's Relief corps also attended the services. Judge Tibbals, notwithstanding his severe bereavement, is still in the active practice of his profession and is one of the prominent attorneys of Ohio, honored alike by his fellow-lawyers and the citizens of Akron, whom he has so long and faithfully served in civil as well as official life.

Since his retirement from the pulpit, Rev. Mr. Twitchell has lived on his farm, which, under his skillful supervision, has been made quite profitable. He and family are greatly respected by their neighbors, and the pious and useful life of Mr. Twitchell has won for him imperishable honor.

ORNELIUS E. TRASTER, justice of the peace of Green township, Summit county, Ohio, was born in Springfield township, in the same county, April 3, 1853, a son of Daniel and Margaret (Krieghbaum) Traster, of whom further mention will be made. He attended the district school until seventeen years old and was reared to that age on his father's farm. three years afterward he worked out as a farm hand, earning sufficient money to enable him to pay his expenses during the winter months at school and his tuition fees for four terms at the Greensburg seminary, and in the fall of 1873 began his career as a school-teacher, a vocation he followed twenty-two terms in all, at different places, in subsequent years. 1875 he took a course of study in the Northwestern Ohio Normal school, at Fostoria, to better qualify himself for his profession, the practice of which included one term in District No. 9, one in No. 7, one in No. 10, five in Springfield and Green townships, five in District No. 11, five in No. 2, three in No. 4, and four in No. 3.

In politics Mr. Traster is a democrat, and in 1881 was elected township clerk for one year, and then moved to Clinton, engaged in agricultural pursuits for three years, and then removed to Coventry township, where he followed the same calling for five years, then returned to Green township, where he has since followed the same vocation. In 1892 he was elected justice of the peace, and re-elected in 1895, although his township is strongly republican. Fraternally, Mr. Traster is a member of Hadassah lodge, No. 405, I. O. O. F., Greentown, Ohio, of which he is a past grand, and is also a member of encampment No. 18, at Akron.

Mr. Traster married, September 13, 1877, Miss Lovina A. Raber, daughter of Henry and Sarah E. (Benner) Raber, and this union has been blessed with one son, William Earl, who is now attending school. Mr. Traster and wife are consistent members of the Reformed church, of which he has for some years been a deacon as well as a teacher of the Bible class.

Daniel Traster, father of Cornelius E., was a son of Martin and Catharine (Shout) Traster, was born in East Buffalo township, Union county, Pa., January 1, 1820. father, Martin Traster, was born in Tulpehocken, Berks county, Pa., in 1773; died April 4, 1848. His wife, Catharine, was born near Youngstown, Westmoreland county, March 5, 1781, and died March 1, 1858. The parents of Martin Traster came from Germany. Margaret (Krieghbaum) Traster was born in Lenkers township, Dauphin county, Pa., June 22, 1822, and died February 12, 1897. Her father and mother, Peter and Margaret (Trout) Krieghbaum, were also born in the Keystone state.

Daniel Traster was about twelve years of age when brought to Ohio by his parents, who settled in Springfield township, Summit county, on a farm, on which he was reared to manhood. February 17, 1840, he was married to Miss Krieghbaum, the result of the union being eight children, viz: Hester Ann, born April 16, 1841; Sarah J., July 27, 1842, the widow of Samuel M. Ritzman; Jacob W., February 15, 1844, married to Maggie Bixler, and a farmer of Whitley county, Ind.; Rebecca M., April 13, 1845, married to James Housel and living on the old homestead in Springfield township; John, November 21, 1846, married Sarah A. The father of this family died November 4, 1896, at the age of seventy-six years, ten months and three days, and the mother February 12, 1897, aged seventy-four years, eight months and twenty days-both devoted members of the Lutheran church.

Mrs. Lovina A. (Raber) Traster was born April 4, 1859, in Green township. Her father, Henry Raber, was born in the same township June 14, 1831, on the farm he still owns, but from which he retired in 1890, having his present residence in Myersville. He was three times married-first, September 13, 1856, to Sarah E. Benner, who was born May 20, 1840, a daughter of Henry and Eliza (Kintz) Benner, the union resulting in the birth of six children, of whom five are still living, viz: Lovina A.; William M., married to Ida Shaffer; Anna E,, wife of M. G. Buchman; Minnie L., wife of William H. Swinehart, and Norman D.; the deceased child was named Mary Alice. The mother of this family died May 10, 1882, at the age of forty-two years and ten days, a member of the Reformed church, and in May, 1886, Mr. Raber married Miss Catherine Swinehart, who bore him no children and died June 20, 1890, a member of the Lutheran church. The third marriage of Mr. Raber took place April 8, 1897, to Miss Amanda Rhodes, who with her husband is a member of the Reformed church. Cornelius E. Traster and wife are among the most respected residents of Green township, and personally Mr. Traster is one of the most popular.

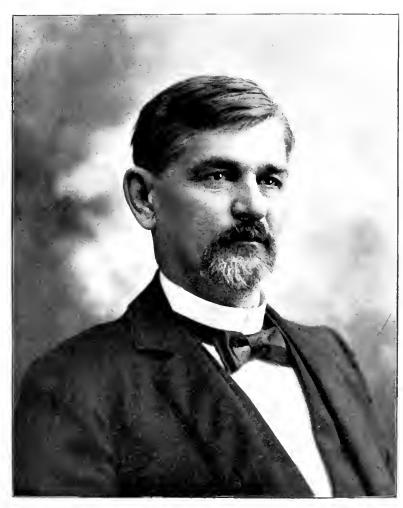

ARON B. STUTZMAN, A. M., Ph. D., superintendent of the public schools of Kent, Portage county, was born in Wayne county, Ohio, March 23, 1842, a son of Henry and Catherine (Miller) Stutzman, who were of German descent. His great-grandfather, on the paternal side, came from Germany to America about the time of the Revolutionary war, and settled in Easton, Lancaster county, Pa., where the grandfather of Prof. Aaron B. Stutzman was born, but in manhood removed to Somerset county, where he followed farming as his vocation.

Henry Stutzman, the father of Aaron B., was born in Somerset county, Pa., and there married Catherine Miller, a native of the same county, whose father, Christian Miller, a farmer, was accidently killed, at an advanced age. Henry Stutzman, soon after marriage, came to Ohio (in 1826) and settled in Wayne county, being accompanied by his wife and his brothers, John and David, making the journey by ox-teams, and each pre-empting a quarter section of heavily-timbered land. Here Mrs. Stutzman died in 1848, the mother of nine children, all of whom attained their majority, and were named, in order of birth; Jeremiah M., who was a teacher and farmer, served as sergeant in the One Hundred and Sixty-ninth Ohio volunteer infantry through the Civil war, and died in Wayne county, Ohio, the father of two daughters and one son; Susan is married to J. P. Fouch and resides in Canaan, Wayne county; Daniel died at the age of twenty-two years; Elizabeth was married to Rev. Elias Schrock, but lost her husband by death in June, 1896, and she is now a resident of Wayne county; Christian C. resides in Akron; Ezra was a volunteer in the One Hundred and Twentieth Ohio volunteer infantry, and died at Memphis, Tenn., while in the service; Aaron B. is the subject of this review; Anna is the wife of David M. Yoder, a farmer of Wayne county, and Henry lives in Johnstown, Pa. The father of this family succeeded in clearing up his farm from the wilderness and developed it into one of the best fruit farms in the country. He was one who cared more for the comfort and training of his family than he did for wealth, and died a greatly honored man in 1876.

Aaron B. Stutzman, the subject proper of this biography, was reared on his father's farm and received his elementary education in the country schools, and later attended the Smithville high school, and, still later, the Mount Union college at Alliance—attending during the summer and teaching during the winter, thus earning the means to defray his expenses. He graduated from Mount Union college in 1871 with the degree of A. M., and for the following two years was the principal of the schools at Dalton, Ohio, then for two years at Doylestown, Ohio, and then for three years at Wadsworth, Ohio, where he was also a member of the board of examiners of Medina county. He resigned the superintendency of the Wadsworth schools to accept a like position in Kent in 1878, at which place he has been superintendent of the public schools since, and is now serving his third term as member of the board of school examiners of Portage county. When Prof Stutzman took charge of the Kent schools there was but one central school-building and a one-room primary school; there are now three large school-buildings, in which there are employed eighteen regular and two special teachers.

In order to strengthen his professional efficiency, Prof. Stutzman took a full post-graduate course at Wooster university, and in 1888 this institution conferred upon him the degree of Ph. D., since which time he has still more assiduously endeavored to advance the schools in their usefulness—revising and extending the courses of study and placing them on a higher plane of educational excellence; he has also contributed many valuable articles to the educational journals of the day. In 1878, Prof. Stutzman was granted a life certificate of high qualifications by the Ohio board of school examiners, which is valid in any public school in the commonwealth.

During the Civil war Mr. Stutzman served in the Union army as a member of company A, One Hundred and Sixty-ninth Ohio volunteer infantry, as a faithful soldier. He is now a member of A. H. Day post, No. 185, G. A. R., of which he is past commander, and has also represented his post in the grand encampment. Of other fraternal societies, he is a member of Rockton lodge, No. 316, F. & A. M., and of Brady lodge, No. 183, I. O. O. F., in which he has passed all the chairs; he is also a member of the encampment at Akron. In politics Mr. Stutzman is a republican and cast his first presidential vote for Abraham Lincoln.

Mr. Stutzman was united in marriage August 15, 1872, with Miss Jennie Clippinger, daughter of Israel Clippinger, a dry-goods merchant of Dalton, Ohio, and an ex-soldier of the Civil war, in which his son, Edwin, and his son-in-law, Dr. F. F. H. Pope, also served. To this happy union have been born four children, viz: Edwin, who died at seven years of age; Grace E., William G. and Charles A., and of these Grace E. and William G. are graduates of the Kent high scnool. Mr. Stutzman built his commodious residence at the corner of Park and Woodard avenues, and has a delightful home, where he enjoys the association of hosts of admiring and ardent friends.

UDGE CHARLES R. GRANT, a distinguished lawyer of Akron, Ohio, and senior member of the firm of Grant & Sieber, with offices at Nos. 40 and 42 Akron Savings Bank building, is a native of Connecticut and was born in New Haven county October 23, 1846. At the early age of fifteen years, inspired with patriotic ardor at the firing on Fort Sumter, he enlisted in the Twelfth regiment, Connecticut volunteer infantry, and was assigned to the perilous position of bearer of dispatches on the staff of Gen. B. F. Butler, in the department of the Gulf, and was later transferred to the staff of Gen. Banks, under whom he served until October, 1863, when he was honorably discharged, having done good and faithful service.

After his return from the army he paid a brief visit to his native state, and then, in April, 1864, came to Ohio and located at Cuyahoga Falls, where he engaged in farming and private study until prepared for college. In September, 1868, he entered the freshman class at the Western Reserve college of Cleveland, where he passed through the entire curriculum, and graduated in 1872 as valedictorian of his class of eighteen students, and soon afterward entered the office of Judge N. D. Tibbals, at Akron, as a law student. After a course of study extending through a period of a little over two years, he was admitted to the bar of Akron, in September, 1874, but, on account of impaired health, reengaged in farming for two years, and then, in 1876, formed a partnership with H. B. Foster, of Hudson, and in November of the same year located in Akron as member of the firm of Foster, Marvin & Grant, which firm conducted a prosperous business until September 16, 1883, when Mr. Grant was appointed probate judge of Summit county by Gov. Foster, to fill a vacancy caused by the death of Judge Goodhue. In 1884, Judge Grant was elected to succeed himself in this office, and in 1887 was re-elected, a flattering tribute rendered by the people to his ability, faithfulness and integrity.

The first marriage of Judge Grant took place October 9, 1873, to Miss Frances J. Wadhams, who was called from earth September 14, 1874. November 9, 1876, Judge Grant chose, for his second bride, Miss Lucy J. Alexander, of whom he was also bereft, she dying June 8, 1880, leaving one child, Frances Virginia, who was born September 24, 1877. The third marriage of Judge Grant was consummated August 19, 1891, with Miss Ida Shick.

Judge Grant is the senior member of the law firm of Grant & Sieber.

ULIUS A. UPSON, a venerable and respected citizen of Cuyahoga Falls, was born in Tallmadge township, Summit county, Ohio, October 11, 1818, and springs from sterling English Puritan stock.

John Upson, founder of this family in America, came from England about 1635, with the Puritan emigrants, accompanied by two brothers. The great-grandfather, Stephen, was a soldier in the Revolutionary war. John Upson, grandfather of subject, lived in Connecticut and was the founder of Litchfield, and his children were Stephen, Daniel, Horatio, John, Thurman, (the latter a sailor who followed the sea all his life), Reuben, Hulda, Sylvia and Lucinda. In his old age, in 1810, John Upson came to Tallmadge township and lived with his son Reuben until his death, a member of the Congregational church.

Reuben, son of above, and father of subject, was born in Waterbury, Conn., August 14, 1771, received a good common-school education for his time, and taught school in his younger days. He married, December 25, 1798, in Waterbury, Hannah, born October 18, 1780, a daughter of Ebenezer Richardson. Mr. Upson learned the trade of carpenter and joiner in New Haven, and worked at both trades when young. In 1808 he came to Ohio, with his family, and his brother Stephen and his family, making the journey with a fivehorse team and covered wagon. They were six weeks on the way, cutting through the forest much of their road. They settled in Portage county, Suffield township, where the brothers had bought land of the Connecticut Land company before they came out, and were among the first settlers. The brothers had a large tract of virgin land, covered with heavy timber, which they bought at seventyfive cents per acre. The children born to Reuben and wife in Connecticut were Phebe, Emma, Reuben and Polly. Mr. Upson cut logs with which to build his log house, and had to clear a place from the forest to erect same. The Indians were numerous but friendly, and used to stop at his cabin to obtain food. Mr. Upson cleared up sixty acres. sold out and went to Tallmadge, Summit county, and bought a farm of Priest Leonard Bacon, a celebrated character who lived at Tallmadge, 100 acres of which he also cleared.

Mr. and Mrs. Upson lived here until 1818, and then moved to the northeast part of Tallmadge township, and bought 300 acres of land, but, not obtaining a clear title, he received, in lieu of it, 100 acres in Tallmadge township, 100 acres on the Cuyahoga river, and 100 acres near by. He cleared up a good farm, or hired much of it done, as he worked at his trade. He improved his farm with good buildings, and here died, aged seventy-seven years, in 1844. He was a strict member of the Congregational church and in politics a whig and a strong anti-slavery man; was also one of the earliest Masons on the Western Reserve, belonging to lodges at Canfield, Mahoning and Columbus. He was much respected and a man of high character. The following children were born to him in Ohio: Chloe, Hannah, Julius A. and George. Mr. Upson was deputy county clerk for many years, was a skillful penman, and one of the school-teachers in Springfield, Summit county, for several winters in early pioneer times, and taught in a log school-house. He was very strict, and had an unruly school of rough pioneer boys and young men, who had carried out a former school-teacher and ducked him in the brook, but Mr. Upson ruled them with a rod of iron.

Julius A. Upson, whose name opens this memoir, was reared among the pioneers, and during his long life has witnessed the entire improvement of the county. When he was seven years old he went with his father on a load of wheat, probably forty bushels, drawn by three horses, to Cleveland, and received for it one barrel of salt, calico enough for a dress for his mother, and one pound of tea, all of which could now be bought for about $2.50. The father stated that if he had stopped over night at the tavern, the cash value of his sale would not have amounted to enough to pay his tavern and feed bills. On this occasion he and Julus A. slept in the wagon two nights in October, it being twenty-eight miles over rough roads, and carried their food with them. Julius A. received a good common-school education for his day, and was reared a farmer. He married, at the age of twentytwo years, Lucy A. Lowrey, who was born February 3, 1820, in Tallmadge, a daughter of Shubell H. and Anna Peck (Norton) Lowrey. Shubell H. Lowrey was born May 7, 1788, in Canaan, Conn., and was of Scotch-Irish de-The Nortons were of French descent and also early settlers in Connecticut. Pecks were of English stock. Mr. Lowrey married, October 3, 1811, Annie P. Nortonborn April 6, 1794. They came to Tallmadge in 1808, and there Mr. Lowrey cleared up 198 acres. He was a blacksmith and a great worker, and noted for his industry. He lived to be eighty-two years of age and died April 14, 1871, in Cuyahoga Falls, a member of the Methodist church and highly respected. children were Henry, Leonard, Elthina, Lucy A., Susan, Deming, Philo and Hiram. marriage Mr. and Mrs. Upson settled in Huron county, Ohio, in a Quaker settlement, on a farm of 260 acres, and there cleared up 160 acres, and nine years afterward moved to Cuyahoga Falls and engaged in paperhanging for nine years, and was fairly successful. Then he engaged in the livery business, also conducted a flouring-mill thirteen years and has generally been successful. To Mr. and Mrs. Upson were born Lucy M., Leonard, Norton L., Charlie N., Sarah and Helen. In politics he is a republican and has held the offices of constable and marshal fourteen years. Upson is one of the highly respected citizens of his county and has always been an upright and honorable man. His wife died in 1893, aged seventy-three years.

Norton L. Upson, son of Julius A., enlisted at Cuyahoga Falls, when but sixteen years of age, under Capt. Dudley Sward, to serve 100 days, in company F, One Hundred and Sixty-fourth Ohio volunteer infantry. He served out his time and re-enlisted as a veteran in 1864, in the Second Ohio cavalry, for three years, or during the war, and served about one year, when he was honorably discharged on account of the cessation of hostili-Julius A. LAM UNDERWOOD, a well-known and very prominent farmer of Brimfield township, Portage county, Ohio, is a native of this county, was born March 6, 1833, and is a son of Lybia and Julia (Minard) Underwood, both now deceased—the former a native of Massachusetts and the latter of Connecticut.

Lybia Underwood, the father of Elam, came to Ohio about the year 1812, located at Brimfield, and for a number of years dealt heavily in live stock, as well as farmed on a large scale. He here married Miss Minard, and to this union were born nine children, of whom four still survive, viz: A. H., Elam, Bruce, and Millie, the wife of Charles McLoye. The deceased were Juliet (Mrs. Charles Osburn), Mary Ann (Mrs. Harry Hunt), Parmelia (Mrs. C. H. Chapman), William and Candis E. Mr. Underwood was a greatly respected citizen, and served about twenty years as a justice of the peace, and for a number of years was a township trustee; he died in 1878, at the age of seventy-six years, a member of the Universalist church, but his wife had preceded him to the grave in 1849, when but forty-seven years old, and the remains of both were interred in Brimfield.

Elam Underwood attended the district school until twenty years old, and passed his life on the home farm until attaining his majority, when he engaged in the lumber business, which he followed twenty or more years, traveling a great deal through the pine districts. November 20, 1855, he married Miss Emeline Minora, a native of Ohio, and a daughter of Tallman and Elizabeth (Rawson)

Minard, and this union has been crowned by the birth of one child—Emerson A. The parents of Mrs. Underwood were natives of Connecticut. The father was a farmer and filled various offices in Brimfield township after settling here, being a straightforward and respected citizen. To him and wife were born five children, of whom three still survive, viz: Luther, Mrs. Underwood, and Amanda, now wife of Servilleus Hoskins; the deceased were named Mary and Albert. Both parents, now also deceased, were members of the Disciples' church.

Mr. Underwood has been a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows for the past thirty years, has also been actively connected with the Rootstown Protective association for a long time, and for the last five years has adjusted all its losses. He is still engaged in farming, and his premises show that he well understands this prime industry. His name stands without reproach, and few families in the township stand higher in the public esteem than his. In politics, he is a democrat, though, in most cases, he votes for the man, rather than the party.

OSEPH WAGGONER, M. D., deceased, who was one of the oldest and most experienced physicians of Ravenna, was born near Richmond, Jefferson county, Ohio, December 30, 1821. His father, William Waggoner, was a native of northeastern Maryland, was of German-Irish parentage, and married Miss Sarah Jackson, who was born in the northwestern part of Delaware, and was of Scotch-English descent. Immediately after their marriage they came to Ohio, and in 1804 settled on a quarter-section of land near Richmond, Jefferson county, built a log cabin, there passed their honorable and useful lives, and reared a family of eight sons and four daughters.

Dr. Joseph Waggoner, the tenth child of this family, was reared on the home farm, receiving his education in the district schools during the winter months. At the age of eighteen he began teaching, devoting the summers to study in a select school, and at his majority entered the academy at Steubenville, preparatory to a collegiate course, but failing health debarred him from classical study, and rest for nearly a year became requisite. the spring of 1843 he commenced the study of medicine under Drs. Johnson & Henning, of Steubenville, finishing in the fall of 1846. The winter of 1846-47 was passed in attending lectures at the Cleveland Medical college, which subsequently conferred on him the degree of M. D., and in the spring of 1847 he located for practice in Deerfield, Portage county, and for sixteen years steadily gained in reputation and remuneration. In the spring of 1863 he sought the broader field of practice in Ravenna, where he found a wider scope for the exercise of his consummate skill, which immediately met with an appreciative recognition. Feeling, however, that the disasters of war were demanding all the experienced medical talent available—although it could be ill-spared at home—he went to Washington, D. C., and tendered his services to the government, which eagerly accepted them, and he was appointed at once assistant surgeon in the army and placed on duty at Lincoln hospital. But in a short time thereafter the health of the doctor's wife became precarious, which fact induced him to resign and return to Ravenna, where he was long assiduously and actively engaged in attending to the requirements of his constantly increasing list of patients.

In June, 1862, Dr. Waggoner was most happily united in matrimony with Miss Mary

M. Regal, of Deerfield, who, through her many domestic virtues, proved to be a true helpmate. But still affliction found a foothold within the doctor's otherwise happy home. and was the only shadow that lowered over his domestic felicity. Of the four children born to this marriage but one survives-George Joseph, the eldest, of whom further mention will be made. Arthur and William, two manly and promising boys, aged eleven and eight years, respectively, succumbed to that dread disease, diphtheria, and were buried on the same day, January 18, 1880, and, to add to the grief of the doctor and wife, their only daughter, Mary Josephine, was called away July 18, 1888, at the age of eleven years. Bearing up against these afflictions, however, the doctor still continued on the even tenor of his way, and never neglected one case that required his attention in the prosecution of his responsible life-work. The doctor not only stood high in the esteem of the general public, but was equally respected by his fellow-practitioners, with whom he heartily affiliated. He was a member of the American Medical association, the Ohio State Medical society, the Northeastern Ohio Medical society and the Portage county Medical society, and his contributions to these, whether of a professional, literary, social or even political tendency, were eagerly and carefully perused. The doctor was very liberal in his professional views, and fraternized freely, at the call of humane interests, with gentlemen of other schools. A Freemason in good standing, he was tolerant in matters theological, and would have gladly welcomed the day when religious differences might disappear. He was generous in his contributions to the various churches, as he believed in Christianity and in its ennobling influence over mankind. politics the doctor in early life was a whig, and was a great admirer of Henry Clay, for whom he cast his first presidential vote, but became a republican after the organization of that party and voted for all its presidential nominees - Fremont, Lincoln, Grant, Hayes, Garfield, Blaine, Harrison and McKinley. The doctor was a genial, yet austere, straightforward, honest man, and it has been well said of him that " He is courteous and gentlemanly in manner, genial in disposition, and liberal in spirit and action. He enjoys the esteem of all those with whom he is acquainted professionally or socially. As general practitioner and family physician he has few equalsalways endeavoring to keep his patients well as much as to cure them." No higher compliment than that conveyed in the last sentence could be paid a physician.

Dr. George Joseph Waggoner, subject's eldest and only living child, was born May 10, 1865, graduated from the Ravenna high school, and later graduated from the literary department of the university of Michigan at Ann Arbor, in 1887, with the degree of A. B. 1890 he graduated in medicine and surgery from the university of the city of New York, and since then has been in active practice with his father. He is a member of the Portage county Medical society, and of the Ohio state Medical society, and the American Medical association, and also of the Zeta Psi fraternity of his alma mater. He was united in marriage October 14, 1891, with Miss Mary A. Clewell, daughter of D. M. and Mary (Beebe) Clewell. Two children have come to bless this union-Mary C. and Joseph D. He is a master Mason, and his moral character is irreproachable. has lived all his life in Ravenna, his college days excepted, and has won the respect of all the citizens who have ever known him. Modest and retiring in manner, he is yet firm in the prosecution of his responsible profession, with which he is greatly in love, and in which he has made a decided success. He and wife stand high socially, and, with his present bright professional prospects, it is doubtful that he will ever wish to abandon his native city.

Dr. Joseph Waggoner died June 6, 1897, of neuralgia of the heart. Sickenss had never confined him to his bed an entire day during his lifetime.

ARON WAGONER, cashier of the Akron Savings bank, was born in Franklin township, Summit county, Ohio, September 19, 1844, a son of George and Rebecca (Sours) Wagoner, both natives of the Keystone state.

George Wagoner was reared to manhood in his native county of Cumberland, Pa., and there learned the cooper's trade, which he began at the age of fourteen years. In 1812 he married Sarah Rhodes, and shortly afterward came to Ohio and settled near Canal Fulton, Stark county, and engaged in farming and teaching school at their proper seasons. There his wife died, after having given birth to four children, and after a due season of mourning Mr. Wagoner married Rebecca Sours, a native of Lancaster county, Pa., and a daughter of Henry and Catherine (Harter) Sours, also of Pennsylvania birth and of German descent. Shortly after this marriage Mr. Wagoner came to Summit county and settled near Manchester, in Franklin township, where his remaining days and those of his wife were passed away. To this second marriage were born ten children, viz: Catherine and Sarah, both deceased; Harriet, wife of Michael Herpster; Ann R., wife of David Keller; Amanda, wife of John Spangler; Henry L., Philip, John J., a deceased infant, and Aaron, the subject. In politics Mr. Wagoner was first a whig and afterward a republican, and held the office of township treasurer many years. He was very popular and influential in Franklin township, although of a quiet, unassuming disposition, and won his prominence through his personal merits. He earned a competence through his industry, gave all his children a good education and left them the means to start well in the career of life.

Aaron Wagoner, the subject, was reared on his father's farm and also had the advantages of a good education both in public and private At the age of seventeen years he took charge of a school in Steuben county, Ind., where he taught one term, and then returned to his native county, where he enlisted, October 10, 1862, for three years, in company B, Sixth Ohio cavalry, and was mustered into service at Cleveland, being then eighteen years of age, was assigned to the army of the Potomac, under Gen. Phil Sheridan, and served until receiving an honorable discharge at Washington, D. C., July 1, 1865, as first lieutenant. The brilliant career of the Sixth Ohio cavalry, under Sheridan, in the Shenandoah valley and elsewhere, is so renowned as a matter of history, that no repetition thereof is here necessary, and of his own heroic acts Mr. Wagoner is too modest to permit a recountal. to say that he performed his duties bravely and well, as the terms of his discharge from the service amply prove.

On returning from the war, Mr. Wagoner was employed by Oberholser, Keller & Co., of Akron, with whom he remained five years, and then entered the City bank as teller, and held this position eight years. In 1880 he was elected county auditor by the republican party, served one term, and was re-elected to a second term, but, six months before the expiration of the latter, resigned, to become cashier of the City National bank, which position he resigned at the close of the year, when he assisted to organize the Akron Savings bank, with William Buchtel as president, Hon. C. R. Grant as vice-president, and himself as cashier, and with a capital stock of $200,000.

Mr. Wagoner was united in marriage April 30, 1868, with Miss Amanda S. Smith, who was born in Franklin township, June 30, 1843, a daughter of Daniel and Eliza (Diehl) Smith, natives of Pennsylvania and of German extraction. This happy union has been blessed with two children, viz: Mabel B., who is the wife of J. V. Cleaver, M. ILLIAM WAGGONER, one of the oldest and most successful agriculturists of Copley township, Summit county, Ohio, is a native of New York state, and was born in Schoharie county, November 13, 1829.

The father of our subject was also named William, was likewise born in the state of New York, and there married, in 1816, Catherine Spohr, also a native of the Empire state, born in October, 1800. To this union were born eight children, viz: Matthew, who died in infancy; John, who was a mason by occupation, married Miss Lora Walker, and died in Akron, Ohio; Christina, who was married to Delos Bosworth, she second white child born in Copley township, both now deceased; Anna, who was married to Dr. P. G. Somers, of Cleveland, but, with her husband, also deceased; William, the subject of this biography; Peter, who died at the age of sixteen years; Almira, wife of Oran Henry, a cooper and boatbuilder of Astoria, Ore.; Amanda; and Matilda, who died in infancy.

William Waggoner, the father, was a cooper and stonemason by trade, but began his business career with only a small capital. In 1835 he brought his family to Ohio and located on Pigeon creek, in Copley township, Summit county, where he remained about one year, working as a stonemason. He then removed to a farm about a mile south of the center and engaged in coopering and farming until his death. He and his wife were devoted members of the Universalist church, and in politics he was a republican.

William Waggoner, the subject of this biography, while assisting to clear his father's land, attended the district and high schools, and at the age of twenty years began teaching. At the same age, also, he went to Akron and commenced learning the bricklayer's trade with his brother, John, serving an apprenticeship of three years, after which he worked at the trade to a considerable extent in the summer season and taught school in the winter months.

In April, 1857, Mr. Waggoner was united in marriage with Miss Ann B. Stearns, who was born in Copley township in 1837, a daughter of John C. and Orpha (Clark) Stearns, who were then residents of the township, but later moved to Kansas, where they passed the remainder of their lives. Immediately after marriage, Mr. Waggoner and wife went to Iowa, where he worked at his trade for about six years. On returning to Ohio, Mrs. Waggoner died November 15, 1863, and in December of the same year Mr. Waggoner enlisted, at Cleveland, in the Sixth Ohio battery. He participated in all the battles of the Atlanta campaign, and in those of Franklin and Nashville, as well as in many others of less note, and was honorably discharged September 1, 1865. He then came to Akron, Ohio, and worked at his trade until March 4, 1869, when he married Miss Lydia Randolph, and at once bought and moved upon his present farm of ninety-six acres in Copley township.

The second Mrs. Waggoner was born in Columbiana county, Ohio, January 16, 1832, a daughter of William B. and Deborah (Carroll) Randolph, by the second marriage of Mrs. Randolph. Her father, of English descent, was born in Virginia March 16, 1778, and died October 15, 1863. He was a son of Thompson Randolph, who was born May 30, 1746. Deborah (Carroll) Randolph, mother of Mrs. Waggoner, was born September 15, 1791, in county Antrim, Ireland, and became the mother of two children, viz: Thompson, a farmer of Columbiana county, and Lydia. Mrs. Lvdia Waggoner was educated in the high school and at Salem seminary, taught school a number of years, and is at present a member of the school board of Copley township-being the first lady to be elected to this position in the township. The parents of this accomplished lady were pioneers of Columbiana county, Ohio, and were married April 10, They were of ante-Revolutionary descent, and the grandmother of Mrs. Waggoner met a tragic end at the hands of savages.

Mr. Waggoner is a strong republican and has been called to several positions of trust and honor by his party. His first presidential vote was cast for Winfield Scott, but at the birth of the republican party he espoused its principles. He is at present a justice of the peace, an office he has filled for three terms. He was also a member of the school board and has been connected with the schools in an official service for almost fifteen years; he has been a township trustee for a number of years, and is, indeed, one of the most prominent citizens of Copley township.

In 1781 Thompson Randolph, grandfather of Mrs. Waggoner, with some of his neighbors and their families of Prince William county, Va., concluded to try pioneer life and removed to Kentucky, lured by the glowing descriptions of Daniel Boone and other pioneers. They embarked at what is now Pittsburg, and descended the Ohio river in flatboats till they reached Kentucky, where they ascended one of the small rivers, and finding a location that suited them they built log cabins for homes and a fort for defense against the Indians and named it Kinslow station. They cleared out ground on which to raise corn and flax, having to depend on their own efforts for food and clothing. For a couple of years they were unmolested by the Indians, though other settlements occasionally had trouble with them. Some whites had been taken prisoners and carried into Ohio, and after being kept there a while the Indians called a council of war, at which they planned an attack on a fort some little distance from Permitting two of the prisoners to learn their plans, they allowed them to escape and return to their homes, where they gave the alarm. All the available help from neighboring stations was collected at the place to be attacked. When the summons for help reached Kinslow station all the men at home repaired at once to the threatened fort. Waggoner's grandfather and three other men were out hunting when the alarm came and were the only men left to defend the station. But as the Indians were not supposed to be near, no fear was felt. When the darkness of night had settled down on the little band and the women and children wrapped in peaceful sleep, they were suddenly aroused and appalled by the war-whoops of the relentless savages. They fully realized the fate awaiting them if they fell into their hands, and bravely and untiringly they loaded the guns with which the four men were trying to The defenders succeeded in defend them. keeping the Indians at bay until the latter gathered flax and other combustibles and fired the roofs of the buildings, after which resistance was useless and the only thing they could do was to try to escape. Mrs. Waggoner's grandmother took her infant son in her arms, and going to a small door that opened on the outside of the fort, unfastened it to pass out. Two Indians were lying in wait, and as she appeared, shot her and her child. Maddened at the deed, her husband shot the larger Indian, and in a hand to hand encounter sent the smaller one to join his companion. burning buildings made everything about the fort as light as day, so that the escaping inmates were nearly all captured or killed. After Mrs. Waggoner's grandfather had avenged his wife's death, he took her father, a boy of five years old, and succeeded in reaching a high brush fence inclosing a corral, in which the cattle were confined at night, and hid him under it, telling him to remain The shadows of there till he came for him. the fence enabled him to escape into the darkness of the woods, and, concealing himself in some logs, he eluded the savages. At one time he was tempted to seek a tinkling bell, thinking it was attached to a horse, but fearing it was an Indian decoy, he waited, and another man, hearing it and going to it, was killed. He remained concealed until the next day, and when he was sure the Indians had left, he took his little boy, and, with nothing to eat except a piece of dried venison he happened to have in his pocket and that he had taken with him on his hunting excursion the previous day, he started afoot on his trip of several hundred miles across the wilderness back to Prince William county, Va. subsisted on wild fruits and roots, excepting once, when they came across a deserted mission founded by some Jesuits, where some turnips were growing. He kept his gun with him. but, as he had no ammunition, it was of no benefit to him. The gun is now in the possession of Mrs. Waggoner's brother, an heir-loom in the family. After many hardships they at length reached their old home in safety.

Two of the maternal uncles of Mrs. Waggoner's father were officers under Gen. Lafayette during the war of the Revolution.

With the few hundred dollars left in his possession he came to Ohio, arrived in Middlebury July 4, 1811, with his fami y-a wife and seven children—in company with a brother and family, and bought land in Coventry township, Summit county. During the war of 1812 he was a soldier under Maj. Miner Spicer, and while away on duty an Indian spy crept to the house, but his little children, working in the clearing, espying their mother's danger, rushed to the cabin with their axes with the intention of annihilating the savage, but the latter made good his escape, and it is thought that he was afterward killed near Summit lake. Mr. Allen was a member of the Baptist church and an excellent reader and elocutionist, and it was his custom, before ministers of his denomination made their advent in his neighborhood, to read sermons in the pioneer meetings. He succeeded in clearing up his farm and in developing a comfortable home, where he died in the Baptist faith September 12, 1837, the father of ten chil-Jonah, who married Cynthia dren, viz: Spicer; Levi; David, who married Benlah Jones; Jacob, married to Catherine Van Sickle; John; Jesse; Catherine, married to Mills Thompson; Sarah, wife of James M. He walked all the way, driving cattle and sheep, while the younger children, with their mother, goods, etc., were conveyed by ox-teams, arriving in Middlebury July 4, 1811. He assisted his father in clearing up his farm and remained with him until reaching his majority, when he purchased a farm in Coventry township, which he cleared and improved until 1868, when he retired to He was married December 10, 1823, to Miss Phebe Spicer, daughter of Maj. Mr. Allen was always prominent in local affairs, and took an active interest in politics, both local and general. For sixty years he was an ardent worker in the Disciples' church, in the faith of which his wife died January 10, 1879, and his own death took place May 11, 1887. He was an extraordinarily enterprising and industrious man, and enjoyed the personal regard of all who came within the circle of his acquaintance.

Maj. Miner Spicer, maternal grandfather of subject, was born in Groton, Litchfield county, Conn., May 29, 1776, married Cynthia Allyn in 1798, and in 1810 came to Ohio on horseback and purchased 260 acres of land in what is now Portage township, Summit He then returned for his family and came back by ox-team, the family arriving on the new farm in June, 1811. During the war of 1812 he served as major of militia, and on the organization of Portage township was made a trustee, and later served as justice of the peace many years. He lost his wife September 10, 1828, and in 1829 he married Mrs. Hannah (Allyn) Williams, widow of Barnabas Williams, and sister of his first wife, Cynthia Maj. William Morgan was a son of William and Mary (Avery) Morgan, and William was a son of John and Elizabeth (Jones) Morgan—the latter a daughter of Lieut.-Gov. Jones, first governor of the New Haven colony—while John, her husband, was a son of James and Margery (Hill) Morgan, Puritans of New England and of the same family as the late Gov. Edward D. Morgan, of the state of New York. Temperance Avery, wife of Capt. William Morgan, was a daughter of Col. Christopher and Prudence (Payson) Avery, granddaughter of James and Deborah (Stellyon) Avery, and great-grand-daughter of James and Joanna (Greenslade) Avery. Capt. William Morgan served under Col. Parsons during the Revolutionary war, having enlisted September 9, 1776; he was honorably discharged for disability November 9, 1776, and died April 11, 1777.

Miner J. Allen, the subject of this memoir, was reared and educated in Coventry township, Summit county, and was there engaged in farming until 1867, when he came to Akron and was employed as local and traveling grain buyer for Commins & Allen. In 1884 he took a fifth interest in the Akron Milling company, which, in 1886, was merged into the F. Schumacher Milling company, in which Mr. Allen was a stockholder and director, and which was merged into the American Cereal company, with which he is now connected. In 1891 he purchased an interest in the Akron Silver Plating company, and since July, 1896, has been treasurer of this thriving corporation.

June 1, 1876, Mr. Allen was united in marriage with Miss Frances C. The maternal grandparents of Mrs. Allen were Robert and Isabel (Dunbar) King, of whom the former was a son of James and Jean (Knox) King, and is said to have been a descendant of the celebrated reformer, John Knox. Robert King was born near Londonderry, Ireland, and settled in Kinsman, Trumbull county, Ohio, in To the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Allen have been born five children in the following order: Albert Mark, Miner W., Margaret P., Christine C. and Frances De Wolf. Mr. and Mrs. Allen are consistent members of the First Disciples' church of Akron, their social standing is of the highest, and Mrs. Allen was one of the first two ladies to be elected to membership of the Akron school board after the passage of the law granting women that privilege. Mr. Allen has always been a republican in politics, and while a resident of Coventry township was for several years a member of the local school board, of which he also filled the position of clerk. Since his residence in Akron his multifarious business interests have precluded him from taking an active part in local politics, and he finds himself content with doing his duty as a good citizen, and as such he is justly esteemed by the entire community.

Of six Brittain brothers born in England, three came to America and fought through the war for the independence of the colonies; the other three were drafted, or impressed, into the British army in England, and came to America to aid in suppressing what was then termed, by the English, the rebellion. Of the latter three, one remained in Canada after the war, and two returned to England. Of the former three all remained in the United States.

In coming here the family made the journey across the Alleghany mountains with a three-horse term and were fourteen days on the way. Here Mr. Brittain hewed the forest away from 206 acres which he purchased, and, in course of time, by hard work, developed as good a farm as ever existed in the county. He here married his second wife, Gainor Mettlin, but to this union no children were born. Mr.

Brittain was a whig in politics and held several offices. His death took place April 5, 1857, in the faith of the Methodist church, and no man in the township was more respected than this upright pioneer.

Israel Potts was a son of Joshua Potts, a native of Scotland and who was a pioneer of Suffield township, Portage county, where he cleared up a farm of 140 acres from the woods, but, prior to 1859, came to Summit county, then a wilderness. He served in the war of 1812 and had born to him eleven children, viz: Israel, Jonathan, Elizabeth, Lewis, Jonas, Ann, Betsey, Joshua, Christina, Catherine, and one who died in infancy. David Cook was born in Connecticut, was married in that state, and prior to 1812 settled in Suffield township, where he cleared up a farm from the forest. He was a soldier in the war of 1812 and was a typical pioneer. He had born to him a family of nine children, viz: Mary, Nathan, John, Lee, Calvin, Orange, Rachel, and two who died in infancy. He lived to be about sixty years of age, and died on his farm in April, 1854.

John Thomas Brittain, after marriage, remained on the old homestead until 1888, when he settled on his present farm, which then consisted of fifty-six acres, but which, by good management, he has increased to about 200 acres, and is now one of the most substantial farmers of Tallmadge township. In politics he is a republican, has held the office of township trustee, and been a member of the school board thirty years. These, and others, almost equally famous, were accustomed to visit her in after years. When seventeen years old she came with Mr. Kent's family, in 1807, through Tallmadge. The roads had not been cut through and she sat on a log in Tallmadge Center while a way She taught but the two terms above referred to and then married Mr. Wright. Alpha Wright was a soldier in the war of 1812, was called out to protect the frontier and was stationed near Sandusky for a few months; a son, Philo, was born while he was away. His house was a rendezvous for the home guard during part of that time. branch of the Wright family has always been educated-Philo and William, brothers of Mrs. Carter, were both graduates of Western Reserve college; a sister, Mary, married Sidney Edgerton, who later became governor of Montana; two sisters married clergymen. Two of Mr. and Mrs. Carter's sons are graduates of Oberlin college—Rev. Homer W. and Charles E.—and Howard is professor of music at Oberlin, having spent three years in Europe in studying this art. Charles E. is studying medicine in the New York university. Homer W. Carter, of Beloit, Wis., is home secretary of the Home Missionary society. The first school for the deaf and dumb was held at the residence of Alpha Wright in 1828-29, and was taught by Col. Smith, who died in the Sixth ward in Akron. He was the founder of the institution for deaf and dumb at Columbus, and was formerly from Hartford, Conn. Mary A. Carter, the daughter, was educated at Oberlin, and taught a missionary school at Selma, Ala., one year. She went to Montana in 1884 and in 1886 took up a ranch—pre-empting a claim of 160 acres, situated near where the city of Great Falls now is—then a hamlet and now a city of 12,000 persons. She is a lady of literary culture and assisted in editing the Pioneer Women of Tallmadge under the auspices of the Western Reserve Historical society.

RS. HENRY CASE.—This lady is the widow of one of the prominent and substantial citizens of Hudson township, now deceased—Henry Case—who was born on the Case homestead October 30, 1817, son of Chauncy and Cleopatra (Hayes) Case. Henry Case received the common education of his day, became a farmer, a pursuit which he always followed. He married Mary L. Goodman, October 27, 1847. She was born in Connecticut September 7, 1828, at Hartford.

Henry Case and wife settled on the Case homestead after marriage, and she now lives on part of the estate with her daughter, Mrs. Hood. Mr. and Mrs. Case were both members of the Congregational church. Politically he was a republican. His children were Nelson, born September 13, 1848, now living in Hudson township, where he is a prominent farmer; Eugene was born June 27, 1850, lives in Mentor, where he is a merchant; Eliza E. was born February 13, 1854, and died July 22, 1875; Frank was born January 17, 1852, and died June 14, 1858; John Goodman, born August 11, 1856, graduated from the Western Reserve college in 1881, and is now a farmer in Hudson township, near the homestead; Edmund W., born November 1, 1858, is a carpenter and builder at Earlville; Hattie S., born January 13, 1861; Frederick C., was born July 19, 1863, and died October 24, 1890; Mary L. was born October 26, 1865, and Clara C., born March 25, 1868. Mary L. was married, August 24, 1892, to John B. Hobart, a native of Ohio, a descendant of ante-Revolutionary ancestors, a graduate of Adelbert college, Cleveland, and also of a theological institute in the east, and now a minister in the Presbyterian church.

Politically Henry Case was a republican. He inherited and purchased the Chauncy Case homestead, consisting of about 275 acres, and by his thrift and industry he added to it until he owned a handsome property of 375 acres. He greatly improved the buildings and erected, just prior to his death, a very substantial modern barn. He was a prosperous farmer, well known for his sterling worth, and had justly earned a reputation as a straightforward and honest man.

The genealogy of Mrs. Henry Case is as follows: She descends from Deacon Richard Goodman, who came to Cambridge, Mass., in 1632; to Hartford, Conn., in 1639, and was one of the original proprietors of that town. His house-lot was on Main street, directly north of the "meeting house" yard. He was "townsman," "surveyor of common lands and fences," "fence viewer," "juror," "sergeant of the train band," "constable." He married Mary, daughter of Stephen Terry, who was one of the settlers of Hadley, and was slain by the Indians in 1676, aged about sixtyseven years. The above facts about Deacon Richard Goodman entitle the ladies of this family to be members of the "Society of Colonial Dames." His son, Richard Goodman, was born 1663 and died 1730. His son, Timothy Goodman, was born September, 1706, in West Hartford, and died 1786; married in 1735, Joana, daughter of Joseph and Jane Wadsworth and granddaughter of Capt. Joseph Wadsworth, of Hartford, who in 1687 saved the charter of Connecticut from seizure by Gov. Andros, and hid it in the Charter Oak of that city. His son, Richard Goodman, born April 10, 1748, and died May, 1834, married Nancy Seymour, of West Hartford, in 1771, and had thirteen children; Richard Goodman served from April 21 to June 6, 1777, in Lieut. Seymour's company of Col. Belden's regiment of Connecticut militia.

His son, the twelfth child, Sylvester Goodman, born April 18, 1789, married January 1, 1810, Rebecca, daughter of Deacon Thomas and Rebecca (Ives) Hough; she was born August 29, 1789, and resided in West Hartford many years. He died in Wolcottville, Conn., November 8, 1834. She moved to Atwater, Ohio, in 1835, and died in Hudson, Ohio, in 1853. They had seven children, viz: Nancy Seymour; Emeline; Henry; Eliza A., who married John Buss and died May 21, 1889; Thomas Richard; Susan Gaylord; Mary Lucia, married Henry Case October 27, 1847. There was a John Goodman who came to this coun-He was, however, a single man, try in 1620. and died in 1621; nothing further is known The ancestry of the Goodman about him. family is taken from the records in the state library of Albany, N. Y., by Mrs. Ella Buss Seymour.

Of Chauncy Case's children, Laura died November 30, 1825, in Hudson, a single lady aged about twenty-three years; Chauncy married, first, Dollie Blair, and then Sarah Wilcox. He moved to McComb, Ill., and there died. Clarinda married Alvin Loomis; Perintha married Amos Woods; Lucian married Julia Pitkin and for his second wife he married Lucia Lyman. He moved to McComb, Ill. Amelia married Charles Hunt, now deceased, and lived in Cuyahoga Falls; Maria married John W. Gross.

Frank F. Barlow, of Hudson, Ohio, is a substantial farmer and respected citizen. was born on April 25, 1858, at Mariaville, Schenectady county, N. Y. He married Hattie S. Case December 12, 1883. was born on the old Case homestead January 13, 1861, daughter of Henry and Mary (Good-To Mr. and Mrs. Barlow have man) Case. been born three children, viz: Henry C., born December 22, 1885; Harley E., born February 14, 1887, and died February 16, 1894; Clara M., born June 22, 1891. and Mrs. Barlow are both members of the Congregational church at Hudson. Politically he is a republican. Mr. Barlow is one of the representative and practical farmers of Hudson township. James M. Hood was born in Tennessee at Flat Creek, August 1, 1863, son of Hezekiah and Emily (Jones) Hood. It is believed that William Hood, the grandfather, was born in Connecticut, fifty-four miles east of Hartford, of English descent. He married and settled in Tennessee, near Flat Creek, where he bought a large plantation and was a slaveholder. He was a brother of Gen. Hood, of the Confederate army. He freed his slaves a few years before the Civil war and after the war he removed to West Virginia, where he bought a farm and passed his remaining days. He lived to the venerable age of eighty-eight years and died in 1890 or 1891. Hezekiah Hood, father of James M., was born about 1831, in Connecticut, and was a small boy when he went with his father to Tennessee. He was a blacksmith by trade and married in Allegheny, Pa. He settled in Tennessee and moved to Virginia during the Civil war, passing through the Confederate lines to the northern army. He died near Marietta, Ohio, aged about forty-five years, the father of six children and a member of the Presbyterian church.

James M. Hood received a common-school education in Noble county, Ohio, and early began to work on the farm—was fireman for a time on a railroad, came to Summit county in 1887, and was clerk for a time in Ravenna in the hardware and agricultural implement business. He married, November 13, 1895, in Hudson, Ohio. Clara C. Case, born March 25, 1868, daughter of Henry and Mary (Goodman) Case. After marriage Mr. Hood settled on part of the old homestead, and has a good farm of 100 acres.

ORA CASE, one of the most venerable and honored citizens of Summit county, a pioneer and a man who was always identified with the best interests of humanity, sprang from sterling English descent on the Case side, who came from England in the old colonial Puritan times.

Richard Case, great-grandfather of subject, was the father of Richard Case, the grandfather of subject, who was a farmer of Hartford county, Conn., and to his marriage were born Richard, Sterling, George, Chauncy, Gideon, Ruth, and others not remembered. Richard, the grandfather of subject, lived to be an aged man and died in Connecticut. He had a brother who was a soldier in the war of the Revolution and was killed by a spent cannon ball. A premium was offered for British cannon balls found in battle, and he and another soldier attempted to stop an apparently slow-moving ball and was instantly killed.

Chauncy Case, son of Richard, was the father of Lora Case, was born in Hartford county, Conn., November 20, 1775, and became a farmer. He married, in 1801, Cleopatra Haves, born September 4, 1779, and the children were Laura, born August 30, 1802; Chauncy, born October 26, 1803; Clarinda, born January 27, 1808; Parintha, born April 10, 1810; Lora, born November 17, 1811; Edward, born August 15, 1814; Lucian, born July 3, 1816; Henry, born October 30, 1817; Amelia, born November 6, 1819; Maria, born May 8, 1822. Chauncy Case owned a good farm in the town of Granby, Hartford county, Conn. He moved with his family to Summit county, Ohio, arriving at Hudson July 4, 1814, having made the journey with a twohorse team, and had a milk cow tied on behind for milk for the children. They were six weeks on the way. His brother-in-law, Gideon Mills (who had married his wife's sister, Dorothy Hayes), and his family came with the party. Chauncy Case settled in Hudson, in the east part of town, on a farm of 160 acres, about twenty acres having been cleared and a hewed log house having been built, but not finished, having neither door, chimney nor window nor floor. Mr. Case put in a puncheon floor, and improved his house, and built, the second year, a frame barn. He cleared up his farm and became a substantial farmer and made a good pioneer home, and here the last five children were born. Mrs. Case was a member of the Congregational church and Mr. Case was an old-line whig in politics and an abolitionist. He was a sturdy pioneer and lived to be about eighty-four years old, and died in May, 1865. He was a very industrious and hard-working man, much respected as a substantial farmer and good citizen.

Lora Case, son of above and the subject of this sketch, was born November 17, 1811, in Granby township, Hartford county, Conn., and was about two and a half years old when brought by his parents to Ohio; was brought up among the pioneers and received a pioneer common-school education in a log house at Darrowville, but always took a great interest in reading good books and a wide interest in all political matters, and improved his mind. He worked hard at clearing land and on the farm when young. He married, at the age of about twenty-five years, May 10, 1837, in Hudson, Ohio, Sarah A. Wright, born May 8, 1814, in Sharon, Conn., a daughter of Thomas and Clarissa (Hollenbeck) Wright. Wright was a farmer born in Connecticut and married there, and was of English ancestry. Their children were William, Samuel, Sarah A., Mary, George, Jeremiah, Henry and Fred-Thomas Wright moved to Summit county, Ohio, in 1815, and settled in Hudson township, cleared up a farm from the woods, and there passed the remainder of his days. He was a member of the Congregational church and highly respected by all. He died at the age of seventy-five years. Lora Case and wife settled on a farm of 160 acres in the woods in Streetsboro township, Portage county, near the line. He cleared up this farm and had paid $5 per acre, his father giving him the first payment of $5, and by diligence and hard work, aided by his helpful wife, he made a good farm and home, and in 1864 sold this farm and moved to another, which consisted of 164 acres when he bought it, but he sold all but sixty acres. He built good buildings and made a good home.

To Mr. and Mrs. Case were born Chauncy, Ellen, Julian and Wilbert. Mrs. Case died December 8, 1888, a member of the Congregational church at Hudson, and a woman of many virtues. In politics Mr. Case was a whig and an abolitionist, and was one of the founders of the republican party in Portage county, and voted for John C. Fremont. He was a stanch lover of freedom and was connected with the under ground railroad, and his house was a station on this famous secret route, and he, a number of times, afforded shelter to the down-trodden slaves on their way north. At one time in the 'fifties, in the fall of the year, a colored man from Ravenna (a hackman for Samuel Taylor, who was a Quaker tavern-keeper of that place), drove out in the uight and called upon Mr. Case and told him that Samuel Taylor had sent him seven fugitive slaves, and that men were on their track at Ravenna. Mr. Case's house was selected because it was a little off the usual route, which was via David Lane's, who lived at Streetsboro, and thus the pursuers were thrown off the track. Mr. Case kept them from Friday night until Sunday night, and then drove them to Hudson to John Markley, who immediately drove them to a Mr. Johnson's, at Northfield, who drove them to Cleveland, where they were placed on a steamboat and taken safely to Canada. party consisted of four men and two womenall young—and a child. They kept very quiet and seemed depressed and fearful, and said but little and kept close to the barns, and could not at first be induced to come to the house for food. This kind of work in the cause of liberty was dangerous, for many would have gladly given information and caused the arrest of those who aided the slaves to escape, as they were liable to a fine and imprisonment and the price of the slaves. Thus these fearless men risked their property and even liberty to help the down-trodden to freedom-who were strangers to them and whom they never saw again. They were simply instruments for the great cause of liberty, and many a slave was thus taken to Canada and freedom. Case was always industrious and has all his life been an active temperance worker, and voted for prohibition during its advocacy by Green Clay Smith, and was a faithful laborer in the good cause. He was a much respected and well-known pioneer, was a man of intelligence and ability, and died July 14, 1897, deeply mourned by the entire community. His reminiscences are just now appearing in the Hudson Independent.

D., of Akron, Ohio, is of sterling English descent, and is the son of a physician, who reared four sons to the profession of medicine, to which complicated science nature seems to have peculiarly adapted the male members of this honored family.

The ancestors of the doctor, on coming to America, settled near Charleston, S. C., and from these descended Jacob F. Chamberlain, the grandfather of Dr. William E., and the father of Dr. Charles W. Chamberlain. The last-named is a renowned practitioner and has had an extended experience in Cumberland, Md., Wheeling, W. Va.. and in Ohio, and is still in active practice. He married, in Allegheny county, Pa., Miss Lovinah LaCock, daughter of David LaCock, and to this union have been born Dr. William E., Dr. G. W. E., Dr. Jacob F., Dr. Norman W. (deceased), Louisa, Adelaide (deceased) and Lovinah P. Of the sons, three served in the Civil war-Doctors William E., G. W. E. and Jacob F. --Dr. G. W. E. serving as chief of saddlery in the Sixth Ohio cavalry, and Dr. Jacob F. in the Second Ohio, same branch of service.

Dr. William E. Chamberlain was born in Allegheny City, Pa., November 29, 1840, and received his preparatory education at Marietta, Ohio. He then studied med cine under his father, Dr. Charles W. Chamberlain, and also pursued a course of study in chemistry and pharmaceutics; in 1863 and 1864 he attended the medical department of the university of Michigan, at Ann Arbor, and later graduated from the Charity Medical college, at Cleveland, Ohio (in the spring of 1879), receiving his degree of M. D., and still later received an adeundem degree from the medical department of the Wooster university, Cleveland, and is now, also, an alumnus of the Western Reserve college of Cleveland, a member of the Northeastern Ohio Medical society and of the Cleveland (Ohio) Medical society; he possesses a valuable library of well-selected works pertaining to his science, and keeps well abreast of every advance made in its progress.

Dr. Chamberlain began the actual practice of his profession at the age of seventeen years, at Peninsula, Ohio, in conjunction with his father, with whom he remained until the outbreak of the Civil war, when he enlisted in company D, First Ohio light artillery, and was soon afterward detailed as surgeon. served at Ivy Mountain, Green River, Prestonburg, East Liberty, Louisa, Ky., and was also in many skirmishes, but was finally taken si k from exposure during a severe snow-storm, which led to his confinement in hospital at Louisville, Ky., and at Columbus, Ohio, and also received other injuries, from which he never fully recovered, being still deprived of hearing in one of his ears. His term of service continued through thirteen months, when he was honorably discharged on account of disability, although he was a man of very robust constitution prior to his enlistment.

The first marriage of Dr. Chamberlain took place March 31, 1862, at Liverpool, Medina county, Ohio, to Miss Mary Prichard, a native of the place, and a daughter of Sheldon and Marietta Prichard, and to this union was born one child—Myrtle M., February 3, 1868. Having been deprived by death of his first companion, the doctor next married Miss Elizabeth R. Greer.

January 10, 1875, Dr. Chamberlain came to Akron, and here has made a reputation that might be envied by any physician, being indisputably recognized as the most skillful practitioner in the city, to which recognition he is well entitled, having now been in active practice in Summit county for over thirty-two consecutive years. Here his social relations are of the most pleasant character, and fraternally he is an honored Mason, a member of the Knights of Pythias, and of Buckley post, No. 12, Grand Army of the Republic.

The doctor's maternal ancestors, the La-Cook family, were of sterling Scotch-Irish origin. The founder of the family in America settled in Westmoreland county, Pa., in 1727, where he purchased several hundred acres of land, and reached the patriarchal age of 107 years, and then met his death by violence, being shot with arrows by Indians in the war of 1812.

David LaCook, the maternal grandfather of the doctor, married a Miss Pattent, the union resulting in the birth of five children, viz: Sarah, David, Joseph, Mary and Lovinah P. The father of this family also lived to a great age—100 years—and at his death his hair had not turned gray and his teeth were still perfectly sound. His wife also reached the age of 100 years, and the demise of both took place in Pennsylvania, where they were among the most honored of the pioneers.

HARLES C. CONAGHAN, one of the old soldiers of the Civil war, and a respected citizen and merchant of Tallmadge, Ohio, was born in Carey, Wyandot county, Ohio, October 16, 1842, a son of Charles C. and Mary A. (Bardoon) Conaghan. The Conaghans were of Irish, and the Bardoons of French ancestry.

Dennis Conaghan, the grandfather of C.

C. Conaghan, the subject of this memoir, was born in Ireland, first settled in Adams county, Pa., and was a pioneer farmer of Stark county, Ohio, where he settled about 1825, but moved to Wyandot county. Charles C. Conaghan, the father of subject, was a farmer of Wyandot county, Ohio, and his children were Charles C., our subject, and A. F. Mr. Conaghan died a young man, aged thirty-two years, and his widow then marrried William Best, to which union four children were born, viz: Mary E., Agatha, Louisa and Matilda.

Charles C. Canaghan, the subject of this memoir, was reared on a farm in Wyandot county, and enlisted in Tiffin, Ohio, August 12, 1861, in company B, Forty-ninth regiment Ohio volunteer infantry, for three years or during the war, under Col. W. H. Gibson and Capt. B. S. Porter, served out his time and was honorably discharged at Chatanooga, Tenn., September 5, 1864. He was in the battles of Shiloh, Liberty Gap, and Chickamauga, where he was wounded September 19, 1863. He was also in the Atlanta campaign and in the battles of Buzzard's Roost, Resaca, Adairsville, Cassville, Pickett's Mills, Pine Mountain, Kenesaw Mountain, Peach Tree Creek, and the siege and general assault of Atlanta. The Forty-ninth Ohio has 113 men buried at Marietta, Ga., in the National cemetery. Mr. Conaghan was taken prisoner at Lawrenceburg, Ky., October 8, 1862, by Kirby Smith's command and paroled on the spot and sent home.

The wound Mr. Conaghan received at Chickamauga was by a shot through the right leg just above the knee, from which he was confined in hosaital No, 5, at Nashville, for four weeks and then received a furlough home for sixty days; after partial recovery he served with the Sixty-eighth Indiana volunteer infantry two months, not being able to join his regiment, but finally rejoined it at Cleveland,

Mr. Conaghan considers his hardest march to have been from Battle Creek, Tenn., to Louisville, Ky., a distance of about 300 miles, leaving Battle Creek, Tenn., August 16, 1862, and arriving at Louisville, about September 29-30, 1862, suffering severely from heat and dust, lack of salt and food, living on green corn and bread which the soldiers baked at the camp fires themselves. Conaghan crossed, with his regiment, the state of Kentucky three times and five times across the state of Tennessee. His regiment traveled about 12,000 miles on foot, by water and by Pickett's Mill he considers to have been his hardest-fought battle. Mr. Conaghan was always an active soldier, and with the exception of the battles fought while he was wounded and a paroled prisoner, was in all the battles of his regiment, its skirmishes, marches and campaigns.

After the war Mr. Conaghan returned to Carey, Wyandot county, Onio, and in the spring of 1865 went to Cleveland, Ohio, where he took a commercial course at Bryant & Stratton's college and immediately thereafter engaged in bookkeeping in Cleveland, where he remained six months. In February, 1866, he came to Akron, Ohio, and engaged in the coal trade, at which he continued one year. He married, while living in Akron, Miss Olive R. Ellis, who was born December 15, 1847, in Akron, a daughter of Joseph D. and Mary A. (Brown) Ellis, and to this union were born two children—Nellie L. and Mary B.

After marriage Mr. Conaghan located in New Portage, where he was engaged for one and a half years in the grocery business, and came to Tallmadge in 1870. Here he was employed as clerk for W. E. Hinman until 1885; in 1886 Mr. Conaghan engaged in business at Tallmadge with Frank E. Hine, but Mr. Hine died in 1892, and since that time Mr. Conaghan has conducted the business alone. Mr.

Conaghan is a member of the G. A. R., Buckley post of Akron. Ohio, and has been delegate to the department encampment. He is also a member of the K. of P. at Tallmadge. In politics Mr Conaghan is a stanch republican, has been clerk of Tallmadge ten years, and has been a member of the school board. Mrs. Conaghan died October 27, 1885, a woman of many virtues. Mr. Conaghan next married, March 25, 1897, Margaret E. Hine, née Hall, widow of Frank E. Hine.

Mr. Conaghan was a brave soldier, and of his regiment, the Forth-ninth Ohio volunteer infantry, 202 men were killed in battle. was the heaviest loss of any regiment from Ohio. Out of every 1,000 men in the army forty-seven died of disease and thirty-seven were killed, making eighty-four who perished out of every 1,000, and never saw their homes again. Mr. Conaghan's brother Frank enlisted for the war when only seventeen years old in company B, Forty-ninth Ohio volunteer infantry, and was killed at the battle of Kenesaw Mr. Conaghan was not yet ninemountain. teen years old when he enlisted from purely patriotic motives, and first offered his services to his country in the first call for 75,000 men, but this call being most promptly filled, his offer was declined, but he seized the next opportunity and was accepted, as narrated above.

HOMAS BLACKBURN of Hudson, Summit county, Ohio, and a veteran of the Civil war, was born October 9, 1833, in Lincolnshire, England, a son of William and Jane (Emerson) Blackburn.

William Blackburn was a son of James and Mary (Fowler) Blackburn; James was a soldier seven years in the British army and had a brother in the battle of Waterloo. James Blackburn was the father of two chil-

After marriage William Blackburn lived in Lincolnshire, and died there. His wife came to America with her youngest son Henry, in 1878, and died at the home of her son Thomas—having attained the unusual age of ninety-three years—in 1883.

Thomas Blackburn was entirely self-educated. He left home at the early age of eleven years and worked for a farmer in Lincolnshire-William Slight-for two years; with another farmer two years, and for William Davis one year, and others in Yorkshire until he was twenty-three years old. that time he gained what education he could from books and at Sunday-schools. age of twenty-three years, in 1859, he came to America, sailing from Liverpool to New York in the steamer City of Washington, arriving in New York May 26, after a passage of eleven days. He came immediately to Ohio and worked on the farm of his brother, John Blackburn, in Boston township, Summit county, eighteen months, and then worked for George Haskell, in Boston township, until he enlisted, September 1, 1861, in Capt. A. J. Konkle's battery D, First Ohio light artillery, for three years or during the war, and served until honorably discharged January 1, 1864, at Nashville, Tenn., when he re-enlisted in the same organization, to serve three years more, or during the war, and was again honorably discharged July 15, 1865, at Cleveland, Ohio, the war having come to a close.

C., then to Jonesboro, N. C., and joined Sherman's army, lying at Greensboro, and served under him until discharged. this long list of battles, Mr. Blackburn was in many skirmishes, too numerous to mention. During his services as a soldier, he traversed over 26,000 miles, including passage by vehicles and steamboats, and marches. two horses killed under him in battle-one at Shelbyville and one on the Atlanta campaign, and at different times three horses were wounded under him, and a bullet at one time struck his knapsack on his saddle. Mr. Blackburn was not sick in hospital worth mentioning, and was not wounded nor prisoner, and was always prompt and cheerful in the discharge of his duty.

After the war Mr. Blackburn returned to Ohio and married, April 10, 1866, in Hudson, Anna L. Cowley, who was born December 1, 1846, in Holbeach, Lincolnshire, England, a daughter of Joseph and Hannah (Hunt) Cowley. Joseph Cowley was born in Molten, Sea's End, Lincolnshire, England, April 15, 1815, a son of William and Mary (James) Cowley. William Cowley was a farmer and lived on the farm owned by James Cowley, that had been in the family (from Lord Cowley) since 1610. William Cowley and wife were the parents of William, Mary and Joseph. William Cowley, Sr., lived to be an aged man and died in England. Joseph Cowley was a blacksmith by trade, having been apprenticed at twelve years of age. He married in England, and came to America in 1852, sailing from Liverpool in March, and six weeks later landing in New York. He at once came to Ohio, and arrived in the last of May, 1852. Here he worked at his trade one year, when his wife joined him, bringing their children, the eldest being twelve years old, and the youngest four In 1854 Mr. Cowley bought a fertile farm, consisting of eighty acres, and improved it with substantial farm buildings and a pleasant residence, but nevertheless worked at his trade for several years in Akron. His children were Maria D., Abraham J., William R.; Joseph, died eight years old on lake Erie and is buried at Hudson, Ohio; Anna L. and Lottie Mr. and Mrs. Cowley were both members of the Methodist church, in which, in his younger days, Mr. Cowley was a class leader. In politics he was a republican and was an industrious and respected citizen. The death of Joseph Cowley took place September 25, 1897, and his remains were interred beside those of his wife in the cemetery of East Akron, where a beautiful marble shaft marks their last resting place.

After marriage, Thomas Blackburn settled on the Cowley homestead. He has bought additional land and now has a fine farm of 128 He and wife are the parents of Florence J., Harry J., Lotta A., and Mary Edna. He is a member of Gen. William T. Sherman post, No. 68, G. A. R., at Hudson, in which he has held the office of commander and other positions, and is also a member of the K. of P., Gen. Sheridan lodge, No. 323, at Hudson. Miss Florence Blackburn was educated in the Union schools at Hudson and one year at the academy at Hudson, and was one of Summit county's honored teachers for three years. She is secretary of the Young Ladies' Aid society at Hudson and a member of the Congregational church. She has also been training in music, both vocal and instrumental. I., was a recipient of a high-school course, graduated in 1889 from the academy, and is now teller in the First National bank at Akron. Lotta A. is a graduate of the class of 1891, and also a graduate in the class of 1893 at the Western Reserve academy, and was at first a teacher in the common schools; was in one district for three years, and now has charge of the A. & B. primary in the Union schools in Hudson. Mary Edna is a student in the D grammar grade in the Union schools. be seen that Mr. and Mrs. Blackburn have given their children good practical educations.

RTHUR L. CONGER, whose identification with the business interests of Ohio and the west has made him one of the distinguished citizens not only of Akron but of the Buckeye state; with a reputation in business circles which extends far beyond the confines of Ohio, was born in Boston, Summit county, in which place his parents had located in 1831, removing from St. Albans, Vt. He is descended from one of the early families of New England. The advantages of wealth or influence did not surround him in his boyhood; in fact, at a very early age he started out to make his own way in the world, working at first for the meager sum of ten cents per day. As his business ability was developed with the passing years his wages were proportionately increased, and he received fair wages as a farm hand and as an employee in a brick-yard. Even when a boy he manifested the progressive spirit which has been one of his pronounced characteristics, by embarking in business on his own account. With a neighbor boy he purchased a canal boat, which they operated some years. Later he engaged in school-teaching and at the same time he was learning valuable lessons in the school of experience and developing a self-reliance and force of character which have proved of incalculable benefit to him in his contact with the world.

Mr. Conger's service in the Civil war interrupted his pedagogic labors. Prompted by patriotic impulses he enlisted among the boys in blue of company G, One Hundred and Fifteenth Ohio infantry, and upon the organization of the company was elected second Meritorious conduct won him prolieutenant. motion to the rank of first lieutenant, and ere the war closed he was made captain, thus serving until July, 1865, when hostilities having ended he was honorably discharged. field of battle he was ever brave and fearless, and his caution and unusual foresight often called him to be selected for some special service. He was for some time acting adjutant of the regiment, served as acting assistant adjutant-general on the staff of Brig-Gen. Jacob Ammon; was provost marshal under Gen. J. D. Cox, and was assistant inspector of railroad defenses of the department of the Cumberland, under Gen. George H. Thomas, a position requiring marked executive ability and mental grasp. The details of this important and responsible position were administered with such skill, intelligence and promptitude as to commend him to the personal attention of Gen. Thomas, whose congratulatory letters, as well as those of many other distinguished officers, he has now in his possession. thus for some time had charge of the railroad defenses of the department of the Cumberland, located at Nashville, under the immediate charge of Maj. James R. Willett, of the First United States veteran volunteer engineers, to whom commissioned officers of that branch of service of the department made their reports. At the close of the war he returned home.

Civic as well as military honors have come to Col. Conger, by reason of his superior ability and worth. He was twice elected treasurer of Summit county, was city treasurer of Akron, secretary of the board of education, was president of the Business Men's club of that place, and a recognized leader in social, political and commercial life. He might have secured any political office he desired, but he seeks not reward for his active and efficient public service. For more than twenty years he has been an influential member of the republican committees of the state, served three times as chairman of the state republican committee of Ohio and for eight years was a member of the national executive committee. He has made a profound study of economic questions of national importance and is considered a just and discriminating critic of many of the most subtle and perplexing branches of the tariff and financial questions, being to-day recognized as one of the ablest and most practical of financiers and politicians belonging to the class of manufacturers of the United States.

In 1870 Col. Conger became a traveling salesman for the Whitman & Miles Manufacturing company, which had plants at Fitchburg, Mass., and Akron, Ohio, and was the first company in the world to make a specialty of the manufacture of mower knives, reaper sickles and sections, beginning operations in 1850 and since maintaining the lead in the trade. The colonel was soon made a director of the company, a little later its vice-president, and later president of the new or consolidated company, which position he so ably filled until the fall of 1897. In 1877 the company perfected a consolidation with George Barnes & Company, of Syracuse, N. Y., and for some years the business was handled only from the Akron and Syracuse factories, but owing to its great increase a plant was established at St. Catherines, Ontario, and later at Canton, Ohio. Other specialties for the agricultural trade in this country and abroad were also added to their list of manufactures, and branch houses have been established in New York, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Chicago, Kansas City, San Francisco, London and Paris, thus providing more direct communication with consumers. The trade so rapidly grew that the capacity had to be greatly enlarged, and for this purpose twenty acres of land were purchased at West Pullman, Ill., on which to erect their fifth plant. goods which are manufactured, the company have a reputation for their excellence, the products of their factories being of acknowledged superiority.

Col. Conger married Miss Emily Bronson, a lady of high intellectual attainment and culture, and a daughter of H. V. Bronson, of Peninsula, Ohio, whose father, Hiram Bronson, was one of the partners who purchased the Western Reserve. The colonel and his wife have four sons: Kenyon B., Arthur L., Erastus Irving, deceased, and Latham H. Their beautiful and palatial home, called Irving Lawn, in memory of their deceased son, is the center of a cultured society circle.

In 1882 Mr. Conger was elected to the command of the Eighth regiment, Ohio national guards, and thus won the title by which he is generally known. He served in that capacity for eight years, during which time he held the position of honor at the public square during the funeral obsequies of President Garfield. In 1885, in Ashland, Ohio, he held in check an excited mob of nearly ten thousand at the time of the execution of Horn and Griffin, and, without firing a shot, thus prevented a scene of bloodshed and horror. He has always taken an active part in the work of the Grand Army of the Republic, was department commander of Ohio in 1886, and is a member of the Ohio commandery of the Loyal Legion. He belongs to the Protestant Episcopal church and has long been president of the Union Charity association of Akron. benevolence and charity have made happy many a home, and the extent of his munificence is known only to himself. The life of such a man as Col. Conger needs no eulogistic comment from the biographer. It speaks for Splendid success has crowned his business efforts, honors have awaited him in civil and military life, but above all he has won the love and respect of the poor by his recognition of the brotherhood of mankind, and his readiness to acknowledge worth and merit in the humblest representative of the race.

After the war Mr. Deisman returned to the home farm, of which he has cleared sixty acres. This farm he purchased in 1870, but at that time it contained none of its present improvements, which have all been made by He now has a beautiful dwelling, substantial out-buildings, lawns, and twenty acres set in fruit, including apples, pears, plums, peaches and cherries, and many varieties of small fruits. In 1895-96 he produced about 3,000 bushels of apples, each year, and in 1897 sold over 350 bushels of plums and about fifty bushels of strawberries, and in fruit culture he is considered to be the most successful of any person in the county, beside which, he has been more than usually successful in dairying. ILTON C. DANFORTH, a prominent farmer and one of the most respected citizens of Darrowville, Summit county, Ohio, descends from an English family who two centuries ago settled in New Hampshire.

William Danforth, the founder of the family in America, came from England and landed at Boston, Mass., about 1670, but settled in Newbury, in the same state. A brother came with him and settled in Maine. Rev. Nicholas Danforth, also from England, was the founder of another branch of the Danforth family. William Danforth, with others, received a grant of land from the Massachusetts Bay colony in the town of Boscawen (now Webster), N. H., and there he settled and lived many years.

William Danforth, the great-grandfather of subject, was a farmer of Boscawen, N. H., and was a soldier in the Revolutionary war. Enoch Danforth, son of William, was born in New Hampshire, was a farmer, and married in Vermont, near Saint Albans, Hannah Hains, a native of Vermont, of German ancestry. He came to Ohio with his father in 1823, and married, May 4, 1831, Sophia Darrow (born at Darrowville, March 31, 1810), a daughter of Joseph and Sallie (Prior) Darrow. After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Hial Danforth settled on the farm, then consisting of forty acres, where Milton C., our subject, now lives, improved the property and added to it until he owned 115 acres, and erected good buildings. He was a member of the Methodist church when young, but imbibed liberal views in later life. In politics he was a whig, but became a republican on the organization of this party. -He was an honored citizen, held the office of township trustee, and lived to be eighty-one years, and died May 29, 1889. His children were Mary (who died at the age of thirteen years), Milton C., Helen S. and two others who died in infancy, viz: Charles E; aged six months, and Edmond E. aged two years and six months.

Milton C. Danforth was born June 13, 1836; on the home farm, received a common-school education and was reared a farmer. He married, August 21, 1858, near Darrowville, Miss Chloe B. Marvin, who was born September 8, 1837, in Aurora, Portage county, Ohio, a daughter of Ulysses and Elizabeth (Bradley) Marvin. The Marvins and Bradleys descended from Connecticut Puritans. Ulysses, the father of Mrs. Danforth, was born in New England, was a cloth dresser by trade, and married, May 1, 1822, in Middletown, Conn., Elizabeth Bradley, born October 25, 1800, a daughter of Arba and Esther (Chamberlain) Bradley. Mr. Marvin lived to be eighty-six years of age, and died May 11, 1887, at the residence of our subject; Mrs. Marvin died June 28, 1884.

After marriage Mr. Danforth and wife settled on the old Danforth homestead and have lived here ever since. Of the children born to Mr. and Mrs. Danforth, Jennie E., Nina R. and Milton H. are those who have lived to mature years. Mr. and Mrs. Danforth are liberal in religious belief and in politics he is a stanch republican, and cast his first presidential vote for John C. Fremont and his next for A. Lincoln. Ball, of Mantua Station, Portage county, is a resident of Darrowville, Ohio.

Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Howe are publishers of The Children's World, a journal devoted to rhetorical exercises in the public schools, beside all grades of school aids. Their business has grown to large pretentions and some mail days their output reaches to fifteen sacks of publications. Their business comprises mail business entirely, and the grade of the work is first-class and is indorsed by all the practical educators.

Mr. Danforth is an ardent advocate of spiritualism, which is now recognized in many places as one of the important factors in religious belief, and of the truth of which he became convinced in 1858, two years after its announcement to the world as a religious doctrine, but it was not until 1890 that an organization was formed in Portage county, although national in character. The local originator of the movement was Dr. David M. King, of Mantua Station, Ohio, with the aid of the spirits, which were associated with him. organization, now known as the National Spiritual and Religious Camp association, is located at Mantua Station, Ohio, owning a hotel, beautifully located within one-half mile of the Erie railroad depot in Maple Grove, 30x90 feet and three stories high; but there will be another more pretentious building, which will be erected soon. There are about thirty cottages erected on the grounds. The auditorium, 120x60 feet, will accommodate about 2,000 people. Here, in this beautiful grove, God's first temples, is where these happy people congregate each year, and each year brings new additions to their religious belief. Rev.; Moses Hull, one of the best and most profound Bible scholars in the United States, is the chief exponent of this work.

Dr. Hull, Rev. A. J. Weaver, Milton H. Danforth and D. M. King, also Dr. Schermerhorn, of Akron, Ohio, conduct a school each summer at the camp grounds, which is one of the great aids in spreading the teachings of the Spiritualists. Mr. Danforth has been president and chairman of the organization since 1890, and his onerous duties have been received by his people with the greatest satisfaction. of the most striking seances have been given at Mantua, Ohio, and such prominent mediums as Mrs. Sheets, of Michigan; A. Richmond, of Chicago, and Mrs. Mary C. Lyman, principally platform workers, have been present, which indicates that the work is in a very flourishing stage. Mr. Danforth has been an indefatigable worker in the Lord's vineyard in this religious belief, being a gentleman of more than ordinary executive ability and courteous in manner, and has done much to advance the cause.

Mr. Danforth's mother, who had reached the advanced age of eighty-seven years and eight months, died December 18, 1897, sincere in the spiritualistic belief. Her life was replete with good works or deeds, and her departure was peaceful and contented, and she was beloved by all who knew her. Her remains are interred in Maple Grove cemetery, where a beautiful granite monument stands sacred to her memory.

Here her whole life has been passed, and the good she has done will live after her. Her work of love in the community will form an imperishable monument to her memory.

Emeline Palmer was born at Windsor, Conn., April 5, 1815, daughter of Hezekiah H. and Abagail (Taylor) Palmer, who were the original pioneers of Northfield Center, building the first log cabin there in 1832. Hezekiah Palmer was born in Windsor, Hartford county, Conn., January 19, 1781, was married May 29, 1811, to Abigail Taylor, who was born in Buckland, Mass., January 12, 1792. To them were born eight children, viz: Julia A., Emeline, Abigail T., William L., Horace H., Henry T., and two who died in infancy. The Palmers are of old Connecticut stock, who came over in the Mayflower, some were soldiers in the Revolutionary war. Palmer first came to Ohio in 1822, locating at Willoughby. They were six weeks in making the journey in a large covered wagon drawn by two yoke of cattle and a horse. few years the family returned to their native town and state. In 1831 Mr. Palmer came again to Ohio, purchasing 160 acres at the center of Northfield. Returning, he brought out his family in June, 1832. He built the first log house at the center of Northfield, in the woods, which in a few years was replaced by the frame house. Here the parents spent the remainder of their lives. Mrs. Palmer was a most exemplary woman, patiently enduring the labors and privations of pioneer life. was truly a helpmeet for her husband. At sixteen years of age she united with the Baptist church, and for sixty-eight years was true to the church of her early choice. Palmer lived and died an honored and worthy citizen, upright in all his dealings, obliging and courteous to all.

Miss Emeline Palmer, the second child and daughter, was married in a log house at Northfield May 9, 1839, to Ambrose Williams Bliss, who was born December 6, 1806, at Jericho, Vt., a son of Timothy and Anne (Campbell) Bliss. Ambrose W. Bliss received a common-school education in his native state and learned the trades of millwright and carpenter. He came to Ohio in the fall of 1833 and for some years he worked at these trades in Cleveland, being engaged for some time as a foreman on the public works in Cleveland harbor and Black river. Previous to his marriage in 1839 he bought thirty acres of partially cleared land a half mile south of Northfield Center, where he resided for a few years. He and his brother, Lucien, had previously bought 150 acres a mile west of the Center, which Lucien improved. In 1837 Ambrose W. bought 165 acres at what is now Northfield Center. Of this tract but a few acres had been cleared. He completed the task of clearing, and, about 1843, erected the present substantial homestead. This was the first large two-story frame house in Northfield and is still standing, a commodious and pleasant

In the true sense of the term, Ambrose W. Bliss was a self-made man. Through his own sturdy efforts and the assistance of his faithful wife, prosperity came, and at the time of his death he owned 240 acres of finely improved farming lands. In his political faith Mr. Bliss was an old-line whig, and a warm Union man, and was one of the original republicans of his county. By his upright manner of living he received the honors of his community and held, in his township, the offices of justice of the peace and township trustee. He also served the county six years as commissioner-from 1854 to 1860-and was one of the directors of the Cleveland, Zanesville & Cincinnati (now C., A. & C. road). Mr. Bliss was an ardent friend of religion, and was a life member of the American Bible society. He was a wellread man, taking a lively interest in the affairs of the day. His excellent judgment in men's affairs, coupled with his unquestioned integrity, gave him a high place in the community of which he was so valued a member. children of this family were Ellen, Lorin, Horace and George. Horace was a soldier in the Civil war, a private in company C, One Hundred and Fifteenth regiment Ohio volunteer infantry, and died February 20, 1863, of disease contracted in the service. Though quite young at the time of his enlistment, and of frail physique, his high patriotism impelled him to offer his services to his country, and against the wishes of his parents he heroically went to meet an untimely death. The daughter, Ellen Bliss, remains at home to care for her mother in her declining years. Miss Bliss is a lady of marked intelligence, refinement and grace, and is possessed of fine literary She acted as historian for the Western Reserve Historical society in the preparation of the work on "Pioneer Women of the Western Reserve." The family is very properly one of the most respected in the county. Mrs. Bliss, the venerable subject of this memoir, although now past the allotted three score and ten, possesses even excellent memory and vision; her mental faculties are unimpaired. She is one of the few remaining pioneers of the Western Reserve who have seen all this wonderful advance in the condition of the wilderness of her childhood, and her reminiscences of former times are interesting and valuable.

RS. HENRY F. ELLSWORTH, of Streetsboro township, Portage county, Ohio, descends from an early pioneer of the county. Hezekiah Ellsworth, the original settler here of that name, was born in Massachusetts, at Windsor, where he grew to maturity, and May 22, 1816, married Eunice Gibson, and the children were Henry F.; Rufus G., born January 17, 1818; Amy E., born July 3, 1819; Annie-deceased, aged thirteen years, May 19, 1836; Josephine Aura, born May 7, 1820. He first settled in Aurora, at Geauga lake, and lived there He then bought ten acres of land in the woods in Streetsboro township, where the homestead now is. He cut the first tree on the place, which was very thickly covered with very heavy timber, and by degrees he cleared up a small space and built a log cabin. He worked hard, and finally developed a good farm of sixty acres. He lived to be eightyeight years old and died on his homestead.

Henry F. Ellsworth, first saw the light in Windsor, Conn., and was about nine years of age when he came to Ohio with his parents. He was always a farmer, and had a good common-school education and possessed an excellent memory. ECKERT, one of the leading liverymen in Kent, is a native of Portage county, Ohio, and was born in Ravenna townsnip March 2, 1862, a son of Abram and Olive (Reed) Eckert, the Eckert family coming from Pennsylvania. The father is a farmer by occupation, and, in conjunction, for many years, was also engaged in running a threshing machine. H. C. Eckert was about eight years of age, only, when his mother died. He was brought up on the farm and was educated in the public schools. He began the activities of life for himself by running a dray and transfer wagon in Kent, doing a general transfer business, which he continued some three years, and then for one year was engaged in the dairy or milk business. Later, he was in the employ of Levi Reed, in the livery business, for one year, and then engaged in the livery business on his personal account, which he has continued for about ten years and has one of the best appointed establishments in the city of Kent.

Mr. Eckert is a member of Achilles lodge, No. 378, K. of P., is greatly honored by his fellow-members and he and wife are among the most highly esteemed residents of Kent, where the business of Mr. Eckert, which is of a semi-public character, causes him to be widely known, and where his obliging disposition and courteous deportment have won for him hosts of personal friends.

ILLIAM BARNABAS DOYLE, the son of William B. and Mary Maud (Lantz) Doyle, was born in the city of Akron, in the old homestead at 150 South High street, on the 19th day of April, 1868. He was educated in the Akron public schools from 1874 to 1883; in the Western Reserve academy from 1883 to 1886, where he graduated after completing the classical course; received his academic training at Amherst College from 1886 to 1890, and graduated as a member of the class of 1890. In January, 1891, he was elected a director and treasurer of the Akron Electrical Manufacturing Co., but resigned to enter the Harvard Law School in October, 1892. spent three years at Harvard and graduated in June, 1895, receiving the degree of LL. B. from Harvard university. In 1895 he was again elected a director and treasurer of the Electrical company, positions which he continues to hold. In October, 1895, Mr. Doyle was admitted to the bar by the supreme court of the state of Ohio, at Columbus, and immediately commenced the active practice of his profession in his native city. He is a member of the Beta Theta Pi college fraternity, and was for two years chief of the New England district. He is a republican in politics and is connected by membership with the Congregational church and the Sons of the American Revolution.

ILLIAM BARNABAS DOYLE, SR., was born in Franklin county, Pa., in a valley of the Blue mountains called Path valley, on the 5th day of March, 1825. His ancestors had been pioneers in the settlement of Cumberland and Franklin counties, and the first record of his family in America appears in the Pennsylvania and Colonial Archives, where an interesting account is given of the expulsion of the earliest settlers, of whom his great-grandfather, Felix Doyle, was one, from territory ceded to the Indians by treaty with Great Britain.

Felix Doyle came to America from the north of Ireland very early in the eighteenth century and made a home for himself in the wilderness, where a son, whom he named Barnabas, was born. Barnabas became the father of ten children, among whom were William Doyle, Barnabas Doyle, Jr., and Thomas John Sylvester Doyle, who was born July 31, 1788, and became the father of the subject of our sketch, and two other children, Thomas John Doyle, and Mary A. Doyle, who afterward married Hon. James Ferguson, of Chambersburg. Thomas John Sylvester Doyle reared his children on the farm which he tilled for his vocation, and when his youngest child, William B. Doyle, was thirteen years of age he apprenticed him to a cabinetmaker for three years; this became the young man's trade. When he was but seventeen years old a spirit of enterprise and indomitable courage turned the young fellow's steps toward the west. In 1842 he arrived in Akron, Ohio, having traveled almost the entire distance on foot and with no money to aid him. employment at his trade and in time bought out his employers and became a master cabinetmaker. Several years later he profitably disposed of his business and formed a partnership, known as Doyle & Chamberlain, which engaged in the business of buying cattle for market, selling meat, etc. His next venture was a return to agriculture, which he pursued upon a large farm, which he had purchased in Coventry township. In August of 1865, with John H. Dix and Daniel Farnam, he purchased the lumber and manufacturing business of S. G. Wilson for the sum of $35,000, and organized the firm of W. B. Doyle & Co. Mr. Dix died in 1886, and in 1888 Mr. Doyle purchased the interest of Mr. Farnam and conducted the business alone until his death. He became a victim of the epidemic known as "La Grippe," and died in Akron on August 6, 1890, at the age of sixty-five years, five months and one day. It should be stated that his mother was Anne (Taylor) Doyle, who was born at Carlisle, Pa., February 12, 1797, and who died in Akron, December 12, 1882. His mether was of the old-time Presbyterian school and in such an atmosphere his earliest years were spent. When the Methodist church was built in Akron he became a worshiper there, though never becoming a member of any He was a member of the republican party from the start, having voted for John C. Fremont, and he remained a stanch republican through all his days. He held no public civil office of any kind whatever and never wanted nor sought any. On July 30, 1857, he was made ensign of the Akron Rifles, Ohio volunteer militia, and in 1863 he was made captain of the Coventry company of national militia, organized under the act of April 14, This company was ready to take part in the great struggle for the preservation of the Union, and was organized and maintained with that end in view, but was never called upon to go to the front.

Mr. Doyle was married October 30, 1855, to Miss Harriet Sage, of Monroe county, N. Y., who died November 6, 1862, leaving one child, Dayton A. Doyle. On June 9, 1867, Mr. Doyle married Mary Maud Lantz, of Akron, who died February 11, 1874, leaving three children, William B. Doyle, Jr.; Della May Doyle and Dean Lantz Doyle. In 1877 he married again, and of this marriage there is one daughter, Anna Doyle, who survives.

HARLES H. FARWELL, one of the old settlers of Hudson, Summit county, Ohio, and a man well known for his industry and integrity of character, was born at Concord, Mass., October 22, 1821, and came to Ohio in November, 1837. He first worked for his uncle, John Bateman, of Hudson, began learning the blacksmith's trade, and in 1839 moved to Twinsburg, where he finished learning his trade with Thomas Parmelee. He married, in Twinsburg, Ohio, May 14, 1845, Ellen Amelia Porter, who was born either in Naugatuck, or Prospect, Conn., November 17, 1826, a daughter of Arba and Atlanta (Beecher) Porter. Arba Porter was born in Connecticut, descended from the early Puritan settlers, and was a soldier in the war of 1812. The Beecher family was also of Puritan stock and of the family from which the famous Henry Ward Beecher descended. Mrs. Porter was first married to Myers Scott, and by him was the mother of Julia J., Catherine M., Harriet E. and Delia. Thus she was the mother of nine daughters, but of no sons, as will be seen by what follows. All her daughters, except Delia (who died of cholera in Cleveland—aged fourteen years), lived to rear families of children. Mrs. Porter lived to be ninety-five years and five months old.

Arba Porter was a farmer and he and wife were the parents of five children, viz: Julia A., Jane B., Ellen A., Frances M. and Elizabeth. Mr. Porter and family came to Ohio in September, 1833, and bought land two and onehalf miles from Twinsburg, consisting of about 100 acres heavily timbered. He lived about two years in a house on the farm of his brother William, who had previously settled in Twinsburg township. Both Mr. and Mrs. Porter were members of the Congregational church. Politically he was an old-line whig. He was a straight-forward, industrious man and useful citizen. He lived to be sixty-eight years of age and died on his farm. He was one of the sturdy pioneers of Twinsburg township, and was noted for his sterling worth and stanch moral character and reared an excellent family.

After marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Farwell resided one year in Twinsburg and came in 1846 to Hudson, Ohio, where Mr. Farwell engaged in the blacksmith business with Mr. Bateman, his uncle, in a shop on Main street. He remained in company with his uncle about two years and then engaged in partnership with Nelson Wadsworth, and a few years later engaged in the manufacture of carriages with Deacon Landfear, still continuing, however, in the blacksmith business with William Wadsworth. In January, 1870, he bought his present residence and an old store building, which had been used as a bakery, and which he used as his shop. The substantial residence was built by 'Squire Wheadon prior to 1818, and was used for many years as a tavern and afterward as a seminary. It is built in the substantial manner of the pioneers, of heavy framed timbers, and is finished, both outside and in, with the best of lumber and ornamented in the old style by hand. Farwell has preserved the old homestead and greatly improved it, and it is one of the most attractive and dignified residences in Hudson. To Mr. and Mrs. Farwell have beed born Henry, May 17, 1846, at Twinsburg, Ohio; Arba P., born January 17, 1849, in Hudson, Ohio, and Cyrus, born June 14, 1851, but who died October 17, 1851. Mr. Farwell was formerly a democrat, but was one of the original republicans and voted for John C. Fremont, the first presidential candidate of the republican party, and has since been a stanch republican. He was a strong supporter of the Union, and two of his sons, Arba and Henry, were soldiers in the Civil war. Arba enlisted at the age of only thirteen years as a drum-His officers were Professors Young and Cuttler of Hudson college, who were respectively captain and lieutenant of the company, which was largely formed of the students of the Western Reserve college. Arba served with his company at Camp Chase, Ohio, guarding prisoners, and was on an exposition to Vicksburg, Miss., with prisoners for exchange. Although so young, he performed his full service and was a good soldier. was considered the best drummer of his regiment and was the pet of his company. The next year, both Arba and Henry enlisted at Cleveland, Ohio, in the One Hundred and Twenty-eighth volunteer infantry, to serve three years or during the war. Arba was assigned to the post band, on the "Great West-ern" of Sandusky, Ohio, and with this band, attended the funeral of Gen. McPherson, who was killed in the Atlanta campaign. Both the boys served until the close of the war. Mr. and Mrs. Farwell visited their boys in camp several times during their services, and saw the food furnished to the guards.

Arba P. received a good education in the Western Reserve preparatory department, and afterwards in the Commercial department of Oberlin college. He then went to Cincinnati, where he became a bookkeeper. He married at Richmond, Ohio, Laura Salt, and their children were Monte C. and Alice E. died, aged thirty-one years, at his father's home in Hudson, July 24, 1880. He was a man of high character and integrity, much trusted by his employers. He was a very fine and beautiful penman and a skillful accountant and business man. Henry graduated at the Western Reserve college in 1872 and also at Lane's Seminary, Cincinnati, Ohio, three years later. He then entered the Presbyterian ministry and is now home missionary at Harper, Kans., and is pastor of two churches. He married Mary McGinnis, daughter of Rev. Franklin and Lucy (Porter) McGinnis, of Rome, Ohio. Mr. and Mrs. Farwell have two children, viz: Franklin M. and Clara R. Mr. Farwell is an honored citizen of Hudson and has been a member of the town council several terms. Fraternally he is a non-affiliating Odd Fellow. He has always been an industrious, hard-working man, noted for his sturdy traits of character and frugality, and standing well as a citizen. He is the son of Cyrus and Rebecca (Bateman) Farwell. Cyrus Farwell was born in Concord, Mass., as was his wife, and both descended from the old Puritan families in New England of English He was a cooper by trade, and his children were Elzina, Mary S., Charles H.,

Adaline, (died young), Harriet, William, John, Elizabeth H., and Adeline, second. Mr. Farwell was a soldier in the war of 1812. Farwell family had lived in Concord from early colonial times. After the death of their son, Arba, Mr. and Mrs. Farwell, our subjects, made a home for his widow and their two children until they were well educated and ready to begin life for themselves. iam Farwell, brother of our subject, was a soldier in the Civil war and is now a resident of Akron, Ohio. Mr. and Mrs. Farwell, our subjects, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage—their golden wedding—May 14, 1895, and received many tasteful and elegant testimonials of friendship and regard from far-distant friends and relatives, as well as those nearer home. Mrs. Farwell is a lady of rare intelligence, clear judgment and marked traits of character, strong conscientious convictions and religious principles inherited from her Puritan ancestry. Throughout her life she has been a follower and an advocate of high moral principles, and her many friends justly place a high value upon her good opinion.

Joseph Farwell and Hannah Farwell are the first of the name of whom there is any record in America. From their son, Joseph, born May 24, 1670, this line descends: Joseph Farwell, born August 5, 1696; Thomas, born October 11, 1698; Hannah, May 6, 1701; Elizabeth, December 31, 1704; Edward, July 12, 1706; Mary, February 1, 1709; John, June 23, 1711; Sarah, February 26, 1721, died July 4, 1721. The children of Thomas and Sarah (Davis) Farwell were Ephraim, born October 31, 1760, died August 13, 1825; Thomas, born January 26, 1763, died May 29, 1829; Joseph, born May 13, 1765, died January 25, 1829; Sarah, born January 9, 1768, and died at date forgotten; Levi, born November 7, 1770, died September 14, 1858; William, born March 26, 1780, died December 21, 1863.

AMUEL FAUBLE, a respected citizen and stonemason of West Richfield, Summit county, Ohio, and an exsoldier of the Civil war, was born in Chippewa township, Wayne county, Ohio, December 19, 1842, a son of Samuel and Jane (Hallowell) Fauble.

Michael Fauble, grandfather of Samuel, was born in the Keystone state, a son of a Revolutionary soldier who had come from Germany and had settled in Pennsylvania prior to the declaration of independence. Michael was married in his native state and later became a pioneer of Chippewa township, Wayne county, Ohio, where he had 160 acres of wild land, which he cleared up from the forest and converted into a fine farm, on which he passed the remainder of his life, dying at the patriarchal age of ninety-nine years, a consistent member of the Methodist church and a greatly respected citizen.

Samuel Fauble, father of Samuel, the subject, was born in Wayne county, Ohio, was reared a farmer, and there married Miss Jane Hallowell, a daughter of a Stark county, Ohio, pioneer, and to this union were born Josiah, Cyrus, Samuel (all soldiers in the Civil war), Caroline, Martha, Emeline, Elizabeth and Loisa. From Wayne county Mr. Fauble moved to Medina county, in 1843, whence he came to Summit county, in 1844, where he became a substantial and respected citizen, and in politics was a democrat. In middle life he became blind, and at the age of fortyfive years died while on a trip to Illinois, leaving 210 acres of good land to his children. His widow, some time afterward, became the wife of Clark Woodruff. Of the children spoken of above, Josiah enlisted for three years in an Illinois regiment, but was taken sick after the battle of Pea Ridge and came very near dying; Cyrus was in the One Hundred and Fifty-sixth Ohio volunteer infantry and served about fifteen months. The military record of Samuel will be given further on.

Samuel Fauble, the subject proper of this biographical memoir, was brought to Richfield township, Summit county, in 1844, received a good common-school education, and was reared to farming. In 1860 he went to Delta, Fulton county, and was engaged in farm work until his enlistment, August 27, 1861, at Delta, in company I, Thirty-eighth Ohio volunteer infantry, to serve three years, and was mustered in at Camp Trimble, Defiance county, September 4, of the same year, and did good and faithful duty until honorably discharged at Louisville, Ky., September 13, He fought at Mill Spring, Shiloh, 1864. Stone River, Perryville, Hoover Gap, Chickamauga and Missionary Ridge, and, in the Atlanta campaign, took part in the battles of Dalton, Resaca, Burnt Hickory, Kenesaw Mountain, Pumpkinvine Creek, Peach Tree Creek and the general engagement before Atlanta and at Jonesboro. In the general charge here, his regiment lost forty-eight men killed, and was second as to amount of loss in killed in one battle, by any regiment from Ohio; it captured three lines of the enemy's works, and his division captured 1,000 prisoners.

only mishap on the field that befell Mr. Fauble was a slight flesh-wound from a bit of shell at Chickamauga, although his clothing was shot through by rifle-balls no less than five times. He was sick, however, after the battle of Mill Spring, having had to wade waist-deep through Fishing creek, to reach the battle field, and go through the same experience on returning from victory, and was confined in hospital at Somerset, Ky., three weeks, and later, for one week, in field hospital. During his term of service he was at one time detailed to drive a supply wagon for three months, and at Corinth, Miss., was detailed to drive an ammunition wagon, which he drove fifteen months, and had charge of this vehicle at the battle of Chickamagua. He was a brave soldier, was always promptly at his post of duty, and was ever willing and cheerful in doing the necessary work that befell him as a defender of his country's flag.

On his return to Delta, Ohio, Mr. Fauble engaged in the hotel business, but shortly afterward went to Medina county, where he married, December 19, 1865, Miss Martha E. Banford, who was born in Hinckley township, that county, February 2, 1844, a daughter of Cyrus and Almira (Patch) Banford, the former of whom was a tailor by trade, but died, in middle age, in 1846, leaving his widow with four children, viz: Martha E., Julia, Celia and Albert. Mrs. Banford afterward married Thomas Cole, and to her second marriage was born one child-Millie. For three years after marriage Mr. Fauble lived in Hinckley township, Medina county, and then came to West Richfield, Summit county, where he has since followed his trade of stonemason.

To Mr. and Mrs. Fauble have been born four children, viz: Cyrus Albert, Louie, Le-Roy and Preston, but of these Cyrus Albert was accidently killed while hunting, December 4, 1893. He was a promising young man of twenty-two years of age, and, it is needless to say, was greatly mourned by his parents and hundreds of young associates.

In politics Mr. Fauble is a republican, and cast his first presidential vote for Abraham Lincoln, when that martyr was nominated for his second term, and has voted the republican ticket ever since. He has served as commander of Goldwood post, G. A. R., No. 104, at West Richfield, and is a member in good standing of Meridian Sun lodge, No. 266, F. & A. M., of Richfield, in which he has held the offices of junior and senior warden; in chapter No. 30, royal arch Masons, he is master of the second vail. Mr. Fauble, as a citizen and soldier, has attained a high position in the esteem of his fellow-citizens, and fully merits all the respect that is paid to him.

OHN ELSEFFER SHARP (deceased), ticket and freight agent for the New York, Lake Erie & Western Railway company at Ravenna, Ohio, for twentytwo years, was born in Sharon Springs, N. Y., January 25, 1830, and was a son of John and Elizabeth (Bodine) Sharp, both natives of the Empire state and parents of four children, viz: John E. (subject), Henry, Ellen J. (widow of James Hudson), and Thomas K. The paternal grandfather of subject was born in Germany, but was a small boy when brought to America by his parents, who settled in Ulster county, N. Y.; the maternal grandfather, John Bodine, was a native of New York state, was a farmer, had born to him a large family, and was quite an old man at the time of his death.

John Sharp, the father of subject, was a farmer and hotel-keeper, and first married a Miss Markle, who bore him ten children, of whom two are still living, viz: Rebecca, widow of Seth P. Branch, of Ravenna; and Julia Ann, wife of Stephen Merenes, now deceased.

John E. Sharp, whose name opens this biography, was reared on his father's farm, and also learned brick and stonemasonry and plastering, when young, and at the age of seventeen years came from New York to Ravenna, Ohio, where he followed his trade for a number of years, or perhaps until the fall of 1864, when he entered the employ of the Erie Railway company, for which, with the exception of about three years, he worked in various capacities, and for the past twenty-two years in that of ticket and freight agent.

Mr. Sharp was first united in marriage, in 1856, with Miss Lavinna Kellogg, daughter of Lansing and Caroline (Bishop) Kellogg, the union resulting in the birth of three children-Alfred L., Dwight E. and Harry S. The eldest of these, Alfred L., has been twice married, and had been to him, by his first wife, one son (John Oakley Sharp); he is now a hardware merchant in Georgetown, Tex., and has married, for his second wife, Miss Kate Dwight E., who is clerking for the Leaville. American Cereal company in Chicago, Ill., married Mi-s Eva Jones, and to this union have been born three children-Mabel, Don and Pearl. Harry S. is living with his brother, Alfred L., in Texas, and is in the employ of the Pacific Express company. The honored mother of the above family, Mrs. Lavinna Sharp, was called to her final rest in 1877, and died in the faith of the Universalist church.

In 1878 John E. Sharp was united to Mrs. Mary E. Cope, widow of Homer Cope and daughter of Charles D. and Abi (Smith) Thompson, and this union was blessed with one son—Charles R.

Mr. Sharp was a chapter Mason, and in politics was a democrat; for three years he served his fellow-citizens as township trustee and filled the office to the entire satisfaction of the public. That he was faithful and true in his responsible situation is fully evidenced by the long time he was in the railroad company's employ, and it is further in evidence that he was at all times polite and obliging in his intercourse with the public, as no word of complaint was ever uttered against him. Mr. Sharp died March 18, 1897, sincerely mourned by the surviving members of his family and a large circle of true Iriends.

ORBERT F. GENEREAUX, of Macedonia, Northfield township, Summit county, Ohio, and ex-prisoner of the Civil war, a veteran soldier and an honored citizen, comes of sterling French ancestry, and was born February 7, 1842, at Mt. Clemens, Mich., a son of Henry and Monac (Chapaton) Genereaux. He was educated in the public schools of Mt. Clemens, and learned the cooper's trade of his father. He came to Wood county, Ohio, in 1860, and enlisted at Tontogany, in April, 1861, on the first call for 75,000 men, in company B, Twenty-first Ohio volunteer infantry, to serve three months, and was honorably discharged in August at Columbus, Ohio. This service was in West Virginia and was in two battles at Scair Creek, when his brigade drove Gen. Wise's troops to Harper's Ferry, and was also in many skirmishes. After this service he went to Mt. Clemens, Mich., and on August 15, 1862, re-enlisted for three years and was immediately promoted to second duty sergeant, company F, Twenty-second regiment, Michigan volunteer infantry, and was honorably discharged at Columbus, Ohio, June 9, 1865. At the battle of Chickamauga the entire brigade was captured by the rebels after a gallant fight. Mr. Genereaux belonged to the Fourte nth army corps, Whittaker's brigade, and supported the artillery. September 20, 1863, the corps was ordered to the front. right of the Union army was falling back in The corps charged the great confusion. enemy, and the brigade drove Longstreet's forces down from the third elevation; shortly afterward recharged, but were repulsed. The enemy made a strong effort to mass the whole artillery against the Union men, but the attempt was futile. Then the enemy recharged with infantry, and the Union troops continued to repulse their charges until night, when they were surrounded. The Confederates marched the Union prisoners three or four rods, and carried torch-lights in order that the surrendered soldierey would not step on the wounded Snodgrass Ridge was where this great slaughter was made, and here is where the beautiful monuments are erected, marking this spot as the place where so many of the brave boys fell in defense of the nation. company F, Twenty-second Michigan infantry, there were only fourteen of the enlisted soldiers left to be taken prisoners, of whom twelve died in Confederate prison pens. Miller, of Mount Clemens, Mich., and Mr. Genereaux were the only two survivors.

Mr. Genereaux with the others was taken to Belle Isle, on the James river, the commissioned officers being placed in Libby prison. Mr. Genereaux and most of the prisoners had no shelter, and being here from October 1 to along in December, suffered greatly from cold and hunger-two sticks of cordwood only being allowed for 100 men. The rations, issued twice each day, consisted of one-half pint of bean soup containing two tablespoonfuls of beans, with bugs in them, and one-fourth pound of bread. Mr. Genereaux had no blanket and slept on the bare ground. The island was very low, being really a sand bank, but a few inches above the river, and very damp. It was very bleak and swept by cold, severe winds, and during the winter the river James was frozen over three The rations of soup were so thin that the soldiers were famished for meat and killed and ate a dog belonging to Lieut. Boisseux, the commandant, and he starved them twentyfour hours in punishment. From here Mr. Genereaux was taken to Crew's tobacco warehouse in Richmond, Va., in December, and there the scanty rations were served once Mr. Genereaux was taken sick each day. and was sent to the Confederate Marine hospital, Richmond, and there had for rations wheat bread, rice soup, with meat cut in it, and a good cot-bed—the bed and bedding being furnished by the Sanitary Commission of the north. Mr. Genereaux was returned to prison after two weeks, and placed in the Pemberton tobacco warehouse-the rations here being the same as in the Crews prison, but the officers were meaner. At New Year's they were left without food for over thirty hours. Mr. Genereaux was next taken with a train load of prisoners to Andersonville, where he arrived February 26, 1864. This prison had just been opened, and not yet completed, and Mr. Genereaux was one of the first squad of prisoners to enter it, not more than seventeen prisoners of the first detachment of 100 having entered before him. He remained there about six months, and the condition of the prisoners daily grew worse. There was no shelter from the cold, but some wood was left from building the stockade. The rations were corn meal-ground cob and all-one pint per day, and sometimes a little very poor beef, and two skillets were allowed to each 100 men, with which to bake the bread. Mr. Genereaux and four comrades built a hut of logs covered with pine boughs, which was about 8 x 10 feet wide and seven feet high, and they messed together. This was the best shelter in the stockade, and they were offered $500 in greenbacks for the logs in this hut for fuel purposes. Mr. Genereaux worked at his trade of cooper and made little tubs and pails and sold them to the prisoners to get water in. and in this way he sometimes made $6 per day and thus bought off the guards as well as others who came in to peddle navy beans and corn meal, by this means preserving his life and assisting his comrades. Near the close. three of his comrades died in the hut while he was there. George Walker, a schoolmate of Mr. Genereaux, had been taken prisoner. He was a member of company G, Twenty-second Michigan, and had a hole dug in the side hill as a shelter for himself and two comrades. He died in a dreadful condition of starvation. and his two comrades died by his side. At times 200 men died every twenty-four hours and were taken out by the prisoners and Mr. Genereaux took scurvy and was in a bad condition for some time. He sold a rubber blanket for $50 greenbacks, to a rebel, and paid $30 for a watermelon, and sold the melon for $25, retaining the green part, and with it and a few Irish potatoes cured himself of the disorder. He was next taken to Charleston, S. C., and was in that city exposed for several days to the fire of the Union guns, among them the famous "Swamp Angel," the prisoners being exposed on the streets. From here he was taken to Savannah, and shortly afterward to Macon, Ga., and placed in a stockade prison for several months, becoming moon blind from exposure, also suffered from diarrhea and was cared for by his comrades. While there the prisoners held an election and voted 3,000 for McClelland and 5,000 for Lincoln. This made the officer in charge very angry, and he cut their rations off for one day and cursed vigorously besides. From there he was taken to Blackshear, Fla., and kept a few days, and was then sent to Florence and remained till February, 1865,

There Mr. Genereaux was taken sick with typhoid fever and his comrades took good care of him, he being ward master. One time he was threatened with the dungeon by Maj. Winder for trying to give a piece of bread to a comrade, but was saved by his doctor, Tebbs. He was taken from Florence to Wilmington, N. C., and paroled February 27, 1865, having been a prisoner of war seventeen months and seven days. He was in a very weak and feeble condition, emaciated to skin and bones, and it was a long time before he was even partially recovered, and he still suffers from his imprisonment. At Andersonville prison the skillets were taken from the Union captives for the use of the Confederates, but Mr. Genereaux buried his skillet, for which he had been offered $100, and thus preserved it.

Mr. Genereaux married, in Mt. Clemens, May 7, 1867, Frances L. Connor, native of Mt. Clemens and a daughter of John H. and Josephine T. (Bondy) Connor. The children born to this union are named Celia, Franklin. Arthur, Alice and Olive. In 1866 he went to Oil City, Pa., and worked in the cooperage business; in 1868 he went to Cleveland and built a cooper shop, and in 1875 came to Macedonia, Ohio, and engaged in coopering Mr. Genereaux is a member of and farming. Royal Dunham post, No. 177, G. A. R., at Bedford, Oliio, and in politics is a republican, and cast his first presidential vote in the ranks for honest Abe. He is a straightforward and honored citizen, and stands high in the esteem of the public.

Mr. Genereaux had two brothers in the Civil war—Peter was captain of company B, Fifth Michigan infantry, and was killed at the battle of Gettysburg. He was the youngest commanding officer in the state, receiving his command for bravery, and was aid-de-camp to Gov. Blair. Augustus served six months in a Michigan regiment. Mrs. Genereaux also had two brothers in the Civil war—Darius in the Michigan infantry, and Franklin in the navy.

Henry Chapaton, father of Mrs. Genereaux, was born in Detroit, Mich. His grandfather came from France with a colony in early times, settled in Detroit and was a surgeon in the army. Henry Chapaton, the grandfather, was a soldier in the war of 1812.

Mrs. Genereaux's grandfather, Richard Connor, came from Ireland with his brother, Henry; both served in the Revolutionary war and were early settlers of Detroit. Trombley, the maternal grandmother, was born in Detroit, and in the war of 1812 was warned, by friendly Indians, that her family was to be massacred. She took her two children from Connor's creek, near Detroit, and paddled through lake St. Clair and up the Clinton river a day and a night to Frederick, a trading point, a distance of thirty-eight Her husband was in the army at the time and she had no one to protect herself and children.

YLVESTER GRIEST, an old soldier of the Civil war and a son of one of the pioneers of Northfield township, Summit county, Ohio, springs from an old family of Pennsylvania, his grandfather, Willard Griest, having come from England.

Cornelius Griest, father of subject, was born in Pennsylvania near Petersburg (York Springs), Adams county, was a farmer and married Elizabeth Toland. He brought his wife and three children to Ohio, first located near Salem, and came to Northfield township, Summit county, among the early pioneers. He cleared up a farm of eighty acres from the woods and was a respected citizen. His children were Eliza, George W., James T., Augustus F., Eli, Lemuel D., Cornelius, Sylvester and Henrietta P., the last named dying an infant. Mr. Griest died when seventythree years old on his farm, and was an industrious and hard-working pioneer.

Sylvester Griest, our subject, was born February 16, 1839, in Northfield township and attended the pioneer schools a short time. He enlisted, August 4, 1862, at Fort Wayne, Ind., in Capt. C. B. Oakley's company E, Eightyeighth regiment, Indiana volunteer infantry, to serve three years or during the war, and was honorably discharged at Louisville, Ky., July 12, 1865, on account of the close of the war. He was taken sick at Murfreesboro, Tenn., with malaria and fever and ague, and was in field hospital in Murfreesboro, and in hospitals at Louisville, Ky., Camp Dennison, Cincinnati and Columbus, Ohio. He was detailed at Louisville, Ky., as nurse, was also in charge of the dining-hall, about one year. After his discharge he returned to Summit county, and resumed farming. He married, November 28, 1866, in Hudson township, Sarah E. Collar, who was born June 9, 1841, on the homestead where they now reside, a daughter of Sidney S. and Caroline (Stone) Collar.

Sidney S. Collar was born August 2, 1802, in Vermont, at Warren, was a farmer, and came to Ohio, when a young man, married in Summit county and settled in Hudson township, one mile south of their present homestead, late in the 'thirties. Mr. Collar bought eighty-two acres of land, cleared the most of it from the woods and made a good home. His children were Caroline L., Emeline E. and Sarah E. Mr. Collar was a member of the Congregational church, was in politics a republican, and was a hard-working, industrious man, respected by all, and reared an excellent family.

After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Griest, our subjects, settled on the Collar homestead and here have since lived. To them have been born Sidney D., July 20, 1869, and Frederick

S., January 2, 1877. Mrs. Griest is a member of the Disciples' church at Hudson, and Mr. Griest is in politics a republican, cast his first presidential vote for Abraham Lincoln, and stands well in his neighborhood as a good citizen. Mrs. Caroline (Stone) Collar, the mother of Mrs. Griest, is a daughter of Nathaniel and Sarah (Hallenbeck) Stone. Nathaniel Stone came from Connecticut about 1810 and brought his family. The Stones were of English descent; the Hallenbecks are of Dutch ancestry. Mr. Stone was a pioneer of Hudson township, and Streetsboro, Portage county. He owned about 500 acres of land, cleared up a large farm, and was a well-known pioneer. His children are Caroline, Charles, Sidney, Emeline, Rozell, Orlando, Chelsey, Helen and Belinda—all now deceased except Sidney.

✔AMUEL W. HARRIS, a respected citizen of Tallmadge township, Summit county, Ohio, was born in the township of Coventry, August 27, 1843, a son of William H. and Mary (Lewis) Harris, of whom further mention will be made. He was reared on a farm, received a good common-school education, and in the later days of his minority was in the coal business. October 13, 1863, he enlisted in the Ohio national guards for five years, and was mustered into the United States volunteer service by Gov. Brough, as corporal of company D, One Hundred and Sixty-fourth Ohio volunteer infantry, May 2, 1864, to serve 100 days, and was placed on duty at Arlington Heights, Va., and served out his term. As a member of the national guards of Ohio he was honorably discharged May 1, 1866.

Mr. Harris was first united in marriage, September 5, 1867, in Tallmadge township, with Miss Anna B. Hughes, who was born in Portage county, Ohio, September 5, 1847, a daughter of David and Elizabeth (Davis) Hughes. After marriage Mr. Harris carried on the coal business until 1873, when he bought his present farm of 113 acres, on which he has made excellent-improvements and which he has placed under a high state of cultivation. Mr. and Mrs. Harris were born the followingnamed children: William H., Archer H., Austin D., Howard C., Stanley W., Mary E. and Benjamin B. The mother of these children was called away in February, 1886, a member of the Congregational church, and the second marriage of Mr. Harris was to Miss Lydia A. Felmly, who was born February 10, 1868, in Portage township, Summit county, a daughter of Jacob and Susannah (Paulus) Felmly.

William H. Harris, father of Samuel W., was born in the southern part of Wales, in November, 1808, a son of Henry and Anne He was reared a coal miner, and, when a young man, married Ann Rowland, who died in Wales, leaving one child, William. He then bame to America, engaged in mining near Pottsville, Pa., and later came to Ohio, eventually becoming an owner and operator of extensive mines in different districts of the He married, in Ravenna, Portage state. county, on the Kent homestead, June 19, 1841, Miss Mary Lewis, who was born in Benningham, England, a daughter of Joseph and Elizabeth Lewis, the result being the following-named children: John H., born March 9, 1842; Samuel W., August 27, 1843; Henry, April 6, 1845; Benjamin, November 6, 1847; Mary A., April 8, 1850; Reuben, August 13, 1852; Myron, September 2, 1854, and Isabella, November 18, 1856. Three of these sons served in the Civil war, viz: John H., who was in the three-year service with the One Hundred and Fifteenth Ohio volunteer infantry, and suffered as a prisoner at Andersonville; Samuel W., and Henry, who served in the One Hundred and Sixty-fourth. Beside giving these three children to the cause of freedom, Mr. Harris furnished money liberally for the purpose of securing men to aid the same righteous cause. Mr. Harris, after marriage, lived in what is now the Sixth ward of Akron until 1849, when he bought the homestead in Tallmadge township, beside which he owned another fine farm. In politics he was a whig, and afterward a republican, and served as township trustee. Fraternally he was a Mason, and in religion a Congregationalist, and in this faith he died December 18, 1868, his widow dying in the same faith in 1874.

John H. Harris, the eldest child of William H. and Mary (Lewis) Harris, was born in Summit county, received a common-school education, and was reared to farming and coal In August, 1862, he enlisted in Tallmadge, in company C, One Hundred and Fifteenth Ohio volunteer infantry, and served until honorably discharged at Camp Chase, Ohio, May 11, 1865. He did duty in Ohio, Kentucky and Tennessee, and was in several skirmishes with Morgan's men, particularly at LaVergne, Tenn. December 5, 1864, he was captured by the rebel Forrest, was taken to Minden, Miss., and thence to Andersonville, N. C., in which infamous den he was confined until April 21, 1865, and three-quarters starved with 7,000 other unfortunates, his blanket, of which he was fortunately not robbed, being his only shelter, bed and covering. His sufferings were simply terrible, and he was reduced to mere skin and bones, weighing but seventy-five pounds when released. He was on board the ill-fated steamer Sultana, on his way homeward, when the boilers exploded about three o'clock in the morning. After having floated down the Mississippi river on a plank, to which five or six others had clung, but who, from exhaustion, were compelled to let go and were drowned—the plank finally drifted into a tree-top about six miles down stream from the wreck, where Mr. Harris was rescued, half frozen to death. After being nursed in hospital at Memphis for a week, Mr. Harris was sent to Camp Chase, and there was discharged, as already mentioned. Since the war Mr. Harris has resided on the old homestead in Tallmadge. He is a republican in politics and a highly respected citizen.

Samuel W. Harris is also a republican in politics and has held the office of township trustee. Fraternally he is a member of Elm Grove lodge, No. 501, Knights of Pythias, at Tallmadge. Mrs. Harris is a member of the Methodist church. Mr. Harris is an upright, straightforward citizen, liberal and enterprising, and is honored by all who know him.

RED L. HARRINGTON was born on the farm he now owns in Northampton township, Summit county, Ohio, October 14, 1834, a son of Job and Susan (Hartle) Harrington, who were among the earliest pioneers of the township. Job Harrington, father of subject, was a native of Bennington, Vt., was born March 9, 1792, and was a son of Richard and Roby (Perkins) Harrington. Richard Harrington was born in Rhode Island in 1756, was married about 1774, and soon after moved to Sandgate, Vt. When the British general, Burgoyne, was marching his army south from Canada, Mr. Harrington joined the Continental army as a volunteer and took part in the battle of Stillwater. In later years he was in the habit of occasionally relating the incidents of that eventful day and of declaring that he was never more animated or more pleased than when fighting for colonial independence. To Richard and Roby Harrington were born fifteen children, viz: Asa, Catherine, Leonard, Lydia, Phebe, Job, William, Joseph, Roby, Constance, Richard, John, Abram, Elisha and Hannah.

In 1812 Job Harrington started on foot from Bennington, Vt., for Tallmadge township, Summit county, Ohio, and on foot he reached his destination the same year. Here he purchased a tract of land for his parents, built them a log cabin in the heart of the wilderness and partly cleared a space for farming, and in the following year his parents joined In the fall of 1814 Job Harrington married Miss Susan Hartle, who was born in Georgetown, Pa., January 27, 1796, and the next year he purchased and moved upon the farm in Northampton township now owned by his son, Fred L,, the subject of this memoir. Eleven children were born to this union, in the following order: John, George, Seth W., James, Clarissa, Warren, Alvan, William, Fred L., Wallace and Newton. The mother of this family was called from earth November 9, 1849, and for his second helpmate Mr. Harrington married, November 30, 1851, Mary M. Paige. Mr. Harrington died March 24, 1869, and Mrs. Mary M. Harrington was killed in a street-car accident, in Cleveland, in 1895. Job Harrington was regarded as among the best of the citizens of Northampton township. had held many offices of trust and honor, was a life-long member of the Methodist church, was the warm friend of morality and education, and had done as much as any other resident to advance these and to promote the material welfare of the people among whom he had so long made his home.

Fred L. Harrington married, October 11, 1866, Mahala Carter, who was born October 11, 1842, and this union has been blessed with five children, viz: Charles E., born February 24, 1869; Burt C., April 19, 1872; Frank, December 13, 1874; Myron E., May 22, 1877, and Laurel, July 9, 1886. Mr. Harrington owns a fine farm of 120 acres, which, through long cultivation and careful management, has been developed into one of the best in the township. It has been thoroughly improved in all its departments, and its buildings are neat, substantial and commodious. In politics Mr. Harrington is a democrat and has ever enjoyed the confidence and esteem of his fellow-townsmen, whom he has served as township trustee two terms, as treasurer for thirteen years, and for a number of years as a member of the school board.

B. SWITZER.---An eminent writer has appropriately written: "The true history of a nation is best told in the lives of its illustrious citizens." and the remark may be accepted as an axiom in compiling the biographies of the more prominent citizens of a county. In the present instance it is peculiarly pertinent, as will be found by a perusal of the following lines, descriptive of the life of J. B. Switzer, who is a representative and energetic agriculturist, and a gentleman of more than ordinary educational advantages, and comes from one of the best known and most highly respected pioneer families in Summit county, Ohio. He was born in Coventry township, August 8, 1846, and is a son of Charles and Rebecca (Tousley) Switzer.

Charles Switzer, a well-known pioneer of this county, was a native of Franklin county, Pa., and was a mere lad when his father, Andrew, emigrated to Ravenna, Portage county, Ohio, but later came to Summit county. Charles, the father of J. B. Brewster, served as an apprentice to the trade of carpenter and joiner, although his chief occupation through life has been that of an agriculturist, and it is said that he is one of the most wealthy farmers in Summit county, as he possesses a vast amount of real estate within the limits of Summit and Portage counties. To his marriage with Miss Rebecca Tousley, daughter of John and Rebecca (Bishop) Tousley, both natives of Connecticut, have been born five children, viz: John A., a prominent agriculturist of Portage county and the father of five children, who are well educated, the eldest being now a law student under Mr. Willhelm, of Akron. The second born is Earnest, who graduated from the high school of Akron and is now engaged in teaching; Nettie, the third, is also a graduate of the Akron high school; Carrie and Earl are attending the district school. The second child of Charles Switzer was J. B., of this sketch; the third is L. Almira, who was first married to William Mongold, a carpenter, who died but a few years after his marriage; her next marriage was with John Brown, of Cuyahoga county, where she holds a position as postmistress. Orlando, the fourth child, died at an early age through an accident, and the fifth child is Daniel Scott Switzer, a wellknown farmer of Springfield township.

J. B. Switzer was primarily educated in the common schools, and was then given a training in the seminary at Greensburg, Ohio, and was also especially trained in vocal music, and qualified for teaching the art of voice culture by taking lessons at the Akron normal school, and also under such well-known music teachers as N. Coe Stewart, of Cleveland, James North, of St. Louis, Mo., Miss Trowbridge, of Michigan, Cook & Son, of New York, and finally from Prof. Hammerstine.

In 1869, at the age of twenty-one, Mr. Switzer left the parental homestead and followed his profession, with marked success, in Summit and adjoining counties for several years, and then became instructor in music in the public schools, in which vocation he is still employed, his experience in this line now covering a period of about thirty years, and he is also extensively engaged in agricultural pursuits, being owner of one of the best farms in Summit county. He has likewise devoted considerable time and attention to drilling for oil.

About 1892, when the well-known oil expert, H. D. Van Campen, of Belmont county, N. Y., made a tour of the west tracing the oil veins, he came to Toledo, Ohio, but concluded to change his course and came to Wadsworth, Ohio, and here convinced some of the leading capitalists that oil existed in large quantities, and could be obtained by boring. He was successful in inaugarating a company and the drilling process began. reached a depth of 2,700 feet, when they struck a vein of salt, which was 300 feet thick, and those financially interested called a halt against Mr. Van Campen's efforts. thought that salt was as good an enterprise as they cared for, and it is true that the citizens of Wadsworth have one of the best salt plants in the state. Mr. Van Campen was not satisfied, since he was under the strong impression that oil existed there, so he came on to Akron, and here was successful in convincing a capitalist that oil could be obtained in Summit county. So the work began here, and the same vein of salt was struck as at Wadsworth, but at a slightly greater depth, and the citizen was of the same opinion as the Wadsworth people; but the tenacity, will and fortitude of Mr. Van Campen grew stronger, and the process of drilling was proceeded with, 250 feet farther, as the expert had desired, and an abundance of oil was discovered November 9, 1892, and on the strength of the prospect for a successful venture, a company, "The Akron Gas & Oil company," was incorporated to develop the enterprise, and a few well-known citizens became members, viz: Lewis Miller, George W. Crouse, Attorney Atterhault, Col. Conger, Dr. Kranz and others. business was transacted under this management, and the farmers of the immediate vicinity took upon themselves the responsibility of organizing a limited company. This company was known as "The Brittain Gas & Oil company," and was incorporated in the beginning of the summer of 1893, when the following officers were duly elected: [. B. Switzer, chairman; T. J. Gilcrest, secretary; J. H. Lepper, treasurer; and a board of directors was elected comprising five members, viz: [. B. Switzer, T. J. Gilcrest, J. H. Lepper, W. H. Jones and P. V. McCoy. A new drill was begun August 5, 1893, and reached 3,533 feet in less than 100 days. The business is at a standstill at present, although, at a recent meeting the stock was increased three times the former amount, and the future success of the enterprise is manifest. It may be added that at the solicitation of the citizens of Wadsworth. State Geologist Horton lectured before the people, and warned them not to venture upon any enterprise unless it was for coal. His prophecy, on scientific ideas, did not prove to be well taken.

I. B. Switzer was united in marriage July 5, 1875, with Miss Rebecca Yarrick, a scion of another old family, who were amongst the most prosperous farmers in Summit county. She is a daughter of Adam and Catherine (Switzer) Yarrick, is a native of Green township, Summit county, and was born March 21, 1852, one of a family of seven sons and three daughters. Mrs. Switzer received her education in the common schools, and is a member of the United Brethren church at Akron, Ohio. His father was a native of Pennsylvania, was reared as a farmer and stock-raiser, and died January 23, 1885; her mother was born April 5, 1817, in York county, Pa., and died January 30, 1897. Their remains lie interred in East Liberty cemetery, where a modest stone marks their last resting place. To the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Switzer have been born ten children, viz: Nellie J., who is a graduate of the Akron high school and of Buchtel college, having completed her education at the age of eighteen years, when she accepted a position as inspector in the Akron Rubber works, which she still holds; Oscar F., Lula V., Charles W., Marjorie I., Francis W. and Gladys V. are still living, and Claude, Rose R. and an unnamed infant are deceased. The family are members of the United Brethren church, of which Mr. Switzer has been the Sunday-school superintendent for years. In politics he had for a long time affiliated with the republican party, casting his first presidential vote for Gen. Grant; of recent years he has espoused with ardor the principles of prohibition. Officially, Mr. Switzer has held the office of treasurer of Springfield township, a strong democratic community, and he being an ardent republican. He has also been supervisor for two terms, and has been a strong supporter of the public schools.

Daniel Scott Switzer, brother of J. B., is a well-known farmer and a gentleman of honor and integrity. He married Miss Mary L. Stooldraher, a native of Summit county, and to their marriage have been born five sons and two daughters, of whom five are living, as follows: Maud, a graduate of the Akron high school and now one of the successful teachers in the public schools of the county; Grace, Bradie, Leo and James, at home. Mr. Switzer is a republican in politics, and he and wife affiliate with the Methodist Episcopal church of Pleasant Valley. Officially he has made a marked career in the directorship of the public schools.

Both the Switzer and Yarrick families are among the most prominent and highly respected in Summit county, and J. B. Switzer has made for himself a reputation that will last as long as Summit county holds a place on the map of Ohio.

AMES ALVIN HATHAWAY, of North-field township, Summit county, Ohio, and an old soldier of the Civil war, springs paternally from an old Pennsylvania-Dutch family, and on his mother's side from a New York state family of English descent.

James A. Hathaway was born in East Cleveland township, Cuyahoga county, Ohio, October 24, 1840, a son of Peter and Mandania (Austin) Hathaway. He received a common-school education and was reared a farmer. He enlisted in battery B, First Ohio light artillery, at East Cleveland, Ohio, August 11, 1862, under Capt. William Standard, but was afterward under under Capt. Norman He was honorably discharged at Chattanooga, Tenn., June 16, 1865, having served nearly three years. He was in the battles of Perryville, Stone River, Chickamauga Missionary Ridge, Lookout Mountain, Somerset. Wild Cat Mountain, and several other important battles and in many skirmishes, and was in all the marches, campaigns, battles and skirmishes in which his battery took part and his battery never fired a gun in any engagement in which he was not present, and he volunteered several times to go with the infantry after guerrillas in Alabama. After the war he returned to Ohio and married, in Boston township, Summit county, Amanda Mills, a daughter of Curtis and Harriet (Richards) Mills, who was born in Akron, Ohio, September 10, 1850.

Curtis Mills came from New York state to Akron at an early day and drove a team for William Buchtel, for whom he worked twenty-one years, but was killed when foreman of the lumbermen. His children were Hiram, Louisa and Amanda. He was a hard-working respected citizen and died aged about sixty years, a member of the Lutheran church.

Mr. and Mrs. Hathaway located, after marriage, in Boston township, where Mr. Hathaway farmed three years; he then moved to Northampton township and bought forty acres and finally moved to Northfield township in 1891. The children born to his marriage are Hattie, Curtis and Stella. Mr. Hathaway is an ex-member of Eadie post, G. A. R.. of Cuyahoga Falls, and in politics is a republican. Of his children, Hattie is married to Elmer McCuskey—a farmer of Stowe township, and has three children, two sons and one daughter; Curtis is a member of the Sons of Veterans of Bedford, Ohio, and the family is one of the most highly respected in Northfield township.

ICHAEL HAWK, a successful farmer and a highly respected cit-izen of Tallmadge township, Sum-mit county, Ohio, was born in the grand duchy of Baden, Germany, about the year 1834, a son of Philip and Margaret (Fooreman) Hawk, who were the parents of five children, all of whom reached mature years, and of whom Daniel resides in Grand Rapids, Mich.; Abbie, who was the wife of John Ginder, died March 3, 1881, at the age of seventy-two years; Katherine died August 1, 1894, aged sixty-three years, and the wife of Henry Swartz; Philip died August 7, 1895, aged eighty years, and Michael, whose name opens this paragraph. The family came to Ohio in 1840, and settled in Suffield township, Portage county, where the father departed this life December 28, 1868, at the age of sixty-three years, a prominent member of the Reformed chnrch, of which he had been a deacon for many years, after which sad event the widow joined her son Michael, in Tallmadge township, Summit county, where her decease occurred October 1, 1873, at the advanced age of eighty-four years and nine months, also in the faith of the Reformed church.

Michael Hawk was but six years old when his parents settled in Portage county, which was then a wilderness, in which his father bought a tract of land. As Michael grew in size and strength, he assisted in clearing off the forest growth from the homestead, and aided his father until twenty-three years old, receiving, meantime, the meager education afforded by the pioneer school of his youthful At the age mentioned, although a poor young man, Mr. Hawk entered upon life's conflict upon his own account, and through hard work and good management has made himself one of the well-to-do farmers in the county of Summit. At the age of twentyfive years he found a helpmate in the person of Miss Albenia Bletzer, daughter of Michael and Catherine Bletzer, whom he married July 3, 1859, and which union has been blessed with three children, of whom two are still living, viz: Albert, a farmer of Tallmadge township, and Lydia, wife of Frank Pieffer, and residing in Union Town, Stark county; Salinda, the deceased child, passed away at the age of five years and five months.

Mr. Hawk, after marriage, continued his farming operations in Suffield township, Portage county, meeting with every desired success until 1870, when he came to Tallmadge township, Summit county, and purchased the large farm owned by the late Ira Sprague, on which, a few years ago, he erected his present commodious and handsome dwelling, which is furnished with every possible modern convenience; but here, although blessed with all that wealth can buy, he has met with the saddest misfortune of his life in the loss of the beloved companion of his early manhood, mellow middle age, and declining years, who died May 24, 1893, at the age of fifty-two years and three months. She was a devoted member of the Reformed church and a true Christian, a loving wife and mother and a true helpmeet for her husband. Mr. Hawk is himself a member of the Reformed church, and while living in Portage county held the office of deacon a number of years, and is how a member of the Grace Reformed congregation at Akron. In politics he is a democrat, has served as township supervisor, and has been a member of the school board for nine years.

Mrs. Albenia Hawk, the departed wife and mother, was born in Baden, Germany, March 26, 1841, was confirmed in the Reformed church April 22, 1855, and was always faithful to her church obligations. Mr. Hawk has ever been an industrious as well as a successful farmer, a kindly neighbor, and a free contributor of his means to the support of school and church, and to the promotion of every project designed for the advancement of the public welfare and the development of his township and county, and stands very high in the esteem of his immediate neighbors as well as in that of the community at large.

EORGE HEIMBAUGH, who resides near Monroe Falls, Summit county, Ohio, and an ex-soldier of the Civil war, was born in Middleton township, Union county, Pa., February 3, 1837, a son of Peter and Amelia (Yarnell) Heimbaugh, natives of the same state and of German extraction.

Peter Heimbaugh, a hatter by trade, came from Union county, Pa., in the month of June, 1845, and settled in Summit county, but died in Suffield township, Portage county, Ohio, at the age of fifty-five years, a member of the Reformed church, and the father of eleven children, of whom there now live Jacob, William, George, Catherine, Barbara and Sarah.

George Heimbaugh was not quite eight years of age when he was brought to Summit county by his parents. He received but a limited district-school education, and soon after coming here was bound out, until eighteen years old, to Abraham Tyson, who proved to be a good and kind master, and when his term expired Mr. Heimbaugh hired to him for one year as a farm hand. Mr. Heimbaugh then worked out in the same capacity until his marriage, February 14, 1858, in Springfield township, to Miss Amelia A. Weyrick, who was born in that township April 26, 1840, a daughter of David and Elizabeth (Walter) Weyrick.

David Weyrick, also a native of Union county, Pa., settled in Springfleld township about 1827, bought and cleared up a farm of 149 acres, becoming a substantial citizen. To his marriage with Miss Elizabeth Walter were born eleven children, viz: Elizabeth, Catherine, Polly, Sally, Rebecca, Susannah, Caroline, Leah, George, John and Amelia A. He was a man of moral character, never used tobacco nor liquor nor profane language, and lived to be seventy-five years old, dying on his farm in the faith of the Reformed church, while his wife was a Lutheran.

ILLIAM OLIVER WISE, attorney at law, of Akron, Ohio, is one of four children born to Jacob and Martha Elizabeth Wise. He was born in the village of East Liberty, Ohio, September 8, 1875. His only sister, Idella Ray, who was his junior by nearly two years, died at the age of three and one-half years; his two brothers, twins, died in their early infancy.

His father, Jacob Wise, is the son of William Wise, who was one of the most progressive and thriving farmers of Summit county during his day. He was a direct descendant of the famous Wise family who to this day inhabit the Shenandoah Valley of Pennsylvania and Virginia and which stock emigrated originally from Holland. Jacob Wise, aside from being a landlord of a village tavern, was also a dealer in all kinds of agricultural implements, thereby gaining a large circle of friends, especially among the tillers of the soil. He was also a partner of the firm, Betz, Hammerly & Wise, of Canton, Ohio, who were manufacturers of the Corn Stalk King Feed Cutter; Jacob Wise spent much time and money on this machine and took out several patents for improving it; and still later on the partnership organized itself in a stock company which later amalgamated with the Champion Lawn Rake Co., and which was then known as the Champion Lawn Rake & Feed Cutter company of Canton, Ohio. Several years later this company went into the hands of a receiver, as did numbers of other like institutions on the advent of the panic. Jacob Wise then managed the hotel at Mogadore, Ohio, for several years and in the summer of 1896 he sold out and moved to Akron. Ohio, and became engaged in the selling of cigars, representing the S. R. Moss Cigar company of Harrisburg, Pa. He is also the patentee of "Wise's Vehicle Headlight."

Martha Elizabeth Wise was the daughter of Solomon Gigger, also a well-to-do farmer near East Liberty, Summit county, Ohio. Her father also spent a greater part of the winters in Akron and Cleveland, building ships and canal boats, this being his regular trade.

Oliver Wise, whose name opens this sketch, met with a sad misforture at the age of three and one-half years; he fell off of a fence at his Grandma Wise's home and in falling was caught by two fence pales and hung there until his cries caused his grandma to come to his rescue. In falling he broke his ankle and was confined to his bed for months, the final results of the wounds being two strokes of paralysis.

He received his early primary education in the village schools of Manchester and Uniontown, Ohio; also attended a country school outh of Akron, known as Moore's districts school. At the age of fifteen he removed with his parents to Akron, Ohio, and attended the Akron high school, from which he was graduated. During a portion of his time spent in the Akron high school his parents were conducting the village tavern at Mogadore, Ohio. During a part of this time, after school hours, Oliver worked for Messrs. F. J. Kolb & Son. dealers in groceries, hay, straw and feed. doing business at the corner of West Exchange and Water streets. He baled hav and straw and delivered groceries and clerked in the store and did "chores" about the house, all in return for his board and a small salary. After graduating from the Akron high school he went to Pittsburg, Pa., and completed a course of study in Duff's mercantile college, and was graduated with first honors in his class from that institution. He immediately entered the law offices of Judge E. P. Green, Judge C. R. Grant and Col. George W. Sieber, of Akron, Ohio, and in the autumn of 1894 entered the Cincinnati law school, now the law department of the University of Cincinnati, and was graduated in the class of 1896 with high honors, receiving the LL. B. degree (Bachelor of Laws), also completing a regular three-years' course in two years. He passed the Ohio bar examinations at the age of twenty, and on September 8, 1896, his twenty-first birthday, was admitted to the bar by the supreme court of the state of Ohio and had the distinction of being the youngest lawyer in the state.

During the autumn of 1896 he matriculated as a post-graduate in law at Columbian university, Washington, D. C. At the same time that he attended this university he also held a law clerkship in the offices of Judge I. G.

Kimball and his son, Harry G. Kimball, whose offices are located on Fifth street, N. W., better known in legal circles as " Judiciary Row." On November 9, 1896, he became a member of the Washington bar, having passed the examination and been admitted to practice in all the United States courts of the District of Columbia. Having fulfilled all requirements, he was very soon after also admitted to practice in all the departments of the government, the war, navy, state, pension, interior and treasury, and on the 3d of March, 1897, was admitted to practice before the United States court of claims, on motion of the Hon. Willism A. Maury, sometime assistant attorney-general of the United States. On March 8, 1897, Gov. Asa S. Bushnell, of Ohio, appointed him commissioner of deeds of Ohio within the District of Columbia. He also took an active part in the debates of the uni-The post-graduate class in law of versity. Columbian university selected him as one of its three representatives of the executive committee of the Columbian Law Debating society. He was also honored by being elected by the post-graduate law class as its representative in several public debates. Having been a successful contestant in those debates, he was again elected by an unanimous vote to represent the post-graduate class in law in the final prize debate which was held at the end of the collegiate year. To be selected as a representative in this final prize debate is considered one of the highest honors a university student can aspire to. The other contestant selected with him from the post-graduate law class was Francis William Henry Clay, of Kentucky, a Cornell graduate, and a direct descendant of old Henry Clay. Oliver was graduated from Columbian university on June 8, 1897, and received the LL. M. degree (Master of Laws). On August 26, 1897, he began the practice of the law at Akron, Ohio, associating himself with A. B. Tinker, with offices in the Akron Savings bank building. There are but few young men better qualified to fight life's battles, as well as legal ones, and we predict for Mr. Wise a very bright future.

After coming to America, Mr. Ogle located in Tallmadge township and engaged in farming; two years later he sent for his then family, who arrived in the spring of 1853, and here remained until 1868, when he removed to Clark, and then to Edgar county, Ill., where he died at the age of seventy-one years. Two of his sons served in the Civil war-Atkin in the One Hundred and Sixty-fourth Ohio infantry for 100 days; William was in the Ohio cava'ry, in the three-year service, acted as scout for Sherman in his march to the sea, was captured by the enemy, and eventually died from the effects of prison life.

Mr. and Mrs. Limber and family are members of the Methodist church, and Mr. Limber is a member of Buckley post, G. A. R., at Akron. In politics he is a republican and has held the office of township supervisor, but has been content rather to pursue a profitable private business than to trust to the precarious profits of public position, and in this respect he shows the sound sense for which he is given universal credit, as well as for his many other good qualities.

ORAIN H. LOCKERT, of Richfield, Summit county, Ohio, is one of the old soldiers of the Civil war, is a respected citizen and the head of an excellent family. He was born in Richfield township, January 24, 1840, a son of James and Minerva (Moon) Lockert, or, as the name was originally spelled, Lockhart. He received a common-school education, was reared as a farmer and enlisted August 29, 1864, in company H, One Hundred and Seventy-seventh Ohio volunteer infantry, at West Richfield, Ohio, and was mustered in at Camp Cleveland, Ohio, and served until honorably discharged June 15, 1865, from the hospital at David's Island, New York harbor. He was in the battles of the Cedars, at Murfreesboro, Tenn., Fort Fisher, Town Creek, Wilmingion, and in the last of the Atlanta campaign, and at Goldsboro.

C., he was taken sick with camp fever and was in hospital at Raleigh and New Berne, N. C., thence taken on a hospital boat to David's Island, New York harbor, and was in hospital altogether about seven weeks. After the war Mr. Lockert returned to Richfield township and resumed farming. He married, January 6, 1870, in Richfield township, Helen Andrew, who was born December 17, 1844, in Boston township, Summit county, Ohio, a daughter of Emanuel and Eleanor (Moffit) Andrew-both natives of England, and who settled in Boston township at an early day, where Mr. Andrew died soon after arriving. Their children were Emanuel, Robert, Ada, Lydia and Helen, of whom Emanuel and Robert were both privates in the Eighty-second Ohio regiment during the Civil war, in the three years' service.

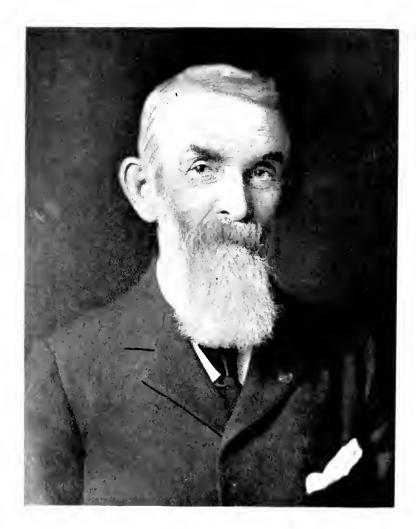

After marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Lockert settled on their present farm of 116 acres. He has greatly improved his farm and built an attractive residence, and is a good, substantial farmer. To Mr. and Mrs. Lockert have been born Harley L. and Wilbur H. In politics Mr. Lockert is a republican and is a member of A. N. Goldwood post, G. A. R., at West Richfield, Ohio, and he has held the office of senior vice-commander and quarter-master.

James Lockert, father of subject, was born in Galway, Saratoga county, N. Y., of Scotch origin, was a farmer and came to Summit county, Ohio, and settled in Richfield township about 1830 or 1832 and bought a small piece of land in the woods, which he cleared up, and then bought the farm where Lorain H. Lockert now lives. He married, in New York state, Miss Minerva Moon, also of American extraction, and the children born to this union were Elizabeth, Julia, Mary, Minerva, James, Alexander and Lorain H. father, James Lockert, was a member of the Baptist church and a deacon many years. politics he was a republican and a strong Union man. He went to David's Island, N. Y. harbor, when subject was sick, took care of him for about one week, secured his discharge and brought him home, as he was not expected to live. Mr. Lockert was a wellknown and much respected citizen, and was township trustee one year. Lorain H. has also been township trustee five years and holds the office at the present time.

HARLES M. LUSK, of Hudson, Ohio, an ex-soldier of the Civil war, but now a respected farmer, descends from pioneers of Summit county.

His grandfather, Capt. Amos Lusk, came from Connecticut, settled in Hudson township in 1801, when it was a wilderness, and cleared up a farm. He was married in Stockbridge, Conn., to Mary Adams, who was born in Stockbridge May 15, 1768, a daughter of John Adams, who was a cousin of John Quincy Adams, the sixth president of the United States. They were the parents of nine children, of whom Diantha, born January 12, 1801, was married to John Brown, of Osawatomie, Kan., and Harper's Ferry fame, and by him she had five children—John, Jason, Ruth, Owen and Frederick.

Charles. In. Lusk

In June, 1812, the little settlement of Hudson was startled by the announcement of the war with Great Britain. A company was formed at Hudson and surrounding townships and Amos Lusk was appointed captain of the company. The news reached Hudson that Hull had surrendered Detroit, and that the French and Indians in great numbers were making their way down the lake. The settlement was much excited, and preparations were made for placing the women and children in a place of safety, and the militia company was summoned to the place of rendezvous, and on a Sabbath morning Capt. Lusk paraded his company on the green and was prepared to act on the first order, when a messenger from Cleveland announced that the forces approaching were paroled troops of Gen. Hull. Later Capt. Lusk's company was ordered to old Portage, was placed under Gen. Wadsworth's command, and afterward was ordered to Hudson and Sandusky, and served three months, but saw no battle. Capt. Lusk settled in Hudson township on the farm now occupied by Charles M. Lusk. He cleared up a good farm from the woods, became a substantial citizen, and died May 24, 1813aged forty years—from the effects of a fever contracted during the war of 1812. His children were Minerva, Lorin, Edward, Milton A., and Sophia, who married a Mr. Clow.

Milton A. Lusk, father of our subject, was born June 2, 1803, in Hudson, Ohio, on the homestead, received a pioneer education, was reared a farmer, and learned the hatter's trade. He married, at the age of twenty-three, Dency Preston, born in Canton, Mass., and their children were Henry, Lorin, Charles, Lucy and Amos. Mrs. Lusk died, and he married Sallie Secoy (née Post), born September 14, 1815, in Westbrook, Conn., a daughter of Joshua and Mollie (Dee) Post. She was the eleventh daughter of a family of thirteen children—all living to be over sixty years of age, with one exception.

Mr. and Mrs. Lusk had one daughter, Dency. Mr. Lusk was a substantial farmer, owning the old homestead of 116 acres and was a respected and industrious man, and was a strict abolitionist. His house was a station on the Under Ground railroad and he assisted in carrying runaway slaves to places of safety. He was a member of the Congregational church, a teacher and superintendent of the Sunday-school, and his father, Amos Lusk, was one of the founders of the first Congregational church at Hudson, September 4, 1802. He lived to the venerable age of eighty-one years, and died at Macedonia, Ohio, a highly respected citizen.

Charles M. Lusk, our subject, was born October 28, 1832, on the old homestead, received a common education and learned farming, engineering and steam fitting. In Bedford, Ohio, at the age of twenty-seven years, in April, 1860, he married Mary J. Snow, a native of Independence, Ohio, and by her he had one child-Nellie E.-the mother being now deceased. Mr. Lusk first settled in Bedford, Ohio, and then went to Newberg, where he was engineer at the State Lunatic asylum. He next returned to the home farm and enlisted, at Hudson, in December, 1803, in Capt. J. R. Sanford's company E, One Hundred and Twenty-eighth Ohio volunteer infantry, to serve three years or during the war, and was honorably discharged at Columbus, Ohio, July 5, 1865, the war having closed. Most of his service was on Johnson's Island, as guard at the celebrated prison for Confederate officers, and where there were at one time, 3,300 prisoners. Mr. Lusk assisted in calling the roll in the prison for eighteen months, and has a correct knowledge of the treatment of these men. He says that they were well supplied with United States blankets, and plenty of wood was furnished for fires. The prison was a stockade and barracks, and as good as was furnished for the guards. food was good, with fresh bread daily and fresh meat was furnished three times a week, and other rations were abundant. They were furnished with tea and coffee until late in the war, when, as the Union prisoners were starying in rebel prison-pens, these luxuries were shut off. Medical attendance was given them. Several plans were formed by the Confederates for escape, but they were frustrated.

After his service, Mr. Lusk returned to Newberg, and was an engineer a few years; then was first engineer for the city work-house four years, and then engaged in steam fitting in Cleveland for three years; was next janitor of the Central high school at Cleveland, and afterward did repair work for the Cleveland board of education and followed stationary engineering. In June, 1895, he came to his present farm of thirty-five acres, which he had purchased the year previous, and built an attractive residence. Mr. Lusk married, for his second wife, Mrs. Jane Louise Nelson (née Giffin), born in Anburn, N. Y., a daughter of William and Jane W. Giffin.

Mr. and Mrs. Lusk had the following children: Nellie E., Rollin W. and Milton W. Both Mr. and Mrs. Lusk and Nellie, Rollin W. and Milton W. are members of the Congregational church, and in politics Mr. Lusk is a republican. He is a member of the Knights of Honor of Cleveland, and at one time held the office of financial reporter. He is also a member of Gen. W. T. Sherman post, G. A. R.

OHN H. McCRUM, treasurer of the Akron Varnish company of Akron, Ohio, was born in Altoona, Blair county, Pa., July 3, 1865, and is a son of Ephraim B. McCrum, who was born at Mifflintown, Pa., October 7, 1833, and is a son of John H. and Margaret M. (Grier) Mc-Crum, also natives of Mifflintown, Pa. The McCrum family was one of the earliest to settle in Juniata county, Pa. The grandfather of J. H. McCrum was a farmer and miller. He was very prominent in the whig party, was twice elected under its auspices to the Pennsylvania legislature, and died in 1854, at the comparatively young age of thirty-seven years.

The Grier family was also among the early settlers of Juniata county, the maternal great-grandfather of the subject of this review having come from the north of Ireland. His wife bore the maiden name of Priscilla McClellan, and was a relative of the famous Houstons, of Texas, and also distantly related to a former president of the United States, James Buchanan. The grandparents of Mr. McCrum were members of the Scotch-Irish Presbyterian church, the father being a man of unusual public spirit and active in all things that tended to the public weal.

John H. McCrum was educated in the public schools of his native city, and shortly after his school days were over he entered an insurance company's office, where he performed clerical work for two years. In January, 1882, he entered the office of the B. F. Goodrich company of Akron, Ohio, with which he held a position as clerk until the fall of 1883, when he accepted a situation as corresponding clerk with the King Varnish company, and in May, 1886, was elected its secretary. In 1889, in conjunction with D. R. Paige, he bought out this company, which was later incorporated as the Imperial Varnish company, and Mr. McCrum became its president. January 27, 1897, the Akron Varnish company was incorporated, with a paid-up capital stock of $250,000, as successors to Kubler & Beck and the Imperial Varnish company, and is officered as follows: E. G. Kubler, president; J. M. Beck, vice-president and general superintendent; J. H. McCrum, treasurer, and S. H. Kohler, secretary, its plants being Factory A, corner of Main and State streets, and Factory B, on North Canal street.

Mr. McCrum has always been active in promoting the business interests of Akron since his residence in the city, has interests in its mercantile or manufacturing concerns, outside his interest in the Akron Varnish company, and is altogether a wide-awake, up-to-date young man of business.

The marriage of Mr. McCrum took place January 14, 1891, to Miss Sarah E. Motz, daughter of Henry M. Motz, of Akron, and this happy union has been blessed by the birth of two children—Ralph and Helen. The residence of the family is at No. 208 Adolph avenue, and a happier one is not to be found in Akron. In his politics Mr. McCrum is a stanch republican, but has never sought official preferment.

OBERT ALEXANDER McKENZIE, a respectable young farmer of Northampton township, Summit county, was born in Holmes county, Ohio, April 25, 1861, a son of James and Nancy (Karr) McKenzie. His grandparents, Brodie and Jane (Young) McKenzie, were natives, respectively, of Scotland and Ireland, and were the parents of four sons and two daughters. Brodie McKenzie came to America in 1818, and Jane Young came to America with her parents, William and Elizabeth Young, here married and settled in Holmes county, Ohio, about 1823.

James McKenzie was reared a farmer and also learned the carpenter's trade. He served in the 100-day service in a Holmes county regiment of volunteer infantry during the Civil war, and in 1866 settled in Northampton, Summit county, where his death took place in 1890. He had led an industrious, upright and honorable life, and had won the respect and good will of all his neighbors, without exception. The nine children born to him and wife were named, in order of birth, Martha Jane, Mary Elizabeth, Sarah Ellen, Matilda Ann, Robert Alexander, William Gibson, Clemenzie, Nora and John Calvin, of whom the younger two were born in Northampton township.

Robert A. McKenzie, whose name opens this sketch, remained at home with his parents until eighteen years of age, when he hired out on a farm; two years later he began working at the carpenter's trade, and this trade he has followed ever since in connection with farm-March 6, 1888, Mr. McKenzie married Miss Irena May Wild, daughter of Frederick and Susan (Brumbaugh) Wild, of Northampton township, and of whom more may be read in the memoir of Solomon C. Wild, a brother of Mrs. McKenzie, to be found on another page. Three children have blessed the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. McKenzie, viz: Nancy Leota, born August 17, 1891; Olan Alexander, born November 3, 1892, and Ruth Irene, born November 20, 1895.

In 1896 Mr. McKenzie bought a good farm of forty acres, on which he has already made many notable improvements, his skill as a carpenter coming into good play in this respect. As he had passed his early life on his father's farm, he is as well qualified for the calling of an agriculturist as he is for following his trade of carpenter, and his success in the former will be merely a matter of time. In politics Mr. McKenzie is a stanch republican, and with his wife is a member of the United Presbyterian church. He is very popular in his township, is respected as an upright citizen, and esteemed as an industrious young man who has earned his property by his personal efforts.

MARQUITT, of West Richfield, Ohio, an old soldier of the Civil war and a prominent farmer and respected citizen, was born in Hinckley township, Medina county, Ohio, June 20, 1835, a son of Zachariah and Susan (Seaton) Marquitt. He was in the battles of Covington, Ky., during Morgan's raid, shirmishes at Georgetown, Lexington, Frankfort, Louisville, Bowling Green, Danville, all in Kentucky, and at Stanford, Crab Orchard, Somerset, and he was with Burnside on the mountains of east Tennessee, and during this raid every man carried fifteen days' rations. There was skirmishing at Knoxville, Tenn., and there the regiment struck the railroad, having marched between 300 and 400 miles, and Mr. Marquitt was much worn out and much weakened by dysentery. After destroying the railroad from Knoxville to Loudon, Tenn., they went into Knoxville, guarded the city for about one month and were hemmed in by the rebels nineteen days on one-fourth rations and suffered greatly from They were in this vicinity until the spring of 1864 then went from Knoxville to Chattanooga, joined Gen. Sherman, and were all through the Atlanta campaign. He was in the battles of Dalton, Resaca, Pumpkinvine Creek, Buzzard's Roost, Kenesaw Mountain, and in the battle in which Gen. McPherson was killed and saw him carried from the field, and he was also in the great general battle before Atlanta and in the battle at Jonesboro, and then his regiment went after Hood, and was in the battles of Franklin and Nashville: they followed Hood to Clifton and took part in the battle, and then took transports to Louisville, Ky. Being transferred to Cincinnati, Ohio, by rail, they went to Washington, D. C., and Alexandria, Va., and saw at the latter place the hotel in which Col. Ellsworth was shot; they next took transports from Alexandria to Fort Fisher and were in the bombardment of that fort and were in a skirmish at Smithville, N. C., where they captured 400 prisoners and fought through to Wilmington, N. C., which they captured. They had fighting at New Berne and shirmishing through to Raleigh, N. C. When they turned him over to Stanton, the secretary, seeing the lieutenant in charge had a furlough home, said, "Boys, would you not like a furlough home?" and gave them free transportation home and back to their command by any route they chose to take. Mr. Marquitt rejoined his regiment at Raleigh, N. C., but the war was closed. They took boat via the ocean to Baltimore, took train on the Pennsylvania Central, and eighteen miles from Altoona a car wheel broke and piled up several cars, and threw several cars full of soldiers sixty feet, down an embankment; fifteen soldiers were killed and many injured. Mr. Marquitt escaped serious injury. His car went down endwise and several soldiers inside it were killed. Mr. Marquitt was on top and held on to the break, and his comrade, Hiram B. Floyd, of Mcdina county, was killed at his side. Mr. Marquitt served two years as color guard, a position of importance and great danger, and was mustered out of service with the rank of corporal. At the battle of Resaca, Ga., a piece of shell struck the "U.S." in his belt and knocked him down, but he arose and valiantly took his place in the ranks. This happened while they were making the charge, and while in line of battle in the same action a minie ball struck his blouse sleeve and tore it from wrist to elbow while he was in the act of capping his Enfield rifle. At Frankfort, Ky., his wife's cousin, James Abbott, of company E, took sick, and Mr. Marquitt attended him till his death, and his remains were sent home to Cleveland.

After the war Mr. Marquitt returned to Hinckley and resumed farming. Zachariah Marquitt, the father, was born March 28, 1804, in Sodus Point, N. Y., a son of Daniel and Catherine (Tremper) Marquitt—an old New York state family, Daniel Marquitt being a farmer. His children were Catherine, Louisa, Maria, Betsey Lucinda and Zachariah. Daniel came to Hinckley township, Medina county, Ohio, about 1835, settled in the woods and cleared up a good farm. He took great interest in the Methodist church, his house being the home of the pioneer Methodist preachers. He lived to be eighty-seven years of age. He was a man of excellent character and of kindly and mild disposition, was never angry and lived up to his profession. Zachariah Marquitt was married in New York state and two of his children were born before he moved to Ohio, in 1835, when he settled on 114 acres of land in Hinckley township, and by thrift and energy he increased this to 300 acres of good land and was a substantial His children were Mary, Daniel, James, Martin and John. In politics he was an old-line whig and republican and served as township trustee. He lived to be eighty-five years old, and died December 23, 1889, at Wellington, Ohio, where he had retired to pass his days. He was a strong Union man during the war and all his sons were soldiers in the Union army. John A. was a private of battery A, First Ohio light artillery, enlisting in the spring of 1861, and was in all the marches and battles during 1862-1863. the battle of Stone River he assisted his brother Martin and William Gargett in saving the gun from falling into rebel hands, as mentioned above. He re-enlisted as a veteran, and while at home on veteran furlough died of consumption, April 12, 1862—having taken a severe cold in Kentucky by fording streams in cold weather on his return home. Daniel J., another son, enlisted in an Ohio regiment, but saw no service. Zachariah Marquitt, father of subject, was a man of unblemished character, well known for uprightness and honesty.

Martin H. Marquitt received a commonschool education and attended, one year, Baldwin university, and when the war broke out he enlisted. After his return from the war, September 12, 1866, he married Maria B. Gargett, of Hinckley township, Medina county. She was born January 11, 1844, in Hinckley township, a daughter of John and Mary (Woodward) Gargett. John Gargett was born in England in 1804, a son of John Gargett, a farmer. John Gargett came from England when a young man and settled in Hinckley township, Medina county, Ohio. He was a stonemason by trade and farmer. He built the Perkins house in Akron and his stone residence on his homestead in 1840. He married, at Sharon, Medina county, Ohio, January 1, 1837, and settled in Hinckley township, on 120 acres with good improvements, paying $4 per acre, although it was almost in the woods. He and wife were members of the Presbyterian church, and in politics he was first an old line whig and then a republican. Their children were Mary, William, Maria, Robert, Laura, Alice, James, Henry and Elizabeth. Two sons were in the Civil war-William and Robert. William I. was in battery A, First Ohio light artillery, and served through the war; Robert was in the Second Ohio cavalry, served one year and was in the battle of Pea Ridge.

After marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Marquitt settled on 160 acres of good land and have made many improvements. Their children are Delno, Clifford and Lura. Mrs. Marquitt is a member of the Methodist church in Richfield, and in politics Mr. Marquitt is a republican. He voted for A. Lincoln on his first nomination for the presidency, and was one of the original republicans of Medina county. He is a member of Go'dwood post, G. A. R., at West Richfild, has served as township trustee two times, has been a member of the school board twenty years and reared an excellent family.

INOTT L. NEWTON, a well-known farmer and stock raiser, was born and reared on the farm which he still owns and occupies in Richfield township, Summit county, Ohio, his birth having occurred March 6, 1845.

John Newton, grandfather of subject, was born in Connecticut February 24, 1787, and came to Ohio in 1806, locating in Hudson, where he lived about four years, then returned to his native state, where he married, in 1810, Miss Laura Thompson, and in 1815 came back to Hudson, Ohio, with his wife and two children-Marcus and Lucius. A few years later he came to Richfield, where he soon rose to prominence as an agriculturist and statesman, becoming a member of the state legislature and an associate judge of the state supreme court. His death occurred in March, 1867, and that of his wife about four years previously, leaving a memory still held in honor throughout the county and state. Beside the two children, Marcus and Lucius, born in Connecticut, two others were born in Ohio-John T. and Rebecca. Of these, Marcus was a farmer and a local minister of the Methodist church. and died in January, 1874, a pious and earnest Christian; Lucius will receive further mention in the following paragraph; John T. became prominent as a lawyer in Toledo, and Rebecca, now Mrs. Weld, is living in Richfield.

Lucius Newton, father of subject of this memoir, was born December 19, 1814, and began the battle of life at the age of twentytwo years, locating in Royalton, Cuyahoga county, Ohio, where he purchased 640 acres of timbered land, 200 of which are cleared and fenced, and devoted his attention to farming and stock-raising for about five years, and then came to Richfield township, Summit county, where he resumed the same calling, of which he made a decided success and followed until his death, which occurred on December 4, 1896. He owned at one time fully 1,000 acres of fine land, the greater part of which he divided among his children. He was married in May, 1838, to Miss Caroline Brockway, who was born in Trumbull county, Ohio, in 1818, of Connecticut parentage. The children born were five in number, viz: John T., an influential farmer-citizen of Hudson township, Summit county; Homer E., deceased; Minott L., our subject; Laura, wife of J. M. McKinstery, secretary of the Royal Arcanum of Cleveland, Ohio, and Virgil L., deceased.

Minott L. Newton was educated in the district schools of Richfield township and at Oberlin college, and later went through a business course at Hiram college. April 15, 1885, he married Miss Emma Ellas, a native of Summit county, Ohio, born February 21, 1861, a daughter of Louis P. and Amanda (Munday) Ellas, who was born in Tioga county, N. Y., in 1834. Loren Ellas, father of Louis P., was a native of Vermont, was married in that state to Sarah Hardy, a native of Connecticut, and later went to New York state, where he was engaged in farming and lumbering until 1837, when he brought his family to Ohio and settled on a farm in Northampton township, Summit county, where his death took place in 1867, when his widow removed to Steuben county, Ind., where she expired in 1874.

Louis P. Ellas, when a young man, learned boat-building and carpentering in Boston township, Summit county, Ohio, and followed these trades about thirteen years, and then for two years kept a grocery in the same township. Removing to Bath township, he kept hotel three years, or until April, 1863, when he settled in Richfield township, kept hotel at West Richfield a year, and then removed to the East Center, where he kept a popular and prosperous hotel and also engaged in buying and selling live stock until 1874. He then sold his hotel and bought a farm, which he cultivated three years, making a specialty of raising stock on his land. Again he engaged in the hotel business, opening up a most favorite resort in Richfield, which he operated until April, 1881, when he retired. To his marriage, in April, 1856, with Miss Amanda Munday, who was born in Tioga county, N. Y., in 1831, there were born three children, viz: Elmer C., Emma and Ella. Mrs. Ellas is now deceased, but Mr. Ellas still resides in Richfield, a most respected gentleman. To Mr. and Mrs. Newton was born a bright little daughter, March 15, 1891, now the sunbeam that shines the brightest in the household.

Mr. Newton's splendid farm of 400 acres is one of the best in the township and is excellently well improved. He makes a specialty of raising Durham cattle and as a breeder his fame has spread far and wide. In politics he is a republican, but has never been ambitious to hold public office, but as a citizen he has always been public-spirited, and is greatly esteemed on account of his individual merits and progressive proclivities.

HARLES A. WIGHTMAN, district agent of the John Hancock Life Insurance company of Boston, Mass., with headquarters at rooms Nos. 1 and 2, Odd Fellows' temple, Akron, Ohio, has had the charge of his company's affairs in this city since the spring of 1893, when he succeeded Frederick E. Smith, now vice-president of the Second National bank. trict over which Mr. Wightman holds control in the interest of the John Hancock Insurance company covers Summit, Portage, Medina, and parts of Cuyahoga and Wayne counties, and within the short time Mr. Wightman has been its agent, the business of the company has been increased over a half a million dollars—an instance of the wonderful energy and business ability of Mr. Wightman, who had previously been in the insurance business three years only, having before that time been a shoe dealer in Akron.

Mr. Wightman was born August 5, 1852, in Bedford, Cuyahoga county, Ohio, a son of Horace F. and Mary P. (Burgess) Wightman. of old Connecticut stock, his grandfather. John Wightman, having come from the Nutmeg state and having settled in Cleveland when it was little more than a village. John Wightman kept the first house for public entertainment in the embryo city, which house was known as the Old Red hotel. Of his five sons who came with him, one became sheriff of Cuyahoga county; one went south and became a planter near Natchez, Miss., one became a real estate dealer in Cleveland, and one sought his fortune in the west. The fifth, father of subject, settled down to farming, became very active in local affairs and died, an honored man, about 1869. His children were six in number, and were born in the following order: Anna, the wife of Edward D. Benedict, of Bedford, Ohio, and with his filial daughter the venerable mother now makes her home at the age of seventy-eight years; George, a wholesale dealer in oysters on Antonio street, Cleveland; Permilia, who died at the age of four years; Frank A., in the oyster business with his brother, but residing on Harvard street, Newberg, Ohio; Charles A., the subject, and Minnie, wife of Theodore Lambson, with the Kinsley Paper company, of Newberg, Ohio.

Charles A. Wightman was educated in the district schools of Bedford, Ohio, and at the age of seventeen years took a position in the Ohio Insane asylum as an attendant, and two years later, quitting the asylum, entered the employ of E. D. Sawyer, shoe dealer of Newberg, Ohio, with whom he remained two years; he next was employed for a year by George Sell, shoe dealer, at Ontario and Prospect streets, Cleveland, and then entered the Newberg wire mills, learned fine wire drawing and two years later was appointed foreman over a force of 300 men, which posi-

He then opened a shoe store on his own account and conducted this with varying success until 1892. In the spring of 1893 he associated himself with the John Hancock Insurance company, and has since devoted his entire time and attention to the advancement of this company's interests, with the magnificent results noted in the opening paragraph of this article.

Politically, Mr. Wightman is a stanch republican, and in his societary relations is a member of the Akron lodge, No. 547, I. O. O. F., and also of Akron encampment. No. 18, and canton Expeditus, No. 2. For three years he was a first lieutenant in battery F, Ohio national guard, but resigned, through business exigencies.

Mr. Wightman was married February 15, 1884, to Miss Alfretta Miller, daughter of George F. Miller, the result of the felicitous union being one child—Earl D. The residence of Mr. Wightman is at No. 934 East Market street, where, surrounded by many warm friends, they enjoy all the happiness that is vouchsafed to mankind.

LIAS MILLER, one of the most respected old-time farmers of Bath township, Summit county, was born in Stark county Ohio, March 12, 1824, and is a son of Peter and Mary (Williams) Miller, the former of whom was born October 5, 1796, and was a son of George Miller, who was born November 7, 1763.

Peter Miller married Miss Mary Williams February 13, 1823, and came to Bath township, Summit county, in 1848, and settled on a farm one-half mile east of the center thereof, where he continued to follow his life-long vocation as an agriculturist and attained a considerable degree of popularity and influence with his fellow-townsmen, whom he served as township trustee, school director and justice of the peace, having been elected by the democratic party, of which he had been a member until a few years before his death, when he became a republican. In religion he was from boyhood a convert to the Evangelical faith and was a consistent member of the church of that name. He lost his wife, Mary, in 1826. She had borne him two children-Elias, the subject of this biography, and Robert S. For his second helpmate he married Nancy Sprankle, who gave birth to three children-James, Joseph and Milton. Joseph died February 25, 1843, and the death of Peter Miller occurred March 31, 1870.

Elias Miller was well educated in the district schools of Stark and Summit counties, and was reared by his father to the honorable and noble pursuit of agriculture. He married, April 16, 1848, Miss Sarah Sprankle, who was born June 16, 1827, a daughter of Jacob Sprankle, who was born in America in 1798. Mrs. Sarah Miller died May 10, 1895, the mother of the following-named children: Jacob S., who was born November 12, 1849, married Miss Mary E. Ball, of Copley township, January 1, 1874, and died at Canal Fulton, May 7, 1878; Elta Ann, who was born November 28, 1851, was married to Wait Hopkins, and died January 13, 1896; Nancy, born December 18, 1854, now the wife of Daniel Mull, and a resident of Cleveland; Mary A., who was born February 27, 1857, is married to Newton Hockett and resides in Bath township, on the old homestead; Ema A., born February 19, 1859, died October 3, 1871; Sarah D., born June 13, 1864, was married to John Rothrick, and died July 18, 1892, and Peter Milton, who was born in Bath township February 6, 1867, and died October 22, 1885. Elias Miller, the subject, married for his second wife, April 11, 1897, a widow, whose maiden name was Margaret A. Drushal, and his residence is at Hornersville, in Medina county. Mr. Miller has led a very active and industrious life, having cleared up nearly all of his 130-acre farm and made all the improvements, the buildings being substantial and neat and tasty in appearance, while the farm itself, which is situated three-quarters of a mile east of Center, of Bath, presents an aspect of thrift and good management unsurpassed by any farm of its dimensions in Bath township.

In politics Mr. Miller affiliates with the republican party, but has persistently declined to accept public office. He has long been a member of and class leader in the Evangelical church, and fraternally is a member of Richfield lodge, No. 266, F. & A. M., in which he has held the chair of senior deacon. He is now living in comparative retirement, having done no practical work for the past ten years, his ample means affording him the privilege of enjoying in ease the fruits of his early industry, although he keeps a general oversight in the management of his estate. He is an honorable and upright gentleman in every sense of these words, and holds with a lasting tenure the respect of his neighbors.

L. MILLER, a prominent young farmer of Norton township, Summit county, Ohio, was born in Medina county, January 29, 1860, and is of German descent.

Joseph Miller, father of subject, was born in Lehigh county, Pa., June 3, 1823, and was there reared to manhood and married to Caroline Steckle, who bore the following-named children: Alvin D., Amos W., Ellen E. (deceased wife of James Mohei), Joseph H., Mary M. (wife of Charles Leiby, a farmer of Medina county), Sarah I. (widow of Samuel Hoaglin), and Martin L., the subject of this memoir. The mother of this family died January 28, 1867, and the father chose for his second wife Rebecca J. Lower, daughter of Samuel Lower, and to this marriage have been born Alice V., wife of Peter Snyder; Cora A., wife of William Disher; Charles and Oliver. Joseph Miller, after his first marriage, came from Pennsylvania to Ohio, and located in Norton Center, Summit county, in 1846, and in 1848 removed to Sharon township, Medina county, where he became a prosperous farmer, owning 100 acres of well-cultivated land, improved with substantial buildings. He filled all the township offices, including that of trustee, and has always been prominent as a member of the Lutheran church.

Martin L. Miller has been identified with agricultural interests since his childhood, and has also been a successful educator. After a proper preparation in the common schools, he attended Ada Normal college, and for seventeen years after graduation met with unwonted success as a school-teacher. As a republican in politics, he served as township clerk of Norton township in 1885, and served as deacon and elder in the Reformed church, in which he was for eleven years also superintendent of the Sabbath-school.

The marriage of Mr. Miller took place on the 21st day of March, 1883, to Miss Alice L. Strobl, who was born in Norton township January 13, 1861, a daughter of Jacob and Maria (Reamsnyder) Strobl. The father of Mrs. Miller, Jacob Strobl, was a native of Lancaster county, Pa., born in 1818, and while yet a single man came to Ohio and located in Stark county, where he married Miss Reamsnyder, who was born June 7, 1825. In 1848 Mr. Strobl came to Norton township, Summit county, bought sixty-five acres of land and made a good home for himself and family, which consisted of the following-named children: Sarah, wife of Jacob Smith; Lucy A., wife of J. W. Hall; Hattie, married to Henry Everhart; Melinda, now Mrs. Silas Strotter; Mary E., wife of William Fendenheim; Mahalia A., wife of George Shook; Alice L. (Mrs. Miller); George A.; Wellington, and Effie G., wife of Richard Lee. George A. died May The family were all reared in the 13, 1894. faith of the Reformed church, of which the father was a deacon and pillar. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Miller were seven in number and named as follows: Lucretia M. (deceased, Wadie E., Gracie M., Maud A. (deceased), Ruth A., Guy E. and Fern A.

Mr. Miller has an excellently improved farm of eighty-three acres, on which he has lived ever since he has been a resident of Norton township. He is a member of the Royal Arcanum lodge, No. 382, of Doyleston, Ohio, in which he has filled all the offices, and which he has twice represented in the state lodge. In politics he is popular not only with his party, but with the community at large, and is recognized as a worthy and public-spirited citizen.

ILAS PAYNE, a thriving and respected farmer of Richfield township, Summit county, Ohio, and an old soldier of the Civil war, was born July 9, 1839, in Copley township, Summit county, Ohio, a son of William and Frances (Carey) Payne, and springs from sterling English ancestry of Virginia colonial stock.

Silas Payne received a common-school education and was reared to farming. He married, in Bath township, in August, 1861, Mary B. Hogue, who was born in Northampton township, Summit county, July 22, 1833, a daughter of Samuel Hogue. To Mr. and Mrs. Payne was born one son, George E. Payne, on marrying, settled in Bath township and enlisted October 16, 1861, in Capt. Jonas Schoonover's company H, Twentyninth Ohio volunteer infantry, to serve three years, but was honorably discharged on account of disability February 18, 1863, at Dumfries, W. Va. He re-enlisted in Northampton township in the One Hundred and Seventy-seventh Ohio infantry, in Capt. Samuel J. Tracy's company H, and was again honorably discharged at Greensboro, N. C., June 24, 1865, the war having closed." He was in the battle of Cedar Mountain, W. Va., Port Republic and several severe skirmishes. He was seriously sick about three months in hospital at Washington, D. C., of typhoid fever, in 1862, but with this exception Mr. Payne was always an active soldier and was prompt and faithful in the discharge of every duty, and endured all the hardships of a soldier's life for two years and four months with fortitude and cheerfulness. Mr. Payne was in all the marches, campaigns, battles and skirmishes in which his company engaged, except the battle of Winchester, when he was in camp on guard duty. He considers his hardest march to have been from a point four miles north of Winchester, coming south a distance of over thirty-two miles during a a heavy rain storm in the spring, the march lasting two days and one night, and, including the return to camp, making a distance of One comrade, Norman sixty-four miles. Salsberry, of West Bath, Summit county, died three days later from the effects of the fatigue and exposure of this march.

After the war Mr. Payne returned to Summit county, Ohio, where he remained until his removal to Eaton county, Mich., in 1880, where he settled on a farm, which he resided on for seven years. Here his first wife died September 17, 1887, a member of the United Brethren church and a woman of great amiability. Mr. Payne then returned to Summit county, Ohio, and married, November 14, 1890, in Richfield township, Samantha J. Kemery, who was born November 9, 1850, a daughter of Daniel and Susan (Yergin) Kemery. Mr. and Mrs. Payne settled on their present farm, which was the home of Mrs. Payne.

Mr. and Mrs. Payne are members of the United Brethren church, called the U. B. Centennial, and Mr. Payne is trustee of several churches and parsonages, is a class leader and takes an active interest in church matters, as does his excellent wife. Mr. Payne cast his first presidential vote for Lincoln, and has always advocated the principles of the republican party.

ERBERT A. PECK, one of the prominent and substantial farmers of Tallmadge township, Summit county, Ohio, is a son of Anthony Peck, a pioneer of sterling English Puritan stock. The founder of the family in America was Joseph Peck, of Hingham, Norfolk county, England, who fled from England to America, on account of church persecution, in 1638, coming with his family in the good ship Diligence, John Martin master, Joseph Peck, his wife, three sons and a daughter, two men servants and three maid servants coming at the same time. He settled at Hingham, Mass., and was one of the founders of the town. The genealogy of the Peck family extends back from Joseph for twenty generations, and is certified to by the Heralds' college of the British museum, and descends from John Peck, of Belton, Yorkshire. The family is of noble origin and of sterling Saxon stock. Joseph Peck's children were Anna, Rebecca, Joseph, John, Nicholas, Samuel, Nathaniel and Israel. After them came Joseph, Samuel and Heath; then Michael and Fenn.

Capt. Fenn Peck, grandfather of subject, was born in Milford, Conn., and was a sea captain. He married Sarah Treat, a direct descendant of Gov. Treat, thirty years governor and deputy governor of the old colony of Connecticut. Their children were Anthony and Treat Fenn. Capt. Peck died at Gaudaloupe, West Indies, of yellow fever, in 1803, aged only about twenty-four years.

Anthony Peck, father of subject, was born in Milford, Conn., 1799, and received a good education. He married, December, 1821, in Milford, Conn., Harriet Clark, of the same place, a daughter of Abraham and Mehitable (Peck) Clark. Abraham Clark was in the Revolutionary war when he was but fourteen years old, and with Capt. Samuel Peck, who served in Gen. Washington's army. great-grandfather of subject, Anthony Peck, was a ship builder and well-to-do for his time. He lost his property, and came as a pioneer soon after his marriage, in 1822, in April, to the Western Reserve, making the journey with a two-horse covered wagon, and both of them walked most of the way, the road being very bad. They drove direct to Tallmadge, and Mr. Peck bought the land where our subject now lives, consisting of 160 acres, all in the wilderness. He cleared this up, and, by persevering labor and industry, added to it until he owned about 200 acres, and erected a tasteful residence. His children were Sarah Treat, Charlotte Clark, Harriet Antoinette and Herbert Anthony. Mrs. Peck was a member of the Congregational church, and Mr. Peck was a member of the Congregational society and church trustee for many years, and assisted to build the Tallmadge church. Mr. Peck was township trustee and assessor and an honored citizen. He prospered by his sterling thrift, and educated his children well—his daughter Sarah at New Haven, Conn., and his daughter Charlotte at Canandaigua, N. Y. Mr. Peck died at the age of forty-seven, in 1845, killed by accident. He was a conservative and a stout whig and a great admirer of Henry Clay. His daughter Sarah married H. B. Eldred, who recently died in in Cleveland. Mr. Peck's daughter Charlotte married Volney Acer, of Medina, N. Y., and has four sons, all prominent men.

Herbert A. Peck was born November 13, 1842. He received a good education in Tallmadge academy, and has always been a farmer. Mr. Peck is an honored citizen, has been a township trustee, and has been treasurer of the Summit county Agricultural society five years and secretary six years, and was reelected to both offices unanimously, but resigned.

Mr. Peck has prospered like his father before him and has a splendid farm af 300 acres, part of which is the old homestead. His beautiful lawn, ornamented with fine evergreens and other shade trees, is one of the most attractive in the county. Mr. Peck is a man of excellent business capacity, is well read, and keeps up well with the times. His pleasant homestead is presided over with grace and dignity by his sister, Antionette, and his residence shows the taste of cultivated and refined people. Mrs. Anthony Peck reached the great age of eighty-nine years, and died May 19, 1893, a woman of high character and many virtues.

AMUEL W. PERRY, a greatly respected citizen of Northfield township, Summit county, Ohio, was born in Deckertown, Sussex county, N. J., November 17, 1838, a son of David and Sarah

A. (Benjamin) Perry, and is a descendant of an English family which was among the early colonial settlers of New England. ceived a fair common-school education, was reared to farming, and in September, 1860, left his home for the west, stopping for a month with an uncle in New York state and then working a short time at East Sharon. Potter county, Pa. June 17, 1861, he arrived at Brandywine, Ohio, and August 7, 1862, married, in Akron, Miss Laura M. Barnhart, daughter of William and Luna (Chaffee) Barnhart, and born in Peninsula, Ohio, May 15, Mrs. Perry's father was a native of Pennsylvania, and was reared as a mechanic and builder of boats. He was educated in the common schools, then emigrated to the west in an early day, when the city of Cleveland was almost a hamlet. In politics he was a republican, and fraternally was a Mason. He was born in 1812 and died March 19, 1879; the mother of Mrs. Perry was born in Boston township, Summit county, of Puritan stock, about 1820, and died in 1849. The remains of these parents are interred in the village cemetery at Boston, where a beautiful monument stands sacred to their memory. were four children in the family, one son and three daughters—all living—and of whom Mrs. Perry is the eldest. William H. Barnhart, a resident of the city of Akron, is a painter by trade. He married Miss Cornelia Coe, a native of Summit county. They had four children, of whom two sons are deceased. A., wife of A. Curtis, resides at Springer, Colfax county, N. Mr. Curtis is a stockraiser, and was formerly sheriff of Summit county, from 1869 to 1873. They had two children, both deceased. Luna was one of the honored teachers of Summit county, and is now engaged as an accountant in the Buckeye Manufacturing Co.; Harold A., a resident of Akron, Ohio, is a graduate of Akron high school, and is now a bookkeeper in the Goodrich Rubber Co.; Mary M., wife of Lester Crittenden, is a resident of Burton, Geauga county, Ohio. Mr. Crittenden is a contractor and builder and is now postmaster at that place. They have three sons: William H., Arthur C. and Roy L.

Seven days after his marriage Mr. Perry enlisted, August 14, 1862, at Northfield, Ohio, in company C, One Hundred and Fifteenth Ohio volunteer infantry, for three years, and served until mustered out at Murfreesboro, Tenn., June 22, 1865, on account of the close of the war, and was honorably discharged at Cleveland, Ohio. His service was chiefly rendered in Tennessee, and in November, 1864, at LaVergne, had a skirmish with Wheeler's cavalry; one month later he and fifty comrades, while guarding the railroad at LaVergne, were surprised and captured by cavalry and artillery under Gens. Forrest, Burford and Jackson. They were taken to within five miles of Nashville and kept in the woods five days, receiving for rations two-thirds of a pint of corn-meal and a piece of raw beef, two or three inches square. They were eventually taken to Columbia and confined in the upper story of the court house, but two days later James Cassidy and David Thomas, both of Summit county, together with Mr. Perry, managed to escape, and were eight days in making their way to Murfreesboro, which town they reached December 22, 1864. There being but twenty-two of Mr. Perry's company left alive, they were detailed to lay out the cemetery on the battle field of Stone river and to inter the dead.

After the war, Mr. Perry, who had bought a piece of land in Tennessee, traded it for his present farm of eighty-two acres in Northfield township, which he has greatly improved and placed under a high state of cultivation. To Mr. and Mrs. Perry have been born two children-Helen M. and Sadie E. Mr. Perry is a republican in politics, and cast his first presidential vote in the ranks for Mr. Lincoln, is a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, and a good and useful citizen. He still suffers from the hardships he endured during the war; although never wounded, he was at one time confined in hospital at Camp Dennison with typhoid fever, and although his wife went there to nurse him, it was seven weeks before he recognized her. He and his two comrades, who escaped from the rebels at Columbia, and who reside in Summit county, have been in the habit of holding a yearly reunion, at the first of which there were but six attendants—the three prisoners and their wives-now there are twenty attendants, including their children.

The eldest child, Helen M., is the wife of Marvin L. (Wilcox) Viall, the Viall family being descendants of old New England colonists of Connecticut and Vermont.

Albert A. Viall received a good district-school education, and was but twelve years of age when the first shot of the Civil war was directed against Fort Sumter. This fired his youthful patriotism, which grew with the growth of the war. Finally, with the consent of his parents, who, in fact, could not restrain him, he enlisted at Alliance, Ohio, January 26, 1865, in company F, One Hundred and Eighty-fourth Ohio volunteer infantry, for one year, unless sooner discharged on account of the war being brought to an end. He was a large lad, stood five feet seven and one-half inches high, weighed 167 pounds, and but a little over fifteen years of age at the time, and but twenty-seven days older than the youngest enlisted soldier, as reported at the reunion of the Grand Army of the Republic at Buffalo, N. Y., in 1897. He served in Ohio, at Nashville and Chattanooga, Tenn. Bridgeport, Ala., Edgefield, Tenn., and Lookout Mountain, his duty being principally in guard, patrol and garrison service, and pursuit of bush-whackers. He was much exposed during a march from Zollicoffer Barracks to Missionary Hill, Nashville, Tenn., during a cold rain in May, 1865, and contracted rheumatism, but he served cheerfully and faithfully, and was honorably discharged September 20, 1865, the war having been brought to an end the previous April.

He is a true patriot, and on decoration day, 1897, presented to the township of Tallmadge a beautiful silk national flag, with staff, in commemoration of the heroes of 1776, 1812 and 1861, and is now interested in furthering a movement looking to the erection here of a monument to the memory of the soldiers of the Civil war.

Mrs. Catherine Rush also died, and the third marriage of Mr. Rush was to Clarissa Hine, and their children were Lina L., Ella, James, Jennie, Isaac, John, Flora, Almeda, Hattie, and one died an infant. Thus Mr. Rush was the father of twenty-two chil-Two sons—Ceylon and Manley—were soldiers in the Civil war-both in same company and regiment. Manley enlisted later than Ceylon, and when he also was but fifteen years old. Thus these two patriotic boys were among the youngest soldiers of the Civil war.

REDERICK W. WOODBRIDGE, one of the oldest and one of the best-known business men of Ravenna, Ohio, was born in Manchester, Conn., in 1824, and is a son of Frederick and Clarissa C. (Pitkin) Woodbridge, the former of whom was also a native of Manchester, Hartford county, Conn., was there married, and to his union with Miss Pitkin were born three children, viz: Frederick W., Elizabeth P. (now the widow of James W. Cone, of Kent, Ohio) and Charles D., of Cleveland—both families being of English descent.

Diodate Woodbridge, the paternal greatgrandfather of Frederick, was a patriot of the Revolutionary war and fought in the memorable battle of Breed's Hill, better known as Bunker's Hill. Dudley Woodbridge, paternal grandfather of subject, was a native of Connecticut, married Betsey Pitkin, became the father of twelve children, and died in his native state at about the age of sixty years. Joseph Pitkin, the maternal grandfather of subject, also was a native of Connecticut, was one of the first cotton manufacturers of that state and died at an advanced age in New York.

Frederick Woodbridge, father of Frederick W., was at one time a wealthy merchant in the east, but lost his all in the panic of 1837, and in 1839 brought his family to Ohio, and died in Cleveland at the age of seventy-two years, having some years previously lost his wife, who died in Wisconsin, but whose remains were interred at Kent, Ohio.

Frederick Wells Woodbridge, the subject proper of this memoir, received a very fair academical education in his youth, and in 1841 began clerking for Clapp & Spellman, at Akron, Ohio, and later was employed by Zenas Kent, of Ravenna. He, with filial affection, presented to his father all his early earnings to aid in buying a farm, but was able, in 1846, to enter into business on his own account, in which he continued in Ravenna until 1853a part of the time with his father-in-law, Capt. Isaac Brayton, and then removed to Cleveland, where, with others, he built the Cleveland Powder mills, which he operated with success for several years and then re-entered mercantile life, in connection with the Cleveland Rolling Mill company, in which he continued until 1873, when he returned to Ravenna and resumed mercantile business.

The marriage of Frederick W. Woodbridge took place in Ravenna, in 1847, to Miss Mary A. Brayton, then about seventeen years of age, and a daughter of Capt. Isaac Brayton. She was a native of the island of Nantucket, and in after years became famous as a leader in the cause of the Women's Christian Temperance union. To the marriage of Frederick W. and Mary A. Woodbridge were born four children, viz: Mary Alice, who became the wife of Dr. M. L. Brooks, physician and surgeon of Cleveland, whose father is also a physician and is the oldest practitioner of that city; to Mr. and Mrs. Brooks were born two children, Thomas H. and Martin Luther, who died in childhood. The father, Dr. Brooks, met with an untimely death by an accident in Martha Mitchell, the second child born to Mr. and Mrs. Woodbridge, was married to W. E. Way, who for twenty-seven years was bookkeeper and paymaster of the Cleveland Rolling Mill company and died in 1891; to this marriage were born three children, of whom two are still living—Edith and Anna. Frederick W., the third child of subject and wife, died at the age of one year, and George Brayton Woodbridge, the youngest, married Miss May Sharp; they have one child, Frederick Wells, and reside in Cleveland, where his father is bookkeeper for a manufacturing company.

The late lamented mother and grandmother of the above children, Mrs. Mary Ann (Brayton) Woodbridge, was called from her philanthrophic cares and toil of benevolence October 25, 1894. She was born April 21, 1830, the daughter of Capt. Isaac and Love (Mitchell) Brayton, who were married, by the Quaker ceremony, July 25, 1825. Mary A. was of the sixth generation born in America, and her ancestry can be traced back in England for a period of 800 years. Her father, Isaac Brayton, was born in Nantucket, in 1801, and early in life became captain of a whaling vessel, and April 28, 1833, landed the largest cargo of oil (2,824 barrels) ever before brought to the island of Nantucket. He also landed probably the first missionary that ever visited the Sandwich Islands, and was always a friend of that devoted band of evangelists, mention of which fact is made in the history of the Sandwich group by Rev. Hiram Bingham, who was himself a missionary there for twenty-five years under the auspices of the American board. Even in those early days Capt. Brayton was a strictly temperate man, never using even tobacco, and was one of the few seacaptains who daily led the crew in religious worship. He was gifted with a high order of eloquence and a tact for the management of public affairs, was recognized by his fellowcitizens as a leader among men, and by them was sent to the Massachusetts legislature in the days when Edward Everett was governor. On coming to Ohio, he served the commonwealth as associate justice with Ben Wade, later was a member of the Ohio legislature, and was the father of the law by which the charitable institutions of this state are still governed. He lived to the great age of eightysix years, and his memory is still cherished with respect in his native as well as his adopted state. His talented wife Love Mitchell, was a sister of William Mitchell, who as an astronomer and geographer, with his daughter Maria, won a world-wide reputation. Mrs. Woodbridge was the mother of three children before she was twenty-one years of age; the fourth was born thirteen years later. withstanding her maternal cares she never lost her enthusiasm for her religious convictions and her philanthopic efforts to redeem the world from the curse of rum, nor her love for books, nor the study of botany and love of flowers, with which her home was always decorated with the rarest growths; and so gracious was personality and her hospitality so spontaneous, that her home was constantly filled with admiring friends.

The great work that Mrs. Woodbridge accomplished as a member of the Women's Christian Temperance Union must be confined to a brief excerpt from a memento written by the famous Frances E. Willard, confining it, as it was written, to the present tense: "She has risen to her present eminence by sure and regular gradation, being at first president of the local union of her own hometown at Ravenna, then for years president of her state, and in 1878 she was chosen recording recretary of the National Women's Christian Temperance Union, a position which she fills with unrivaled ability, her minutes being almost never susceptible of improvement by even the slightest verbal change. What wonder that more than 300,000 voters responded by 'Yes' ballots to such earnest workers as the White Ribbon women of Ohio, under such splendid leadership. when the amendment was counted out, Mrs. Woodbridge has taken positions so far advanced as to the safe conduct of prohibition movements, that many good people have been unable 'to see light in her light," but she goes bravely forward, undaunted, undeterred, with firmness in the right as God gives her to see the right, exhibiting in this the choicest quality of her noble character, viz: Fidelity to her convictions at cost of comfort and of praise."

Frederick W. Woodbridge has been a lasting honor to the generation in which he lives, and has shown in his life the characteristics of the man and the true-born gentleman. His business integrity has never been questioned, his high moral character ever precluding the shadow, even, of such a thought. His domestic life has been supremely blessed in all respects, and has been marred only by the irreparable loss of the companion to whom he was so deeply devoted.

ENRY BARHOLT, a respected citizen of Hiram, Ohio, and a veteran of the Civil war, was born in Prussia, August 27, 1838, a son of Benjamin and Caroline Barholt, and was seven years old when his parents brought him to America, about 1845. His father settled in Cleveland, Ohio, but Mrs. Barholt, died soon after reaching America, and young Henry received but little education. He began to work in a tobacco factory when a small boy and sometimes worked until twelve o'clock at night; he next went to Orange, Ohio, when he was sixteen years old, and worked at farm work. He enlisted at Hiram, Ohio, September 20, 1861, in Col. Garfield's regiment, Capt. A. F. Williams, company A, Forty-second regiment Ohio volunteer infantry, to serve three years or during the war, and was honorably discharged at Camp Chase, Ohio, September 30, 1864, by reason of expiration of service. He reenlisted in Wayne township, Erie county, Pennsylvania, in company G, Sixth United States veteran volunteers, April 6, 1865, to serve one year or during the war, and was honorably discharged at Washington, D. C., April 5, 1866, thus serving a little over four years. He was in the battles of Middle Creek, and Pound Gap, Ky., and in several skirmishes at Cumberland Gap and at Big Springs. He was in the battle of Grand Gulf, Thompson's Hill, or Port Gibson, Raymond, Champion Hill, Black River, Chickasaw Bayou, Arkansas Post, Vicksburg, Jackson, Miss., and in skirmishes too numerous to mention. Barholt was not a prisoner, nor was he in the hospital, but was always an active soldier and prompt and cheerful in the discharge of his He was in all the battles, skirmishes, campaigns and marches, in which his regiment was engaged, and had but one furlough home for thirty days.

Mr. Barholt thinks his hardest battles to have been those of Champion Hill and Vicksburg. His hardest march was in September, from Cumberland Gap to the Ohio river, which required nineteen days. The troops had no rations, and the weather was very hot. The corn had just glazed, and Mr. Barholt lived on this corn during the march. He had saved a little coffee, and this was of the greatest value to him.

After the war Mr. Barholt returned to Ohio and engaged in farm work at Hiram. He married August 5, 1872, at Cleveland, Ohio, Mary Seebolt, who was born March 9, 1842, in Baden, Germany, in the Black Forest. Her father came with his family to America, about 1850, arriving in New York. Mr. Seebolt was a blacksmith, and settled in Cleveland, Ohio, where his wife died the first year. Their chilren, beside Mary, were Lee, Antoinette, John (a soldier of the Civil war), Caroline, Elizabeth and Hannah, the last-named remaining in Germany. Mr. Seebolt lived to be sixty-four years old, and died in 1871 in Cleveland. He was a hard-working and industrious man.

After marriage Mr. Barholt settled in Hiram township, where he had bought a farm of fifty-six and one-half acres, three-fourths of a mile west of Hiram. By his thrift and energy, he has improved his place with good buildings, and has a pleasant and comfortable home. Mr. and Mrs. Barholt have one son, Edward F., born November 3, 1879. In politics he is a republican and cast his first vote for Abraham Lincoln. Mr. Barholt is a member of the Lutheran church and of the G. A. R., formerly affiliating with Bentley post at Mantua, Ohio.

Benjamin Barholt and wife, the parents of our subject, came to America about 1845, sailing from Bremen to New York in the good ship Eagle. Mr. Barholt was a weaver by trade. He lived in Cleveland until his death at the venerable age of about eighty. a hard-working and honorable man. children were Charles, Henry, Frederick and Fredrica. Three sons were in the Civil war, viz: Frederick was in the Thirty-seventh Ohio volunteer infantry, three years' service and veteranized, and in all served four years and was in many battles. He was wounded at Lookout Mountain, and is now deceased. Charles was a private of the Twenty-third regiment veteran volunteer infantry, served four years, and was in many battles. He was wounded and now resides in Cleveland. The three brothers, Henry, Frederick and Charles, were in the service altogether about twelve years.

Henry Barholt has always been an industrious and frugal farmer, and has fully earned the reputation he enjoys as a good citizen and an upright man.

AMES B. BARNARD, mayor of Garrettsville, Portage county, Ohio, and now serving a second term, is a native of Chautauqua county, N. Y., was born April 29, 1838, and is a son of Benjamin and Gracie (Bucklin) Barnard, natives, respectively, of New Hampshire and New York states.

In 1853 the Barnard family came to Ohio and first located in Trumbull county, whence they removed to a farm in Franklin township, and later went to Stowe township, Summit county, where the parents passed the remainder of their days. The father had been a farmer all his life, was a republican in politics, and was honored with the office of justice of the peace, as well as with several minor township offices. They were the parents of eleven children, who all grew to maturity, and were named as follows: Jane, who was first married to William Southwell and next to Ransford Easton, and now lives in Illinois: Emily, deceased, who was first married to Dewey Nichols, then to George Baker, and next became Mrs. Freeman, and died in Jamestown, N. Y.; Nancy is the widow of Charles Curtis, and resides in Joliet, Ill.; Martha is the wife of S. P. Merrill, of Earlville, Portage county, Ohio; Sophia is married to Frank Stowe, of Lockport, Ill.; James B., subject, is next in order of birth; Elizabeth died unmarried; Iulia married Seldon Barker. afterward became Mrs. Mansfield, and resides in Jamestown, N. Y.; Laura is the wife of William Stowe, of Lockport, Ill.; Daskum F. is a farmer near Kent, Ohio; Fred is also a farmer, and lives in Stowe township, Summit county.

James B. Barnard attended school until fifteen years of age and assisted on his father's farm until his enlistment, in 1861, in the Second Ohio volunteer cavalry; served in the western army nearly two years as bugler, and was mustered out under an order from the war department. He next enlisted in company H, One Hundred and Seventy-first Ohio volunteer infantry, for 100 days, did guard duty at Johnson's island, as second lieutenant, fought at Kellar's Bridge, Ky., was held in service fully a year, and was mustered out with the rank of captain.

After his return from the war, Capt. Barnard traveled for twenty years as a salesman in the eastern and middle states, mostly on his own account, but while thus employed established his home, in 1873, in Garrettsville. In 1890 he purchased an interest in the granite business, which is still carried on under the firm name of Barnard & King, who own their business block and yards and are very prosperous in their trade, commanding a very extensive business.

Mr. Barnard was married, in 1860, to Miss Philinda Lee, who was born in Trumbull county, Ohio, a daughter of Seth Lee, a prominent farmer. To Mr. and Mrs. Barnard has been born one son—Jay L., who is married to Mary Levitt, and is office manager, bookkeeper and statistician for the Ohio Steel company at Youngstown. Mr. and Mrs. Barnard have also reared an adopted daughter—Edith.

In politics Mr. Barnard has always been an ardent republican, is very popular with his party, has twice been elected to the town council and has twice been elected mayor of the village of Garrettsville, and is now serving his second term. During his excellent administrations Main street has been paved with brick, and the electric light system thoroughly improved and perfected, and many other important improvements made for the public benefit. Mr. Barnard was one of the three commissioners appointed to build the Hiram Free turnpike or macadamized road in 1883, of which commission he has served ever since as president of the board.

In his fraternal relations, Mr. Barnard has advanced to the encampment in Odd Fellowship and is a past chief patriarch, and still affiliates as a member of the local lodge, and is also a member of the Grand Army of the Republic. He is entirely "self-made", and his residence on North street is one of the best in the village.

REDRICK W. BOIES, of Peninsula, Ohio, one of the old soldiers of the Civil war and a respected citizen, was born in Stowe township, Summit county, Ohio, September 17, 1842, a son of Fredrick N. and Elizabeth (Lewis) Boies. The Boies family were of French and Irish ancestry and settlers, in colonial times, of Massachusetts.

John Boies, grandfather of subject, was born in Boston. Mass., September 27, 1760, and married July 31, 1788, Mary Parker, born at Litchfield, N. H., daughter of John Parker and granddaughter of Rev. Thomas Parker, the first minister of Dracut, Mass. In the year 1805, they settled in Maine as pioneers of Madison and Skowhegan. Their children were Thomas, James, Bartholomew, Broadus, Fredrick, John, Mary, Nancy, Mehitable, Eliza and Fannie Neil—none of them now living.

In the history of Bedford, N. H., published by the town in 1851, the name of John Boies appears as one of the 100 men who signed "The Association Test" in April, 1776, indicating his loyalty to the cause of the colonies. He was a soldier of the war of the Revolution, enlisting in March, 1777, in his sixteenth year, and his service record has been fully verified from authentic sources. On July 7, 1777, he was engaged at the battle of Hubbardston, and October 7, following, at the second battle of Stillwater, where he was wounded in the arm. The following winter he was with Washington's army at Valley Forge, and June 28, 1778, took part in the battle of Monmouth. In the summer and fall of 1779 he was with the expedition organized under the direction of Washington, and commanded by Gen. John Sullivan, against the six nations of Indians. This army did some severe fighting and marched over 700 miles through an almost unbroken wilderness, in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

In the fall of 1780 he was taken prisioner, put on board a vessel and carried first to Limerick, Ireland, and thence to Mill prison, Plymouth, England. With a number of others he made his escape, put out to sea in an open boat, and was picked up by a French vessel and carried to within sight of New York city, where the vessel was captured by the British man-of-war and the soldiers were transferred to the ship Essex, June 16, and committed to Mill prison again June 21, 1781. As a punishment for trying to escape, Mr. Boies was compelled to wear sixty pounds of iron sixty days. To vary the monotony of prison life he kept a diary and completed a book of sums. his return to America he was offered quite a large sum of money for these books-the memories of prison life—but he refused to part with them, and they were afterwards destroyed by fire in a school-house in Derryfield, now Manchester, N. H. After the surrender of Cornwallis in October, 1781, he was released and returned to America. A bronze tablet has been recently erected to his memory in the memorial room of the Skowhegan public library as a tribute to his worth. The tablet bears the inscription:

In memory of John Boies, a soldier of the Revolution, born in Boston, Mass., September 27, 1760, enlisted in the Sixth company, Third New Hampshire regulars, March, 1777—serving three years; imprisoned one year at Mill prison, Eng. As a token of affection and esteem this tablet is placed here by his grandchildren.

Fredrick Nelson Boies, father of subject, was born at Bedford, N. H., February 14, 1800, and had the limited common-school education of his day. He left home early, was a lumberman in Maine and Canada, and married at Portland, Conn., Elizabeth Lewis, January 6, 1831. They settled in Summit county, Ohio, Northampton township, in 1836-7, east of the Center, and bought 150 acres in the White Oaks woods, where Mr. Boies, who had come out the spring before, had built a log cabin. He cleared up his farm from the woods, and, although a small man, weighing but 130 pounds, was very tough and hardy, and could outwork most men. made a good pioneer, and about 1840 he moved to the center of Stowe, and remained there till 1844, when he bought and removed to a farm in Boston township, on which he lived the remaining active years of his life. He suffered from a stroke of apolexy seven years before death and was blind for seven years, and finally retired to Peninsula, where he died February 12, 1882. He and wife were members of the Episcopal church at Peninsula. In politics he was a democrat, served as justice of the peace three years and also as assessor. His children were Ann L., Herbert W., Helen, Mary P., Charles E. L., Fredrick C. and Effie L. He had two sons in the Civil war, viz:

Charles E. L., who was in company C, Twentieth regiment, Connecticut volunteer infantry, in the three years' service, and was color sergeant. Of the above-named children, Ann L. is the widow of Edmund H. Cole, who was a merchant in Peninsula. They had four children—three sons and one daughter living, of whom the eldest, Dr. A. M. Cole, is a prominent business man and banker in the city of Akron; he was educated in the high school at Peninsula, and a business college at Cleveland, and is a graduate of a medical college at Cleveland, and the College of Physicians & Surgeons in New York city. He married Miss Lucy Truscott. Herbert W. is general manager of the Star Drill Co. and the Silver Plate Co., at Akron, Ohio. Helen is the wife of Dr. W. N. Boerstler, of Peninsula; Fredrick C. is assistant manager of the Silver Plate Co. of Akron, and Effie L. is the wile of a Mr. Worthington, of Connecticut, who is a seaman.

Fredrick W. Boies, subject of this sketch, received a common-school education and enlisted August 20, 1862, at Peninsula, in company C, One Hundred and Fifteenth Ohio volunteer infantry, for three years or during the war, and was honorably discharged at Cleveland, Ohio, July 5, 1865. He was appointed coporal on the organization of the company and promoted sergeant for meritorious conduct. He was first stationed at Cincinnati, Ohio, Dayton, Ohio, and Murfreesboro, Tenn., on guard duty, and was detailed to the One Hundred and Fifteenth regimental band in 1864, and served as a musician until mustered out. was present at Dayton, Ohio, when George L. Waterman was shot by a mob. After the war, Mr. Boies returned to Peninsula and was engaged in the boat yard as boat carpenter three years; then bought a canal boat and ran it for six years and did a good business. company with Charles E. Boies, he bought a grist mill at Peninsula in 1878 and ran it three years, and then ran a meat market several years. He is now notary public and owns valuable real estate in Peninsula. In politics he is a democrat; he has served as township trustee and mayor of Peninsula. He is a member of the Episcopal church; a member of the Knights of Maccabees, and Good Templars, and of the George L. Waterman post, No. 272, G. A. R., at Peninsula, of which he has been commander and now is quartermaster.

LEXANDER BREWSTER, one of the oldest residents of Summit county, which has been his home for over eighty-five years, may certainly claim especial mention in this volume, as being one of the very few still living who have seen the county develop from a wilderness into the blooming agricultural district it now is, and its mineral resources utilized for the benefit of his fellow-men. He was born in Augusta, Oneida county, N. Y., September 10, 1808; came with his parents to Ohio in 1812, settling in Coventry township, where he lived the life of the pioneer, assisting his father to redeem from the forest a home. His early life was a busy one, and well he remembers of the game that abounded in the forest and of the numerous days of pleasure that he experienced hunting same. His education was limited to the common schools of that day. He remained under the parental roof until he arrived at his majority, having learned the carpenter trade with his father, which he followed only a short time, when he gave his attention to agricultural pursuits, following this vocation through his long life.

In the year 1848 coal was discovered underneath his land and he gave some attention to the mining of same in a limited way for a few years. In 1850 he with several others from that locality made an overland trip to California, and for a year had the experience of a miner and was one of the few that were fortunate in accumulating wealth rapidly, and during the year 1851 he returned to his home and resumed farming; also engaged in coal mining, which he has followed up to within a few years, since which time he has been enjoying the fruits of his earlier life. Mr. Brewster has been a careful business man and has prospered year by year, which has enabled him to enjoy comforts to-day which only the frugal may enjoy.

In 1865 a stock company was formed with a capital stock of $100,000, under the name of the Brewster Coal company, of which Mr. Brewster was made president, and his two sons, Alfred A. and Austin K., were named respectively general agent and secretary and treasurer—the company mining and handling between 200,000 and 300,000 tons of coal for years.

Mr. Brewster was married January 9, 1830, to Miss Margaret Ann Kinney, who also was a native of New York, and came to Summit county, Ohio, with her parents, in 1813, being reared to womanhood in Springfield township, that county. By this marriage five children were born, four of whom grew to manhood and womanhood, viz: Alfred A.; Austin K.; Louisa, wife of J. F. Meacham, and Mary Melissa, wife of Russell H. Kent. Mrs. Brewster died in November, 1854, and Mr. Brewster married in December, 1857, Mrs. Minerva A. (Darrow) Brown, who is a native of Cuyahoga county, Ohio, and died June 27, 1873. In September, 1877, Mr. Brewster married for his third wife Mrs. Lucy Jane Chamberlain, widow of John H. Chamberlain and daughter of Col. Justus Gale, who settled in Akron, in 1831, and became one of its substantial citizens.

Mr. Brewster has done his full share in aiding to dot the county over with the hives of industry that send forth their hum of machinery in producing numberless articles of improved labor-saving implements and utensils, and in spreading the benefits of the church and the school the land over also, and now, verging on his ninetieth year, can look back with complacency on his long and well-spent life.

OHN ALLMAN, of Streetsboro township, Portage county, Ohio, is one of the most respected citizens of the township, for the reason that he served in the Civil war in the defense of his adopted country, he having been born in Switzerland February 28, 1838, a son of Conrad and Annie Allman, whose name was originally spelled Alleman, which is equivalent to the French word, Allemand, meaning German, Switzerland being a country in which many of the continental languages are fluently spoken.

Conrad Allman, also a native of Switzerland, was a shoemaker by trade, and he and wife had born to them, in that little republic, eight children, who were named Conrad, Jacob, John, Ulrich, Frederick, Mary, Annie and Maria. In the spring of 1852, he, with his family, sailed from Antwerp for America, and after a voyage of seven stormy weeks landed in the city of New York in the month of June. The family all came at once to Ohio, and, passing through Cleveland, located in Stark county, where, the same year, the father, mother and two sons-Conrad and Jacob-died of cholera within two weeks. They were members of the German Reformed church, and were all noted for their probity and general excellence of character.

John Allman, who was but fourteen years of age when bereft of his parents, had already learned to read and write the German language, and was bound out to Andrew Sweihart, a farmer of Tuscarawas county, with whom he lived four years, and was further educated by attending school two months each winter—doing his farm work for Mr. Sweihart the remaining part of the year. He then worked awhile for other farmers, in the same neighborhood, and in the spring of 1859 came to Portage county, worked here at the same class of labor until August, 1861, when, with about twenty others, he set out from Ravenna as a teamster for the volunteer service in West Virginia, and in this capacity served with the Seventh Ohio volunteer regiment until March, 1862, when he returned to Portage county. In August, 1862, he enlisted, at Streetsboro, in the Ninth independent Ohio light artillery, under Capt. Wetmore, a West Point graduate, and with this company he served two years and ten months, being honorably discharged at Chattanooga, Tenn., in June 1865, the war having been brought to a close. The service, of the Ninth was principally rendered in the pursuit of guerrillas in Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, and Georgia, but was also in many skirmishes with the rebels, in which a large number of the members of the battery were either killed or captured. Mr. Allman, however, passed through the war unscathed, with the exception, hat he contracted rheumatism from exposure while on duty, and still suffers from that disorder. Ulrich, his brother, of the Nineteenth Ohio volunteer infantry, was badly wounded, nowever, at Shiloh.

Immediately after his return from the army, Mr. Allman was married in June, 1865, in Streetsboro, to Miss Mary L. Dewey, who was born in Kent, Portage county, June 22, 1840, a daughter of Henry Dewey, a well-to-do farmer of Franklin township, and a pioneer from Vermont, there being but three houses in Cleveland when he passed through that now magnificent city on his way to his former farm in Portage county. The children of Henry Dewey were named as follows: Jerusha, Clarissa, Eli, Mary Lovina, George L., Lydia, Laura L.—and Henry. Of these, George was a member of a Wisconsin regiment of volunteers, and was killed in battle during the Civil war. Henry Dewey, the father, had removed to Sank county, Wis., prior to the breaking out of the war, and there died at the age of eighty years.

After marriage, Mr. Allman rented his present farm for five years; he then, through his industry, was able to purchase 200 acres, and soon after, through further good management, was able to add forty acres, and now owns as fine a farm of 240 acres as there is in the township. To the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Allman have been born five children, viz: Carrie M., Orna Ernest, Byron Frederick (who died at the age of fifteen and a half years). Charles and Henry, Mr. and Mrs. Allman have given their children good practical education, being sent to the Streetsboro high school. In politics Mr. Allman is a republican and cast his first vote for Lincoln; fraternally he is an ex-member of A. H. Day post, No. 185, Grand Army of the Republic, at Kent. He has always been a hard-working man and still is, as far as his infirmity permits, and is an honored, straightforward, steady-going and useful citizen. Mrs. Allman was educated in the common schools of Sauk county, Wis., was also a student in the Reedsburg academy, and was a successful teacher in that county, and passed her girlhood days till she was nineteen years of age in Wisconsin. Her brothers and sisters are as follows: Jerusha, widow of Frederick Leonard, who was a soldier in the Civil war. His trade was that of a shoemaker and later in life he became a merchant. Mr. Allman came to America when but a lad, and was afterward bereft of his parents. He began life with not a dollar to his name, but by dint of industry, economy and enterprise, aided by his faithful wife, he stands today as a living example of what a man can do when he possesses that fortitude and perseverance which makes a successful life. He and wife expect to make Streetsboro township their future home, where they have erected a beautiful and comfortable dwelling modern in style, and where they are surrounded by many warm-hearted friends.

ENRY BRIGGS is one of the old soldiers of the Civil war and a respected citizen of Mantua Station, where he was reared to manhood, having come here with his parents when about twelve years of age. He was born in Arlington township, Bennington county, Vt., February 10, 1839, the son of Nelson and Jane (Seeley) Briggs, who were of English Puritan stock, and they became early settlers of northeastern Ohio, where they lived to rear their families and become well known.

Henry Briggs had just begun going to school when he left his native home and came to Ohio and here finished his common-school education in Mantua township during the winter seasons. He was reared a farmer and thus spent a very active life during the summer season, assisting his father upon the farm, where he remained until arriving at early manhood. At the breaking out of the war he enlisted on September 17, 1861, at Mantua, and was mustered into the United States army at Camp Chase, September 25, 1861, in company A, Forty-second regiment Ohio volunteer infantry, with Capt. F. A. William's company under Col. James A. Garfield, and forming a part of the Thirteenth army corps, which division participated in the following battles. Their first engagement was at Middle Creek, Ky., January 10, 1862, followed by the battle at Chickasaw Bayou, Arkansas Post, Thompson Hill, Raymond, Champion Hill, Big Black River Bridge; siege of Vicksburg, being in the first assault on May 19th, and was there until it closed on July 4, 1863; siege of Jackson; Opelousas, La., October 21, 1863, beside many hard skirmishes and doing guard and picket duty. He was honorably discharged at Columbus, Ohio, September 18, 1864, at the expiration of his enlistment, having served under Copt. J. L. Ross and Col. L. A. Sheldon.

Mr. Briggs considers his hardest campaign to be that of Vicksburg, and he suffered much from hardships and exposure during this time. The hardest battle that he engaged in was at Thompson Hill, where his comrade, G. G. Striker, was shot down by his side, and the hardest charge was at Vicksburg. Mr. Briggs was one of the brave and active soldiers, and during the three years' time that he served his country, he was neither taken prisoner nor wounded nor sick in hospital, and at all times answered to roll-call, unless out on detail duty. He participated in all the campaigns, marches, battles and skirmishes in which his regiment was engaged, and during the three years' time had only a two-weeks' furlough home. He was a faithful soldier and prompt and cheerful in the discharge of all his duties as such, and is now one of the many that are disabled from the exposure of army life, and the same has resulted in rheumatism, which makes life almost a burden.

Mr. Briggs returned to his earlier home at Mantua and the following year, on November 18, 1865, was united in marriage with Miss Sarah Roberts, who was born March 27, 1846, the daughter of Joseph P. and Lavina (Spencer) Roberts. The Roberts and the Spencers were of sterling Puritan New England stock and descended from old colonial families. Joseph Roberts, the father, was born at East Haddam, Conn., September 14, 1821, and when but a small boy his father died, he being thrown upon his own resources, and at the age of fourteen years came to Ohio, locating at Mantua, where he learned the black-smith's trade, and here married Miss Spencer, the daughter of Hiram Spencer.

The Spencers were of old Connecticut stock. Hiram Spencer, the maternal grandfather of Mrs. Briggs, was born in Suffield, Hartford county, Conn., June 13, 1805, and here married Elizabeth Grover, to whom was born one daughter, Levina. Mr. Spencer came to Ohio and settled in Mantua township as a pioneer, cleared up a farm from the woods and became a substantial farmer and good citizen. He died November 12, 1864, at Hiram, Ohio.

Henry Briggs, after his return from the war, settled on his present farm in Mantua township, where he lived an industrious life and is known as one of the good citizens of the vicinity, where he has lived nearly half a century. He is the parent of the following children, viz: Lena and Carl. Politically he is independent, though ever since the war has usually voted with the republican party, though during the campaign of '96 was an advocate of free silver. Socially he is a member of the G. A. R., Bentley post, Mantua Station, and holds the office of senior vice-commander. He has always been an industrious and respected citizen.

Mrs. Jane Seeley, the mother of Mr. Briggs, was first married to a Mr. Stone, and to this marriage two children were born: Malissa and Edward, and Edward was a soldier in the late war, serving in a Vermont regiment and was wounded at the battle of Gettysburg.

Nelson Briggs, father of our subject (Henry Briggs), was born in Vermont and was the son of Carmi Briggs. His children were Hiram, Nelson, Abel, Carmi, John, Esther, Mary and Carmi Briggs moved from Vermont to Michigan, where he became a pioneer in Eaton county, and cleared up a good farm from the woods and reared a large family, to whom he gave all a good start in life. His son, John, was a soldier in the Civil war, associated with a Michigan regiment. Briggs, the father, was born in Arlington, Vt., and there married Jane Seeley, and to this marriage were born the following children: Henry, Carmi, George, Eveline, Morton and Mr. Briggs left his native state and located in Mantua, Ohio, in 1852, where he resided until 1866, when he removed to Eaton county, Mich., and purchased land in the forest, and there lived until the age of eighty-four Politically he was a democrat and a much respected citizen.

During the battle on Kenesaw Mountain, he was ordered by Gen. McPherson to fire on a rebel flag-staff in the distance. Mr. Bower was sick with camp diarrhea, but was attending to his duty, when the blacksmith of the company stepped up and offered to release Mr. Bower; he had previously been numbered No. 1 on gun No. 2, of which Mr. Bower was in charge, and understood how to manage it. He loaded, fired, and fired a second time without wetting the sponge on the rammer, and the gun became hot, and he was cautioned to wet it. He said he would do so the next time, and rammed home the charge, but the gun exploded and tore off his right hand.

Mr. Bower then took his place and continued the firing. That summer this battery fired five tons, 832 pounds of ammunition. Bower thinks the battle of Shiloh to be the hardest battle in which he was engaged. battery was engaged but thirty minutes, having four men killed and twenty-eight wounded, and seventy-seven horses killed. hardest battle was on the 22d of July before Atlanta, fighting four hours, and firing 654 rounds of ammunition. His hardest march and campaign was marching four days and nights in succession, in the campaign after Hood, and having scanty rations, one time, on this campaign, lived seven days on parched corn and coffee. He was sick ten days in hospital with measles, in Camp Dennison, Ohio, in 1862, and was home on furlough thirty days. His hearing in the right ear was destroyed by the measles, and concussion from the discharge of the guns during the battles of the Atlanta campaign, and the hearing of the left ear much impaired.

After the war, Mr. Bower returned to Ohio and followed farming. He married, in Auburn, Geauga county, September 8, 1868, Sarah A. Nooney, who was born November 19, 1848, at Mantua, Portage county, a daughter of Hezekiah A. and Caroline (Johnson) Nooney. Hezekiah A. Nooney was the son of Capt. Berry and D. J. Thomas, both of Summit county and of the same company--made a daring escape at night from the court house at Columbia, Tenn., and after many adventures arrived several days later within the Union lines. They were aided by a negro they found chopping in the woods, who brought them a haversack of cornbread and pork, and assisted them to cross the Duck river by getting his master's horses after dark, on which they swam across. They traveled by night and slept in the woods during the day. They were hotly pursued in the night several times and narrowly escaped capture. The comrades who did not escape were taken to Andersonville and many died; some of them, on the return homeward, were blown up on the ill-fated Sultana on the Mississippi river after being exchanged. With the exception of four weeks' confinement in Woodraft's hospital in Cincinnati, and the brief period of his imprisonment, Mr. Cassidy was always at his post of duty, and this duty he performed bravely and cheerfully.

After the war Mr. Cassidy returned to Boston township, and married, May 2, 1871, Miss Elizabeth Hynton, of Independence, Cuyahoga county, Ohio, where she was born February 7, 1853, a daughter of John and Elizabeth Hynton, who were of Irish nativity. John Hynton came to America at least sixty years ago, directly after marriage, and settled in Independence, where he became a prosperous fariner, owning over 300 acres of land. Their children are Gilbert, James, Mildred, Hugh, Merwin and Marvin (twins), and Mary. Mr. and Mrs. Cassidy are both members of the Catholic church at Peninsula, in which he has been councilman for many years. EONARD S. CORBETT, one of the oldest and most respected citizens of Palmyra township, Portage county, Ohio, was born in Worcester, Mass., March 6, 1819, a son of Chiron and Sarah (Bosworth) Corbett, who came to Ohio in 1822 and settled about three-quarters of a mile west of the now present center of Palmyra township, then a dense wilderness.

After clearing up his farm, Chiron Corbett engaged in the hotel business at Palmyra for ten years, and also conducted a general store. To his marriage with Miss Bosworth were born twelve children, of whom ten reached the age of maturity, but of these three only now survive, viz: Charles, Leonard S. and Of the other nine, two died in Abijah. infancy, and the deceased seven who attained maturity were named, in order of birth, Alonzo; Julia, the wife of C. P. Gilbert; Jane, wife of John Lewis; Waldo; Artemon; Olive, wife of Stephen Trowbridge, and Ora. The father of this family died in 1842 and the mother in 1845, both in the faith of the Methodist church.

Nathaniel Corbett, father of Chiron, also a native of Massachusetts, was one the earliest settlers of Portage county, and was a manufacturer of cotton goods, owned a large factory, and was also a manufacturer of shoes. To his marriage with Miss Huldah Holbrook were born eight children, named Chiron, Nathaniel, Moses, Stephen, Lucy (who was married to John Rider), Julia (wife of Naham Smith), Ruth (wife of Nelson Westover) and Nancy, wife of Joseph Shirtliff. Nathaniel Corbett and wife were most highly respected residents of the township and both died in 1834.

Leonard S. Corbett received as good an education as the pioneer schools of his youthful days afforded. In his early 'teens he assisted in the cultivation of the home farm, but, at the same time, was noted for his skill as a hunter, and it is reported of him that he has killed more deer, foxes and wild turkeys than any youth whoever lived in Portage county, and it is further stated that he killed, after he reached his majority, the last wild deer, wild fox and wild turkey known to exist in Palmyra township.

At the age of twenty-one years, Leonard S. Corbett started farming life on his personal account, and in November, 1844, married Miss Louisa Lewis, daughter of John and Polly (Bacon) Lewis, which marriage was blessed with six children, one of whom died in infancy; of the survivors, E. B. Corbett married Maria Jewell; Ellen is the wife of John Robinson; Waldo married Mertie Clark, and Charles and Artimon are still under the parental roof. 1852, Mr. Corbett settled on his present farm, which is now one of the best in Palmyra town-Here Mr. Corbet had the misfortune to lose his wife, June 4, 1870, her age being forty-nine years. The parents of this lady were natives of Connecticut, and in his early life the father was a school teacher, but on coming to Portage county, Ohio, became a farmer. To his marriage with Miss Polly Bacon, daughter of William and Polly (Thurber) Bacon, were born Mrs. Corbett; Mary, wife of Johnson Bigelow; Emeline, wife of Thomas Jones; Edward and Frances, all now deceased, as are also the parents, who passed their declining days in Indiana.

Mr. Corbett has passed nearly all his life in farming, but has also been largely engaged in the live stock trade, and for fifteen years in the butchering business. He has always been an honored citizen and has served as constable and township trustee, and in his ripe years has not a peer in the esteem of his fellowtownsmen.

REDERIC J. CRANE, senior member of the firm of Crane Brothers of Garrettsville, was born in Shalersville township on April 13, 1848, being the son of Edward Manley Crane. He remained with his parents on the home farm until he attained his majority, performing such work as usually falls to the lot of farmers' boys. He received his education in the district schools, and the academy, finishing with a two years' course at Hiram college.

Thus equipped with a good business education, at the age of twenty-one he went to Illinois, where for some months he engaged in teaching school in the town of Hamilton, Hancock county. Returning to Ohio, he accepted a position as clerk in the store of his elder brothers, with whom he remained eight years, performing all the duties of his position to the entire satisfaction of his employers. After quitting the service of his brothers he became traveling salesman for the Wight & Daniels Engraving Co., of Garrettsville. He remained with this company two years, during which time he met with such marked success, and practiced such economy, that he was enabled to purchase the interest of his brother, A. E. Crane, in the firm of Crane Brothers, by which purchase he became its junior member.

Mr. Crane has been twice married. first marriage was in May, 1880, to Ella Josephine Pratt, daughter of Henry and Abigail Pratt. She was born in Trumbull county, but grew to womanhood in Ashtabula county. She died in 1890, leaving one daughter, Georgie. second marriage occurred in Pueblo, Colo., in June, 1895, when Charlotte A., daughter of C. E. Olin, became his wife. She was born in Pueblo, where her father is a prominent business man. C. E. Olin is a native of the state of New York. Mr. Crane has given his attention to the interests of the firm of which he is a member, and its success proves him to be an able business man. He is a man of character and is one of the most popular citizens of Garrettsville. In politics he is a stanch republican. He has held several municipal offices.

Elton P. Crane, junior member of the firm of Crane Brothers of Garrettsville, was born in Shalersville township on June 26, 1854. He lived on the home place, aiding in the general work of the farm, enjoying all the advantages and enduring all the disadvantages of country life, here laying the foundation of a character which was to be appreciated in after years. His education was obtained mainly in the common schools of the neighborbood. He also for a time attended Hiram college. At the age of eighteen he left home and became a clerk in the store of his brothers.

After some time spent as clerk he succeeded his brother, C. M. Crane, thus becoming a member of the firm. As much of the success of the firm is due to his integrity of character as to his business qualifications. On the 30th of April, 1890, Mr. Crane was united in marriage with Alma Baldwin, daughter of Henry Baldwin. Mrs. Crane was born in Cooperstown, Pa., and at the time of her marriage was a resident of Cleveland. To the union of Mr. and Mrs. Crane have been born two children: Marguerite, who died in infancy, and Helen A.

In politics Mr. Crane is a republican, being a firm believer in the principles advocated by his party and a stalwart supporter of its policies, and is a member of the council of Garrettsville. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, being an active worker, and holds membership in Garrettsville lodge, No. 246, F. & A. M.; Silver Creek chapter, No. 144, R. A. M.; Warren commandery, No. 29, Knigts Templar, and he and his wife are members of Crescent chapter, No. 7, O. E. S. Mr. Crane is also a member of I. O. O. F. and of I. O. F.

Notwithstanding the business opportunities he enjoyed while clerking in the store of his brothers, he may be said to have succeeded in making his own way in life. He lives on Maple avenue, where he enjoys all the comforts of a pleasant home.

HARLES CRAWFORD, of Mantua Center, was born in Shalersville township, Portage county, January 1, 1845, the son of James and Ruth (Williams) Crawford, who were of Scotch-Irish ancestry. The father was born at Hartford, Washington county, N. Y., where he grew to manhood and in early life learned the shoemaker's trade. It was while living there that he married Ruth Williams, and to this union were born Amos, Robert, Moses, Sarah, Levi, Sophronia, Cornelia, Benjamin, Charles, William H. and Mary J.

Mr. Crawford moved to Ohio and settled first at Cleveland and later at Shalersville, Ohio, and subsequently became a citizen of Mantua Center, where he died at the venerable age of eighty-four years. He was a member of the Methodist church, and during life was a stanch republican, raising a large family of patriotic sons, five of whom served in the late war. Robert was a private in company A, One-Hundred and Third regiment, Ohio volunteers, enlisting in the three years' service; Moses was a private in a Michigan battery, while Levi also served in a Michigan regiment for three years, and his brother William H. was in the same company and regiment.

Charles Crawford, the subject of this memoir, received a common-school education and in early life learned the shoemaker's trade, and when but eighteen years of age enlisted, December 15, 1862, at Cleveland, Ohio, in company I, One Hundred and Twenty-eighth regiment, Ohio volunteer infantry, but was soon transferred to company A, of the same regiment, under Capt. Hayes, his first captain being Capt. McDonnell. He served until he was honorably discharged at Camp Chase, Columbus, Ohio, several months after the close of the war, on December 13, 1865, having been in active service from the time he was mustered in until he was mustered out. His services were largely rendered in guarding prisoners at Johnson's Island, throughout his entire enlistment. During the eighteen months that he served in guarding the prisoners he can safely vouch for the truth that the Confederate prisoners received just as good treatment as did the guards. They were furnished fresh beef, vegetables, clothing, fuel and comfortable barracks. The prisoners were mostly rebel officers, and many of their wives came to Sandusky and were permitted to visit their husbands in the presence of a guard, also many things of comfort were furnished the prisoners by their southern friends, and all reached each party to whom addressed safely.

Mr. Crawford describes the winter of 1863-64 as a very cold one, which caused much suffering of the guards, who were exposed to inclement weather, and early in the spring following he was taken with typlicid fever, and just as he was recovering from same, he was detailed for service at Lima, Ohio, with ninety-nine others, and they were sent immediately to that city for the purpose of keeping the rebel sympathizers of that district from resisting the draft. On his return from this detailed service, he was sick in the hospital at Johnson's Island some three weeks, when he was granted a seven-day furlough, which was renewed for three months, during which time he regained his health and reported back to his regiment ready for service. He was a large, robust man, weighing 180 pounds, at the time of taking sick, and upon partial recovery only weighed ninety pounds, and for years following was of slender build, and has never regained his former weight, his average weight being now 140 pounds.

Mr. Crawford, like many other men that went into the service with the bloom of health upon their cheeks, came home an invalid, and has ever since experienced poor health. For a time his eyesight was bad and now, for many years, he has been almost blind, and it is more than likely that he will lose his sight entirely.

Mr. Crawford, soon after returning from the war, removed to Bronson, Branch county, Mich., where he remained sometime, and being of an industrious turn, worked at anything he could find to do, and after a short sojourn here he returned to Mantau Center and married Miss Jennie Graham, of Tiffin, Ohio. Immediately after marriage Mr. Crawford became a permanent resident at Mantau, where he began working at the carpenter's trade, which he followed steadily until his failing eyesight compelled him to change his occupation. He and the parents wife are of one son, Arthur Graham Crawford, a musician and resident of

Mr. Crawford has always been industrious and straightforward, and after his failing eyesight caused him to quit his trade he sold pianos and organs for several years, but he is now totally disabled from following any vocation. Mrs. Crawford, subject's first wife, died April 27, 1889, and he married for his second wife Miss Alice Carleton, daughter of Gilbert and Huldah (Parker) Carleton.

OMFORT W. A. CUMMINGS, M. D., of Atwater, Portage county, Ohio, is a native of Newstead township, Erie county, N. Y., was born July 23, 1864, and is a son of Morris Burt and Deborah Rose (Brace) Cummings, the former of whom was born in Erie county, N. Y., February 17, 1835, and the latter in Montgomery, Kane county, Ill., February, 9, 1835.

Morris Burt Cummings was educated in the Parker union school of his native town of Newstead, N. Y., and lived thereafter on his father's farm until his marriage, in 1858, to Miss Brace, a daughter of Edmund and Sarah (Bennett) Brace, natives of York state, when he purchased a farm of sixty acres adjoining his father's, which also comprised sixty acres, and continued to operate both farms in conjunction. Mrs. Deborah Rose Cummings was a highly educated lady and for several years taught in the common schools, as well as the high schools of Illinois. To Mr. and Mrs. Cummings were born eight children, viz: George Edmund, now aged thirty-eight years; Alsa Millie, thirty-six; Morris Milton, thirtyfour; Comfort W. A., thirty-two; Mary Virginia (Mrs. John Edgar), thirty; Josiah Newton, twenty-six; Everett Darius, twenty-two, and Helen May (Mrs. O. Owens), twenty. The mother of these children was called away April 7, 1896, a member of the Baptist church, in which she reared her family, who have never ceased to mourn her loss.

Dr. Comfort William Allen Cummings, our subject, received his earlier education in the Parker union school of his native village, later took a short-hand course in Clark & Johnson's business college at Erie, N. Y., and a course in Bryant & Stratton's college. next worked on his parents' farm for about five years, reading medicine, meanwhile, with Dr. J. D. McPherson, of Akron, N. Y. Leaving the farm, he was employed a year in the freight-house of the Erie Railroad company at Corning, N. Y., whence he came to Cleveland, Ohio, and entered the Cleveland Medical college, studying at the same time under Dr. G. J. Jones in private, and at the close of three years was graduated in the spring of 1895. After leaving college, he returned home for a short time, and then came back to Ohio and settled in Atwater, where he eretted an office building and is now enjoying a remuner-The first marriage of the docative practice. took place in June, 1894, to Miss Maggie Terriff, of Canada, who was early called from his side. April 21, 1896, he married, in Atwater, Miss Jettie Goodman, daughter of E. S. and Emma Goodman, both natives of the Buckeye state. Mrs. Jettie Cummings was born in Atwater May 24, 1873, and was educated in the village schools, then at the Ravenna high school, and finished her studies at the Western Reserve college for ladies at Cleveland, as is thus, as will be seen, a highly accomplished lady. The doctor is a member of the Knights of Pythias lodge at Atwater, and examining physician of Atwater Tent, Ladies of Maccabees. He is a republican in politics, and a member of the Baptist church of his former home; his wife is a member of the Congregational church. The doctor is well appreciated in Atwater as a physician, and in social circles he and wife enjoy the highest position possible.

ASSIUS MANLEY CRANE, of Garrettsville, was born in Shalersville, Portage county, Ohio, September 29, 1844; lived on his home farm until fifteen years of age, attending meanwhile the district school and local academy, and one term at Hiram college. As he was then of rather frail physique, it was thought it were better for him not to undertake the hardships of farm life, and in consequence of this decision he entered the store of his uncle, H. M. Streator, at Drakesburg, in 1861, and clerked seven years, and then clerked for a few months in Cleveland. His next step was to embark in business in partnership with his brother, Arthur E., and together they purchased the general store of Beecher & King, in Garrettsville, and at that time the firm of Crane Bros. sprang into existence. frame building in which the business had heretofore been conducted was demolished, and the present brick structure erected, and here a flourishing trade was done by the two founders of the firm until the withdrawal of Arthur E. Crane and the entrance of a younger brother, Fred C. Crane, when the business was continued, the firm-style remaining intact.

In 1885, subject also withdrew, selling his interest to Elton P. Crane, so that the firm name has not yet been changed. Since withdrawing from trade, our subject has not entered into any other active business pursuit, but, nevertheless, has found ample desultory employment to keep his mind actively at work.

December 29, 1870, Cassius M. Crane married Marcella S. Bennett, daughter of Dr. P. C. Bennett, of Freedom. Of the three children that are living of the four that have blessed this marriage (one having died in infancy), Evalyn is under the parental roof, Lucy B. is the wife of C. W. S. Wilgus, and Ralph C. is still with his parents.

In his societary relations Mr. Crane has reached the exalted degree of Thirty-two in Masonry, and for two terms has presided as worshipful master of lodge No. 246, F. & A. M., of Garrettsville. In politics, Mr. Crane is active as a local republican, guarding with jealous care the interests of his party. For fifteen years he has been a member of the school board, has also done excellent work as a councilman, and has represented his party in several conventions. He is a gentleman of courteous manners and affability, and is a worthy representative of his ancestors, of whom a history will be found on another page, under the head of the Crane Family.

HARLES DUNCAN, an ex-soldier of the Civil war, and now a respected citizen of Mantua Station, Portage county, Ohio, was born in Red Creek, Wayne county, N. Y., August 31, 1844, a son of James and Mahala Duncan.

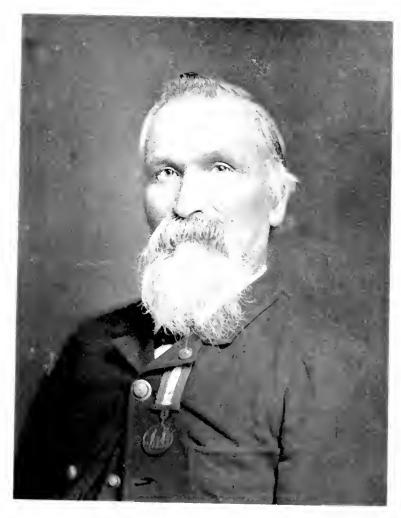

James Duncan, father of Charles, was born in Scotland in 1799, was taught blacksmithing under the good old thorough Scotch methods, and at the age of twenty-seven years came to the United States, located in Troy, N. Y., where he worked at his trade for many years in the Troy Mills, his specialty being ax-making, and later moved to Red Creek. He married a widow, Miss Mahala Withington, who bore the maiden name of Williams, and who was of Puritan stock, and whose father was a soldier in the war of 1812. The children born to this marriage were named Mahala, James, Phebe, Charles, Francis, Maryette and Henry. The father of this family was called to rest in Red Creek, at about the age of seventy-seven years, dying in the faith of the Presbyterian church.

Charles Duncan was taught blacksmithing by his father and worked at his trade until August 12, 1862, when he enlisted, at Red Creek, in company G, One Hundred and Thirty-eighth New York volunteer infantry, but was soon afterward transferred to the Ninth New York heavy artillery, Sixth army corps, Third division, and Third brigade, under Col. William A. Seward, in which he served until honorably discharged in July, 1865, at Syracuse, N. Y., having been mustered out of the United States service at Washington, D. C. At the battle of Cedar Creek his battery served as infantry, and also in the same capacity as reserves, on the field at Cold Harbor; also as reserves in front of Petersburg and at Appointation. part in many hard marches, especially in the valley of the Shenandoah, under Gen. Phil. Sheridan. For two months he was confined in camp hospital, for two months in Douglas hospital at Washington, D. C., and for three months on David island, in the East river, N. C., and after the war returned to Red Creek and resumed his trade.

September 12, 1876, Mr. Duncan married, at Sterling, N. Y., Miss Isabella Van Patten, daughter of Christian C. Van Patten, and in 1877 came to Ohio and settled at Mantua Station, Portage county, where he has ever since successfully followed his trade. To the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Duncan has been born one child, Ward C., now a youth of great promise. Mr. Duncan is a member of Bentley post, No. 294, Grand Army of the Republic, at Mantua Station, in which he has held the offices of quartermaster and senior vice-commander. He is a straightforward, industrious, honest man.

LAVIUS JOSEPHUS DANIELS, a prominent business man of Garretts-ville, and one of the principal stock-holders of the First National bank, is a native of Freedon township, Portage county. Ohio, was born April 14, 1835, and is of Scotch descent, the name having been originally spelled Mac Daniels.

The first members of the Daniels family to come to America settled in the New England colonies, and Reuben Daniels, great-grandfather of subject, was a patriot of the Revolutionary war. Reuben Daniels, grandfather of subject, was born in Massachusetts, but early came to Ohio, and after passing a short time in Cleveland, settled in the forests of Freedom township, Portage county, where he farmed until well advanced in life, when he retired to Garrettsville, where, at the age of eighty-five vears, he met an accidental death on a railroad. He had been made a Freemason in Massachusetts, and when Garrettsville lodge, No. 240, F. & A. M., was chartered, he was chosen its first worshipful master. He was an earnest Christian and devoted to the Congregation...! church. In his early days, also, he had been captain of a company of militia and was usually addressed as Capt. Daniels. He reared a family of seven sons and two daughters, of whom Franklin S., father of Flavius J., the subject, was the eldest.

Franklin S. Daniels was born in Massachu-He was an adept in carpentry, joining and millwrighting, which trades he followed through life. He married Miss Ann Robinson, a native of Saratoga, N. Y., and in 1846 removed from his home place in Freedom township to Garrettsville, and here met his untimely end by a fall from a building on which he was working. There were five children born to his marriage, of whom four lived to maturity, viz: Flavius J. and Henry F., of Garrettsville, and Reuben O. and Birdsy G., of Bledsoe county, Tenn. Mr. Daniels was a whig in politics and was very active in local affairs; was progressive and enterprising, and accumulated a competency, and his tragic end was a source of deep regret to the community, in which he was held in high respect.

Flavius J. Daniels, it will have been seen, was eleven years of age when his parents settled in Garrettsville. Here he attended school and also learned the blacksmith's trade, and on the day he attained his majority left home with a party bound for California, driving a team in compensation for his expenses, as he had no money. At Council Bluffs, Iowa, however, he came to a halt, while the party proceeded on its way. Shortly afterward he crossed the country to Omaha, Neb., where he erected the fifth building in the place and engaged at his trade, but soon sold out and joined a party headed by Gov. Cummings, and platted a town thirty miles north of Omaha, which town was christened Cummings City, but it never flourished, although Mr. Daniels acted an entire season as an immigration He was next employed by Gov. Cummings, in company with others, to explore the upper Missouri river for about 500 miles, and to prospect for coal, etc., and, at the farthest point attained, platted another town. On their way back the whole party came near freezing to death, and suffered intensely from hunger, the provisions they had "cached" on the way up having been untraceable in the deep snow. At an abandoned Indian village, they were compelled to eat the raw-hides used in the construction of tepees, otherwise starvation would have been their fate; and the weather was so bitterly cold that it was necessary to use switches on the legs of some of the party to prevent their lying down and freezing to death.

In the spring of 1859 Mr. Daniels started from Omaha with a party for Pike's Peak, but at Fort Laramie returning prospectors discouraged further advance, and the party started for the Pacific coast. On reaching Sublitt's cut-off, about September 1, some of the men were inclined to go to Oregon and some to California, and Mr. Daniels decided his destination by tossing up a copper, the result favoring California. He walked the entire distance, with the exception of one day's ride, as far as Honey Lake valley, where he worked two months at anything he could find to do, and then found employment with a quartz mining company, and worked in a tunnel, 600 feet under ground, at $40 per month, for a considerable time, but was later promoted to to be foreman of the quartz mill, at $125 per month. He remained in this position until 1862, and then went to San Francisco, where there had just been erected some sugar refineries, and there engaged with a Capt. Johnson to go to Honolulu to purchase a cargo of sugar. But the vessel chartered was an old hulk, became water-logged, and was towed into port and there condemned. Mr. Daniels remained on the island until another vessel was dispatched for him, and on his return to San Francisco vowed never to make another ocean voyage.

Mr. Daniels now again went to the mountains to engage in mining, and was at Sacramento when the first ground was broken for the Central Pacific railroad. He had previously made the acquaintance of Leland Standford and Charles Crocker, who now urged him to join them in this great enterprise, but he lacked the nerve to invest; in fact, only five men could be induced to take stock, but they all became millionaires. Daniels, however, agreed to meet his friends in Nevada, when the road should reach that state, and accordingly went to what was called Humboldt City, which had a population of about 500, but the inhabitants soon after nearly all left. Mr. Daniels, however, decided to remain and await the coming of the railroad, which was now practically assured, being backed by the United States government. He was commissioned postmaster, and also kept a trading post; he likewise made claim of a fine water privilege, which he thought would be of value to the railroad company. Finally the road reached this point, and Messrs. Standford and Crocker called on Mr. Daniels, and authorized him to buy all the hay he could find in the vicinity. for which they allowed him a profit of $10 per Stages were now coming into the city from various directions, bringing in large quantities of mail matter, of which Mr. Daniels took charge under his commission as postmaster, but for handling these mails he never received any compensation from the govern-Large sums of money were deposited with Mr. Daniels for safe keeping, and as there were no vaults, nor safes in the country, he cut a hole in the floor of his dwelling and secreted the gold, which frequently amounted to $10,000 at a single deposit. As the railroad company employed 2,500 hands, and travelers became numerous, the company induced Mr. Daniels to erect an eating-house, and this he conducted seven years, realizing a competency.

In February, 1870, Mr. Daniels returned to Garrettsville and was united in marriage with Miss Frankie Patterson, daughter of R. E. Patterson, whom he took to his western home. But the health of this lady was frail, and after three years' residence with her in the west, Mr. Daniels returned to Garrettsville, and this has since been his home. He had the misfortune of losing his wife in 1885; she left three children, viz: Maud, wife of P. C. Davis; Zella, a school-teacher, and Gail, a school-teacher. The second marriage of Mr. Daniels took place, in 1887, to Mrs. Carrie E. Ranney, daughter of John T. Hunt.

Mr. Daniels is one of the most substantial men of Portage county, and, as a director of the First National bank, is a member of the discount committee. In politics he is a stanch republican, and was very active in advancing the interests of his party while in the west, and has also filled a number of local offices in Garrettsville, Ohio. Fraternally, he is a Knight Templar. He owns one of the most pleasant residences in Garrettsville, where he extends a most gracious hospitality to his large circle of social acquaintances.

RWIN S. DAVIS, one of the old soldiers of the Civil war and a respected citizen of Northfield township, Summit county, Ohio, was born February 26, 1845, in Steuben county, N. Y., at Great Bend, a son of Stephen A. and Amanda (Kellogg) Davis. Erwin S. received a common education and enlisted, at the early age of nineteen years. He ran away from home at Andover, N. Y., with his cousin, Albert Davis, having enlisted in the Sixteenth heavy artillery for three years, or during the war, but was transferred, at City Point, Va., to the New York mounted rifles. His uncle, Hale Davis, followed them to City Point, but was unable to secure their release. Mr. Davis was then enrolled in company K, Capt. D. C. Ellis, provisional New York cavalry, First regiment dragoons, and was honorably discharged November 29, 1865, at City Point, Va. was in the battles of the Wilderness, ten days' fight, battles in front of Petersburg, and was in the raid on the Weldon R. R. He was shot in the left arm and in the upper part of the right arm at the battle of the Wilderness, and the bullet is still imbeded in the flesh. He also received a slight flesh wound in the face, but was not in hospital, except for a few hours, after receiving this wound. Mr. Davis was in all the battles and skirmishes in which his regiment took part and was always active and cheerful in the discharge of his duties.

After the war Mr. Davis returned to New York, but came to Summit county, Ohio, in 1868, and married, at Boston, July 5, 1870, Miss Elizabeth J. Odekirk, who was born in Boston, Ohio, May 17, 1854, a daughter of Daniel and Jane Odekirk. After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Davis settled at Macedonia, Ohio, where he still resides. Mr. Davis learned, when young, the blacksmith's trade, but since he came to Ohio has been engaged in farming; for the past seventeen years has been handling farm machinery, and has traveled extensively in this business. Mr. and Mrs. Davis are the parents of two children, Lailah B., and Montville C. Mrs. Davis is a member of the Congregational church, and in politics Mr. Davis is a republican, and has been constable for several years as well as a notary public. He is a member of Royal Dunham post, No. 177, G. A. R., at Bedford, Ohio, and is a straightforward and respected business man.

Ebenezer Davis, grandfather of subject, was a farmer of Vermont, and his son, Stephen

A., father of subject, was born in that state. The latter enlisted, in 1863, aged fifty-five years, in a New York regiment, for the three year's service. He was in several battles, and at a battle in Chickahominy Swamp he carried his wounded comrade, Matt Colmer, from the field, and injured himself so much that he died from the effects eleven weeks after, in 1864. He was a strong, rugged man, and owned a good farm. His children were Erwin S., Lemuel, Sophronia, Clarissa, Martha and Ida. Lemuel was also a soldier in the Civil war, going out on the last call.

ninety-six acres, thence removed to Palmyra township, Portage county, where he bought 200 acres, known as the John D. Jones farm, where he passed the remainder of his life. To his marriage to Susan Jones, daughter of the owner of this farm—John D. Jones—were born nine children, the surviving five of whom are John, who resides in Deerfield, Ohio; Margaret, wife of Samuel Jones, of Palmyra; Rachael, unmarried; Susan, wife of James Medley, of Mahoning county, and Frank L., the subject of this biographical notice. deceased four were Elizabeth, wife of John G. Carson; Mary, wife of John D. Jones, and two who died in infancy. Frank J. Davis was well educated in the common schools of Palmyra, was passed to the high school, and finished his education at the latter in 1875. His manual training was on the home farm, of which he became superintendent at the death of his father, and then for a year worked in a saw-mill. He was married, September 27, 1878, to Miss Hattie Hiser, daughter of John and Sarah A. (Glass) Hiser, and this union has been blessed with two sons—Harry J. and Frank Alton. his marriage Mr. Davis lived on the old homestead until January, 1881, when he settled in Palmyra, and for a year was engaged in the livery and general delivery business, and then became an auctioneer and also entered into general merchandizing two years later, in both of which he was profitably engaged eight years, having gained his experience in the latter branch as a clerk in the store of O. B. Mason, under whom he had been employed two years, from 1882 to 1884, when he entered upon the mercantile trade. At the end of his six years' business experience, Mr. Davis sold out to A. Crookes, and attended to his mother's farm interests until her death, after which he engaged in farming on his own account for three years on the home farm, but holding his residence at Diamond, Ohio.

In politics Mr. Davis is a republican, and is extremely popular with his party. In 1895 he was the unanimous choice of his friends in Palmyra township as its candidate for sheriff of Portage county, but withdrew from the race, resigning in favor of the prior incumbent, Mr. Long. In the spring of 1897, Mr. Davis resumed his mercantile trade in Diamond, and the same year was appointed postmaster under President McKinley. He and family are members of the Disciples' church in Diamond, in which he is a deacon, as well as assistant superintendent of the Sunday-school.

LIVER A. DAVIS, a respected agriculturist of Boston township, Summit county, Ohio, and ex-prisoner of the Civil war, was born in Cuyahoga county, Ohio, February 20, 1828, a son of Alvin and Levina (Seeley) Davis, who descended from old colonial ancestry of New York state. He was reared to farming, and was a canal boat builder when a young man. He enlisted August 21, 1862, at Ada, Hardin county, Ohio, in the One Hundred and Eighteenth regiment Ohio volunteer infantry, to serve three years, or during the war, and was honorably discharged at Columbus, Ohio, June 9, 1865. He was in the battles of Mossy Creek, Tenn., and on the famous Atlanta campaign, where his regiment was under fire two months and five days. He was in the battles of Resaca, Dalton, Kenesaw Mountain, and in the battle of Atlanta, as well as in many hard fought skirmishes, too numerous to mention. After the Atlanta campaign his regiment followed Hood, and he was captured, in the fall of 1864, near Cedar Bluff, while foraging, and taken to Cahaba, Ala., and kept in prison four months and twenty days. prison was an old cotton warehouse, and open in the top. The rations were one pint of corn meal, ground cob and all, and a very small piece of very poor beef, and under these conditions the prisoners were reduced to almost skeletons, and many died. Oliver A. Davis is a free silver democrat in politics and is a member of George L. Waterman post, G. A. R., Peninsula, Ohio, of which he is sergeant. He was a faithful soldier, and although weakened by his prison life is an industrious and hard-working man, and is highly esteemed for his upright character and usefulness as a citizen.

Alvin Davis, the father of Oliver A., was born in Broome county, N. Y., where he grew to manhood, and while yet in early life came west and settled in Bedford township, Cuyahoga county, where he lived a pioneer He, like many other pioneers, came with limited means, and thus experiencing all the privations of life in a new country. He soon provided himself with a good farm, which he partly cleared from the forest, being an industrious working man of that day. He was married to Miss Lavina Seeley, who bore him four sons and two daughters, viz: Ephraim, Alvin, Oliver A., William, Lucretia, and Julia. Mr. Davis was quite a political worker, and in the fall of 1836, while celebrating an election in Bedford, Ohio, was killed by a premature discharge of a cannon. He was a greatly respected citizen throughout the township and county. Three of his sons, Alvin, Oliver A. and William, did service in the late war-Alvin in the three years' service; Oliver A., who is spoken of in the first paragrah, and William, who was in an Ohio regiment in the 100 days' After the death of Mr. Davis, Mrs. Davis was married to William Loffin, and to them were born two children, Earlyhigh and Willis C., who both served in an Ohio regiment for three years, showing the patriotic spirit of the family.

AMUEL D. DETWEILER, of West Richfield, Ohio, one of the soldiers of the Civil war and a respected citizen, was born December 4, 1834, in Bucks county, Pa., Hilltown township, a son of John and Anna (Detweiler) Detweiler, who descended from an old colonial Pennsylvania family of German origin.

Samuel D. Detweiler received a commonschool education, was reared to farming and milling, and came to Ohio about 1857, and worked in Coshocton and Holmes counties several years. He enlisted from Holmes county in the summer of 1861, in company B, Sixteenth Ohio volunteer infantry, and was mustered in at Camp Dennison, Ohio, for three years, or during the war, and served until honorably discharged at Camp Chase October 31, 1864, a period of over three years and three months. January 19, 1862, the regiment reached Mill Springs just at the close of the battle. On March 12 a slight skirmish took place at Cumberland Gap. March 22, the regiment was merged with the Forty-second Ohio and the Twenty-second Kentucky, forming the Twenty-sixth brigade of the Seventh division of the army of the Ohio, under the command of Brigadier-Gen. George W. Morgan. On April 28 another reconnoissance was made to the top of Cumberland Mountain in the vicinity of Cumberland Gap-arriving at the top at 8 A. M. in a heavy fog, when a brisk fight occurred. During the month of May the rebels abandoned their position at Cumberland Gap, and the Sixteenth regiment was the first Union regiment to enter the stronghold. From this time until August 3, the troops were engaged in strengthening their position, drilling, fighting and frequently skirmishing. August 6, at a battle at Tazewell, Tenn., the entire division was obliged to retreat, and was much harassed with frequent skirmishes on the way to Manchester, Ky., and suffered greatly for rest and food-having nothing to eat except ears of corn gathered from the fields, and pumpkins which they roasted and ate without salt. They had no water except that from stagnant pools, and they lived by foraging. On October 3, they arrived at Greensburg, Ky., worn out, ragged and shoeless, having been sixteen days on this march of more than 250 December 20, the regiment united miles. with Sherman's command and went on transports to the siege of Vicksburg, Miss., and on the 26th was in the assault on Chickasaw Bayou, where the regiment lost 311 men and many officers killed, wounded and missing. At Thompson Hill, over 400 of the Union forces were taken prisoners, with Mr. Detweiler among them. He was taken to Vicksburg prison, confined during the winter, and suffered greatly for food, the rations being but a little mule meal, and corn, ground cob and all, which was dumped on a few rails in the prison pen, and the prison was very fonl. From here Mr. Detweiler was taken to Pearl River, Jackson, Miss., and confined in a covered bridge during the siege of that city, where they nearly starved until the last of May, and then were paroled and sent to New Orleans by water, being obliged to row their own boats. In the spring of 1863, Mr. Detweiler was started for St. Louis, Mo., with the others, but they all left the trains in Ohio and went home, remained until August, 1863, and then rejoined the regiment in Louisiana. He was in the Red River expedition under Banks, was in several skirmishes near Alexandria, assisted to build the dam across Red River at that place, and then went to the mouth of the river, where the regiment stacked arms, having been in many hard-fought battles and skirmishes. Mr. Detweiler was always an active soldier, was not sick in hospital, and was in all the battles, campaigns, marches and skirmishes in which his regiment took part, except while a prisoner, and he did his full duty promptly and cheerfully and endured the hardships of a soldier's life with fortitude.

After the war, Mr. Detweiler returned to Holmes county, Ohio, and went thence to Alma, Mich., in 1868, and ran a flour-mill for twelve years, and while there married, January 28, 1877, Miss Laura Gargett, who was born on her parents' farm in Medina county, a daughter of John and Mary (Detweiler) Gar-In 1881 Mr. Detweiler came to his gett. present place, and engaged in farming and The children are Lella, John and Leah. In politics Mr. Detweiler is a republican, and is also a member of Goldwood post, G. A. R., at West Richfield, Ohio. Mr. Detweiler is well known for his integrity of character and stands very high in the esteem of his fellow-citizens.

He is a firm friend of the cause of education, and his associates are numbered among the best citizens of Cuyahoga Falls and Summit county. In politics he is a republican.

RANK DICKERSON, an enterprising young farmer of Northampton township, Summit county; Ohio, was born here April 16, 1860, and is a son of Willington and Sarah (Faylor) Dickerson, who were the parents of two children—Frank, the subject, and Clara, who was born August 22, 1865, and is now the wife of Frank Horner.

Willington Dickerson was born in Lewis county, N. Y., September 9, 1832, and was a babe when brought to Ohio by his parents. He was reared a farmer in Northampton township, and January 21, 1859, married Miss Sarah Faylor, who was born March 16, 1840. Riley Dickerson, father of Willington, was born April 24, 1801, and Mary, his wife, November 25, 1811. In 1830 they departed from Lewis county, N. Y., for Ohio, going by way of the Erie canal from Rome, Oneida county, to Buffalo, in Erie county, and thence starting by lake for Cleveland, Ohio. weather was so stormy and the water so rough that the little family were obliged to land at Ashtabula harbor with their goods, which latter were forwarded to Cleveland by water, while the family took the land route. From Cleveland they came to Summit county by ox-team, and settled in the woods of Northhampton township, where the father erected a log dwelling and barn, and eventually cleared up a good farm. Here Willington was reared among the pioneers from babyhood to manhood, and here he died in 1883; his widow is now living with her son Frank, the subject, on the original homestead. Frank Dickerson has lived on this, his birthplace, all his life, with the exception of one year, passed in work He received a good commonin Cleveland. school education in Northampton township, has been industrious and thrifty through life, and has proven himself a worthy descendent of one of the oldest families of the township, and as such is greatly respected by the citizens, as well as for his personal merits. politics he is a strong republican, but has never sought public office. He is unmarried, although very popular.

RS. ALAMANDA DOOLITTLE, of Streetsboro, Portage county, Ohio, is a native of the county and was born in Shalersville township June 23, 1819, a daughter of Simon and Lucy (Green) Burroughs, and still, notwithstanding her venerable years, has a most vivid recollection of the events which occurred in the pioneer days of the county.

Simon Burroughs was a native of the town of Alstead, Cheshire county, N. H., a son of Joel Burroughs, who was of Irish descent, and the father of nine children, viz: Richard, Joel, David, Simon, Cyrus, Phebe, Hannah, Grace and Anna. The progenitors of the family were among the earliest settlers of Alstead, and over 300 persons who bore the name of Burroughs lie interred in cemetery of the town mentioned. The old family homestead is still standing in Alstead, although nearly all the children born to Joel have become residents Simon Burroughs was reared a of Ohio. farmer and carpenter, and made three trips or more from New Hampshire to Ohio. His first trip was made when a young man, when he moved his brother David to Cleveland with an ox-team; he next came as driver of an ox-team for his uncle Daniel, who settled in Shalersville; he started, the third time, and the last, on horseback, but his horse sickened and died in the state of New York, and he made the remainder of his way on foot to Shalersville, where he passed one year. Returning east, Simon was united in marriage, in Vermont, with Miss Lucy Green, who was born in Bethel, Windham county, Vt., a daughter of Amassa and Lucy (Dudley) Green, and then returned, in 1818, to Shalersville, with his bride, accompanied by Joel Thompson, this trip being made with ox-teams.

The first year after settling in Portage county, Simon Burroughs lived at Mason's Mills, pending the erection of a frame dwelling on his farm, of which he cleared up 100 acres; he subsequently sold forty acres of his tract and moved to Streetsboro township, about 1830, and settled on the land now occupied by his son, Horace Doolittle. This tract he converted into a fine farm and erected upon it substantial buildings, which are still standing. His habit was to go to the forest in winter, cut the timber for his buildings, hew the frames, and shave the broad chestnut shingles, and by the time his hay was cut in June, his barns would be ready to receive it. He also built many substantial dwellings and barns for other settlers throughout the county, and became a man of much prominence, and was frequently employed by newcomers to point out suitable places for settlement. He was a steady man of good habits, kind and helpful in cases of sickness, and was greatly appreciated as being one of the most useful dwellers in the community. In politics Mr. Burroughs was a democrat, and in religion both he and wife were pious Methodists.

The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Simon Burroughs were Alamanda, whose name opens this biography; Annis, who was first married to Eli Musser, and, after his death, to Horace Peck; Dudley, who was an invalid, and for more than a quarter of a century was kindly cared for by his sister, Mrs. Alamanda Doolittle, and died in January, 1897; Howard and George and Henry (twins). Both Mr. and Mrs. Burroughs lived to reach the ripe age of seventy-five years, and died deeply lamented by every member of the community in which they had passed so many years of their useful lives. The family name was held in universal respect, as four of its immediate members—Joel, Richard, Daniel and Elijah—had served all through the Revolutionary war.

Mrs. Alamanda Doolittle received an excellent education in her early days, and at the age of seventeen years, December 23, 1836, was united in marriage with Albert Doolittle, who was born October 7, 1806, in New Milford, Pa., a son of Benjamin Doolittle, a native of Cheshire, Conn., born February 10, 1771. Benjamin married Fannie Ward, who was born in Connecticut April 12, 1871, a daughter of Isabel Ward. Benjamin and his wife were the pioneer settlers of New Milford, Susquehanna county, Pa., and after a residence of twenty-one years in that town were induced by Titus Street to come to Streetsboro, Ohio, where Mr. Doolittle bought a tract of 200 acres of land, deep in the woods, from which not a stick had been cut, except, perhaps, by hunters. Mr. Doolittle converted this land, in due course of time, into a profitable farm and comfortable home, and here Mrs. Alamanda now resides. Benjamin Doolittle later became land agent for Titus Street, who owned the township, and also became a man of marked influence in the community. To his marriage with Miss Ward were born nine children, viz: Rev. Nelson, born March 17, 1805, a Universalist minister, who settled in Akron, where he preached many sermons; Albert, born October 7, 1806; George, November 22, 1809; Henry, November 14, 1811; Lydia A., July 10, 1815; William, July 18, 1817; Jane, April 1, 1819; Benjamin, April 20, 1821, and Eloisai, February 15, 1823. These last-named eight all settled in Streetsboro township.

Benjamin Doolittle was a man of eruditon, was a deacon in the Disciples, church, and when no minister of that faith was available, was fully competent to lead the services. Three of his sons—Nelson, Albert and Henry—were Universalists; George was a Baptist, William was a Methodist, and each was capable of showing or proving his faith from the Scriptures. Mr. Doolittle was in politics a a whig, and for many years served as a justice of the peace. He lived to be over seventy-six years of age, having been born February 10, 1771, and dying September 18, 1849. His son Henry was extensively engaged in railroad contracting, and was also one of the builders of the Wabash & Erie canal. He lived two years in Erie, Pa., engaged in the railroad business, but died in San Antonio, Tex., in 1861, his brothers, William and Albert, having been associated with him in business.

Albert Doolittle, after marriage, settled on a part of his father's farm, which part he purchased, and became a prosperous, substantial and prominent farmer and a man of great in-He was well educated and of more than ordinary intelligence, and increased his estate to 230 acres. Contracting really, however, occupied as much of his time as farming, and he was in fact the originator of this line of business in the family. He and his brother Henry held contracts on the canal, as well as on the Atlantic & Great Western railroad, and after the death of Henry he was for more than ten years occupied in settling up the estate. He was a very active and energetic man, and was strictly honest, his business reputation standing until the end without a blemish.

religion he was a Universalist, and in politics was a whig until the formation of the republican party, when he joined the ranks of the latter. He was an honored citizen, and for a number of years filled the office of justice of the peace with great ability. His marriage was blessed with four children, viz: Charles R., Augusta, Horace A. and Lucy, the last named of whom died a married woman. The death of Albert Doolittle took place on the old homestead, January 15, 1886, at the age of seventy-eight years, and no man ever left a more honored name behind him.

Horace A. Doolittle, son of Albert and Alamanda Doolittle, has been twice married, his first union having been with Miss Mary E. Seymour, daughter of Nathaniel and E. (Calkins) Seymour, and to this marriage were born Nathaniel S. and Horace A. The second marriage of Mr. Doolittle was to Miss Effie E. Peck, daughter of Henry and Emeline (Jenkins) Peck, and this union has been blessed with one daughter—Cora Lucille. In politics. Mr. Doolittle is a republican and has served his fellow-citizens as township trustee. a substanial farmer, owning 130 acres of arable land, and he and family are among the most respected residents of the township. Mrs. Doolittle is a member of the Baptist church at Streetsboro, and is a lady of many estimable qualities.

ILLIAM FERGUSON, a prominent farmer of Streetsboro township, Portage county, Ohio, is a native of this county, is a son of Robert and Mary (Lloyd) Ferguson, and was born in Deerfield township June 28, 1846.

Robert Ferguson was born in the north of Ireland, and came to America when about fifteen years old. He was married in Pennsylvania to Miss Mary Lloyd, of Scotch descent, and after marriage came to Portage county and purchased a farm in Deerfield township. Of the six children born to Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson the eldest, Matilda, died a married woman; Robert, died at the age of five; the remaining four are still living, and are named Isabel, William (subject), Nelson and Julia. The mother of this family has been called from earth, dying in the faith of the Lutheran church; the father, now a venerable gentleman of eighty-three years, makes his home with his son William, who cares for his every want with filial affection.

William Ferguson, in whose interest this sketch is chiefly written, received a good common-school education, and was reared on his father's farm until nineteen years old, at which early age he enlisted, March 7, 1865, at Alliance, Ohio, in company A, One Hundred and Ninety-seventh Ohio volunteer infantry, to serve three years, unless sooner discharged by reason of the close of the then pending war, which event happened, and he was honorably discharged at Baltimore, Md., in July, 1865, after serving principally on guard duty, in Washington, D. C., Alexandria, Va., Dover, Del., and Baltimore, Md. He then returned to Deerfield township, and thence, in 1866, went to Martinsville, Ind., where he lived two years, and then returned to Ohio, and was married, at Streetsboro, to Miss Frankie A. Clark, who was born on the farm Mr. Ferguson now occupies, a daughter of Robert and Jeannette (Wilcox) Clark, who were the parent of two children only-Arvilla, who died a married woman, and Frankie, now Mrs. Fer-Mr. Clark died in middle life, and his widow was later married to A. Plum; to this union two sons were born-one living, Willard C; John B. died, aged eight years.

After marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson lived in Ravenna two years, he being there employed in a saw-mill, and then settled in Streetsboro township. Here Mr. Ferguson purchased a farm, on which he lived nine years, and then moved to another, which he cultivated for thirteen years, and then, in 1891, purchased his present farm, consisting of fifty-five acres. This was the original homestead of the Clark family, Robert Clark, the grandfather of Mrs. Ferguson and a pioneer of Streetsboro township, having cleared it up from the primeval forest. Mr. Ferguson has greatly improved the place, has thoroughly repaired the buildings, and has made a comfortable home for himself and wife and four children, who are named Prentiss, Harry C., Bessie and Ardell. In fact, he has made it the neatest place in the township, and for its dimensions one of the most profitable.

Mr. Ferguson is an ex-member of A. H. Day post, No. 185, Grand Army of the Republic at Kent, and in politics is perfectly independent, voting for such as are, in his judgment, best fitted to fill the offices for which they are nominated. The family is greatly respected throughout the county, Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson being descendants of pioneers, and Mr. Ferguson having served as a member of the school board and as constable.

EORGE W. FLEMINGS, one of the old soldiers of the Civil war, and a respected citizen, springs from sturdy Scotch-Irish ancestry, who were early settlers of Vermont in colonial times and of old Revolutionary stock. He was born at Freedom, Portage county, Ohio, July 4, 1843, a son of Richard and Mary (Puffer) Flemings. He received a common education in the district schools at Hampden, Geauga county, Ohio, where he went with his mother and family after the death of his father, which occurred when he was about five years old, and had his trade thoroughly learned when the Civil war

He was a member of the United Brethren church and a respected and upright man, who reared an excellent family.

After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Flemings moved to Freedom township, where they lived for some years and then moved to Mantua Corners, about 1880, where they now live. Politically he is a stanch republican. He has always been a respected citizen, very industrious, and upright in his dealings and of excellent character. ENRY A. FRITZ, manager of the American Straw Board company's mill at Barberton, Summit county, Ohio, was born in Wayne county July 21, 1863, and is a son of John and Emma (Clark) Fritz, who were the parents of five children, viz: William H., deceased; Frank O., of Nebraska; Henry A., the subject of this biography; Charles M., and John C., the last named also deceased.

Martin Fritz, great-grandfather of Henry A. and the progenitor of the American family of that name, came to this country from Germany, after his marriage, and fought under Washington for American independence, serving in the army of his adopted country eight years. After the war, he came from Pennsylvania to Ohio, and with his land warrant, granted him for his services in the war of the Revolution, entered 160 acres of forest land in Milton township, Wayne county, and was absolutely the first white settler there among the red men and wild animals of the primeval woods, and died a member of the United Brethren church, and in politics a democrat.

Philip Fritz, grandfather of Henry A., was a boy when he came to Ohio with his father. He received his education in the pioneer schools and ably aided his father in clearing up the wildwood farm, and married, at maturity, Ann Long, of Wayne county. He was a Jackson democrat in politics, a charter member of the United Brethren church of Shinersville, Wayne county, Ohio, attained prominence in his community, and died full of honors at the age of seventy-eight years, his wife following to the everlasting home at the age of eighty-three.

John Fritz, the father of subject, was born on the old Fritz homestead in Wayne county and was reared to farming, and received his education under more favorable circumstances that those which had been granted to his father, and, although an industrious man, lived, comparatively, in greater ease. wife, Emma Clark, was born near London, England, in 1843, and was a daughter of John A. and Martha Clark. This lady was bereft of her husband about the year 1873, by the explosion of a boiler in a saw-mill, thus leaving her, with her five children, whose names have already been given, and the eldest of whom was then but fourteen years of age and the subject but nine, not only to mourn his untimely death, but to wend their way through the weary world alone and unprotected. But the widow was equal to the task, and by some self-denial so reared them that they never failed to honor her. After accomplishing this worthy duty, she become the wife of W. F. Long, to whom she has borne one son, George M., and now has her pleasant home in Barberton.

Henry A. Fritz, prior to the death of his father, had started out in life for himself at the age of twelve years, and was in the employ of one farmer until he reached the age of nineteen years, and during this interval of time he not only clothed and educated himself, but devoted considerable of his earnings to the support of his father and mother, and more particularly to that of the latter. At the age last mentioned he entered the telegraph office of the railroad company at New Portage (now Barberton) and a year later was made "supply" operator, which position he filled two years, after which he filled the position of station agent four years, ending with He then entered into the employ of the American Straw Board company of New Portage as shipping clerk, and was promoted to be bookkeeper a year later; the nex year he was made manager of the plant, which is the largest and best equipped of its kind in the world, and this position Mr. Fritz has held with credit to himself and to the entire satisfaction of his principals until the present hour.

The felicitous union of Henry A. Fritz and Alice L. Davis took place September 21, The lady was born in 1861, on a farm adjoining Lake Annie, near the center of what is now Barberton, a daughter of Frederick M. and Louisa (Richards) Davis, the former of whom died in the faith of the United Brethren church in February, 1893. To the union of Henry A. Fritz and wife have been born three children, who were named, in order of birth, Claude C., Howard E. and Roy D. In his politics, Mr. Fritz has from earliest manhood been a democrat, and as such was a member of the school board when the $12,000 schoolhouse was erected in Barberton. He is at the present time a member of the town council, and has ever been active in the promotion of the interests of the community in which he now has his home. Fraternally, he is a member of lodge No. 568, F. & A. M., of which he is secretary, and in his society relations holds a most enviable standing.

est and most respected farmers of Deerfield township, Portage county, Ohio, was born in Palmyra township, November 25, 1823, a son of Charles and Amelia (Batterson) Gilbert, natives of Litchfield, Conn., where their marriage was solemnized.

Truman Gilbert, paternal grandfather of Theron, a native, also, of Connecticut, was a soldier of the Revolutionary war, and in 1806 came to Ohio by means of ox-teams, settling in Palmyra township, Portage county, where he engaged in farming until called away by death. He reared a family of nine children, of whom the names of eight can be recalled to memory, viz: Charles, Truman, Lyman, Marvin, Walter, Champion, Ezra and Rebecca. The maternal grandparents of Theron Gilbert were of German descent, and the grandfather, on this side of the house, was a skilled blacksmith.

Charles and Amelia Gilbert, parents of Theron, came from Connecticut to Palmyra township, Portage county, Ohio, in 1806, and the father followed the vocation of farmer the remainder of his days. To their union were born nine children, of whom only one survives —Theron, whose name opens this biography. The deceased eight were named Reilly, Noble. George, Champion, Theodore, Martin, Warner and Laura, the last named of whom was first married to Ebenezer Olmstead, and then to David Waller. The parents both died in the faith of the Disciples' church, and were highly honored as pioneers of the township and as most respectable citizens.

Theron Gilbert was reared on his father's farm, in the meantime receiving as good an education as the district school of his early days afforded, and also learned blacksmithing. He remained on the home farm until twenty-one years of age, although, previous to reaching his majority, he had married, August 31, 1843. Miss Elizabeth Kibler, daughter of Henry and Barbara (Frank) Kibler, which union has been blessed with five children, viz: Julian, who is married to Sarah Folk, and resides in Palmyra township; Caroline, wife of James Derwechter; Laura, now Mrs. John H. Grate; Harriet, married to James Shilliday, and Amy, wife of Thomas G. Ewing.

Theron Gilbert is an expert mechanic, and in addition to his knowledge of the blacksmith's strade, is well posted as a gunsmith and in bicycle repairing. While still a young man, he went to Meadville, Pa., where he was employed by the then Atlantic Railroad company as a blacksmith and assisted in the construction of the company's bridge across French creek, and on his return to Deerfield was employed by the county for six months in constructing a bridge on the public road. 1844, Mr. Gilbert purchased a tract of land in the woods of Deerfield township, cleared away the timber, and began its cultivation, and in 1847, settled down to housekeeping in a log cabin, which, in 1861, he replaced with a commodius frame dwelling, also building a substantial barn, and this farm is now known to be one of the most productive in the township. His attention has been devoted almost entirely to general agriculture and blacksmithing since residing here, although for some years he was engaged in raising live stock, owning, at one time, some of the best horses in the township. He has served his fellow-townsmen as school director and is one of the most highly esteemed residents of Deerfield township.

Henry Kibler, father of Mrs. Elizabeth Gilbert, was born in Virginia of German descent, was a miller by trade, and was married in his native county of Shenandoah, and there were born to him three children, viz: Elizabeth (Mrs. Gilbert), August 31, 1824; Andrew, who resides in Edinburg, Ohio, and Alexander, of Palmyra township, Portage county. In 1828 Mr. Kibler brought his family to Palmyra township, purchased a farm on which stood an old grist and saw-mill, which he ran a short time, when the plant was destroyed by fire; but he at once erected a larger and more substantial structure and followed his occupation until his death at the age of eighty-four years, a member of the Methodist church, his wife having died at the age of seventy-six, in the same faith.

Thereon Gilbert has always been a most industrious farmer and mechanic, and in consequence has met with a success that has won him deserved esteem throughout the township and county. His name is the synonym of honesty and respectability, and his wife and children enjoy with him the good opinion and respect of the community in which they live.

OSEPH B. CARTER, one of the most respected agriculturists of Northfield township, Summit county, Ohio, as well as an ex-soldier of the Civil war. descends from sterling English stock of colonial Connecticut ancestry and was born February 28, 1839, in Twinsburg township, a son of Thaddeus A. and Esther (Marshall) Carter. He was reared a farmer, received the usual common-school education, and enlisted Twinsburg township August 24, 1861. was mustered into the United States service at Camp Ford, Alliance, Ohio, for three years, or during the war, and was assigned to company K, Nineteenth Ohio volunteer infantry, under Capt. Paul Kirby, and served until honorably discharged at Indianapolis, Ind., in October, 1864. He was in the siege of Corinth, battles of Perryville, Wild Cat Gap, Iuka, Shiloh and Stone River, and in skirmishes too numerous to mention. On the last day of the battle of Stone River, a minie ball struck the clasp of his army belt, and although this is very heavy metal, it passed entirely through and hung just at the end of the belt. This ball struck the U. S. on the belt exactly in the center. Mr. Carter had pulled the belt around to the left side, to more conveniently get hold of his cartridges, and he was further protected from the ball, which had spent its force on the belt clasp, by his heavy clothing and the give of his body. The shock rendered him breathless, and, immediately after, he was shot in his left leg, close to the knee-joint, and the ball is still imbeded in the bone. The stock of his rifle was also shot. He remained on the field until night, and was taken to field hospital and thence to Nashville, where he lay in hospital eight weeks, and was then in hospital at Lonisville, Ky., four weeks, at Camp Dennison, Ohio, one week, and at Cleveland about six months. Not fully recovering, he was sent to the invalid corps, in which he remained until the close of the war. He has, however, always since been troubled by his wound. Mr. Carter was in all the marches, campaigns, battles and skirmishes in which his regiment took part until disabled by his wound January 2, 1863. After the war, Mr. Carter returned to Ohio, and married, at Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio, Miss. Amarilla Spafford, of Northfield township, where she was born August 4, 1852, a daughter of Jason and Philena (Cranson) Spafford. Jason Spafford was born in Solon township, Cuyahoga county, to which his father, Nathan Spafford, came from one of the eastern states as a pioneer. The latter was a soldier in the war of 1812, married Mary Morrison, and their children were Almon, Lydia, Amarilla, Zeloma, Seth, Mary and Jason. Nathan Spafford passed all his remaining days in Ohio, but moved at any early day to Northfield township, Summit county, and died at the age of sixty-six years. Jason Spafford was a farmer, owning a large farm, and was prosperous. He died, at the age of forty-five years, a respected citizen and a member of the Baptist church.

After marriage Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Carter settled in Twinsburg township, where Mr. Carter bought the Carter homestead, consisting of 117 acres, and then the Jason Spafford homestead, consisting of 275 acres, a part of it being inherited by his wife. In 1889 Mr. Carter moved to his present homestead in Northfield township, consisting of 274 acres, and is a prosperous farmer. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Carter are Lena May and Thad B. Both Mr. and Mrs. Carter are members of the Methodist church at Twinsburg, in which he is steward and trustee. As a republican he held the offices of township trustee and assessor and is a member of the school board.

John E. was in the One Hundred and Seventy-seventh regiment Ohio volunteer infantry in the three years' service, was in several skirmishes, and died in hospital in North Carolina. The military record of Joseph B. has already been given. Thaddeus A. Carter was a member of the Methodist church and in politics was first a whig and later a republican. He lived to be sixty-nine years old and died on his farm, a much respected citizen. Joseph B. Carter is one of the substantial farmers and respected citizens of Northfield township and has reared an excellent family. His daughter, Miss Lena May, is a student at Mount Union college, at Alliance, Ohio, is a member of the class of 1899, and has been a student here for two years. His son, Thad B., is a student at the Northfield high school.

AMES SMITH FRY, a representative farmer of Suffield township, Portage county, Ohio, was born on the old Fry homestead February 14, 1854, a son of Wyerman and Martha (Brown) Fry, both natives of the Buckeye state. His paternal grandparents were natives of Pennsylvania. The grandfather served in the war of 1812, in the army of the Center, afterward became an early settler of Stark county, Ohio, where he was a shoemaker; from there he moved to Suffield township, Portage county, located on a farm of 100 acres, on which he spent about a year and a half, and died of a fever in 1828. Then his wife and part of his family moved to Knox, Ind., where she died in the year 1874. They were both members of the Presbyterian church.

He was a republican in politics, and honored by his fellow-citizens by election to various offices of trust in his township; he died at the early age of forty-five years, a member of the Reformed church, in which he had filled all the offices. His widow, now about seventy-five years of age, is still in good health, and resides with her son, James S., who is affectionately caring for her in her declining days. The paternal great-grandparents of James S. Fry were natives of Germany.

James S. Fry has passed all his life on the farm on which he was born, with the exception of four months spent at school in Deerfield, for which he had been prepared by an attendance at the district school in his native township. February 20, 1879, he was married to Miss Ellen Myers, daughter of Simon and Catherine (Crist) Myers. The fruit of this union is five children, of whom three still survive: Elson M., born January 9, 1880; J. Cleve, born June 13, 1882, and Lester R., born January 11, 1892. The deceased were H. Floyd, who died May 13, 1887, aged six months, and Lillian Grace, who died March 30, 1890, aged one year and twenty days.

Mrs. Fry, who was born September 12, 1856, and died February 1, 1887, a devout Methodist for nearly twenty-three years. Her father, Simon Myers, is a farmer of Summit county, Ohio, and to his marriage, in 1854, to Catherine Crist, were born five children, and of the survivors Hattie is the wife of Allen Cook; Delilah is the wife of Charles Adams; Wilson is married to Ella Gates, Florain to Lulu Wise. The maternal grandparents of Mrs. Fry were natives of Mahoning county, where the grandfather was for a time a merchant, but later became a miller, and then a farmer, and was the owner of a large estate at the time of his death. He was the father of three children, of whom Catherine (Mrs. Myers) and Harrison are still living. grandfather of Mrs. Fry died April 11 1891, and the grandmother January 14, 1892, in the faith of the Evangelical church.

James Smith Fry is a stanch republican in politics, and was a warm advocate for the election of William McKinley.

RS. SYLVESTER GAYLORD, of Munroe Falls, Ohio, widow of Sylvester Gaylord, was born May 2, 1817, at Middletown, Conn., a daughter of Selah and Anna (Newell) North. Sylvester Gaylord was born in Middletown, Conn., November 1, 1808, and was a son of Jonathan and Martha (Thomas) Gaylord. Jonathan was the son of Jonathan and Elizabeth (Goodham) Gaylord.

The Gaylord family descended from the English Puritans who were the founders of Connecticut. Jonathan Gaylord, father of Sylvester, was born in Connecticut, at Upper Middletown, and his wife was born at Haddam, Conn., and by calling he was a farmer and ship carpenter. His children, born in Connecticut, were Isaac, Eliza, Mary A., Joshua and Sylvester; Eli and Martha were born in Ohio. Jonathan Gaylord moved with his family to the Western Reserve, Ohio, in 1809, starting June 1, and made the trip with oxen, and Capt Stowe (father of Albert Stowe) and family came at the same time. Mr. Gaylord brought his father and mother with him, and some of his brothers and sisters came at the same time. These were Thomas, William, Betsy, Abiah, and Margaret. They were forty-one days on the way and walked the greater part of it; in fact, Jonathan Gaylord walked almost all the way. The roads were very bad and they were obliged to cut through the woods most of the way, and slept in the wagons. They arrived about the middle of July and settled in the southern part of Stowe township, a part of the homestead being still occupied by our subject. The farm contained about 200 acres, covered with timber, but Ionathan cleared it, assisted by his sons. He built a log cabin, in which he lived some years, but finally built a frame house. He and wife were members of the Presbyterian church. He was accustomed to work in the ship yards at Cleveland, and on his way home from that city was stricken down in middle age, probably with heart disease.

Sylvester Gaylord had the usual commonschool education of his day and was an infant of nine months when he was brought by his parents to the Western Reserve. He learned, in Cleveland, the carpenter and builder's trade of Mr. Hill, and began work for himself when but twenty years of age. He married, when about twenty-two years of age, Ruth Nickerson, who was born in Massachusetts, near Cape Cod, of English descent, but whose parents were pioneers of Stowe township, where her father kept a hotel at Stowe Corners. The children by this marriage were Helen and Sylvester. This wife died, and Mr. Gaylord next married, April 29, 1839, in Stowe township, Julia A. North, born May 2, 1817, at Middletown, Conn., a daughter of Selah and Anna (Newell) North. Mr. Gaylord was a farmer as well as a carpenter and settled on a farm in Stowe township, but sold it and bought the present farm-part of his father's original homestead. To Mr. and Mrs. Gaylord were born Lucy, William, Julia, Charlotte, and Charles. Mr. and Mrs. Gaylord were members of the Disciples' church, of which he was trustee for years. In politics he was a republican and served as township trustee several years. He was a much respected citizen, well known for his sterling worth. He died at the venerable age of eighty years, June 17, 1889. Mrs. Gaylord, who still survives him, is possessed of an active mind and excellent memory, and is a woman of high character.

Charles Gaylord, son of above, was born March 14, 1852, on the present homestead. He received a common-school education and attended the academy at Tallmadge, and was reared to farming and paper finishing, working at Munroe Falls about fifteen years. He married June 3, 1874, in Stowe township, Lucy Sothmayd, born May 13, 1855, in Stowe township, daughter of William and Martha (Willson) Sothmayd, the former of whom was born in May, 1830, the third son of Erastus and Clarissa (Rice) Sothmayd.

Clarissa Rice was a daughter of Capt. Rice, and was the first white child born in Stowe township, in which township Albert Stowe, still living, was the second child and the first male child born. Erastus Sothmayd was born in Middletown, Conn., and came to the Western Reserve a single man. a farmer, and married, in Stowe township, Annie Wetmore; his children were Charles, Lucy and Leonard. Mrs. Sothmayd died, and he married Clarissa Rice, and their children were Walter, William, and the twins, Horace and Henry. Y., December 27, 1831, a daughter of Darius and Temperance (Chase) Wilson.

Darius Wilson was born of Connecticut of English Puritan stock, and one of his remote ancestors was a signer of the declaration of independence. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson were the parents of Homer E., Martha, Milton and James D. Darius Wilson moved to the AVORUS GRATE, a prominent resident and prosperous farmer of Palmyra township, Portage county, Ohio, was born in Deerfield township, in the same county, July 30, 1839, a son of Lewis and Catharine (Kibler) Grate.

George Grate, the paternal grandfather of the subject of this memoir, was a native of Pennsylvania, and came to Ohio about the year 1820, settling in Palmyra township, Portage county, where he passed the remainder of his days in farming. To his marriage with Susan Fatcher were born eight children, who were named, in order of birth, Jeremiah, Ellen, Betsy, John, George, Lewis, Benjamin and Isaac. His death took place at the age of eighty-two years, but his wife had been called away some few years previous to his own departure.

Henry Kibler, maternal grandfather of subject, was a native of Virginia, a miller by calling, and was twice married in his native state, prior to coming to Ohio. To his first marriage were born six children, of whom three are still living, viz: Martin, Catherine Henry; the deceased were named Annie, George and Amelia. To the second marriage of Henry Kibler, which was with Barbara Frank, three children were born, viz: Andrew, Elizabeth (wife of Theron Gilbert, of whom further information will be found on another page of this volume) and Alexander.

Lavorus Grate remained on the home farm until twenty-five years of age, acquiring in the meanwhile a sound district-school education, and assisting his father in the cultivation of the farm. September 28, 1865, he married Miss Jane Arbuckle, daughter of Thomas and Jane (Caruthers) Arbuckle, and the same year settled in Palmyra township, where he has since been continuously engaged in agricultural pursuits.

Lewis Grate, father of subject, was born in Palestine, Pa., July 16, 1808, and his wife, Catherine Kibler, a native of Virginia, was born in 1814. Both were quite young when they came to Ohio, and located in Palmyra township, Portage county, whence they removed to Deerfield township and passed the remainder of their days. To their union were born six children, who are all still living, viz.: Emeline, wife of H. S. Randall, of whom more may be read on another page; Drusilla, unmarried; Mariette, wife of Daniel Kimmel; Angeline, widow of John Forder; Sarah, wife of Wallace T. Gilbert, and Lavorus. The father of this family was a highly respected farmer, was for many years township trustee, school director and supervisor, and died June 7, 1893, at the age of eighty-five years; his widow is now eighty-four years old and is in excellent health.

Thomas Arbuckle, father of Mrs. Jane Grate, was a native of Philadelphia, farmed for some years in Washington county, came to Ohio when in middle age, and engaged in farming in Mahoning county. He first married, in Pennsylvania, Nancy Watson, who bore him one daughter. After the death of his first wife Mr. Arbuckle married Miss Caruthers, and to this union were born eleven children, of whom Mrs. Jane Grate, who was born in Washington county, Pa., January 8, 1838, is the only survivor. The deceased ten were named Sarah, Ellen, Margaret, Francis, Thomas, John, George, James, William and Mr. Arbuckle passed away in 1861, at the age of seventy-two years, and his wife in May, 1864, at the age of sixty-two, both members of the Presbyterian church.

Mr. Grate has always been an industrious and skillful farmer, and no family in Palmyra township is held in higher respect than his.

ANIEL H. HARTZELL, of Deerfield township, Portage county, Ohio, and for years recognized as one of the township's best educators, was born here June 27, 1853, a son of Solomon. and Clorinda (Loomis) Hartzell. He received his early education in his district school, and this was supplemented by an attendance at Mount Union college and Canfield Business college, and also by a course through the business college at Cleveland, from which he gaduated in 1878. Thus much for the educational career of Mr. Hartzell, but it is necessary to explain that he assisted on his father's farm until sixteen years of age, and at the age of twenty years began his career as a teacher, which profession he followed for eighteen consecutive terms, one of which, or, perhaps, two, he passed as tutor in the business college where he had received a portion of his instruction—that of Canfield—a position seldom accorded a graduate, but always one that fully recognizes the competency and ability of the pupil who has successfully passed through its curriculum.

August 28, 1884, Mr. Hartzell was united in marriage with Miss Lois Shinn, a daughter of Elijah and Sarah (Woodruff) Shinn, the union being blessed with two children—Gertrude H. and Russell S. He had some experience in the drug trade for a year in partnership with P. D. Stratton, at Cortland, Ohio, and in general merchandizing at Damascus for three years, and in 1887 came to Deerfield township and bought the farm formerly owned by T. R. Mowen, and here he has since been most successfully engaged in farming.

To revert to the progenitors of Daniel H. Hartzell, it is necessary to state that his father, Solomon Hartzell, was born in Deerfield township, August 13, 1813, was reared a farmer, but in early manhood became a clerk in Lisbon, Columbiana county, Ohio, in which capacity he was engaged several years. 1840 he engaged in mercantile trade in company with a Mr. Bricker, whom he later bought out and united with Dr. Leonard Hanna, of Cleveland, under the firm name of Hanna & Hartzell, and for several years carried on the business on his sole account, then sold a half-interest to C. K. Greiner, of Salem. and under the style of Hartzell & Greiner did a flourishing trade several years longer. Hartzell eventually sold his interest in this concern to W. H. Reed, cashier of the First National bank, of Alliance, and thereafter devoted his attention to real estate and stocks and bonds. He was eminently a man of business ability, was one of the organizers and a stockholder in and director of the First National bank of Alliance, and gave success to every undertaking in which he participated.

Solomon Hartzell was united in marriage, November 6, 1844, with Miss Clorinda A. Loomis, a daughter of Chester and Elizabeth (Matoom) Loomis, the union resulting in the birth of five children, viz: Chester W., Stratton, Daniel H., Sophia (Mrs. James R. Dickson), and Emma, the wife of J. E. Detchen, of North Benton. October 20, 1855, Mr. Hartzell was ordained and installed an elder of the Presbyterian church of Deerfield, now Benton, Mahoning county, to the membership of which he had been admitted June 28, 1843, and the duties pertaining to this sacred charge he performed with faithfulness and zeal until death closed his earthly career, November 2, 1897, at the ripe age of eighty-four years, two months and nineteen days.

Daniel H. Hartzell, as a farmer, has met with abundant success, and as a citizen has won the esteem of the entire community in which he lives, having been selected by his fellow-citizens to serve them in various township offices. He is an honored member of Alliance lodge, No. 266, I. O. O. F., and in all the various stations in life which he has been called upon to fill he has performed his duty faithfully and well.

ALVERT HARDEN, the well-known miller of Twinsburg, Summit county, Ohio, and one of the ex-soldiers of the Civil war, was born at Indianapolis, Ind., January 1, 1846, a son of John and Lucinda (Beatty) Harden.

John Harden was born in county Down, Ireland, in 1803, and when a boy came to America with his father, who settled in Baltimore, Md. He received a common education and married, in Millersburg, Ohio, Lucinda

Beatty, who was also born in county Down, Ireland, and came to America with her parents when thirteen years old. Mr. Harden moved to Boone county, Ind., where he was a merchant about fourteen years at Zionsville and Lebanon. His wife died at Lebanon, in 1863, and he then moved to Mount Gilead, Ohio. His second marriage took place in Mount Vernon, Ohio, to Amanda Merriman, who bore him no children. Mr. Harden died in 1878, in Mount Gilead, aged about seventy-five years, in the faith of the Christian church, of which he had been a member for more than sixty In politics he was a republican and held the office of justice of peace. His children were named William, Marilda, George, Samuel, Beatty, Martha, Mary, John, Addison, Milton, Calvert and Harriet. Of these, Marilda married a soldier-Luther M. Oliphant-and six sons served in the Civil war, viz: George, Samuel, John, Addison, Milton and Calvert. George was in an Indiana regiment in the three months' service, and in the battle of Richmond, Ky. Samuel was in the One Hundred and Twenty-first Indiana volunteer infantry, three years' service, was in several battles and was wounded at the battle of Richmond, Ky.; was seven times shot and taken prisoner, but escaped before the battle was over. His wounds were all flesh wounds. John was adjutant of the One Hundred and Tenth Indiana volunteer infantry in the three years' service, and in many battles, including Shiloh and Mill Springs, Ky. Addison was in the three months' service in the Tenth Indiana volunteer infantry, and in the battle of Rich Mountain. Milton was sergeant in company Eleven, Indiana volunteer cavalry, three years' service, and among his battles was that at Nashville.

Calvert Harden received a common education at Lebanon, Ind., and enlisted in August, 1862, at the age of between sixteen and seventeen years, in company G, One Hundred and and Sixteenth regiment, Indiana volunteer infantry, at Lebanon, Ind., Capt. Robert Harrison, for six months, and was honorably discharged at LaFayette, Ind., in March, 1863. He was in the battles of Walker's Ford, Tazewell, Evans' Ford, and Greenville, Tenn., and Bull's Gap and Blue Springs, Ky. He then returned to Boone county, and re-enlisted in company F, One Hundred and Thirty-Fifth regiment Indiana volunteer infantry, Capt. R. W. Williamson, and served until honorably discharged at Indianapolis in 1864. Harden was never sick in hospital, wounded, nor taken prisoner, and performed all his duties promptly and cheerfully. After the war he returned to Lebanon, Ind., and finished his trade of miller; then came to Mt. Gilead, Ohio, and married there, January 28, 1867, Miss Sarah A. Donaldson, who was born April 11, 1851, a daughter of Rev. and Elizabeth (Merriman) Donaldson. Rev. Donaldson was twice married, and by his first wife had two sons-Wesley and Alonzo-both soldiers in the Civil war, in an Ohio regiment and Rev. Donaldson was also a soldier in an Ohio Regiment. There were two children by his second wife-Sarah A. and Ella. Rev. Donaldson died at the close of the war at Cardington, Ohio.

After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Harden settled at Ottawa, Kans., where he worked in a mill eight years; after his return to Ohio he located at Brecksville and ran a flour and feed-mill. In 1893 he built a similar mill at Macedonia. He came to Twinsburg in 1895 and built his present flour and feed-mill, and equipped it with first class machinery and is doing a very prosperous business. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Harden are named John F. and Pearl A. Mr. Harden is a member of the Congregationalist church and of Logan post, No. 282, G. A. R., at Brecksville, Ohio, and has held the office of commander and other positions. In politics he is a republican, is a strong temperance man, and a member of the Good Templars, Twinsburg lodge. He has always been an industrious, hard-working man, and stands high for his integrity of character.

ARON MORRISS, deceased, was one of the honored old settlers of Tallmadge township, Summit county, Ohio, and a prominent and respected citizen, and was born at Winstead, Conn., October 8, 1797, of remote Scotch descent. He received an academic education, and possessing naturally an active mind he became a wide reader, having access to one of the finest libraries in Georgia, and, together with his varied experience in life, acquired an excellent education. He learned the carpenters' and joiners' trade, in the thoroughgoing old-fashioned way, at Milford Center, Conn., under Chauncev Isbell, and when twenty-one years old visited the state of Georgia and soon became a contractor and builder, employing sometimes as many as thirty men. He erected buildings at Millersville, Augusta, Sparta and the Savannah Mills on the Ogeechee river. He built Dr. Wm. Torrell's palatial residence, a beautiful and typical southern structure of the olden days befors the war-this firm structure requiring three years to erect; he also built many churches, including a beautiful Congregational church, costing $80,000. He passed thirteen years of a very active life in Georgia and other southern states, and became widely known as an architect and builder.

Mr. Morriss returned to Connecticut, and married, at Milford, in March, 1834, Sarah Isbell, a daughter of Israel and Sarah (Pardie) Isbell. Sarah Pardie was the daughter of Rebecca Beecher, a sister of the famous divine, Rev. Dr. Lyman Beecher, father of Henry Ward Beecher. After marriage and during the next October Mr. Morriss moved to Ohio in 1834, having been out the previous year and viewed the country, and settled on the present homestead, consisting of 155.42 acres. Mr. Morriss gradually improved this homestead, making additions and alterations, and attached a fine southern colonnade, very roomy, commodious and elegant. It is colonial in style, and is as well preserved as when first built. The finely carved and fluted columns are of solid black walnut, and give an air of strength to the structure. Mr. Morriss, while not reared a farmer, possessed a practical business turn of mind, and when he first gave his attention to farming soon became an accomplished agriculturist-succeeded in his farming operations, and developed a really model home and farm. He made his success in life while he was yet a young man, and while in the south laid the foundation of his success.

Mr. Morriss was a fine tenor singer, and sang in the church choir in New Haven, Conn. In Connecticut he was also a member of a military company. Mrs. Morriss was of a fine family--the Isbells of Connecticut, who for generations was well known in that state. She brought with her to Tallmadge some fine specimens of colonial furniture, among them a rare mahogany sideboard; also some fine matched tables, and the fine old homestead is filled with rare and valued family relics. and Mrs. Morriss were the parents of two daughters, America and Corene, born in Tallmadge, Ohio. Mrs. Morriss had been previously married to Capt. F. Coggeshall, and they were the parents of George, now deceased, and one child who died in infancy. sisters. America and Corene, were both well educated at Ravenna and at the Hudson Young Ladies' seminary and finished their education at the Ontario Female seminary, Canandaigua, N. Y. Their education included a thorough course in music, in which they both became proficient. Miss Corene is now deceased; Miss America manages the home farm, and her other interests, having a goodly property, beside the fine old homestead, with a substantial sum on interest. She is an excellent woman, of good judgment and shrewd financial ability. Mr. Morriss was of the highest character and very greatly respected and one of the best citizens in Summit county, being of a nature to command the love and esteem of all who know him. was an honored citizen of Tallmadge township and held the office of township trustee. Lewis and Robert Morriss, who signed the declaration of independence, were relatives of subject's family.

ORRIS E. HASKINS, a well known business man of Mantua Station, Portage county, Ohio, and an exsoldier of the Civil war, is a son of Alman M. and Lucy (Scott) Haskins, and was born in Friendship, Allegany county, N. Y., November 8, 1845.

Alman M. Haskins, also a native of the Empire state, was born in Louisville, St. Lawrence county, and was by trade a hatter. his marriage with Lucy Scott, daughter of Justus and Annie (White) Scott, were born four children-George A., Mary L., Morris E. and Arthur, but they were not all born in the same part of the state, as Mr. Haskins worked at his trade, after marriage, in Franklinville, Cattaraugus county, Friendship, Allegany county, and died in Wirt, Allegany county, at the age of eighty-seven years, doubtless having pursued his trade at other places than those mentioned, during his long life. In politics he was an ardent republican, and was a strong Union man, giving to his country two of his sons-George A. and Morris E.—to save it from destruction during the war of the Rebellion. George A. served as a private for three years in the One Hundred and Thirty-sixth New York volunteer infantry, and although he was in many battles, escaped unwounded, but suffers still as the result of exposure while in the service. The military record of Morris E. is given in the following paragraph:

Morris E. Haskins, after receiving a good common-school education in Friendship, enlisted in company A, Fifth New York heavy artillery, and served until disabled at Piedmont, Va., June 5, 1864, where a ball passed through his right arm, entered his body just below the heart, and through the lower lobe of the left lung, which is still in bad order. He fell on the field near the breastworks, was picked up and taken to the field hospital, where the Union troops left a small guard and pressed on to Lynchburg. The following day, June 6, Mosely's guerrillas came along, captured the hospital, and carried off the wounded soldiers to Lynchburg, and, a few days later, to Richmond, where he was kept a short time in Libby prison, but, as he was desperately wounded and death imminent, he was transferred to another old tobacco warehouse, where he lay, in durance and distress, fully five months, living on the meanest and scantiest rations possible, washing and dressing his wounds with his own hands, and being furnished with clean bandages by the Sisters of Charity, who paid much more attention than the Confederate surgeons. All this time he was without even a blanket, having been robbed by the rebels, when taken prisoner, of his arms, clothing, and nearly $50 in green-He was finally exchanged, and honorably discharged at Annapolis, Md., May 15, 1865, his emaciated anatomy turning the scale at ninety-two and one-half pounds, although he had weighed 1673 pounds when he enlisted.

After the war, Mr. Haskins returned to New York, and after a short stay at Friendship went to Wirt, Allegany county, where he was engaged, for three years, in mercantile trade in partnership with his brother-in-law, Albert S. Brainard, who had married Mary L. Haskins, sister of Morris E. While at Wirt, Mr. Haskins married, January 1, 1866, Miss Sallie M. Hunt, who was born in that town June 8, 1850, a daughter of Christopher A. and Roxana (Harris) Hunt.

Christopher A. Hunt, father of Mrs. Sallie M. Haskins, was born in the state of New York, July 12, 1818. His wife, Roxana, was born July 7, 1820, and bore her husband six children, viz: Austin A., James L., Sallie M., Susie J., Asia M. and Ai A. For more than thirty years the father, who was a descendent of a Mayflower pilgrim, kept a hotel in Champion, Jefferson county, N. Y., but is now living at Mantua Station, Ohio, at the age of seventy-eight, his widow being seventy-seven, and both respected members of the Methodist church.

Morris E. Haskins, just after marriage, located at Ceres, Pa., where he was engaged in the lumber business for two years, next passed a year or so in Warsaw, Pa., and in 1869 came to Mantua Station, Ohio, thence moved to Auburn, Ohio, where he remained for six years, then returned to Mantua, and here engaged in mercantile trade, but, on account of suffering from his unhealed lung, has been little able to attend to or push his business for some years past, as otherwise he would have done, being naturally a bright and keen trader. His marriage has been blessed with two children, Mary L. and Nellie M., who still remain under the parental roof.

In politics Mr. Haskins is a stanch republican and has held the office of constable of Mantua township seven years. He is a member of Bentley post, No. 294, G. A. R., of Mantua Station, having been one its charter members, and in this post he has filled all the minor offices, advancing to those of adjutant, junior and senior vice-commander. He stands high in the esteem of the community as a brave defender of his country's flag and as a straightforward business man and incorruptible citizen.

OHN HAAS, a well-to-do farmer of Shalersville township, as well as a prominent and successful merchant of Mantua Station, was born in Cleveland, Ohio, November 15, 1839, the son of Adam and Catherine (Filins) Haas.

John Haas was reared to manhood in the city of Cleveland, and was educated in the public schools of that city, and in early life learned the trade of saddlery and harnessmaking with his father. He became quite proficient as a workman, and soon was an able assistant in the shop to his father. early became a member of the Cleveland Light Guards, then an independent military company, with which he was identified from the age of twenty until twenty-two years, during which time he became quite proficient in the drill and the duties of the company. Haas, being of a patriotic spirit, became imbued with a spirit of protecting his nation and flag, and early in 1861 enlisted in the Twentythird regiment Ohio volunteer infantry, in his native city. This was the same regiment in which President William McKinley served about eighteen months' time as a private soldier. During the first year of Mr. Haas' enlistment he was elected second lieutenant of company A, but was never mustered, as he was afflicted with chronic diarrhea, and compelled to resign and return to his native home.

Mr. Haas soon recuperated and engaged in business with his father, at which he continued steadily until May 1, 1864, when he enlisted the second time in defense of his nation's flag. His second enlistment was for three months, and he was appointed orderly sergeant of Capt. John Nevin's company G, One-Hundred and Fiftieth regiment Ohio volunteer infantry. He served out his enlistment and was honorably discharged at Cleveland, Ohio, August 15, 1864. His services were near the city of Washington, D. C., at Fort Lincoln and Fort Slocum, and he was in the engagement at Fort Slocum when Gen. Jubal Early made his famous advance on Washington, and attacked both Forts Lincoln and Slocum, and during this short engagement the Union troops lost 350 men in twenty minutes. Mr. Haas was always an active and willing soldier, and cheerfully obeyed every command from his superior officers. He enlisted from purely patriotic motives, and would have been in the early part of the war had his health not prevented him from doing so; however, having a knowledge of military drill, he taught many of the officers and soldiers of Cleveland while at home.

Mr. Has continued in the harness business with his father for four months after his return from the war, when he was taken with malarial fever, with which he was afflicted for several months, but finally recovered from same, and, soon after, was married to Miss Sophia Brodbeck, of Cleveland, Ohio, but a native of Medina county. By this marriage they became the parents of four children, John A., Hattie, William and Lottie.

In the spring of 1865, Mr. Haas left the city of his birth and located in Shalesrville township, Portage county, Ohio, where he purchased a farm of 100 acres, where he has resided ever since. Mr. Haas being a practical business man, has applied his early education to his agricultural life, and has been very successful, owning at the present time a farm of 300 acres, which is under a high state of cultivation. He is also proprietor of a hardware store at Mantua Station; also is engaged in the manufacture of wire nails, which he has followed for two years, and the products of his factory are giving good satisfaction, both as to the quality of his goods and the revenues derived therefrom. Mr. Haas has prospered year by year and had carly learned the secret of gaining wealth, which was, from a practical standpoint, that it was what a man saved from his earnings instead of what he made, that aided him to accumulate property.

Socially, he is a member of the G. A. R., Bentley post, and is the present commander, having held this office three terms, and he is also a member of the Masonic fraternity, Mantua lodge.

Adam Haas, his father, was born in Germany, near Frankfort, and at the age of twenty years came to America and settled in the Mohawk valley, in New York state, where he followed his trade as a harnessmaker for several years, then came west and located in Cleveland, where he continued his trade and reared his family, and became a well-to-do citizen. He died at the age of seventy-four years at the home of his son John, in Shalersville township. He was a substantial and successful man in his day, practically self-made.

ENRY HENTZ, a respected farmer of Streetsboro township, Portage county, Ohio, and for over three years a gallant soldier of the Civil war, was born in Massena, St. Lawrence county, N. Y., May 16, 1845, a son of Peter and Mary Hentz, the former of whom was of German descent and the latter of French descent.

Peter Hentz, whose birth occurred May 12, 1793, was a son of Henry Hentz, who came from Germany and was one of the first settlers of St. Lawrence county, N. Y. Peter was the first white child born in the county, and was taken forty miles through the forest to be christened, his parents being rigid Cath-Peter was twice married, but had no children born to his first union. His second marriage, late in life, was to Mary Buissever, the name being ordinarily pronounced Bouvia, and signifying, in English, Greenbush. children, Henry and Sarah, were born to this Peter Hentz served against second union. the Indians in one of their insurrections, and in later life became a lumberman and rafts-Ten years prior to his death, Henry, the son, went from Ohio to New York and brought the old gentleman hither, and here he died, at his son's home, at the age of ninetythree years.

Henry Hentz attended school in the Empire state until eleven years of age, when he came to Ohio, in 1856, with his mother and sister, who located in Ashtabula county, but he found for himself a home on a farm in Summit county, on which he worked four years, attending school the meanwhile, and continued farming as a laborer for different parties until he became a soldier.

Mr. Hentz enlisted, when but sixteen years old, at Ravenna, October 7, 1861, in Capt. H. H. Wiliard's company, Forty-second regiment Ohio volunteer infantry, of which James A. Garfield, afterward president of the United States, was then lieutenant-colonel. Mr. Hentz served in this regiment three years, one month and twelve days, and was honorably discharged at Columbus, Ohio, at Camp Tod, November 19, 1864. He fought at Middle Creek, Ky., when he was seized with typhoid fever, and was confined in hospital at Ashland for about six weeks. His next battle was at Tazewell, Tenn., and on the fatiguing retreat from the rebel raider, John Morgan, marched 240 miles continuously through the mountains of eastern Kentucky, day and night. in the Chickasaw raid in Mississippi, at the capture of Arkansas Post, Ark., and back to Mississippi again, taking part in the battles of Thompson's Hill and Champion's Hill, his eighteenth birthday occurring on the day the last-named battle was fought. He was also at the battle of Black River, and later, in a charge on the rebel works at Vicksburg, March 19, 1863, had the end of his left forefinger cut off, but he remained with his company throughout the charge. Later, he fought at Jackson, Miss., was in a raid at French Bayou, and another up the Black River, and was always a cheerful and willing man to perform his duty as a soldier.

On returning to Ohio, Mr. Hentz resumed farm work, and was married at Shalersville, July 5, 1868, to Miss Cornelia E. Kimes, who was born in that town October 9, 1849, a daughter of John and Mary (Doughty) Kimes. John Kimes was a native of Butler county, Pa., and was of German descent. He came with his father to Portage county, Ohio, in 1837, and here married Miss Doughty, of New Jersey colonial ancestry, who bore him five children, viz: Cornelia E., Alma, Amos, Lucy, and Mary. Mr. Kimes was a democrat in politics, was a prosperous farmer, and died at about sixty years of age, leaving 280 acres of good farm land.

After marriage, Mr. Hentz located in Shalersville township, on his father-in-law's farm and cultivated it several years; he then worked in the Cleveland Wire mills at Newburg as a wire-drawer for a few years, and then settled on his present place of 100 acres, on which he has erected a comfortable residence and which he has converted into a profitable farm and a pleasant home.

The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Hentz has been blessed with three children, named, in order of birth, John, Birdie, and Emerson K. In politics, Mr. Hentz is a republican, and as a citizen is regarded as one of the most useful in his township, and as a man is respected for his integrity and straightforward course of life.

OSWELL B. CUTTS, of Garrettsville, Ohio, was one of the old soldiers of the Civil war and is a highly respected citizen. He was born in Paris township, Portage county, Ohio, October 3, 1840, a son of Daniel B. and Lucy R. (Smith) Cutts, received a common education and attended several terms at Hiram Eclectic He enlisted at the age of about institute. twenty-one years, October 8, 1861, at Paris, Ohio, and was mustered in, same day, at Ravenna, in Capt. H. H. Willard's company F, Forty-second regiment, Ohio volunteer infantry, Col. James A. Garfield, to serve three years or during the war, but served three years and nearly two months, owing to an error in date of muster, and was honorably discharged at Camp Chase, Columbus, Ohio, November 19, 1864. He was in the battles of Middle Creek, Ky., Cumberland Gap, Tazewell, Tenn., Kanawha valley campaign, Vicksburg campaign for about three months, Chickasaw Bluff, Miss., Fort Hindman, Ark., Port Gibson, and Raymond, Miss. He was sick in hospital at Raymond, Miss., with chronic diarrhea, and was captured by the Confederates while he lay in hospital, and sent to Jackson, Miss., thence to Mobile, Ala., thence to Augusta, Ga., and thence to Richmond, Va., where he was confined in the infamous Libby prison. He was a prisoner four and a half months—the latter part of this time being spent in Libby prison. He was exchanged in October, 1863, and sent to Camp Chase, and rejoined his regiment at New Orleans, and was then on the Red River campaign, and in the battles of Atchafalaya Bayou, under Gen. Banks; then to Morganza Bend, La. Then they were ordered to the mouth of White River, thence to St. Charles, Ark., to fortify that place, and then went with his regiment to Duvall's Bluff, Ark., to build fortifications there, where he remained until sent home for muster out.

At the battle of Chickasaw Bayou he was struck on the left shin by a spent ball. He was on the Cumberland Gap campaign three months and marched about 400 miles. troops were short of rations, the supplies being cut off by the rebels, and they lived on green corn for about twenty days. They were in skirmishes every day and drove the rebels every morning from their breakfasts for some time, driving them from two to twenty miles daily, and removing the blockade of trees filled by the rebels to impede their progress in their march. The Union soldiers suffered greatly from hunger on the march, and subsisted on roasted and grated corn from the fields on the greater part of this march to the Ohio river, where they received supplies, and were on one-fourth rations before leaving Cumberland Gap. During the war his regiment traveled about 3,700 miles; of this, 1,500 miles were by steamboat, 1,000 miles by rail and 1,700 in marching order. This was exclusive of drills and picket duty. They participated in ten general engagements, sieges and in many skirmishes. Mr. Cutts considered his hardest battle to have been at Port Gibson, when the regiment lost seventy-five killed, and many wounded, in a few hours. Mr. Cutts was sick with diphtheria during the first part of his enlistment at Camp Chase, Ohio, followed by chronic diarrhea through his whole service, and did not recover for twenty years after the war, and still has some trouble. He was always an active soldier, served throughout as a private and was in all the campaigns, marches, battles, and skirmishes in which his regiment took part, except while a prisoner. He considers his worst experience as a prisoner just after his capture. From this time until the arrival at Mobile, four and a half days later, the captives had nothing to eat whatever, and drank water from the swamps pumped into tanks for use of engines. and his comrades were robbed of everything of value—their good clothing being stripped off of them, and filthy, ragged, rebel clothing given in exchange. At Mobile they received rations of a small piece of bacon and some hard tack, and had to drink swamp water. They were taken to Libby prison by boat and rail, and there they were searched, and those that had money were robbed of it. Wirtz was the ex-He was afterward the brute amining officer. who persecuted the prisoners to death at Andersonville, and was after the war hanged, at Washington, D. C., for his crimes. Mr. Cutts had $45 in new greenbacks concealed in the bottom of his pants, which were too poor to be taken, and he rolled these up at the bottom. His pocketbook was taken, and in this he had $28 in Confederate money and a comrade's note for $18. This was thrown on the table, and Mr. Cutts protested to Wirtz that the note could do them no good, and if he lived to get out would be of value to him, and that they could have the Confederate money in welcome. Wirtz said. "How do you know you will ever live to get out? Here, take your d-d pocketbook; we don't want it." Mr. Cutts had just bought the Confederate money for $5 from a Richmond business man. The rebels had no confidence in their own money.

In Libby prison Mr. Cutts received as ration a pint of cow-pea soup and a small piece of bacon, twice each day; it was horrible stuff and could hardly be eaten. He was sergeant of the mess, and, being too liberal in portioning it out, had none for himself. He was sick all the time he was in prison with chronic diarrhea, and the miserable food kept him so. Mr. Cutts was very independent and outspoken, but learned to win the respect of the rebel officers and the doctors in charge. Every morning at roll call an offer was made that any one of the prisoners who would take the oath of allegiance to the Confederate government and again not to take up arms against it, would be allowed to go free and be given plenty of food. Although starving slowly and in a vile prison, not a man was ever known to step from the ranks and accept this offer. The experience in this prison was too brutal Mr. Cutts saw Wirtz kick a solto describe. dier in the mouth and break his teeth because he was too weak to stand up at roll call. Mr. Cutts and another comrade assisted this poor fellow to stand during roll call, with his face covered with blood from the kick of the inhuman Wirtz. Mr. Cutts was finally taken to Annapolis, Md., with other prisoners, and there paroled in the camp. The prisoners presented a most pitiable sight. They were covered with vermin, and many of them had hardly a spot on their person not bitten or sore. They were stripped of their ragged and filthy clothing, given soap, and allowed to take a bath in the waters of the Chesapeake bay. The old clothing was burned and they were furnished with a suit of Uncle Sam's blue. is right to state here that the physician in charge at the hospital at Libby prison was a kind-hearted man, and did the best he could with the resources and medicine at his command.

After the war Mr. Cutts settled in Portage county. He married, the first time, in Windham township, December 16, 1864, Celia Yale, who was born in Windham, Ohio, a daughter of Edmund and Nancy (Russell) Yale. Mrs. Cutts died four years after marriage, leaving no children. She was a member of the Congregational church and a woman of many virtues. Mr. Cutts' second marriage took place January 4, 1871, in Hiram township, to Ellen S. Leach, who was born October 28, in Champion township, Trumbull county, Ohio, a daughter of Daniel and Mary A. (Shiveley) Leach.

Mr. Cutts has since the war been a farm-He first settled in Windham township on a farm, but after his second marriage settled at Sturgeon Bay, Wis., and was there engaged for a time in the nursery business. then returned to Ohio and settled, in 1873, on the present homestead. Mr. and Mrs. Cutts have been blessed with two children—Lucy L. and Willis R. Mr. Cutts is a member of Mark Horton post, G. A. R., at Garrettsville, Ohio, and has held the office of adjutant for many years. Politically he is a stanch republican. Mr. and Mrs. Cutts and their daughter, Lucy L., are members of the Congregational church, at Garrettsville, Ohio, in which Mr. Cutts was a deacon four years. Mr. Cutts is a public-spirited man and takes an active interest in public improvements. He was among the most active promoters of the pike between Hiram and Garrettsville, and held the office of pike superintendent during the grading and building, and is now holding the office for the third time. He was the first master of Garrettsville grange, No. 1436, and is at present chaplain. He is well known for his straightforward character and is a respected citizen.

Daniel B. Cutts, father of Roswell B. Cutts, was born at Orwell, Addison county, Vt., and a son of Thomas Cutts. Daniel B. married, in Vermont, Miss Lucy R. Smith, a descendant of an old colonial Vermont family of English descent. The Cuttses were also of English stock and soldiers in the war of the Revolution. Two brothers of the name settled in Vermont, and one of these finally settled in Virginia. Daniel B. Cutts was a shoemaker and tanner and currier. He came to Ohio in 1829 and located in Windham township, Portage county, but a few years later removed to Paris, Ohio, where he followed his trades of tanning and shoemaking. He sold out in 1864 and removed to Minnesota; subsequently, however, he returned to Garrettsville, where he died in 1873. His children by his first wife were Mary, Ira, Sarah A., Henry D., Roswell B., Emily J. and Fanny M. Mrs. Cutts died in 1864, while he was in the army, a member of the Methodist church, and Mr. Cutts next married in Garrettsville, Ohio, in 1871, Mrs. Eliza A. Frisby, who is still living. Mr. Cutts was also a member of the Methodist church and in politics was first a whig and then a republican, and was an honorable and upright man. He died in February, 1873.

RVIN O. HAYMAKER, one of the prominent farmers of Franklin township, Portage county, son of James D. and Mary R. (Olin) Haymaker, was born April 5, 1844, on the old homestead of his father, and received a common-school education, afterward attending a term at Mount He was early taught to work on the farm, his father being a thrifty farmer and a very industrious man. He married, April 5. 1866, in Brimfield, Portage county, Ohio, Miss Harriet E. Norton, who was born September 3, 1846, in Edinburg township, same county, a daughter of Joseph and Jeannette (Graham) Norton-Joseph Norton being of New England ancestry, born in 1813, in Litchfield county, Conn., and a pioneer of Portage county. Arvin O. Haymaker, our subject, has now a farm of 140 acres, well improved, on the borders of Twin Lakes, and it is beautifully situated, with a delightful prospect. The children are Homer A., Deborah J., Franklin P. He is a member of the Methand Abbie R. odist Episcopal church and is church trustee. Politically he is a republican and has held the office of township trustee four years. Haymaker is a man of excellent character and well educated. He taught school in his neighborhood for twenty-five winters, and was a successful teacher and well-known educator. His children are also well educated; Homer A. is a graduate of the Ohio Wesleyan university and Franklin P. and Deborah J. will graduate from the same institution the present year. At one time Mr. and Mrs. Haymaker had five children together at this excellent institution. The Haymaker family is one of the bestknown and intelligent in Portage county.

AMES NORTON, a prominent citizen of Garrettsville, was born in Hiram township, Portage county, Ohio, September 9, 1833, a son of Thuel and Harriet R. (Harrington) Norton, who were the parents of ten children, viz: Anna, born October 21, 1823; Seth D., a lawyer, born August 19, 1825—died in Ravenna; Edwin, born July 16, 1827 (deceased); Amelia C., born January 4, 1829; Julia M., born April 24, 1831; James, our subject; Lois E., born November 28, 1835—died in Trenton, Mo.; Emily E., born May 6, 1838; Richard C., president of the Southeast State Normal school at Cape Girardeau, Mo., born June 16, 1840, and Harriet R., born January 28, 1846.

Thuel Norton was born in New Hartford, Oneida county, N. Y., March 10, 1801, and was the third son of Peter and Elthina (Thompson) Norton, who came to Ohio when Thuel was but six years of age, and for two years lived in Trumbull county, then for a short time in Tallmadge, Summit county, and finally settled in Springfield, at that time in Portage, but now in Summit county—the site of Akron being then a mere wilderness. Here Thuel grew to manhood, and became renowned for his great physical powers. August 4, 1822, he married, in Hiram, Harriet Rebecca Harrington, who was born July 15, 1803, in Salisbury, Litchfield county, Conn., a daughter of John and Asenath (Marvin) Harrington, the result of the union being the children already Mr. Norton died in Hiram, April enumerated. 2, 1880, from injuries received by being thrown from a buggy by a runaway horse, and on August 30, 1880, while on a visit to a son and daughter in Garrettsville, Mrs. Norton was called to everlasting rest.

James Norton, the subject of this memoir, passed his early life virtually on the home farm in Hiram township, but when about thirteen years of age was injured by being thrown Irom a horse, and for three years his health was so poor in consequence that he was not even able to attend school. At sixteen, however, although still in poor health, he resumed his studies, walking to and from the district school at Freedom with the aid of a crutch and cane. In the autumn of 1851 he entered the Western Reserve Eclectic institute, well advanced in the common branches. During this term, a physician, learning that young Norton was still suffering from a dangerous sore on his arm, engaged with his father to heal it for a stipulated sum, and at the end of about six months the doctor's efforts were rewarded with complete success. After an attendance of three terms at the Eclectic institute, Mr. Norton engaged in teaching school, a vocation he followed until the close of 1861-keeping up his own studies in the meanwhile, chiefly at Hiram college, although he attended one term at the Shalersville academy. He next took a commercial course in Cleveland, and special lessons in penmanship under P. R. Spencer, Sr., at Geneva. In January, 1862, he entered the recorder's office at Ravenna, to which position he had been elected in October by a handsome majority. His duties here actually began January 6, 1862, and were concluded six years later in January, 1868—and during this period he was never absent a single busi-He declined to run for a third term. ness day. for the reason that disabled soldiers were at that time seeking the office. In the winter of 1868-69, Mr. Norton, with others, organized a banking institution in Garrettsville, of which he was for a time the cashier, but resigned an act afterward considered to have been a He was then engaged as superintendent of the Garrettsville public schools, to fill a vacancy, and filled the position four terms. Subsequently he was twice elected justice of the peace and served until 1895; twice as mayor of the incorporated village of Garrettsville, seven times as a member of the board of education, serving twenty-one years, and also served as clerk of the board twenty years. is now a notary public, and is engaged in the real estate, insurance and collection business. and has frequently been called upon to act as executor, administrator, assignee and guardian in the settlement or management of large estates.

The marriage of Mr. Norton took place December 17, 1859, to Miss Ann Eliza Taber, a native of Garrettsville. John Taber, father of Mrs. Norton, was born in Providence, R. I., April 29, 1798, and was married, in Providence, October 19, 1819, to Mary Henrietta Greene, who was born in Barre, Mass., June 21, 1799, and was a relative of Gen. Nathaniel Greene, of Revolutionary fame. Mr. Taber was carpenter on board of ship, and made some very long sea voyages. His ship was at Cillao

They moved to Ohio in 1829, and after a residence of four years in Mogadore, Summit county, they moved to Garrettsville. Mr. Taber spent about three and a half years among the gold mines of California, starting for that then faraway country in the spring of 1850. Taber died suddenly, while on his way to worship in Garrettsville, March 12, 1871, and June 2, 1884, Mrs. Taber passed away, dying in the house in Garrettsville in which she had lived over half a century. They were the parents of four children, viz: Mary Henrietta (Mrs. Dr. A. M. Sherman), born November 15, 1829—died October 26, 1853; John Herman, born August 10, 1832-died in Council Bluffs, Iowa, November 8, 1856; James Hunter, born June 21, 1835—died in Adrain, Mich., December 5, 1866, and Ann Eliza (now Mrs. Norton), born September 23, 1837. felicitous union of Mr. and Mrs. Norton have been born three children, of whom the firstborn died in infancy; James Edgar, born in Ravenna, March 18, 1866, and John Herman, born in Garrettsville, February 12, 1869. James E. and John H. further mention will shortly follow.

James Norton, the subject, has for forty years been a newspaper correspondent. In politics he has always been a republican, and has always filled with credit to himself and satisfaction of the public every office he has held. In religion he and wife have been members of the Disciples' church for many years, and he is at present clerk of the church board. He has made a success of life and is well provided with this world's goods, having overcome by his energy all the impediments on the road to fortune, and is still an active business man, honored and respected by the entire community of which he is a member.

James Edgar Norton, son of James and Ann Eliza (Taber) Norton, began attendance at the Garrettsville schools in the fall of 1873. and graduated from the high school June 1, In the fall of the same year he entered the senior preparatory class for a classical course at Hiram college, and triumphantly passed through to the junior class, at the annual exhibition of which, April 5, 1887, he greatly distinguished himself. Although his height was six feet precisely, and his average weight between 154 and 160 pounds, his health was never rugged nor robust, and it was probably owing to this circumstance that he met with an untimely death. On the evening of April 29, 1887, young Norton had been assisting in the preparation of the decorations of the chapel for a college entertainment, and, having answered to the supper bell, took a slight repast, and hastened back to complete the unfinished work of decoration; but the weather had been inclement, the college steps at the front were slippery, and, missing his footing, he was violently dashed against the corner of the step-stones, sustaining injuries which resulted in his death, shortly after six o'clock, Tuesday morning, May 3, 1887. was a most distressing one to his parents, and was the most severe they had ever suffered or have suffered since. The noble young man was deeply beloved by the faculty and students of Hiram college, and many were the letters of condolence forwarded to the despondent parents from friends in various parts of the country.

John Herman Norton, the youngest son of James and Ann Eliza (Taber) Norton, now one of the editors and proprietors of the "Scientific Machinist" of Cleveland, was graduated from the high school at Garrettsville, and from Hiram college with the class of 1892. For some little time after graduation he traveled as a solicitor for advertisements for the Scientific Machinist, and in the fall of 1892 his father purchased one-quarter interest in the concern, and presented it to the son, who now is one the managers of the business and is treasurer of the company. Mr. Norton was married, in 1892, to Miss Carrie P. Patch, daughter of A. J. Patch, a wealthy farmer near Hiram, and to this union one child has been born-Harold P. Mrs. Norton also graduated from Hiram college with the class Mr. Norton and wife are members of the Disciples' church, on Euclid avenue, Cleveland, and of this church Mr. Norton is clerk.

EROME B. HINMAN, janitor of the new school-building at Mantua Station, Portage county, Ohio, and a faithful ex-soldier of the Civil war, was born in Oswego, N. Y., July 9, 1835, and is a son of James and Dorothy (Fox) Hinman, the Hinman family being of German origin. In somewhat early times, three of the brothers of this German family came to America in company with each other, but separated on arriving, one settling in New York state, one in Ohio, and one in Michigan. Of the brother who settled in the Empire state, Jeronie B. is a descendant, and was but two years old when brought to Ohio by his mother, then a widow, who was accompanied by her parents. Daniel Fox, father of Mrs. Dorothy Hinman, settled on a new farm in the woods at Auburn, Geauga county, but died one year later, and Dorothy came to Portage county, was married to William Springer, of Streetsboro, and bore him two children—John and Henry.

Jerome B. Hinman was reared to farming in Streetsboro township, and August 13, 1862, enlisted, at Shalersville, in company D, One Hundred and Fourth Ohio volunteer infantry. and served until honorably discharged, June 17, 1865, at Greensboro, N. C., the war having been brought to a close. He took part in the following battles, among others, these mentioned being the hardest fought: Covington, Ky., September 10, 1862; Danville, Ky., March 24, 1863; Knoxville, Tenn., November to December 4, 1863; Dallas, May 25 to June 4, 1864; Kenesaw Mountan, Ga., June 9; Pine Mountain, Ga., June 13; Lost Mountain, June 16, and again at Kenesaw Mountain, June 27 to 30, 1864; Atlanta, July 28; Eutaw Creek, August 6; Columbia, Tenn., November 24 to 29; Atlanta Ga., September 2; Franklin, Tenn., November 30; Nashville, December 15 and 16; Fort Anderson, N. C., February 18, 1865; Town Creek, February 20, 1865. At Dallas, Ga., he was shot slightly through the left breast by a Confederate cavalryman, and for a few days was confined in field hospital. Mr. Hinman was a brave and faithful soldier, was never absent from his post with the exception just mentioned, caused by his wound; was on every march and in every battle in which his regiment was engaged, and in every skirmish, excepting what may have taken place when, for a few weeks, he was on detailed duty as guard at a railroad station at Knoxville, Tenn., and for meritorious conduct was promoted to be wagon master, a position he held for two years. The commander of the One Hundred and Fourth Ohio infantry was Col. James Reilly. It captured eleven Confederate flags-more than half the number captured by the entire brigade, which was twenty.

After the war, Mr. Hinman returned to Portage county and settled in Shalersville, and December 10, 1865, was married, at Freedom, Ohio, to Miss Mary H. Chalker, who was born in that town July 5, 1835, a daughter of Enos and Eunice (Austin) Chalker. After marriage Mr. Hinman lived in Shalersville one year, then bought a home in Freedom, where he lived twenty-seven years, and then came to Mantua Station in 1893, since when he has been janitor of the new school building. To his marriage there has been born one son, Clayton J., who was married to Miss Clara Gary and has one daughter, Mary D.

Enos Chalker, father of Mrs. Mary H. Hinman, was born in Susquehanna county, Pa., was of Scotch-Irish parentage, and was reared a farmer. He married, at Turin, Lewis county, N. Y., Miss Eunice Haskins, a daughter of Thomas Haskins, who was a soldier of the war of 1812, and who died in Portage county, Ohio, in 1844, at about seventy years of age, his remains lying in an unmarked grave in the cemetery of Freedom. Enos Chalker came to Ohio in 1832, and located on a farm, but later removed to the Thomas Haskins farm at Freedom, on which he passed his remaining years, dying in February, 1897, at the age of eighty-six, the present age of his widow, who still resides on the old homestead. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Chalker were five in number, and were named Mary H., Eunice A., Edna V., James W. and Martha A.

John Springer, half-brother of Jerome B. Hinman, was a private in company K, Twenty-third Ohio volunteer infantry, in the three-year service; re-enlisted as a veteran in the same organization, and went through the entire war, participating in all the campaigns in which his regiment had any part.

Mr. and Mrs. Hinman are consistent and conscientious members of the Disciples' church, and freely contribute toward its support. Mr. Hinman is a charter member of Bentley post, No. 294, G. A. R., at Mantua Station, in which he has served as quartermaster and as junior and senior vice-commander. As a citizen he is highly esteemed for his strictly moral character, and is equally respected for his excellent record as a soldier.

RS. MARY R. HAYMAKER, widow of James D. Haymaker, is a daughter of Arvin Olin (born at Shaftsbury, Vt., July 13, 1797), son of Ezra Olin, a son of John Olin, third, and born in Rhode Island, March 23, 1772. Ezra Olin was three and one-half years old when his parents removed to Vermont and settled in the town of Shaftsbury. He was five and one-half years old when the battle of Bennington was fought on August 16, 1777, and well remember hearing the booming of the cannon on that memorable day, his home being near the battle ground.

Ezra Olin had but a limited education and and was reared a farmer; he was early taught the lessons of industry, thrift and economy. In March, 1791, he married Ruth Green, a daughter of Samuel and Ruth Green, natives of Rhode Island. Ruth Green was born in Rhode Island and moved with her parents to Vermont when she was quite young, and resided there until she was married, and soon after they moved to the old place, some two miles northeast of the center of Shaftsbury, which afterward became the homestead where the children were all born, with one exception. Asa, Philip, Ezra, Ruth, Maria, Paris, Heman, Truman, Mary A. and Almira. Ezra Olin was a farmer of Vermont and had a comfortable pioneer home in the midst of the Green mountains, and by their sturdy thrift and industry lived in frugal comfort. Mr. Olin was a whig in politics and a man of sterling worth and integrity and reared his family in the paths of honesty and virtue. In 1824 he sold his farm in Shaftsbury and moved by team to Genesee county, New York state, where six of his sons had preceded him and were busy in clearing up the farm. His wife and four of the children were left to follow the next June. They went from Albany to Rochester, N. Y., by canal boat. He settled on a farm partly cleared by his son Arvin. He finally cleared up a farm at Perry, consisting of about 100 acres, and made a good home, and here passed his remaining days and died November 5, 1858, aged eighty-six years.

The Olins descended from sterling Welsh ancestry. John Olin, the first of the name in America settled in East Greenwich, R. 1. He had been pressed on board a British man-ofwar on the coast of Wales, but deserted at Boston, Mass. Tradition states that the name was originally Llewellyn, and that the original John changed it to Olin. John Olin was a Welshman and had red hair. He was a farmer and made his home near the head waters of the Narragansett bay and here reared his family. He was married in East Greenwich, R. I., to Susannah Spencer, October 4, 1708, by Thomas Fry, justice. She was a daughter of John and Susannah Spencer, who emigrated from Wales. The genealogy of two of their four children, John and Henry, comes down to us with unerring accuracy. John Olin, the first, died at Newport, R. I., June 10, 1725, aged sixty-one years. Of the other children, there is no record. Arvin Olin, son of Ezra and Ruth (Green) Olin, was born July 13, 1797, and at the age of thirteen years was bound out to a farmer for seven months of the summer season, until nineteen years old. During a part of each winter he was allowed to attend school, and at nineteen his father gave him his freedom. The first summer he worked for a farmer for $16 per month and taught school during the winter in a district school. About October 1st of the same year they packed their few effects in a two-horse wagon, which he hired, and with a teamster started for their new home in the west, as that part of New York state was called, and they arrived at his small log cabin in the woods about the 20th of October, and he, by working for others and the help of his brother John, and making potash, was quite enabled to get through the winter. joined by his brother Samuel, who came out the second year, to whom he sold a part of these fifty acres, and they worked together for Mr. Olin then sold three and one-half years. Mary R. Olin received the usual limited school education and married at fifteen years of age, November 29, 1835, in Franklin township, James D. Haymaker, the son of Frederick and Rachael (Davis) Haymaker.

John Haymaker, son of Jacob and the father of Frederick, came to Portage county with his wife, Sallie, and children, Jacob, George and Catherine, and settled in Kent, on the Cuyahoga river, coming from Warren, Ohio, where they had located a year previously, having come from Pittsburg. They were of German descent and members of a large connection of that name in central and northern Pennsylvania. The father, Jacob, had prospected through this section of the country during the spring of 1805, and, being pleased with the country, now Franklin township, purchased of Olmstead's agent a tract of land consisting of the present site of the Kent mills. Arriving at the Cuyahoga, John and his family took possession of a rude cabin left by the surveyors, in 1803, which stood just west of where the upper bridge now is. This hut had been used for several years indiscriminately by the Indians and a shelter for deer and other wild animals, and was about a foot deep with excrement, which had to be shoveled out before occupation. During the time they occupied this hovel, the Indians came around in great numbers, as the headquarters of the red-skins were at the falls of the Cuyahoga and on a small stream in Streetsboro township. day, while the Haymakers were occupying this cabin, a few Indians came there and the squaw, as usual, took her papoose from her back and stood the board to which it had been strapped up against the logs of the cabin, as they never took their children into the houses of whites, except in very cold weather. After the squaw had gone in, a wild hog came through the brush, and grasping the Indian baby ran off with it; the mother, hearing the noise, ran out and rescued her babe, but not until she had badly beaten the hog. spring of 1806, George Haymaker, brother of John, and their father, Jacob, came in. Jacob built a house on the west side of the river where the Kent mills now stand. During the fall of 1806 Frederick Haymaker came in. He was another son of Jacob. He purchased a tract of land including most of the upper village. He was a man of fine educational and natural abilities, and served as private secretary to the famous Aaron Burr on the well known expedition for which Burr was Frederick was the father of tried for treason. twenty children by three wives. The Haymaker family owned about 600 acres on the present site of Kent. The older Haymakers were Indian traders. During 1807 the Haymaker's built a small mill. The stones for grinding were those known as hard heads and were prepared by Bradford Kellogg, of Hudson. The mill was a very crude affair and was used before it was entirely finished. Crotched poles were planted, upon which other poles were placed. A coarse cloth was used as a bolting-cloth—the work being done by hand. This primitive affair was of great convenience to the settlers and was used with but little improvement for several years. The first white child born in Kent was John F. Haymaker, son of John and Sallie Haymaker, born September 11, 1807. The first death was that of Eve Haymaker, wife of Jacob, father of the first settler, John. Jacob died in 1819, John in 1827, George in 1838 and Frederick died in Trumbull county Ohio, at Leavittsburg, in Sallie died on June 15, 1869, at the great age of ninety-four years, having lived in this township seventy years. The old burying ground in which Eve Haymaker was buried in 1810 was donated by one of the Haymakers for burial purposes and consisted of two acres of land. In 1831-2 Federick Haymaker sold his property, consisting of 100 acres of land and a fine water power in the upper village of Kent. Frederick was born at Little York, Pa., November 7, 1772. He married Eleanor Robertson, who was born in Pittsburg, Pa., March 9, 777, of Scotch-Irish ancestry, and died at Pittsburg, Pa., November By his first marriage to Eleanor 19, 1807. Robertson he was the father of the following children, John, Sarah, Mary, Andrew, Margaret, Sarah, and Susannah.

Mrs. Haymaker died, and he then married Rachael Davis, who was born December 12, 1788, at Shippensburg, Pa., and she died September 15, 1809, in Franklin township, Portage county, Ohio, the mother of one child, James Davis.

Frederick Haymaker married, for his third wife, Mary Swan, born June 19, 1789, in Westmoreland county, Pa., and bore the following children: Allen, William D., Rachael, Eliza, Rebecca, Frederick, George, Cynthia, Jesse, Francis, Marion, and Henry Clay. A period of over thirty-six years elapsed between the birth of his first child and his last, who was born seventeen years before his death. His first child was born when he was about twenty-five years old, and the last when he was about sixty-one years old. Frederick Haymaker was a prosperous man, of excellent character and much respected among the pioneers. In early days he built a woolen-mill at Kent, Ohio, which he ran several years. He was a man of marked ability and had a good knowledge of medicine, which he practiced among the pioneers. In his earlier days he was a well-known Indian trader.

ARREN T. HAYES, one of the most respected citizens of Streets-boro township, Portage county, Ohio, and a gallant soldier of the late Civil war, springs from an old colonial family of Massachusetts, and was born in Burton, Geauga county, Ohio, May 31, 1846, a son of Elijah and Sallie (Fowler) Hayes. He received a good common-school education, and enlisted, at the age of eighteen years, at Cleveland, Ohio, March 3, 1864, in company K. Ohio volunteer infantry, for three years or during the war, and served until honorably discharged at Camp Chase, Ohio, July 13, 1865—a period of one year, four months and thirteen days. He was always an active soldier, except one month, when he was home on sick furlough with lung fever. The winter was extremely cold and the summer hot, and Mr. Hayes suffered a great deal from exposure, from which he has never recovered. Warren T. His arduous duties were guarding and taking care of rebel prisoners at Johnson's Island, but he was frequently called upon to help form detachments for important services elsewhere. His work during the enlistment ofttimes called him in pursuit of the rebels in western Virginia, during the year Mr. Hayes enjoys the confidence of his comrades, as well as those who know him in his vicinity. He is possessed of a genial, cordial disposition, is sympathetic in manner and has a good word for all. The citizens of the United States should ever honor those brave men who offered their lives, if need be, as a sacrifice upon the altar of liberty.

Mr. Hayes returned to Geauga county after the war and engaged in farming until 1870, when he came to Portage county, and here married, March 22, 1871, in Streetsboro township, Laura A. Trotter, a native of the township, born September 17, 1842, a daughter of John and Harriet (Johnson) Trotter, the former of whom, an old settler of Streetsboro, was born in Ireland and came to New York state, and thence to Aurora township, where he died a venerable man of eighty-three years. His children were Laura A. and Annie. Mrs. Hayes was the eldest in her father's family. Her sister Annie was the wife of Melville Smith, of Streetsboro township. They had one child. Annie. and she is the wife of William Bell, who is a Mrs. Smith died October 20, 1873. Mr. and Mrs. Haves settled on the present homestead after marriage, and their children are Fred A. and Annie Z. In politics Mr. Hayes is a republican, and cast his first presidential vote for U. S. Grant; is a member of the G. A. R., William T. Sherman post, No. 68, Hudson, Ohio, and is at present officer of the Mr. Hayes is a straightforward, honorable man and a good citizen.

George, great-grandfather of Warren T. Hayes, was a farmer of Connecticut and was born December 12, 1726. The first of the name of Hayes in America was born in Scotland in 1655, came to Windsor, Conn., in 1680, moved to Simsbury, Conn., in 1698 and died there September 2, 1725. He married, the first time, at Windsor, Conn., about 1682. and had born to him a son, George, who died an infant, April 3, 1683. The first wife died in 1698, and he next married, also at Windsor; Conn., Abigail Dibble, only daughter of Samuel Dibble, of Windsor, by his She was born January 19, 1868, first wife. and died in 1725. Eleven children are mentioned in his will of April 30, 1725, viz: Abigail, born in Windsor 1664 and married Paul T. Thompkins; Daniel, born in Windsor, April 26, 1686, ancestor of president R. B. Hayes; Sarah, born in Windsor, 1687-8, and married John Gossard; Mary, born in Windsor, 1690 and married William Rice; Joanna, born in Windsor, 1690 and married James Hilver; George, the third, born Windsor, March 9, 1695 and died in or after 1765; William, born in Windsor, June 13, 1697; Samuel, born in Simsbury, 1699.

George Hayes, the fourth, was born at Windsor, March 9, 1765, and by his marriage became the father of the following children: Jonathan, Zera, George, Elisha, Jane, Mary, David, Benjamin, Jacob, Elija, Amos, James and Sarah.

The Hayes family is of undoubted Scottish ancestry, although, since the days of William the Conqueror, branches of the family have lived in England. Four families by the name of Hayes are recorded in New England in the seventeenth century—one of them in New Hampshire, and the other three in Connecticut.

First—Thomas, of Milford, Conn., 1645, whose descendants removed a few years later to Newark, N. J., where they remain to this day.

Second—Nathaniel, of Norwalk, Conn., 1651, of whose family no trace is found after the year 1729.

Third—John, of Dover, N. H., who came in 1640, from Scotland, and was the founder of a widespread and honorable New England family, many of whom still cluster around the old homes in New Hampshire and Maine.

Fourth—George, of Windsor, Conn., who came, also, from Scotland as early as 1680, being then about twenty-five years of age, and whom an early tradition among his progeny calls a brother of the New Hampshire emigra-No proof of this nor any relationship has yet appeared, but the tradition shows the undoubted Scottish descent of both families, and their coming to New England about the same time and the unmistakable coincidence From George Hayes, of Windsor, of names. His wife died, and also his children. Afterward he married Abigail Dibble, of Long Island, and settled in Windsor, Conn., and by her he had ten children. George Hayes died at Simsbury, Conn., September 2, 1725; Daniel is the next in this line; then Ezekiel; then Rutherford, and then Rutherford, the father of R. B. Hayes, expresident of the United States. Of Daniel, the second generation, it is stated that when he was about twenty-two years old he was taken prisoner by the Indians, almost in sight of his old home, and carried a captive to Canada, and held four years. An interesting account of this is given in Phelps's History of For full Hayes genealogy, see life Sunbury. of George Hayes, of Windsor, and his descendants, by Rev. Charles Wells, M. A., Westfield, N. Y., printed at Buffalo, N. Y., by Wells, Jones & Co.

Eli Hayes, grandfather of Warren T., came to Burton, Geauga county, Ohio, in 1801, and cleared up a farm of about 100 acres, and here remained until his death on his farm—a venerable man of about ninety-three years of age, and a respected pioneer. His children were Simeon, Elijah, Amos, Amanda, and Polly.

Elijah Hayes, father of Warren T., was born at Russell, Hampden county, Mass., in 1784, and came with his parents to Ohio when seven years old. He was always a farmer and owned a farm of 117 acres of good land. To his marriage with Sallie Fowler were born the following children: Eber B., Arvilla L., and Warren T. Mr. Hayes lived to be eighty-seven years old, and died at Chardon, Geagua county, Ohio. He was a member of the Methodist church from the age of twenty-one years, and was a class leader. In politics, he was a whig and republican, and was an honored citizen and upright man.

ILLIAM H. HARR is a respected citizen of Mantua Station, though he was born in Green county, Ohio, August, 1, 1845, the son of Jacob and Maria Harr, both of whom came from Washington county, Md.

William H. removed, with his father, to Dayton, Ohio, when he was about eight years old, and attended first the public school and then the free academy, and gained a good education. He attended school until 1860, and then began learning the milling business at Tippecanoe City, Ohio. He enlisted in August, 1862, at Cincinnati, Ohio, as a seaman on the United States gunboat Tyler for two years, and served until his time of enlistment expired, receiving an honorable discharge at Cairo, Ills., on the Clara Dolsen, a United States receiving ship, August, 1864. He was in the battle of Lake Providence, skirmish at Millican Bend, and at Vicksburg, Hayne's Bluff, and in the Red River expedition and a battle at Helena, Ark., and in several minor engagements. Mr. Harr was a good soldier, and prompt and cheerful in the discharge of all his duties, and served his country faithfully. considers the hardest battle he was in was at Helena, Ark. His captain was James Pritchett, a regular naval officer, ranking as captain.

After the war Mr. Harr returned to Tippe-canoe City, Ohio, and continued the milling business as soon as he was able, one year being wasted on account of his disease—the chronic diarrhea, incurred in the war, and from which disease he has ever since suffered. He came to Portage county about 1870, and bought Fenn Valley mills, which he still continues to run. He, in company with his father, Jacob Harr, built in 1876 the Mantua City mills, which burned in 1879, and W. H. Harr, who then owned the mill, lost about $9,000. He then returned to the Fenn Valley mills and one year later went to Xenia, Ohio, and bought a mill which he sold one year later, and then operated a mill in Tippecanoe City for two years, and thirteen years ago returned to the Fenn Valley mill, which he has operated since.

Politically he is a republican and a member of the G. A. R., Mantua Station, Bentley post, of which he has served as adjutant; also is a member of the K. of P. Mr. Harr has always been a hard-working, industrious man, and was a good soldier, and has always stood high for his integrity of character.

Mr. Harr married, August 18, 1878, Nannie J. Crocker, born July 27, 1850, at Hiram, Portage county, Ohio, daughter of Amos and Mary Jane (Mannis) Crocker. Amos Crocker was the son of David and Nannie (Warren) Crocker. David Crocker was born in Connecticut and came as a pioneer to Portage county, settled in Freedom township, where he owned and cleared up a large farm, and was a substantial farmer. He was the father of Thomas, Amos, Orlando, Lucretia, Charlotte, Salomie and Nancy. David Crocker lived to be an aged man and died on his farm, a much respected pioneer.

Amos Crocker was born in Connecticut, and came when a boy to Ohio with his parents, and here married Mary J. Mannis. He was a blacksmith and wagonmaker, and lived in Freedom and Hiram townships all his life. He was a mechanical genius and could make anything of iron and wood. He made guns as well as wagons, and many other things, and was a well-known man. His children were Nannie J., Emma D., Mary L., Lillie G., Olive A., James T., Ella M. and Rose. Mr. Crocker was an industrious man, much respected by all. He died aged fifty-three years. His widow lives in Hiram, aged sixty-three.

Jacob Harr, father of subject, was the son of Rudolph, who was the son of Rudolph, and this name has been handed down to this branch of the Harr family in America for five generations. In early times two brothers came over-one named Rudolph. They left one family home to hold the old family name, which was of noble ancestry. The family settled on the line of Maryland and Pennsylvania before the Revolutionary war. dolph, grandfather of subject, was a pioneer in Washington county, Md., where he was one of the best and largest farmers of that county. He sold out and bought a farm in Montgomery county, Ohio, as a pioneer, settling in Dayton, at Shakerstown. Here he had a good farm of 160 acres, and here passed his active life. He was drowned in the Miami river at Tippecanoe City.

Jacob Harr, father of subject, was born in Washington county, Md., and came to Montgomery county, Ohio, when a young man. He had learned the milling trade in Maryland, He was married, in 1837, near Baltimore. in Dayton, to Marie Howard, by Rev. D. Winters, and their children were Nettie A., William H., Amanda E., Mary C., and Anna Mr. Harr worked at his trade, of a miller in Dayton, and in the early 'fifties owned the largest mill in that city. He located, in 1858, in Montgomery, Ala., and engaged in milling, but was interrupted by the Civil war, when he returned to Tippecanoe, re-engaged in milling, and then came with his son, William H., to Mantua Station, where he died, in 1876. He was a member of the old Dunkard church, and an honest and upright man. Marie Howard was of German ancestry, and was the daughter of H. Hunt. the grandfather of Mrs. Jacob Harr, was a commissioned officer in the Hessian army during the Revolutionary war, and resigned his commission from the British army and joined the patriot army. He was captured and was to be shot as a deserter, but through Gen. Washington's influence he was exchanged.

Mr. and Mrs. Harr have the following children: Rudolph Howard, born August 20, 1879; Blaine, born January 9, 1881; William Oliver, born January 14, 1883, and John Benjamin, born February 10, 1885.

BRAHAM HUFFMAN, a pioneer farmer of Edinburg township, Portage county, Ohio, is a native of Red Bank township, Armstrong county, Pa., and was born January 27, 1821, a son of William and Christina (Money) Huffman.

William Huffman was a native of Vermont, and his wife of Pennsylvania, in which latter state they were married, and about 1825 came to Ohio, and for six years lived at Deerfield, Portage county. Mr. Huffman then purchased a farm of 100 acres in Rootstown township, where he followed farming until his death at the age of eighty-six years, his widow living to reach the advanced age of ninety-two. They were the parents of nine children beside the subject, who were named Philip, Henry, Adam, John, Martha, Catherine, Jacob, William, and Anna, all now deceased, with the exception of Abraham (the subject).

Abraham Huffman, who was but four years of age when brought by his parents to Ohio, was educated in the only school-house then in his neighborhood. This was a rude log structure, the light to which was admitted through holes cut in the log walls, and protected by cheese-cloth. The teacher generally boarded with one patron and then with another, and his fee was $1 per term of three months for each pupil, and this old building was situated on the farm Mr. Huffman now owns. He well remembers the wild animals and birds that inhabited the woods when he was a boy —among which were bears, foxes, deer, wolves, squirrels and turkeys; and he also recalls an incident which occurred to his father one bright Sunday morning when the latter was on his way to church at Atwater. The father was threading his way along a narrow path through the woods, when he sighted a bear in his way, which he succeeded in "treeing;" calling for help, he was soon joined by his sons, who secured a rifle from their home at no great distance, and bruin soon became the victim of the deadly aim of the father, who then pursued his way to the meeting house, while the boys lugged the bear to their home. to be further discussed at future meals.

After leaving school subject went to farming with his parents in Rootstown. He married, January 2, 1842, Miss Jane Summerill, who was born March 23, 1824, in Lexington township, Stark county, Ohio, a daughter of Harrison and Hope (Crockford) Summerill, the former a native of Virginia and the latter of New Jersey. The father of Harrison was of English descent, was a slaveholder in Virginia, and met his death at the hand of one of his own slaves. Harrison was born in 1789, served in the war of 1812, and died in Indiana in 1861, while on a visit to some of his children and his wife. Hope, who was of Scotch descent, born in 1800, died in Lexington, Stark county, Ohio, in 1833. After marriage Mr. Huffman started farming on his own account, leasing land from his father, in Rootstown, on which he remained several years, and then, disposing of his lease to a sister, moved to Edinburg township, where he purchased a farm three-quarters of a mile south of his present place, and this farm of fifty-eight acres of improved land he sold to Stacy Dole. He then purchased from Stacy Dole and John Wilks a tract of 102 acres, of which he sold one acre to the township as a site for a school building. This tract Mr. Huffman has converted into a comfortable home, and here resides with his wife and daughter and two grandchildren. The union of Mr. and Mrs. Huffman has been blessed with three children-Alvira Rosalia. Marion I. and Hope Victoria. Of these Alvira R. is the wife of Lucius F. Butler, an agriculturist, of Rootstown, and is the mother of two children-Mary Lillian and Clarence Metz. Mary Lillian is the wife of Dr. Mallott, of Rootstown Center, a man of brilliant education. Marion is married to Emma Bow, resides in Randolph township, and is the father of one child, Mertie B., who is the wife of Charles Colton and the mother of one child, Glen Colton. Hope Victoria was first married to William J. Stratton, to whom she bore one child-Marion I.-and after the death of Mr. Stratton was married to David Luli, by whom she became the mother of another child-Helen Jane. Hope Victoria resides with her two children on the home farm with her parents. Mrs. Huffman had three sisters and two brothers, and of this family of six there are only three survivors, viz: Mrs. Huffman, the eldest; Susan, wife of David Wood, a native of the Highlands of Scotland, and residing in Waterville, Minn.; William, a farmer, of Michigan, who married a Miss Howe (now deceased), and had born to him seven children. Clarence Metz Huffman is employed in the pension office at Washington, D. C.

In April, 1881, Mr. Huffman rented his farm and retired to Atwater, where he conducted the hotel known as the American house for eight years, when, failing health disinclining him for further business pursuits, he rented his hotel and returned to his farm, where he is passing his days in peace, as a wealthy and honored citizen is well entitled to do. Mr. Huffman is not connected with any secret order, nor has he ever held a public office, although in his political proclivities he is a democrat. No man in the township, however, is more respected or more favorably known throughout Portage county.

He was, however, confined in hospital with bloody flux at Helena, Ark, ten days-many of his regiment dying away quickly of that dread disease. He considers his hardest battle to be Champion Hills, and the next hardest Port Gibson. In front of Spanish Fort, the rebels charged the picket line at daybreak. He was sergeant of the picket, and held his position until the line broke, and he found his squad surrounded, but he escaped, leaving but few men killed. For his gallant conduct on this occasion he was promoted to be first sergeant. He considers the Vicksburg campaign to be the most severe in which he was engaged, as in this he carried eight days' rations, and 120 pounds of ammunition for several days. Mr. Whitestine was a very hardy soldier, and endured all the hardships of a soldier's life with fortitude, and served the country faithfully.

After the war Mr. Whitestine returned to Huntington and engaged in contracting and teaming. He married there, October 8, 1868, Rebecca Immel, a native of Ohio, and a daughter of David and Elizabeth Immel. Mr. Whitestine moved to Columbus, Ohio, in 1871, and engaged in contracting, and in 1877 came to Akron, where he has since lived and has prospered. Mr. and Mrs. Whitestine are the parents of the following children: David, Celenia, Chester and Jessie. Mr. Whitestine is a member of the G. A. R., Buckley post, Akron, in which he has held the offices of officer of the day, senior and junior vicecommander. In politics he is a republican. He is also a member of the Knights of Honor, Spartan lodge, in which he has held office of director, and likewise a member of the Royal Arcanum, at Akron. Mr. Whitestine is yet well preserved, for a man who saw so much exposure and service as a soldier. His brother George was a private of company E, Seventyfifth regiment, Indiana volunteer infantry, and was killed in the battle of Stone River, when he was but seventeen years old.

HOMAS T. HOPKINS, one of the oldest and most highly respected citizens of Palmyra township, Portage county, Ohio, is a native of southern Wales, and was born April 9, 1818, a son of Thomas and Eleanor (Davis) Hopkins.

Thomas Hopkins, father of Thomas T., was a farmer in Wales and one of the most extensive dealers in live stock in his section of the country. To his marriage with Eleanor Davis were born eight children, of whom Thomas T. is the sole survivor, the deceased having borne the names of Samuel, Hopkins, Daniel, David, Mary, Margaret and Hannali. The father died in 1830, at the age of sixtyone years, and the mother in 1861, at the advanced age of eighty-seven years. The father never left his native land, but the mother. after her husband's decease, crossed the ocean to visit her son, the subject, and then returned to Wales, where she passed the remainder of her days, honored by all who knew her.

Thomas T. Hopkins, when a mere lad of fourteen years, came alone to America in 1832, and for eight years was employed in mining at Pomeroy, Meigs county, Ohio; he then went to St. Louis, Mo., and for some time was engaged in mining in the vicinity of that city, then lived in Pennsylvania three years, and finally settled down to farming in Palmyra township, his present home. ber 27, 1855, he here married Miss Eleanor Thomas, who was born in Caemarthen, Wales, November 14, 1833, a daughter of Thomas and Rachel (Jenkins) Thomas, who came to America in 1852, and settled in Palmyra town-Mrs. Rachel Thomas was a daughter of David and Eleanor (Thomas) Jenkins, and bore her husband nine children, of whom five are still living, viz: Eleanor, now Mrs. Hopkins; Mary, wife of Edward Jones; Ann, now Mrs. Cowell; Thomas, and Rachel, wife of Edwin Bigelow; Daniel died in 1862, aged fifteen; John died in the army in 1863, at the age of nineteen years; David died April 21, 1890, when sixty-one years old, and one child died in infancy. The mother of this family died in August, 1853, at the age of forty-four years, and the father in 1877, when sixty-nine vears old.

The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Hopkins was blessed with three bright children, but these were all called to eternal rest, within a few weeks of each other, in the fall of 1862—Eleanor died at the age of six years, Rachel at four, and Samuel at three years of age—all dying of diphtheria. Since his residence in Palmyra township Mr. Hopkins has devoted his attention strictly to agriculture, and his farm is one of the neatest and best in the township, over which he still keeps a supervision. He has so lived as to win the love and esteem of his neighbors, and his declining years are being passed in peace, unmarred by any retrospect of an evil action.

OHN H. HOFFMAN, tinner, of Deerfield, Ohio, is considered one of the most enterprising citizens of this town. as he is one of the most highly respected. He comes of a family which traces its lineage back as far as the year 1400, to one Nicholas Hoffman, a reputable German burgher. Mr. Hoffman was born in Moore township, Northampton county, Pa., April 4, 1823, son of John and Maria (Seigfried) Hoffman, natives of that county, who were the parents of five children, of whom our subject, John H., is the eldest; J. J., Michael S., Amanda, wife of George Bartholomew, of Northampton, Pa., and Henry E., deceased. Both parents are dead, the father dying at the age of eighty-three, and the mother at the age of eighty-five. Both were active members of the Reformed church.

Our subject's paternal grandfather, Michael Hoffman, was a farmer and distiller in Northampton county, Pa. He married a Miss Greenameyer, who bore him the following children: Michael, Catherine, John, Paul, Edward, William, who has a son who has served in the Prussian army and is now living in Manheim, Germany, engaged in the consular service; Polly, Susan and Samuel.

The maternal grandfather of our subject, John Seigfried, was a native of Northampton, Pa., a farmer-miller and a major in the war of 1812. He married a Miss Traisbach and had two children, our subject's mother and Lavina, wife of Samuel Lynemand, who died at Freeport, Ill.

John H. Hoffman was reared a farmer, receiving what educational advantages the schools of his neighborhood offered. At the age of eighteen he left the farm and apprenticed himself to the tinner's trade. Upon completing this apprenticeship, he went to Allentown, Pa., where he remained a short time, going thence to Reading, where, for four years, he was employed in a responsible capacity as tinner and coppersmith in the works of the Reading & Philadelphia Railroad company. It was during his residence at this place that' Mr. Hoffman was married, in August, 1847, to Miss Rosanna Baker, a daughter of Godfrey Baker, a stone and building contractor, who came to this country when a young man, settled at Reading and married a Miss Hoyer, who bore him but one child, Ros-To this first marriage of Mr. Hoffman were born three children, all living: Mary A., wife of Jasper N. Gibbons, of Alliance, Ohio; Winfield Scott, of Alliance, married Susan Luther (deceased), and Mrs. Peters; Josephine, who resides at Ravenna. Mrs. Hoffman died June 11, 1862, at the age of sixtyfour years, and our subject was married again, in September, 1865, to Mrs. Henriette Carber, who was born in Deerfield, Ohio. Her father, A. H. Wilcox, is one of the oldest residents of Deerfield now living. He was born in 1812, and for years followed the trade of carpenter, then settled on a farm. He married Miss Elizabeth Diver (deceased), daughter of John and Christina (Hartzell) Diver, and to them were born nine children, six of whom, Mrs. Hoffman, George, William, Charles, Cornelius and James, are still living; Joseph and Julia are deceased, and one died in infancy. In 1852 Mr. Hoffman left Reading, and returned to Northampton, where he embarked in the tinning business for himself. He remained there for six years, and in 1858, settled in Deerfield, continuing in business until the war broke out, when the country's need claimed his services. He entered the service at Cleveland, as private, in company F, Forty-second Ohio volunteer infantry, Capt. H. Williards. He saw much active service, being a participant in the following engagements: Chickasaw Bayou, Fort Hindman, Ark., Grand Gulf, Port Gibson, Champion Hill, Raymond, Miss., Big Black River, siege of Vicksburg, and a number of skir-In his first engagement Mr. Hoffman was wounded in his left hand by an exploding shell, and at Vicksburg suffered a sunstroke, from the effects of which he has never fully recovered. He received his honorable discharge at Camp Chase, Ohio, July 30, 1863. At the close of his service, Mr. Hoffman resumed his business at Deerfield, and has been thus engaged ever since. In 1867 he was elected justice of the peace in this township, and held that office for twenty-four years successively. He is at present township clerk, and holds a commission as notary public. Mr. Hoffman is an honored member of Ravenna post, No. 327, G. A. R., and he and his wife are active members of the German Reformed church.

John D. Jones was reared a farmer, and on settling in Palmyra township purchased 341 acres of land, of which 141 acres later became the property of his son, David D. To the marriage of John D. and Margaret Jones were born nine children, only two of whom are still

Three years after his marriage, David D. He had the misfortune, however, to lose his wife March 16, 1883, she dying at the age of forty-four years, seven months and ten days, in the faith of the Congregational church, leaving no children. He then went with his regiment to Springfield, Mo., where he was mustered out September 12, 1865, having served over four years in one of the most active cavalry regiments of the Civil war. Mr. Kissel has served as township supervisor one term. He and family are members of St. Joseph's Catholic church, to the support of which they contribute freely and liberally, and they hold the-esteem of all the members of the community in which they live.

ENRY WOLFCOMER, a substantial citizen of Aurora township, Portage county, Ohio, is a son of John and Eliza (Kiercoff) Wolfcomer, the former of whom was born in Prussia in August, 1824, the son of a farmer, whose children were two in number, Henry and John, who both came to America.

John Wolfcomer learned the carpenter's trade in his native land, and was about twenty-two years old when he came to the United States, as he reached this country on the eve of the Mexican war. He found employment at his trade in Cincinnati, and there married Eliza Kiercoff, a native of Germany, to which union was born one child—Henry, whose name opens this article. About 1856, Mr. Wolfcomer removed to Cleveland, Ohio, where he worked at his trade until he enlisted in company B, Fifty-eighth Ohio volunteer infantry, February 5, 1864, to serve three years, unless sooner discharged by reason of the termination of hostilities, this termination occurring in April. Mr. Wolfcomer was honorably discharged at Columbus, Ohio, June 2, 1865. He was one of the guards on the ill-fated steamer Sultana, which exploded her boilers on the Mississippi river when loaded down to her guards with a living freight of volunteers who were on their way home after exchange, and hundreds of whom lost their lives through this dire catastrophe, after having passed through all the perils of war for years. add to the horror of the explosion, a conflagration destroyed every remnant of the vessel and consumed many of the unfortunate pas-Wolfcomer, who could not sengers. Mr. swim, clung to the burning wreck as long as the intense heat would permit, and then sprang overboard, landing on the back of a mule, which soon sank beneath his weight. He was fortunate, however, in catching a plank, on which he floated down stream several miles, and was rescued next morning by a searching party on a raft. He was badly scalded about his head, and was confined in hospital until nearly the date of his discharge.

From Cleveland Mr. Wolfcomer removed to Twinsburg, Summit county, Ohio, in the fall of 1865, and purchased a farm of fifty acres, which he occupied until 1871, when he came to Aurora township, Portage county. and bought the homestead now owned by his son Henry, which comprises 171 acres and is improved with substantial buildings. This farm Mr. Wolfcomer continued to cultivate until his death, which occurred January 30, 1889, he being then about sixty-five years of He was a member of the G. A. HRISTIAN KOEHLER, of Streetsboro township, Portage county, Ohio, is a gallant veteran of the Civil war, who is now totally blind from the effects of exposure while with Gen. Sherman on the famous march to the sea from Atlanta, Ga.

Mr. Koehler was born in Wurtemberg, Germany, March 10, 1839, a son of Jacob and Barbara (Sweet) Koehler, received a good common-school education, and when about twenty years of age embarked at Bremen in a sailing vessel for America, and after a boisterous voyage of eight weeks, being nearly lost at sea, landed, in 1859, in New York city, whence he came to Ohio. In August, 1861, he enlisted at Akron, in company D, Thirtyseventh Ohio volunteer infantry, for three years, and at the end of the term was released from duty in order that he might reenlist, as a veteran, in April, 1864, in his old regiment, under the same conditions as those of his first enlistment. The war having come to a close in April, 1865, he was still retained in the service until July, of the same year, when he was honorably discharged at Little Rock, Ark.

Among the many battles in which Mr. Koehler took part may be mentioned those of Fayettesville, and several others in what is now West Virginia; Raleigh, N. C., and Charleston, S. C.; the siege of Vicksburg, Miss.; Champion Hills and Jackson, in the same state; Missionary Ridge, Dalton, Resaca, Dallas, Pumpkinvine Creek, Kenesaw Mountain, the general assault and battle of Atlanta, Ga., the charge at Stone Mountain Junction, etc., although these are not placed in chronological order. He was also at the capture of Fort McAllister, and of Columbia, having marched "from Atlanta to the Sea," and took part in the grand review, in May, 1865, at Washington, D. C., which is famous as the grandest review ever held in the world. The only wound Mr. Koehler sustained during his long service was a slight one in the right knee at the battle of Missionary Ridge, but he had a serious attack of camp diarrhea, and was confined in the hospital at Vicksburg, Miss., in 1863, for about five weeks. But the greatest misfortune which befell Mr. Koehler was on the march from Atlanta to Savannah, during which he was compelled to wade many rivers. In wading through the Edisto, he was seven hours in crossing, and much of the time was in the water up to his armpits. The consequence was a severe cold, which resulted in an inflammation of his eyes, terminating in total blindness in 1887. After the war, Mr. Koehler returned to Akron, Ohio, where he was sick with fever for awhile, but recovered, and for a short time was helper for a stonemason and was otherwise employed, being for twelve years janitor of the Spicer school building, blind as he was, and was also employed about five years in the Buckeye works at Akron.

Mr. Koehler was united in marriage, in May, 1866, in Stark county, Ohio, with Miss Catherine Klink, and to this union were born five children, named, in order of birth, Emma (wife of Corwin Mooney, of Streetsboro township), Minnie, William, Frank, and Ida, but April 19, 1882, Mr. Koehler was bereft of his helpmate, who died in the faith of the Lutheran church. In 1885 Mr. Koehler came to Streetsboro township, bought 116 acres of land, and had built for himself a neat and substantial dwelling. He is very happy in his disposition, and his hearty laugh gives no indication of his great affliction. He has done much for his adopted country, and, with his children, enjoys the respect and honor which all true Americans should yield to such as he and his offspring are fully entitled to.

OHN LEISURE, a well-known resident of Aurora, Portage county, Ohio, and for four years a soldier in the late Civil war, was born in St. Lawrence county, N. Y., November 26, 1837, a son of Joseph and Mary (Michael) Leisure, of French and Irish descent respectively.

ENRY C. McGIRR, one of the most enterprising and successful young farmers of Deerfield township, Portage county, Ohio, was born in Lexington township, Stark county, September 9, 1861, a son of John and Mary (Reeves) McGirr.

James McGirr, paternal grandfather of Henry C., a native of Maryland, born March 25, 1786, was reared a farmer, came to Ohio a young man and married Sarah Hamlin, the result of the union being seven children, four of whom are still living—John, William, James and Henry—and three deceased—Elizabeth, Lydia and Harpley. The mother of this family died June 16, 1866, at the age of seventy years, seven months and eighteen days, and the father's death took place March 6, 1876, at the ripe age of seventy years and twelve days.

Samuel C. Reeves, the maternal grandfather of Henry C. McGirr, was born in New Jersey April 4, 1803, and when a mere boy was brought to Ohio by his parents, who settled in Columbiana county, and in his early manhood was engaged in school-teaching, but later became an agriculturist. He married Miss Ann Ellyson, who was born June 4, 1803, and to this marriage were born eight children, viz: Melicent and Mark, still living; Anna Jane, who died November 23, 1861, aged twenty-five years and five months; Joshua, who died March 21, 1888, when fortyeight years, three months and twenty-four days old; Mary, who was married to John Mc-Girr, and died March 28, 1890, aged fifty-eight years, two months and eighteen days; Benjamin, who died July 14, 1890, aged sixty-two years, five months and two days, and John, who died June 7, 1897, at the age of fiftyfive years. Samuel C. Reeves, the father of this family, passed away December 17, 1883, at the age of eighty years, six months and thirteen days, and his widow died July 25, 1885, aged eighty-two years, one month and twenty-one days, all the family having been adherents of the Quaker society.

John McGirr, father of Henry C., was born in Stark county, Ohio, March 15, 1825, learned the spinning-wheel trade, later engaged in stair building, and also did some carpenter work, and is now engaged in the manufacture of extension ladders. November 6, 1850, he married Miss Mary Reeves, a daughter of Samuel and Ann (Ellyson) Reeves, to which union were born seven children, viz: Thomas, of Deerfield township; Webster and Albert, of Iowa; Henry C., whose name opens this article; Sarah A. and Benjamin R., of Iowa, and Charles, who died in infancy, all of whom were reared in the Quaker faith.

Henry C. McGirr lived on the home farm until fifteen years of age, receiving in the meanwhile a good common-school education, and then hired out among the neighboring farmers until twenty-four years old. In 1886 he began farming for himself in Stark county, and June 9, 1887, married Miss Maggie Pickens, born in Stark county, January 2, 1866, a daughter of Samuel and Nancy (Brown) Pickens, and this union has been blessed with two children—Edna May and Myrtle Ivy. In 1891, Mr. McGirr rented the present farm in Deerfield township, Portage county, where he has ever since been most successfully engaged as a tiller of the soil.

Samuel Pickens, father of Mrs. Maggie McGirr, was born in Franklin county, Pa., March 8, 1830. He is a carpenter by trade, and married, September 15, 1850, Miss Nancy Brown, who was born August 12, 1829, and to this union were born three children, viz: William H., Susie, wife of Joseph Balmat, and Maggie, now Mrs. McGirr. Mr. Pickens enlisted as a volunteer, in company I, One Hundred and Fifteenth Ohio volunteer infantry, in 1862, and served two years. The family are members of the Reformed church, and the parents still reside in Stark county.

Henry C. McGirr has a very pleasant home in Deerfield township, and he and wife are among the most respected residents of the township, Mr. McGirr being one of the steadygoing, intelligent farmers who always lend a dignity to the calling of a husbandman, and advance the prosperity of any community in which they may chance to cast their lot.

ICHARD H. McGOWAN, a prominent farmer and highly esteemed resident of Deerfield township, was born October 6, 1833, in Smith township, Columbiana (now Mahoning) county, Ohio, son of Adam and Mary (Davis) McGowan. McGowan was born in Mahoning county, Ohio, in 1802, lived all his life on the same farm, and died in 1866. In 1828, he married Miss Mary Davis, a native of Wales, daughter of John and Mary (Humphreys) Davis. To them were born seven children: Richard H., Adam, third, Theresa, wife of William Foutz; Eliza Jane, wife of Stewart Taylor, deceased; Peter H., Thomas, and J. Miller, deceased. Of the eleven children of Adam McGowan, first, and Elizabeth Miller, but one, Deborah, wife of Ebenezer Hoadley, who resides in Indiana, survives. The others were: Eliza, Polly, wife of E. Hubbard; Ann, wife of Jacob Hartzell; Elizabeth, wife of Joshua Calvin; Beniah, who was shot in California during the gold fever; Samuel, John, Adam, second; Rachael, wife of Peter Hartzell; Rebecca, wife of Samuel Walker. Our subject's maternal grandparents were Welsh people who came to this country in 1820, and settled in Mahoning county, Ohio, where they acquired a large They had eight children; two of them, John and Thomas, survive. The others were Mary Ann, wife of Thomas Gray; Mrs. McGowan; Jane, wife, first, of Martin Becket, and, second, of David Borden; Margaret, wife of William Wharton; Elizabeth, wife of Hiram Hoadley, and Ann, who died during the twelve weeks' voyage across the ocean.

Richard H. McGowan was reared on his father's farm, in Mahoning county, receiving the common-school education afforded by the public schools of that place and period. This he supplemented by a course in Mount Union college, and in the fall of 1854 he began teaching school. For two years he was thus occupied and May 1, 1856, he married Miss Harriet Mowen, daughter of Daniel and Elizabeth (Roodasell) Mowen. Five daughters, all of whom are living, have graced this union: Cora May, wife of Alonzo Baldwin, of Rootstown, Ohio; Mary I., wife of C. Pettit, who resides in Kansas; Elizabeth O., wife of William Waithman, of Mahoning county; Rosa A., wife John Calvin, of Cleveland, and Lula, wife of John Robb, of Deerfield.

Most of Mr. McGowan's life has been passed in agricultral pursuits, although he has not occupied the old home farm all of that For eight years after their marriage, the McGowans resided on the home farm, and then moved to Van Buren county. Mich.. where for ten years they lived on a farm, during part of which time Mr. McGowan worked in a blast furnace. In 1875 they moved to Deerfield, remaining a year, after which they moved to Atwater, Ohio. While here our subject held the elective offices of township assessor and supervisor, and followed farming and saw-milling. In 1888 the family moved back to Deerfield, where they have since resided on the farm, being prominent among the most substantial and highly regarded familes of the community. Both Mr. and Mrs. McGowan are members and active supporters of the Disciples' church, at Deerfield, in which the former has held the office of deacon.

HARLES C. MEAD, a thriving farmer of Boston township, and an old soldier of the Civil war, was born in Springfield township, Summit county, Ohio, January 14, 1846, a son of Abner R. and Barbara (Klofinstein) Mead. He springs from old New England ancestry, of English descent on his father's side, and from French ancestors on his mother's side.

Charles C. Mead received a good commonschool education, and was reared to farming. He enlisted, at sixteen years of age, in 1862, at Peninsula, Ohio, under Capt. Means A. L. Conger, recruiting officer, for three years, or during the war, but being under age, the mustering officer would not accept him. tried again, in the winter of 1862-3, to enlist in the Twenty-first battery, but was again reiected, as he was taken sick with measleswhich rendered him deaf. He finally succeeded in enlisting, July 19, 1864, at Cleveland, Ohio, for three years, or during the war, in company A, Second Ohio cavalry, and was honorably discharged at Benton barracks, St. Louis, Mo., September 1, 1865, the war hav-He was in Sheridan's command. ing closed. and served under Gens. Wilson and Custer. He was in the battle of Opequan Creek, at Winchester, which was Sheridan's first engagement. Mr. Mead was through many skirmishes, being nearly every day under fire. He was in the battle of Cedar Creek, which was desperately fought, and in which the Second Ohio cavalry took an active part. was, in reality, the battle of Winchester, to which point Gen. Sheridan made his famous ride from Winchester, twenty miles away. Mr. Mead saw Sheridan on the battle field as he rode up. The Second Ohio cavalry had escorted Sheridan to the railroad train about two days before. Mr. Mead was in the great raids down the Shenandoah valley, in which all the barns, straw stacks, and all the mills that could give food to the enemy, were destroyed. The dwellings alone were excepted, but many of these were burned by accident. Sheridan said that a "crow could not fly over the valley without his rations with him." Mr. Mead also assisted in the defeat of Early, and was always an active soldier, and in all the battles, raids, skirmishes and marches in which his regiment was engaged, except when sick in hospital, two months, at Baltimore and Philadelphia, with typhoid fever. He was not wounded, nor a prisoner, and endured the hardships and privations of war with fortitude.

After the war, Mr. Mead returned to Ohio and married, in Richfield township, Summit county, Miss Julia A. Carter, of Boston township, a daughter of William and Emeline (Gillett) Carter. William Carter was born in Ohio and his children were Charles. Prof. William, a prominent school man, Albert, Edwin, Fanny, Julia, Nettie and Lilly. After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Mead first located in Richfield township and moved to his present farm about twenty years since, where he has a pleasant home. In politics he is independent and voted with the free-silver democrats in 1896. He is an honored member of George L. Waterman post, G. A. R., at Peninsula, Ohio, and has always been an industrious and respected citizen.

Abner R. Mead, father of subject, was born in Vermont, a son of Ira Mead, a pioneer of Summit county, Ohio, and came to Ohio when young. He married, in Summit county, Miss Barbara Klofinstein, daughter of Christopher Klofinstein, who was born in France and who was a teacher of foreign languages. His children were Joseph, Truman, Charles C., B. Frank, Cynthia, Mary, Martha, Flora, and Josie. Joseph was a private of Capt. Coulter's battery, and was among the missing, supposed to be drowned in the Ohio river. Abner R. went to Kansas and there lived about fifteen years, but returned and died in Summit county. He was at one time a prominent farmer of Richfield township, and on one occasion, with his brothers and father, who were all potters as well as farmers, discovered a valuable bank of potter's clay in Springfield township, and they were the first to open the manufacture of pottery in that township.

The following congratulating address to the Third cavalry division, issued by order of General Custer, at the close of the war, is self-explanatory:

Headquarters Third Cavalry Division, Appomattox Court House, Va., April 9, 1865.

Soldiers of the Third Cavalry Division:

With profound gratitude toward the god of battles, by whose blessings our enemies have been humbled, and our arms rendered triumphant, your commanding general avails himself of this, his first opportunity, to express to you his admiration of the heroic manner in which you have passed through the series of battles, which to-day resulted in the surrender of the enemy's entire army.

The records established by your indomitable courage is unparalleled in the annals of Your prowess has won for you even the respect and the admiration of your enemies. During the past four months, although in most instances confronted by superior numbers, you have captured from the enemy, in open battle, one hundred and eleven pieces of field artillery, sixty-five battle-flags, and upwards of ten thousand prisoners of war, including seven general officers. Within the past ten days, and included in the above, you have captured forty-six pieces of artillery, and thirty-seven battle-flags. You have never lost a gun; never lost a color, and have never been defeated; and, notwithstanding the numerous engagements in which you have borne a prominent part, including those memorable battles of the Shenanhoah, you have captured every piece of artillery which the enemy had dared to open upon you. The near approach of peace renders it improbable that you will again be called upon to undergo the fatigues of the toilsome march, or the exposure of the battle field, but should the assistance of keen blades, wielded by your sturdy arms, be required to hasten the coming of that glorious peace, for which we have so long been contending, the general commanding is proudly confident that, in the future, as in the past, every demand will meet with a hearty and willing response.

Let us hope that our work is done, and that, blessed with the comforts of peace, we may be permitted to enjoy the pleasures of home and friends. For our comrades who have fallen, let us ever cherish a grateful remembrance. To the wounded, and those who languish in southern prisons, let our heartfelt sympathy be tendered.

And now, speaking for myself alone, when the war is ended, and the task of the historian begins—when those deeds of daring, which hove rendered the name and fame of the Third cavalry division imperishable, are inscribed upon the bright pages of our country's history, I only ask that my name may be written as that of the commander of the Third cavalry division.

G. A. Custer,

Brevet Major-General Commanding. Official.

L. W. BARNHART, Capt. & A. A. A. G.

When not confined by illness, Mr. Merwin was always prompt and cheerful in the performance of his military duties and was a good and brave soldier.

On his return to Ohio, Mr. Merwin attended Hiram institute two terms and then learned the carpenter's trade, which he followed ten or twelve years, and then settled on the old Nelson township homestead of about 123 acres, which he stills owns, but from the active and practical care of which he retired to Garretts-ville in 1892,

The father, John B. Lyon, was a farmer, was a republican in politics, and two of his sons, James S. and Franklin, served during the Civil war, in a regiment of Pennsylvania volunteer infantry—Franklin dying from wounds received in battle and his remains being interred at City Point, Va. Lyman Sperry, grandfather of Newton Sperry, was born in Woodbury, Conn., and he first married Deborah Newton, to which union were born the following-named children: Amadens, Mary, Amanda, Phebe and Adna. After the death of his first wife, Lyman married Lydia Peck, and the children born to this marriage were Lyman, Lydia, Elizabeth L., Levinus, Lewis, Ira P., Samuel, Ebenezer, and Dr. Willis, the last two born in Ohio. Mrs. Sperry died September 12, 1866, aged sixty-seven years, a woman of many virtues. Their children were Newton, Lucius, Mary, Clark, Alonzo, Ornan, Olive E., Eunice and Celia M.

Newton Sperry was born in Tallmadge township, on the old Sperry homestead, September 2, 1821. He is entirely self-educated, and by his home study acquired much practical information, being possessed of unusual intelligence. He began work at clearing when a small boy, and when but twelve years of age was hired out to a farmer in Tallmadge to drive a yoke of oxen and plow, and even at that early age could do a full day's work, and plowed, at this age, with James Chamberlain for Andrew Treat. As he was the eldest son, he had to work young; when he was twentyone years old, his father died and he was left with the care of his mother and eight children, and the homestead was not yet paid for; he, therefore, worked with great perseverance to support the family and pay for the farm.

Mr. Sperry married, May 13, 1849, in Aurora township, Lucy L. Cannon, who was born July 8, 1825, at Kirkland, Lake county, Ohio, a daughter of John and Lydia (Rice) Cannon. John Cannon was born January 11, 1787, in Blanford, Mass., of sterling Scotch ancestry. The name was originally Carnahan,

She was a school-teacher in Darrowville, and came from Massachusetts with William Blair and family to Painesville, Ohio.

the death of both occurring at the home of Newton Sperry.

After marriage Mr. and Mrs. Sperry settled on the farm which he had bought and paid for, consisting of 110 acres, and which was the old home of his father. ILLIAM T. MENDENHALL, of the firm of Mendenhall & Shuman, the well-known furniture dealers and undertakers, of Atwater, Portage county, Ohio, was born in Chester county, Pa., May 8, 1832, a son of Stephen and Mary (Thomas) Mendenhall, also natives of the Keystone state.

Stephen Mendenhall and wife were the parents of five children, viz: Margaret (deceased), William T. (subject), Edwin D., Maria and Thomas C. In 1834, accompanied by his wife, and Pennsylvania-born children, Mr. Mendenhall crossed the mountains in a wagon, and in the course of four weeks arrived in Columbiana county, Ohio, where he bought a tract of land, cleared up a farm, built a log cabin, and engaged in his trade of wagonmaking, and finally added carriage and buggy manufacturing; did a good business for a number of years, but eventually moved to Indiana, where his wife died in January, 1874, and where his own death also took place in November, 1894.

William T. Mendenhall received his earlier education in the common schools of Columbiana county, and later attended high school in Marlboro, Stark county, then for a number of years worked at carriagemaking, and then came to Portage county, and for ten years operated a saw-mill in Randolph; for the twenty years following he was engaged in farming, and in 1883, settled in Atwater, where he entered into the furniture trade in partnership with Mr. Stanford; three years later Mr.

Stanford sold his interest in the concern to E. M. Chapman, and in 1893, Mr. Chapman sold to Mr. Shuman, since when, the firm has been conducted under the title mentioned at the opening of this notice, and now does the largest house-furnishing business in the township, to which has been added a complete undertaking equipment.

June 13, 1855, Mr. Mendenhall was married at Canton, Ohio, to Miss Asenath Michener, who was born in Goshen, Mahoning county, Ohio, in 1831, a daughter of James and Eliza Michener, natives of Pennsylvania, who came to Ohio in the same year in which their daughter, Asenath, was born. To Mr. and Mrs. Mendenhall have been born three children, viz: Carrie, now Mrs. D. S. Perkins; Nina, married to C. J. Stanford, and Ella, wife of Dr. C. S. Hiddleson, whose biography appears on another page.

Mr. Mendenhall is a republican in politics, and has held the office of township trustee, for a period of six years. He is very popular personally, and his family, as well as himself, are among the most respectable residents of Atwater township.

LIAS MILLER, one of the most respected, old-time farmers of Bath township, Summit county, was born in Jackson township, Stark county, Ohio, March 12, 1824, and is a son of Peter and Mary (Williams) Miller, the former of whom was born October 5, 1796, and was a son of George Miller, who was born November 7, 1763.

Peter Miller married Miss Mary Williams, February 13, 1823, and came to Bath township, Summit county, in 1838, and settled on a farm, one-half mile east of the center thereof, where he continued to follow his life-long vocation as an agriculturist, and attained a considerable degree of popularity and influence with his fellow-townsmen, whom he served as township trustee, school director, and justice of the peace, having been elected by the republican party. In religion, he was converted to the Evangelical faith fourteen years prior to his death, and was a consistent member of the church of that name. He lost his wife. Mary, in 1826. She had borne him two children—Elias, the subject of this biography, and Robert S., who died in infancy. For his second helpmate, he married Nancy Sprankle, who gave birth to three children-James, Joseph (died in infancy), and Milton, the death of Peter Miller occurring March 31, 1867.

Elias Miller was tolerably well educated in the district schools of Stark and Summit counties, and was reared by his father to the honorable and noble pursuit of agriculture. He married, April 16, 1848, Miss Sarah Sprankle, who was born June 16, 1827, a daughter of Jacob Sprankle, who was born in Pennsylvania, in 1798. Mrs. Sarah Miller died of a tumor, May 10, 1895, the mother of the following-named children: Jacob S., born November 12, 1849—died of consumption of the lungs, May 7, 1878; Etta Ann, who was born November 28, 1851, was married to Wait Hopkins, and died of a tumor, January 13, 1896; Nancy, born December 18, 1854, now the wife of Daniel Mull, and a resident of Cleveland; Mary A., who was born February 27, 1857, is married to Newton Hockett, and resides in Bath township; Ama G., born February 19, 1859, died of typhoid fever, October 3, 1871; Dora, born June 13, 1864, was married to John Rothrick, and died of consumption of the lungs, July 18, 1892, and Peter Milten, born in Bath township, February 6, 1867, died of consumption of the bowels, October 22, 1885. The subject of this sketch was married again, April 11, 1897, to Margaret A. Drushal, which was her maiden name, but who was twice married before she married Elias Miller—first to Samuel Tinsler, and secondly to William Watts.

Mr. Miller had led a very active and industrious life, having cleared up nearly all of his 130-acre farm and made all the improvements, the buildings being substantial and neat and tasty in appearance, while the farm itself, which is situated three-fourths of a mile east of the center of Bath, presents an aspect of thrift and good management unsurpassed by any farm of its dimensions in Bath township.

In politics Mr. Miller affiliates with the republican party. He has long been a member of and leader in the Evangelical church, and fraternally is a member of Richfield lodge, No. 266, F. & A. M., in which he has held the chair of junior deacon. He is now living in comparative retirement in Homer township, Medina county, Ohio, having done no practical farm work for the past ten years, his ample means affording him the privilege of enjoying in ease the fruits of his early industry, although he keeps a general oversight in the management of his estate. He is an honorable and upright gentleman in every sense of these words, and holds with a lasting tenure the respect of his neighbors.

spected resident of Aurora township, Portage county, Ohio, and for over three years a soldier of the Civil war, was born in Pottsdam, Saint Lawrence county, N. Y., a son of Benjamin W. and Mary (Hoggett) Micle, who were of French descent and had a family of four children, viz: Malinda, Emma, George and William B. The family early came to Ohio, but the parents some years afterward returned to the state of New York, where the father passed the remainder of his life, and died at about the age of forty-five years.

William B. Micle, when about nine years old, was brought to Aurora township by his parents, received a good common-school education, and was reared a farmer. October 7. 1861, he enlisted, at Streetsboro, in company F. Forty-second Ohio volunteer infantry, and served until honorably discharged, November 19, 1864, at Columbus, Ohio. He fought in seven rebel states during this period—Kentucky, Virginia, West Virginia, Tennessee, Mississippi, Louisiana and Arkansas—and among other battles in which he took part were those of Middle Creek, Chickasaw Heights, Fort Hinman, Port Gibson, Raymond, Champion Hill, Black River Bridge and Vicksburg, and was, beside, in several severe skirmishes, but passed through all without a wound, although several rifle-balls passed through his clothing. Mr. Micle is small of stature, being but five feet, three inches in height, and weighing but 137 pounds, yet he endured the long marches better than the large men, many of whom fell in the ranks from fatigue. His hardest march was with Gen. Morgan, from Cumberland Gap to the Ohio river, a distance of 237 miles, many skirmishes occurring on the way. The troops were without regular rations and subsisted on the forage of a very poor country. The rebels captured all the stragglers, and blockaded all the roads, and when the troops reached the Ohio river, they were dirty, ragged, shoeless and hungry, a little green corn having sustained Mr. Micle through the march. occasions he marched with his company 700 miles, and while many a robust soldier fell exhausted, Mr. Micle came through intact. was not in the hospital, excepting about three weeks in the early part of his service, when he was suffering from measles, although for four months, during the latter part of his term, he suffered from chronic diarrhea, yet did not leave his company.

Mr. Micle was united in marriage, January 14, 1869, at Shalersville, Portage county. with Miss Margaret J. English, who was born at Newcastle-on-Tyne, England, in 1851, a daughter of John and Martha (Piburn) Eng-John English came to America shortly after the birth of his daughter, Margaret I., and settled in Shalersviile, where he engaged in saw-milling. His children were seven in number, and were named Eliza, Martha, Elizabeth, Hattie L., Margaret J., Joseph and John, and of these, Joseph was in the three months' service in the late war. Mr. English departed this life in Shalersville, at the age of sixty-four years, a respected citizen, and an industrious, temperate, honest man. union of Mr. and Mrs. Micle, have been born the following-named children: John, Henry, Eugene Arthur, Harry, Maud and Maggie. Since the war Mr. Micle has been much disabled, and for a year at a time has been unable to do any work. Generally, he has engaged in teaming in Shalersville, Ravenna, Newburg and Aurora, having lived in the lastnamed place since 1884. Mr. and Mrs. Micle are consistent members of the Disciples' church, and in politics Mr. Micle is independent, voting for the candidate he deems to be best fitted for office. He is a quiet, unassuming, honest man, and is held in great respect in the community in which he lives.

IDEON H. MILLS, Jr., of Twinsburg, Ohio, an old soldier of the Civil war, springs from old New England ancestry, of Holland-Dutch stock, and is the seventh generation of his family named Gideon.

The children of Mr. and Mrs. Mills are Lottie P., and Gideon L. Lottie P. is the wife of George M. Wall, a bookkeeper of Wilmington, Del. They have one son and daughter, Adelbert, Marion. Gideon L. is a resident of Solon, Ohio, and is an engineer; he married

Miss Electa Sheets, a native of Ohio. Mr and Mrs. Mills were pupils in the Rev. Samuel Bissel's Twinsburg institute, and are now members of the Twinsburg Congregational church, in which he has held the office of In politics he is a republican, casting his first presidential vote for Gen. John C. Fremont, is a member of the W. T. Sherman post, G. A. R., at Hudson, and has held the office of vice-commander. He is a member of the school board, and for two years was a supervisor. Mr. Mills is a veteran of the late The famous war, with a fine military record. John Brown of Kansas was a relative of Mr. Mills, John Brown's mother having been a sister of 'Squire Gideon Mills of Hudson, the grandfather of our subject. The Mills are of Holland-Dutch stock. The first of the name was Peter Walter Mulen, as the name was spelled, who came from Holland to America. Gideon Mills, Jr., and Samuel Bediant made the first traction engine, at Hudson, and ran this engine twenty years.

OHN B. MOECK, an ex-soldier of the late Civil war and a well known resident of Streetsboro, Portage county, Ohio, is a native of Germany, born in Wurtemberg November 12, 1830, ason of John and Margaret (Ruetz) Moeck. He received a good education in the excellently managed public schools of his native city, and then learned the butchering business. In the latter part of May, 1851, he embarked at Havre, France, on board the A 1 swift-sailing packet ship Isabel for New York, and landed in that city July 2, after a short passage, for those days, of a little more than thirty days. He readily found employment and worked in New York city, Albany, N. Y., Philadelphia, Pa., and then for a few years in Bucks county, Pa.

In March, 1862, Mr. Moeck came to Ohio and worked in Stowe township, Summit county, then moved to Brimfield township, where he lived until his enlistment, October 2, 1862, at Cleveland, in company C, Sixth Ohio cavalry, Maj. Bingham commanding, for nine months, but served ten, and was honorably discharged, at Cleveland, July 29, 1863. He was assigned to the army of the Potomac and took part in the destructive raid through the Shenandoah He fought at Kelly Fort, Va., was in the charge on Fort Thompson, was in the battle at Cross Roads, and the engagements at Warrenton, and was in many brisk skirmishes during Gen. Stoneman's famous raid. Stoneman's headquarter's, Mr. Moeck's company acted as body guards, and its members were selected as bearers of dispatches, according to trustworthiness and daring, and in this hazardous service Mr. Moeck met with many adventures and hairbreadth escapes from capture. He endured many hardships and privations, and at one time, when his boots were burnt up by accident in camp, was barefoot for a whole week in cold weather. was taken sick and was in field hospital on the Potomac river for about a month, was then taken to Washington, D. C., and thence sent to Cleveland, where he was discharged at the date mentioned above, and given transportation to Rayenna, where he was confined to his bed for three months, and after recovering engaged in farm work.

Mr. Moeck married in Ravenna, October 15, 1863, Mrs. Barbara Shaffer, who was born April 2, 1845, in Germany, a daughter of John and Mary (Mades) Shaffer. To his marriage with Miss Mades, daughter of Jacob Mades, a farmer, were born Joseph (who died at twenty-four years of age), Mary, Visula, Mary A., Elizabeth, Catherine, Eva and Barbara. Mr.

Shaffer died March 25, 1850, when his daughter Barbara (now Mrs. Moeck) was but five years of age, and when six years old she came with her sister, Mary, to America. She was reared by strangers in Randolph, Portage county, Ohio, and at the age of eighteen years she became the bride of Mr. Moeck.

After marriage, Mr. Moeck continued to reside in Ravenna until 1867, when he went to Minnesota, where he lived three months and then returned to Portage county and located in Kent, where he resided until 1879, when he came to Streetsboro and bought his present home. The union of Mr. and Mrs. Moeck has been blessed with one child—Rosa—who is married to William Shoemaker, and is the mother of one son, John. In politics Mr. Moeck is a republican. He and wife attend the Methodist church, although Mr. Moeck is in belief a Lutheran. He has always been an industrious, moral, temperate man, and is as good a citizen as he was a soldier.

ALTER E. MOWEN, M. D., a physician and surgeon of Portage county, Ohio, was born July 31, 1856, in Deerfield, in the county named, and here he still has his residence, his ability in his profession being fully recognized by those among whom he was born and reared to manhood—a recognition not usually accorded professional men. He descends from a long line of American ancestors, of whom three generations, at least, have been residents of the Buckeye state.

Daniel Mowen, the paternal grandfather of the doctor, was a native of Berks county, Pa., was a tailor by trade, but came at a very early day to Ohio and engaged in farming in Columbiana county, and later moved to Fredericksburg. To his marriage with Elizabeth Rudisall were born nine children, of whom six are still living, viz: Humphrey, T. R. (father of the doctor), both residing in Deerfield; Simeon J., of Chicago; Oliver P., of Deerfield; Harriet, wife of Richard McGowan, and Sophina, wife of Daniel Koons, of Cleveland. Of the three deceased, Nancy died April 8, 1857, at the age of nineteen years; Hiram, who was a soldier in the Civil war and died in Tennessee, and Samantha, the deceased wife of Orison Diver. The father of the family died April 9, 1845, a member of the Lutheran church, of which his deceased wife was also a member.

Ephraim Hubbard, the maternal grandfather of the doctor, was born February 10, 1792, in Stratford, Conn., and in 1800 was brought to Ohio by his parents, who settled in Deerfield township, Portage county, where they purchased a farm. On this farm Ephraim was reared to manhood. He took part in the war of 1812, and later became a prominent citizen and a leader of men, representing his district in the state legislature two terms, and later serving for a number of years as chaplain in the state penitentiary, his political affiliations having first been with the whig party and later with the republican, and by the latter was elected to nearly all the township offices. He first married Miss Mary Mc-Gowan, who bore him eight children, of whom two are still living, viz: Mrs. T. R. Mowen, the mother of the subject of this sketch, and Mary, wife of Jesse L. Slack, of Deerfield. The deceased were Rebecca, wife of M. L. Streetor; Homer, Edgar, Cyrus, Horatius, and Samantha, who died suddenly in the railroad station at Alliance, the wife of Andrew Mrs. Mary (McGowan) Hubbard was also called away, dying in 1838, and Mr. Hubbard next married, in 1840, Mrs. Julia Reed, who bore him two children, viz: Alma, wife of Michael Edler, and Helen, who died in infancy. Mr. Hubbard died on his farm July 10, 1876, at the age of eighty-four years, and Mrs. Julia (Reed) Hubbard, his wife, departed this life a few years later, aged eighty-eight years, and both in the faith of the Disciples' The father of Ephraim B. Hubbard, above alluded to, was also named Ephraim B., was a resident of Dutchess county, N. Y., where he married Miss Mary Kidd, a niece of the famous Capt. Kidd, for whose supposed buried treasures visionaries are digging along the banks of the Hudson river, and elsewhere, up to the present day. From New York Mr. Hubbard came to Ohio and bought a tract of land near Deerfield, on which he died in 1825, at the age of sixty-one years, the father of four children—Sophia, who was married to Harvey Mills, of Nelson, Ohio; Ephraim B., subject's grandfather, and Stephen A., who became a minister of the Methodist church.

T. R. Mowen, father of Dr. Walter E. Mowen, was born in Columbiana county, Ohio, April 14, 1824, and when a small boy was bound out to a farmer, with whom he remained until he attained his majority, when he began work as a farm hand for the neighboring agriculturists, and through frugality was enabled to purchase his first farm in 1859, which was situated in Deerfield township, and on which he resided until 1887, when he retired to the town of Deerfield, where he had purchased a fine residence, and where he still resides in ease and comfort. The marriage of T. R. Mowen took place December 25, 1844, to Miss B. E. Hubbard, who was born January 3, 1824, a daughter of Ephraim B. and Mary (McGowan) Hubbard, of whom full mention is made in a foregoing paragraph. union there was but one child born-Dr. Walter E. Mowen-who still resides with his parents, and of whom further mention will be made in the paragraph following. Mowen and wife are devoted members of the Disciples' church, of which Mr. Mowen has been a deacon for more than thirty years, and no family in Deerfield is more highly esteemed than theirs.

Dr. Walter E. Mowen, with whose name this biographical memoir is opened, was reared on his father's farm, which, to some extent. he assisted to cultivate, but the major portion of his early days was passed in attending the district school and Mount Union college, after which he engaged in selling farm machinery and agricultural implements until 1886, when he succumbed to an urgent desire to become a physician. Accordingly, in that year, he began reading under Dr. Oglesby, of Deerfield, and for six months was an assiduous student under his preceptorship; the next six months' study was had under Dr. C. M. Hoover, of North Benton, Ohio, and in the following fall he entered the Cleveland Medical college, where he studied three years, graduating March 9, 1889. He then returned to Deerfield and purchased the business which had been established by Dr. Henry Powers, and this he has since increased from year to year, until he has the longest list of patients of any physician in Deerfield.

Dr. Mowen was united in marriage July 1, 1877, with Miss Alice B. Randall, daughter of H. S. and Sarah (Alberta) Randall, and this happy union has been blessed with four children, named, in order of birth, Don T., Clif S.. Blanch and Ned W. The doctor and family are members of the Disciples' church at Deerfield, and Mr. and Mrs. Mowen are free contributors of their means to its support. Fraternally the doctor is a member of Charity lodge, F. & A. M., and also of the Cleveland Medical society. In politics he is an active republican, and is the present chairman of the republican township committee. The social standing of the doctor and his family is with the most respected of the residents of Deerfield township, and individually he is highly esteemed as a gentleman of integrity, morality, and unfailing charity, reaching, in fact, the virtue of philanthropy.

RS. LAWSON WATERMAN, of Peninsula, Ohio, is one of the patriotic ladies of the Civil war. Her husband, Lawson Waterman, was born in Otsego county, N. Y., at Decatur, January 21, 1811, and at the age of nineteen years went to Rochester, N. Y., where he was employed in a ship-yard. He went on the lakes as a sailor the following summer and for several years was engaged working in the ship-yard winters and sailing summers. He came to Cleveland, Ohio, in 1836, and here met Angelina C. Rogers, to whom he was married October 24, 1840. Immediately after marriage Mr. and Mrs. Waterman came to Peninsula, where Mr. Waterman died, after a short illness, September 21, 1892. were two sons born to Mr. and Mrs. Waterman-George Lawson, who was born September 5, 1841, and who grew to manhood in Peninsula, and Lewis Rogers, who was born August 6, 1844, and died October 20, 1844. Mr. Waterman was a very charitable man, and no worthy person in need ever applied to him in vain. He was many years in the canal boat building business and prospered by his steady adherence to his vocation. He began a poor man at Peninsula, in 1838, but succeeded in establishing a large business, employed many men, built many canal boats, and in 1852 built the home where his widow now lives. He was a man of sterling integrity of character, and much respected by all who knew him. The home place consists of 300 acres of fine land, cleared from the woods. Politically a democrat, he was postmaster at Peninsula several years, also a member of the town board, and was township trustee; likewise a member of Meridian Sun lodge, No. 266, A. F. & A. M., West Richfield, Ohio. He lived to be nearly eighty-two years old, and was well known for his sterling qualities. His funeral sermon was preached by Rev. H. H. Miller, from which is taken the following paragraphs:

In his life Mr. Waterman was a man of charity. He was a friend to the poor. No worthy person in need ever applied to him for assistance in vain. Many there are who can testify of his charitable acts to them. He clothed the naked and fed the poor. I knew him but a few months, but those who knew him best give this testimony.

In his giving he was very unostentatious. In a quiet way, his charity was bestowed. He has come down to a good ripe age. We can truly say of him: "The world was better because he lived." His end was a gracious one; sick but a few days, suffering but little pain, he passed away as one going to sleep. He is in the hands of an all-wise and merciful God.

Mrs. Angelina C. (Rogers) Waterman was born April 11, 1821, in Kingsville, Geauga county, Ohio, a daughter of James Whitelaw Rogers, who was born in Swanton, Franklin county, Vt., December 23, 1794, a son of George, who was born in Rhode Island of English descent, and Mary Whitelaw. March 3, 1816, he married Martha Thayer, of Batavia, N. Y., and their children were Malvina, Harriet, Angelina, Candace, John Randolph Maranda and Susan Ettelina.

Mr. Rogers was a carpenter and joiner, and not long after marriage came to Ohio, but a few years later returned to New York, and died of fever in 1828 at Cold Creek, where he had bought a farm, at only thirty-four years of age. He was an industrious, hard-working man and a Universalist in religion.

Mrs. Martha (Thayer) Rogers, daughter of Berick and Mary (Bingham) Thayer, was born in Williamstown, Berkshire county, Massachu-

She was a woman possessed of more than ordinary strength of character and perseverance, being left at her husband's death to battle the world alone. with a family of six children, the eldest being but twelve years of age, but she bravely met her task and succeeded in bringing them up She lived to see them all well respectably. settled in life, and respectable members of She returned to Ohio with her family in 1837, and settled in Cleveland, where she died February 28, 1864, at the age of sixty-five years; her remains now lie in Lakeview cemetery, Cleveland, by the side of two of her grandchildren.

Mrs. Waterman is a member of the Episcopal church, and a lady of many virtues, well known for acts of charity, and much beloved. She is a woman of high patriotism and gave her only full-grown son as a soldier to his country. Her maternal grandfather, Berick Thayer, was a Revolutionary soldier and was also in the war of 1812. He was of a colonial family, married in Waterbury, Conn., Mary Bingham, and finally settled as a pioneer at Batavia, N. Y., and died there a respected citizen. Mrs. Thayer lived to be between ninety-eight years and ninety-nine years old.

George Lawson, son of Lawson and Angelina Waterman, was born September 5, 1841, and was a boy of sterling and reliable characteristics, acquired a high-school education, and was in a commercial college at Cleveland when the Civil war broke out. He was a member of the Cleveland Greys and volunteered with his company for the three months' service at the first call of President Lincoln, and was the first soldier to enlist from Summit county. He left Cleveland with his company for the front, April 18, 1861, when he was but nineteen years of age. He took part in the first battle of Bull Run and was an active soldier, served out his three months' service without being disabled, and returned safely to Peninsula, being honorably discharged, and then, owing to the wishes of his mother, remained home one year, but could withstand his patriotism no longer and applied for and received a commission as second lieutenant August 22. 1862, recruited company C, One Hundred and Fifteenth Ohio volunteer infantry, at Peninsula, Ohio, and was mustered in at Massillon September 19, 1862. The ladies at Peninsula. as a token of the high esteem they had for him as a man and soldier, presented Lieut. Waterman with a beautiful sword. pany was assigned to guard duty at Cincinnati, In the summer of 1863 they were sent to Dayton, Ohio, to preserve order, political disturbances having resulted in riot at that While there Lieut. Waterman secured leave of absence for himself and several comrades, for a visit home. On the evening of their departure, while awaiting the hour in their tents, a disturbance occurred which called them out, and Lieut. Waterman was shot by one of the ruffians. Although at first his wound was not considered even dangerous, it later became serious, and his mother was sent for, but all efforts to save his life proved futile, and death resulted September 19, 1863, just one year from the day the company was mustered. His mother remained to the end. and the remains were brought back to the old homestead, where the funeral was held. services were conducted by Rev. T. B. Fairchild, and it was without doubt the largest funeral ever held in Peninsula. After his death the officers of the One Hundred and Fifteenth regiment passed resolutions in testimony of his character and sorrow at his removal, and the private soldiers did the same. The day he was shot he had received an appointment on the staff of Maj.-Gen. Cox, commander of the department of Cincinnati.

His comrades who still linger on the shores of time, when they came to organize, in Peninsula, the Grand Army of the Republic, perpetuated his memory, and in their hall may be seen the charter naming the organization "George L. Waterman post, No. 272." Although it is now thirty years since his demise, he yet lives in the hearts of his comrades, his friends, and, most of all, in the heart of his aged mother, who yet survives her husband and her son.

Mrs. Waterman also had two nephews who served in the Civil war, to-wit: One, Edward I. Ranney, was a son of Moses and Maranda (Rogers) Ranney, and enlisted at the beginning and was killed at the battle of Gettysburg, Pa., July 4, 1863; the other, Richard H. Snow, is a son of Palmer and Harriet (Rogers) Snow, who enlisted in the Second Ohio volunteer cavalry, served until the close of the war, and was then honorably discharged.

The parents of Lawson Waterman, the husband and father, were Elisha and Diana (Young) Waterman. Elisha was a son of a Revolutionary soldier who served through the entire struggle of seven years. Elisha was born in Decatur, Otsego county, N. Y., in 1791, married Diana Young in 1810, enlisted at the opening of the war of 1812, and was taken prisoner by the British at the battle of Oneenstown, but was soon released on parole, and was eventually honorably discharged. his marriage with Miss Young were born four children-Lawson, Onesimus, Marietta and In 1843 he brought his family to Ohio and settled on a farm in York township, Medina county, where Elisha died at the age of eighty-four years, and his wife at the age of eighty-six. Diana (Young) Waterman was also born in Decatur, N. Y., in 1790, a daughter of a soldier of the Revolution, and became the wife of a soldier of the war of 1812, and the grandmother of a soldier of the Civil war. The father of her husband was also a warrior in the Revolutionary war. Mrs. Diana Waterman was one of nature's noblewomen, deeply beloved by her children and respected by all who knew her.

YAMUEL R. MOORE, a prominent farmer of Deerfield township, Portage county, Ohio, and a veteran of the Civil war, was born in Meadville. Pa., October 10, 1830, a son of James and Margaret (Finley) Moore, natives of Ireland, who, on first coming to America, located in Pittsburg, Pa., where the father followed his trade of stonemason for several years, and then went to Meadville, where he engaged in farming until 1835, when he brought his family to Ohio, settled in Mahoning county, where he passed the remainder of his life, dying on his farm, November 11, 1848, at the age of forty years; his widow survived until July, 1873, when she expired, at the age of eightyone years-both in the faith of the Presbyterian church. To their marriage were born three children, viz: Samuel R., whose name opens this paragraph; Andrew, who resides in Nebraska, and James, who died in November. 1873, at the age of thirty-three years.

Samuel R. Moore was educated in the common-schools, which was supplemented by an attendance of three months at the high-school at Waldron. He then taught school three winter terms, working during the summer months on his father's farm; he then devoted his entire attention to the assistance of his father, until the latter's death, the family having, during the interval, moved to Smith township, in the same county. He then managed the farm for his mother, until the outbreak of the rebellion, when he enlisted October 11, 1861, in company B, Sixty-fifth Ohio volunteer infantry, for three years, but December 31, 1863, was honorably discharged for the purpose of enabling him to veteranize in the same organization, which design was consummated, January 1, 1864, the service of Mr. Moore extending to June 9, 1865, when he received his final honorable discharge, the war having been brought to a close. Mr. Moore took part in some of the severest engagements of the war, among which were those of Shiloh, Stone River (where he was shot in the left shoulder, which confined him to the hospital two months); Chickamauga, Missionary Ridge, Resaca, and Peach Tree Creek, and others, besides skirmishes too numerous to mention, and was, beside, twice captured and imprisoned, at one time being confined for nearly eleven months in the foul stockade at Andersonville. When not held as a prisoner, or laid up with his wound, Mr. Moore was always promptly at his post of duty, was a brave and cheerful soldier, and ever ready to do his share of the dangerous work in the field, and with indomitable fortitude took part in all the marches, battles and skirmishes in which his regiment was engaged while in the service.

After the war, Mr. Moore returned to Mahoning county, resumed agricultural pursuits, and became an influential and popular citizen, being elected to serve as constable and township supervisor. In April, 1872, Mr. Moore was united in matrimony with Miss Ellen C. Cooper, and this union has been blessed with six children, viz: Annie T., James W., George L., and Howard B., at home; Bessie S., who is attending the high school at Deerfield, and Edward F., still under the parental roof.

James Cooper, the father of Mrs. Ellen C. Moore, was born in Chambersburg, Pa., and when a young man was engaged in school-teaching, and also learned the trade of brick-laying. In 1831 he married Miss Susan Thom, who was born in Somerset county, Pa., in 1814, and to this union were born six children.

of whom four are still living, viz: Frank; Ellen C., now Mrs. Moore; James, of Somerset county, Pa., and Sylvester, of Iowa. Thomas died in Andersonville prison in 1864, and Samuel died in Tennessee in 1877, at the age of thirty years. James Cooper, the father, died in January, 1854, and his widow in January, 1892, at the advanced age of eighty years—the death of both occurring in Somerset county, Pa.

In 1893, Samuel R. Moore brought his family to Deerfield township, Portage county, and here he bought the farm on which he still resides and which he has placed under a high state of cultivation. Mr. and Mrs. Moore enjoy the good opinion of their neighbors to the fullest extent, and Mr. Moore is esteemed for his many fine personal qualities, while his services as a gallant defender of his country's flag, in the hour of peril, is never lost sight of.

AMUEL H. NORTON, of Mantua Station, is one of the representative citizens and old soldiers of the late war, who was born October 2, 1834, at Southington, Trumbull county, Ohio, the son of Joseph H. and Elizabeth (Hatch) Norton. He was early taught the habits of industry and economy and received the usual common-school education, and in early manhood began to learn the carpenter's trade.

Samuel H. Norton was united in marriage October 25, 1852, with Miss Bessie Morris, who was born in Nelson, Ohio, in February, 1834, the daughter of David and Rosannah (Hawley) Morris. This felicitous marraige has resulted in the birth of the following-named children: Sarah E., Samuel C. and Charles O. Mrs. Norton died February 18, 1894, and May 7, 1895, Mr. Norton married Miss Sarah Parker, of Canton, Stark county, Ohio, who was born at Redmile, Leicestershire, England, daughter of John and Comfort (Derns) Parker, and she came to America in early childhood.

He was one of the unfortunate boys that went into the service, and on November 1, 1862, he received an honorable discharge at Nashville, Tenn., on account of wounds received in the battle of Murfreesboro, Tenn., in which engagement he had three fingers shot off of his left hand, after which he was required to stay in field hospital three days, which is the extent of his hospital record during his service. He participated in the battles of Pittsburg Landing and at Shiloh Church, along with the engagement in which he received his wound, beside a number of hard skirmishes. Mr. Norton proved to be an active and brave soldier, and from the time he joined his regiment he answered to the roll call each morning, and participated in all the service that his regiment saw until he was discharged at Nashville, Tenn., as before stated. Beside the wound that he received on his hand, his hearing was affected, which resulted from exposure, while on picket duty in March, 1862, at Nashville, Tenn., and the same has resulted in almost total deafness.

After his return from the war he rejoined his family at Southington, Ohio, and resumed farming and carpentering. He, at this time, owned a good farm of 100 acres, which he put in a high state of cultivation, and continued to reside here until 1876, when he moved to Mantua Station and lived four years, after which he returned to the farm, and subsequently, in 1892, he rented his farm and returned to Mantua, where he has resided ever since. While residing upon the farm he was elected several times to serve as township clerk and trustee of his township, which offices he filled to the satisfaction of his constituents. Charles O., the second son, and youngest of the family, and who resides on the old homestead of his grandfather, married Aggie Tift. They have two children—Chrissible and Joseph H.

John Notman, the paternal grandfather of Walter, was yet a young man when he brought his family from Scotland to America and settled in Deerfield township, being among the pioneers, and here reared his four children— John, George, father of Walter, subject of this notice, and Mary, wife of Joseph Barnes. The six deceased were Mrs. George Notman, William, James, Caroline (wife of George McGowan), Elizabeth (wife of Ralph Scranton) and Mary Ann. The grandparents, on both sides, were strict members of the Methodist church.

George Notman, father of Walter, learned the trade of blacksmith in Scotland, and this he followed for forty years, but his later years were passed in farming. He was twice married—first, to Miss Ann Pickren, who bore him nine children, of whom three are still living, viz: Walter, the eldest, whose name stands at the opening of this biography; Alvey, of Deefield township, and Julia, wife of Eugene Bow, of Alliance, Ohio; the deceased passed away in the following order: George, December 18, 1844; Mary Ann, December 25, 1844; Levi, May 11, 1846; Solomon, February 28,

Mrs. Margaret Notman having been called away April 28, 1875, Mr. Notman chose for his second helpmate Miss Mary E. Barnes, whom he married May 9, 1878, and this union has been blessed with one son—Clarence. Mr. Notman has always led an agricultural life, with the exception of one year, when he resided in the town of Deerfield, where he had charge of a creamery. In politics Mr. Notman is a stanch republican, and has served as school director many years; he is also a member of the Deerfield Agricultural society, is its present treasurer, and for twenty years has been a director of the same.

The family all were or are devoted members of the Methodist church, to which Mr. and Mrs. Notman also belong, and of which Mr. Notman has been a deacon for many years, and it may well be said that no family in the township is held in higher respect than his.

ROF. CALVIN T. NORTHROP, superintendent of Garrettsville public schools, and president of the board of examiners of Portage county, is a native of New York, born in the city of Poughkeepsie, May 17, 1858, his parents being John and Julia (Williams) Schoonoven. breaking out of the late rebellion John Schoonoven tendered his services to his country, enlisting August 28, 1862, in company C, One Hundred and Fiftieth New York infantry, with which he shared the fortunes and vicissitudes of war until stricken with typhoid fever, from which he died at Louisville, Ky., June 26, 1864. His wife died three weeks previous to that date, her death also being caused by typhoid fever.

Four small boys were now left orphans, the eldest eight years and the youngest but two years old; these children were taken into four different families, and all but the eldest adopted the names of their respective foster parents. William, who alone retained the family name, lived for some years in the family of Albert Martin, a farmer of York state, and he adopted the pursuit of agriculture as his life work. He married and resided at Oxford, N. Y., where his death occurred at the early age of twenty-seven.

Richard S., the second son, was reared in the family of Calvin Thomas, a farmer near Worcester, N. Y., whose name he adopted, and with whom he lived until about fifteen years of age. He attended the public schools of Worcester, and afterwards, by teaching, earned sufficient means to complete the prescribed course of the State Normal school at Albany, from which he was graduated. Later he attended the Madison university, and is now a prominent educator, being at this time superintendent of the schools at Akron, Ohio. He married Estella Saxton, of Madison, and is the father of two children, a son and a daughter.

Charles E., another brother, the fourth in order of birth, was two years old when left an orphan, and grew to maturity in the family of Ira Carey, of Morris, N. Y., by which name he has since been known. When in his teens he left the farm and began to secure an education, teaching in the meantime in order to defray expenses incurred while pursuing his studies. He early united with the Methodist church and intended to enter its ministry, and while gaining his education frequently preached the gospel. He concluded his studies at the seminary in Cazenovia, N. Y., and has since been engaged in teaching, his present position being the superintendent of the schools of Warren, Ohio. He married Elsie Smith, and is the father of one son.

Calvin T., whose name introduces this sketch, was reared in the home of Alonzo Northrop, a merchant of Worcester, N. Y., whose name he adopted, and at the age of sixteen left home and began the struggle of life upon his own responsibility. His elementary education was received in the public schools of Worcester, and later he was graduated from the academy of that town, having taught school at intervals while attending that institution. After leaving the academy, Prof.

Northrop had charge of the schools of Richmondville, N. Y., later accepted a similar position at Portlandville, that state, and was for some time superintendent of the schools of Worcester. In 1891 he accepted the superintendency of the schools of Garrettsville, Ohio, the duties of which he has since discharged in a manner highly creditable to himself and satisfactory to all concerned. The educational system which Prof. Northrop inaugurated at Garrettsville compares favorably with that of any other city in northern Ohio, and reflects great credit upon him as an organizer and successful instructor. From the primary to a complete course in the school is here placed within the reach of all, rich and poor alike. The entire course is twelve years, divided into four-year periods, namely, primary, grammar and high school. Pupils graduating are eligible to enter any normal or college throughout the state without further examination. average enrollment lists three hundred pupils, and the curriculum is broad, including full English and full Latin-English courses. schools are noted for being up to the highest standard of educational efficiency and the corps of teachers have been selected because of the professional standing which they have attained. Since his incumbency Prof. Northrop has accomplished many reforms in a gradual way, and in all departments has greatly heightened the standard of efficiency. He has acquired more than a local reputation as an instructor, and is widely and favorably known among the educators of Ohio.

Prof. Northrop was married August 27, 1879, in Middlefield, N. Y., to Hattie E. Blair, daughter of Erastus Blair, a well-known citizen of that town; they have had one child, a son, that died in infancy. Politically Prof. Northrop is a republican, and fraternally belongs to the F. & A. M., in which he has risen to the thirty-second degree, and is also a member of the Mystic Shrine; he is an active worker in the I. O. O. F., and, with his wife, belongs to the Congregational church of Garrettsville. Mr. Northrop was appointed a member of the county board of school examiners of Portage county in August, 1893, and has served as president of the same.

Mowen, of Deerfield, and Eliza, born May 15, 1864. The four deceased children were Mary E., who was born July 18, 1852, and died October 15, of the same year; Warren T., born September 7, 1857, died when twenty-three years old; Myrtle M., born August 22, 1867—died October 12, the same year, and Wallace, who was born April 30, 1861, died May 31, 1894. Mrs. Sarah (Allerton) Randall, the mother of this family, died on the present farm, in Deerfield township, in 1869. second marriage of Mr. Randall took place August 17, 1870, to Miss Emeline Grate, daughter of Lewis and Catherine (Kebler) Grate, but to this union no children have been born.

But it is necessary to resume the recountal of Mr. Randall's business career. linquishing his trade as a journeyman tanner, in 1856, he engaged in butchering in Deerfield, in conjunction with shipping live stock, doing a very large business in the latter trade and being the first to ship a train-load to the army at the outbreak of the Civil war. While engaged in this trade, he bought a farm in Atwater township, which he cultivated about lour years, and in 1864 purchased his present farm in Deerfield township—then known as the Thomas Mead farm. About this time, also, Mr. Randall erected a cheese factory in Deerfield, and, later, another in Edinburg, to which town he removed, after renting out his farm in Deerfield, and there lived one year, when he sold out his Edinburg plant and returned to Deerfield, where he followed his trade as journeyman for two years in the employ of Henry Muerman. He then returned to his farm, where he has since remained.

The father of Mrs. Emeline (Grate) Randall was born July 16, 1808, in Columbiana county, Ohio, and her mother was a native of Virginia, and the fact that Mr. Grate was a butcher, may have led Mr. Randall to embark in that business. Mr. Grate married, February 21, 1833, Catherine Kibler, daughter of Henry and Elizabeth (Shank) Kibler, to which union were born six children, viz: Emeline (Mrs. Randall), born August 26, 1834; Drusilla, born March 19, 1836; Lavorus, born July 30, 1839; Maryette, born November 24, 1841, and married to Daniel Kimmel; Angeline, born December 9, 1846, and now the wife of John M, Forder, and Sarah S., born July 16, 1854, and married to Wallace Gilbert. Mr. Grate in his later years relinquished has trade of butcher and passed his declining years on his farm in Deerfield township, where he died June 7, 1894, at the age of eighty-five years; his widow, now also eighty-five years old, makes her home with Mr. Randall.

George B. Grate, grandfather of Mrs. Randall, was born in Ohio, December 22, 1777. and his wife, Susanah (Thatcher) Grate, was born April 1, 1783—their marriage taking place January 26, 1802. Their ten children were born in the following order: Betsey, October 13, 1803; Jeremiah, December 10, 1805; Lewis, July 16, 1808; Isaac, January 24, 1811; Reson, December 6, 1812; George B., December 5, 1814; Benjamin, March 1, 1817; Eleanora, July 23, 1820; John, November 22, 1822, and Reson, September 12, 1825. George B. Grate, father of this family, did January 31, 1851, and his wife May 30, 1867, both in the faith of the Baptist church.

Hiram S. Randall has always enjoyed the esteem of his fellow-citizens, and in politics was first a whig and then a republican. In 1850 he was elected constable, and served thirty years, and for many years had been a member of the school board.

Adelaide, half sister of Mr. Randall, was reared by a family named Steward, who adopted her, so she assumed the same name. She is the wife of Simeon Card, of Cleveland, Ohio. He was a mechanic, and a soldier in the late Civil war, served three years, and now draws a pension. They have two children, Florence and James Garfield Card.

ORING J. PHILLIPS, a well-known citizen of Everett, Ohio, and one of the old soldiers of the Civil war, was born in Richfield township, Summit county, Ohio, June 23, 1847, a son of Jason and Alvira (Gillett) Phillips. He received a common-school education, and when seventeen years old enlisted in company A, Second Ohio cavalry, July 19, 1864, for three years, or during the war, and served until honorably discharged, September 17, 1865, at Benton barracks, Mo. He was in the battles of Opequan Creek, near Winchester, and at the battle of Cedar creek-this was the battle at Winchester where Gen. Sheridan rallied the troops. He was in the Shenandoah Valley campaign, when Sheridan destroyed all the mills, barns and forage, so that the enemy could not exist, and said a crow could not fly over the valley unless he took his rations with He was with his regiment in all the border counties of Missouri and Kansas, and in many skirmishes with the guerrillas. was in the battles of Horse Creek, May 7, 1862; Cowskin Prairie, Ind. Ter., June 25, 1862; Fort Gibson, Ind. Ter., July 15, 1862; Lone Jack, Mo., August 28, 1862; Newtonia, Mo., September 30, 1862, and assisted to reinstate the Union Cherokees and Osage Indians in the Indian territory.

He returned with his regiment in the winter of 1862-3, to Camp Chase, Ohio, where the regiment was re-organized and re-equipped and sent to Kentucky, where it remained the greater part of June, 1863, and was then on Sander's raid of fifteen days; then at Wild Cat Gap, in the Cumberland mountains, and on that raid had many skirmishes, a distance of forty miles up the Holston river; then in the battle of Mount Sterling, Ky., April 14, 1863; Monticello, Ky., May 25, 1863; Steubenville, Ky., June 19, 1863; Richmond, Ky., July 28, 1863; London, Ky., September 5, 1863; Cumberland Gap, September 10, 1863; Blue Springs, Tenn., October 10, 1863; Ray, Tenn., October 11, 1863; Blountville, October 14, 1863; Russellville, Tenn., December 12, 1863; Bean Station, December 13, 1863; Rutledge, Tenn., December 14-15, 1863, and Dundridge, Tenn., December 24, 1863. The regiment stood second best in the cavalry service, the regiment that stood first being the Second United States regulars. After the service in Tennessee, and after veteranizing and reorganization, the Second Ohio cavalry was assigned to the army of the Potomac, under command of Gen. Wilson, and was in the battles of the Wilderness, Spottsylvania Court House, Chancellorsville, Brandy Station, and when on Wilson's raid assisted in the destruction of the Weldon railroad, and had severe fighting on the return, being obliged to abandon and burn their ambulances, stores, ammunition wagons, guns and artillery, and at the fight at Ream's Station lost heavily. The regiment joined Sheridan, and, under Custer, raided down the Shenandoah Valley, destroying by fire all material that could feed or shelter the rebels. It was in the battle of Cedar Creek, and in the spring of 1865, the closing campaign of the war.

Mr. Phillips was for a short time sick in hospital at Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, of chronic diarrhea, but outside of this he was always an active soldier, and performed his full duty promptly and cheerfully. He was in all the battles, skirmishes, campaigns and marches in which his regiment took part, and did not miss a day from duty. He was not wounded nor a prisoner, and endured all the hardships of a soldier's life with fortitude.

On a reconnaissance in the valley campaign, just before the Winchester fight, Mr. Phillips became separated from his comrades, who were firing at the enemy in a gulch. Phillips entered the gulch and discovered the He kept boldy on, and commanded them to surrender, saying, "Surrender, or I will fire." Much to his surprise, the colonel of a South Carolina regiment and the major of the same regiment rose up from the brush and surrendered—they being separated from their They looked very sheepish when commands. they found they had surrendered to but one Union soldier. Mr. Phillips took them to the lines and turned them over to his commander, Col. Purrington, and returned to the same gulch with comrade Milton Abby, of Akron, and captured a squad of rebels. On approaching, he told them so surrender, or he would bring up the guns and open fire. They threw down their arms and complied, and were taken to the Union lines. Thus Mr. Phillips captured, almost single handed, two officers and a full squad of Confederates, which is a splendid record for one soldier. After the war Mr. Phillips returned to Summit county and has been engaged in farming and butchering. was a good soldier and is an equally good In politics he is a stanch republican.

The following is a copy of a letter of advice, written by Benjamin Fenn to his infant son. Richard Fenn.

> Milford, Conn. Aug. 5, 1780

My Dear Son: Now an infant at the age of thirteen months, you are not now sensible of the value of earthly parents, and know not the loss you sustain, when they are taken from you. You are born into the world in a time of great fear and trembling—the enemy then having invaded New Haven, to oppose which your now departed father exposed his life in the field of battle, but the weapons of death were not permitted to hurt; my life was spared, and I am left to languish and waste away with a lingering consumption. I leave you these few lines as the choicest gift I can confer upon you. By this, you may know you had a father, though you may not remember him. These few lines I leave for your perusal and I entreat you, my dear son, not to forget the instructions here given:

Firstly—Let religion be your main study. See that you make your peace with God, that as you increase in years you may increase in grace, and in knowledge in things heavenly and divine: this will support and comfort you, under the trials of this militant state, by enabling you to stay your mind on God, and make you appear lovely in the sight of man, and glorious in the sight of God, and cause you to spend a glorious immortality at his right hand.

Secondly—As you are deprived of the instructions of a father, kindly receive the advice of your mother, pay due respect to her, comfort her in affliction, obey her lawful commands, and conduct yourself toward her as becomes a dutiful son.

Thirdly—Love your brothers and sisters, pay proper respect to persons of any denomination; shun evil of every kind, remembering that at the great day you must be judged by the Lord Jesus Christ for every thought, word and action; be diligent and zealous in the worship of God, both public and private. Avoid all wicked and profane company, all quarrels and unnecessary disputes. Study the Holy Scriptures and make them the rule of your faith and practice. Strive for knowledge in things temporal and spiritual, that you may be a blessing to yourself, of service to mankind, and be made happy, eternally happy, hereafter, with God in glory.

Fourthly—Should God spare your life and make you capable of entering upon any particular calling, be steady in it, remembering that slothfulness and negligence will clothe a man in rags. I advise you to learn some useful trade to get a livelihood with. Be kind and faithful to the master with whom you may live, and likewise one of his family. And to conclude, my dear child, prepare for death, and to stand before God, in judgment. Prepare to meet your Father in heaven, where I hope to spend my eternity, through my glorious Lord and Savior.

Receive my instructions, remembering it is the advice of a dying father. Follow the example of Jesus Christ, that at last we may meet in heaven. May God grant this for Jesus Christ's sake. This, my dear son, is the prayer of your now departed father, Benjamin Fenn.

This relic of parental affection and confidence in the covenant of faithfulness of God, written by my father, near the close of his life, and in the sure prospect of death, to me, Richard Fenn, when a babe of thirteen months, was delivered to me according to the superscription by his executor. It has been carefully preserved, not merely as a legacy from a respected father, but as a token of the confidence with which he took hold of the Apostolic assurance--the promise is to you and your children. And now, at the age of seventyeight years, not knowing how soon I may be called to my last account, I enclose in this form for preservation to my children and children's children, that they may see and understand the solicitude of Christian parents for their children. It exhibits the best desires and instructions that I can express for my posterity. Not riches, nor wordly honors, but sincere piety and devotion to God. Let me meet you at the right hand of Jesus Christ, our covenant head; this is my dying request. RICHARD FENN.

He was a nephew of Mr. Riley, and he is to have a future bequest of eighty-seven acres. Mrs. Riley is a lady of marked intelligence, a woman of excellent business qualifications, and manages her large property with the assistance of her brother, Hon, Rueben P. Cannon.

The following facts of the early history and genealogy of the Cannon family were gathered during a period of thirty years. Hon. R. P. Cannon spent a great deal of time and labor to obtain these facts, which are undoubtedly correct. The original name was Carnahan, and it is thought the change to Cannon came gradually through two generations. were of Scotch-Irish descent, and came to America during the first quarter of the seventeenth century, and their first settlement in America was at Hopkinton, twenty-nine miles west of Boston, now Landbury. There were two brothers and one sister, probably unmarried, but the time of their settlement is not known.

Hopkinton, and surrounding lands, were owned by Harvard college, and rented very cheaply—two or three cents per acre. The town was built and peopled by a Scotch-Irish colony, that came in the year 1718, arriving August 4; five ships, with people of the same faith, came at this time. In after years, history says, many more of the same faith joined them. It is a well-established fact, that the Cannons were among the early settlers of Hopkinton, and that some of the name, and relatives, remained in that town and vicinity for half a century after their settlement.

From this place nine emigrated to the then territory of Tennessee in early times, and one was later governor there many years. Many years later, another large family went from Hopkinton to Genesee county, N. Y., in its first settlement. With descendants of that branch, this writer has corresponded. other branch went from West Hopkinton to Blandford, Mass., first called Glasgow. town was settled in 1736 by a colony of fifty families, receiving two sixty-acre lots, and among those that followed were the Carnahans or Cannons. That colony was made up at Hopkinton, their former residence, and again we find them, soon after settlement, occupying two of the original lots-one of the first, and one of the second division. first settler of the name in Blandford was William Carnahan. The time of settlement cannot be given, but his location was on first division, Town street. The next generation in the town was William and John, brothers, supposed sons of William, Sr. William, Ir., occupied the first division homestead, which the family held in descent for a century, and John (calling his name Cannon), occupied the second division, which the family held in descent for a century and more, two miles east of Blandford. In 1775, William was chosen to represent the town in the congress of the colonies, and he served also in the Revolutionary war, in two enlistments.

The founders of the family in America were two brothers and a sister, all probably unmarried, who came with the Scotch-Irish Presbyterian colony to Hopkinton, arriving August 4, Their names are unknown. name known is William Carnahan, believed to be a son of one of the two brothers, who was the original founder of the family, but William Carnahan may have been one of these brothers, as he settled at Blandford in 1736. sons were John and William. Nathan, his son, next in descent, was born at Blandford, Mass., December 2, 1759, and married April 5, 1785.

Elizabeth Gilmore was born in 1760, in Chester, Mass., a daughter of James Gilmore, a Revolutionary soldier who enlisted twice. Nathan and wife were the parents of Israel, born April, 1796; Sylvester, born 1790; Nathan, born 1800; Sallie, born 1788; Artemesia, born 1793; Olive, born 1795; Salomie, born 1797, and Tryphena, born 1807. Cannon was a farmer, and a resident of Blandford, on the old homestead, all his life. served three enlistments, of from three to six months each, in the Revolutionary war. first enlistment was in Capt. Carpenter's company, regiment of Col. Sheppard, for three months, stationed at Springfield, Mass. third enlistment was in Capt. Samuel Sloper's company, for six months, and was mustered at Northampton. Of his second enlistment no record is held in Massachusetts, but he enlisted, with four others, from Blandford town-William Butler, John Taggert, ship, viz: Reuben Blair and William Knox, in Springfield, Mass., served three months, and was discharged at Hartford, Conn., and paid off with continental money and one ration. Blandford was forty-five miles distant. They ate their ration, and walked one day. They found they could buy no food for their continental money, and it was not until they reached Westfield, Mass., where they were known, they obtained food. Their continental money was never redeemed. He held at one time the office of commissary in a regiment in Connecticut. He was a member of the Presbyterian church and died in 1846.

He came to Aurora with wagons and settled on a tract of land, and here he lived ten years, and then moved on 110 acres in Twinsburg township, which he had bought the second year after he came. This was all in the woods, but Mr. Cannon cleared his land, improved it with good buildings, and made a substantial, comfortable home. In his old age he bought a house and lot in Twinsburg, where he died, aged eighty-one years, January 19, 1865, a strict member of the Congregational church, in politics a whig and republican, an honored citizen, and trustee of township and church.

Luther Russell, son of Return Russell, and father of Miss Sarah E., was born in West Windsor, Conn., November 9, 1801, received a good common-school education, was reared a farmer, and came to Ohio in 1821. He married, March 3, 1828, in Aurora, Ohio, Miss Polly Russell, who was born March 25, 1806, a daughter of Samuel and Hepzibeth (Ellsworth) Russell. From Aurora, Luther and wife came to Streetsboro, about 1830, and settled on the farm now owned by Miss Sarah E. Russell. The farm, which consisted of 105 acres, was covered by a dense growth of heavy timber, which Mr. Russell cleared off by patient industry and hard work, and improved with substantial buildings, making a comfortable home. His children, in order of birth, were named Martin L., born December 29, 1829, died July 2, 1855; Cynthia M., born May 22, 1832, died December 25, 1834; Sarah E., born June 3, 1834; Marion B., born November 10, 1837, died January 18, 1879, and Helen M., born November 16, 1841, died November 28, 1881. Mr. Russell was a man of excellent judgment, and high moral character. In politics he was a democrat, and in religion a Spiritualist. For more than fifty years he was identified with the moral, intellectual and material prosperity of Portage county, and, being well read and of profound thought, he was often selected by his neighbors as a counselor and abitrator of their various little difficulties, rather than seeking adjustment by litigation. He was of a kind disposition, and very benevolent, and a most affectionate husband and father. Successful as a business man and a good manager, and with the aid and economy of his devoted wife, they realized a competence through their individual exertions, and at his death, which occurred August 5, 1878, left the unincumbered farm now occupied by his daughter, Sarah E., and granddaughter, Mrs. Nellie A. (Saddler) Gordon. His wife was called away September 9, 1896. Many are the orphaned children now grown to womanhood and manhood, who live to bless their memory.

Helen M. Russell, youngest child of Luther and Polly Russell, was married, January 1, 1865, to Johnson J. Sadler, a native of Trumbull county, Ohio, and a son of Thomas and Ann Sadler, who were of Scotch-Irish extraction. Johnson J. Sadler was a soldier in the Civil war, and later a coal dealer at Mantua Station, where he died May 19, 1882, at the age of forty-four years, a man of excellent moral character, and in politics a republican. The only living child born to Mr. and Mrs. Sadler was named Nellie A., and she was married, August 9, 1893, to Oliver P. Harris, a farmer, who was born at Sugar creek, Tuscarawas county, Ohio, February 27, 1871, a son of Joseph and Leah (Gordon) Harris, and who died of typhoid fever in Streetsboro, December 16; 1895, leaving his widow with one son—Jack Oliver Harris, born September 22, 1895. Her second marriage was consummated December 31, 1897, with Elmer E. Gordon, who has spent most of his life in the mercantile business.

Elmer E. Gordon was born in Bedford county, Pa., July 29, 1871, a son of L. M. and Margaret A. Gordon, is a graduate of Pleasantville Normal school, and a member of the Patriotic Sons of America.

The maternal grandfather of Sarah E. was Samuel Russell, whose date of birth and death have been given; his wife was Hepzibeth Ellsworth, of Connecticut; she was born August 30, 1785 and died February 6, 1837. About the year 1811, they, with their three little children, braved the toil and suffering attendant upon what at that time was a long and tedious journey, sometimes walking, sometimes riding in the rude wagon which bore their scanty supplies, and sometimes riding on the back of the patient ox, which bore them with slow but sure steps from the home of their nativity the wilds of Aurora, Portage county, Ohio. No wonder the tears of the young wife and mother mingled with those of her home-sick children or that fear drove sleep from their eyes when the hours of night were filled in by the howling of the hungry wolf, the stealthy step of the prowling bear, and oftentimes visits from the red man of the forest, but time and energy changed this lonely place into a desirable home; here they lived, here they reared their family and from here they passed to peaceful rest and now lie buried in the country cemetery less than a mile from the old home.

The children of this family were as follows: Poily E., the mother of Sarah E. and whose date of birth and death have been given; Samuel, Jr., born February 15, 1808, father of four children, survived by only five grandchildren; Cynthia, born May 22, 1810, died February 12, 1828; Laura, born July 8, 1812, in Aurora, died February 28, 1864, in Mendon, Ill., the wife of Dr. Jacob Haymaker. Dr. Haymaker was a man of most generous deeds; he died in Kent, April 15, 1881; children they had none, but by a second marriage to a Miss Harriet Whitcolm three lovely daughters were born to him; this second wife died in Kent September 30, 1897; Newil, born July 27, 1817, in Aurora, died in Winnemucca, Nev.; his wife was Pauline Blachley of Blachleyville, Ohio, They married June 11, 1850; she died in Quincy, Ill., July 29, 1867, leaving five children. father was of a free, kind, genial nature; he served in both the Mexican and Civil wars: Horace, born December 6, 1819, in Aurora, died March 15, 1857; his wife was Elizabeth Kent, of Aurora; she died January 3, 1866, leaving the old Russell homestead unincumbered to their four children; the home has now passed into another name; but two children now survive, Bell M. Clark and Horace Z.

Of the children of Newil Russell, Chester N. came into the home of Luther and Polly April 23, 1864; following the death of their mother; the remaining four children came to this home; their names are as follows: Frank P., born October 29, 1852, in Valparaiso, Ind., was married to Miss Lillie Tucker, of Streetsboro, May 13, 1880; three daughters are born to them; he is a practicing physician in Suffield, Ohio.

Chester N., born March 19, 1855, in Council Blnffs, Iowa, married Lizzie Inglehart of Brimfield, October 5, 1885; is practicing law at Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio. Agnes V., wife of J. F. Seaton, Omaha, Neb., was born at Council Bluffs, Iowa, September 24, 1858, and is the mother of five children; Lola L., wife of W. A. Folger, Akron, Ohio, was born at Council Bluffs, Iowa, March 4,1861, and is the mother of three daughters; Charles H. was born December 23, 1864, in Quincy, Ill., and is a railroader. He was married Janury 14, 1891, to a Miss Mary Lewis, who was born October 1, 1870, and died February 11, 1895, leaving two children; March 2, 1896, he was married to Miss Ina Hemingway, who was born January 5, 1866.

farmer of Paris township, Portage county, Ohio, was born of Welsh parents, in Monmouth, England, at midnight—December 31, 1795, and January 1, 1796—a son of Edward and Ann Rowland.

Edward Rowland was a blacksmith by trade, and reared a family of ten children, viz: Miles, Charles, Edward, Henry, Edmund, Adam, William, John, Thomas, and Ann, all now deceased. The children on the maternal side were seven in number, of whom one only survives—Via, now the wife of Joshua Andrus.

William Rowland was reared in Wales until twenty-nine years of age. In 1825 he sailed from England and landed in New York, where he remained one year; then visited Canada, and then returned to England, where he married, February 15, 1826, Miss Catherine Edmunds, daughter of Edmund and Johanna Edmunds, and this marriage was blessed with ten children—three of whom were born in England, and six of whom still survive, viz: Ebenezer, of Colorado; Sarah, Adelina, Henry (of Youngstown, Ohio), Edward (on the old Paris homestead), and Edmund, of Michigan. Ann died in 1849, at the age of twenty-one years; Susan died in April, 1882, aged fifty-three, the wife of David James, also deceased; Adam died February 11, 1895, at the age of sixty years, and William died May 11, 1896, aged forty-eight.

In 1832 Mr. Rowland brought his wife and English-born children to America, and located in Utica, N. Y., where he left his family and came to Ohio, and bought the tract of land in Paris township on which his son Edward now He was the first Welsh settler in the township, and cleared up from the wilderness a neat farm, his family coming here a year after his own arrival. It was at six o'clock in the morning when he started, and at nightfall he had landed in Deerfield township, a distance of ninety-six miles.

Edward Rowland, son of above, and his sisters, Sarah and Adeline, reside on the old homestead and are still unmarried. Edward has served as school director, supervisor and township trustee for several years, and is one of the most respected agriculturists of Paris township.

HAUNCY A. BARTHOLOMEW, an ex-soldier of the Civil war, and a highly-respected citizen of Mantua township, Portage county, Ohio, descends from one of the oldest colonial families in America, of which the genealogy, as far as possible, will be traced in the paragraphs following:

William Bartholomew, the founder of the family in this country, was born in Buford, England, in 1602 or 1603, was a son of William and Triswede Bartholomew, who belonged to the peerage and bore his coat of arms, and yet the father conducted a mercantile establishment. William, the younger, was also reared a merchant, and was married in London to Ann Lord, a sister of Robert Lord, who subsequently became his near neighbor in Ipswich, Mass. Before coming to America he had entertained, at his home in London. the famous Ann Hutchinson, renowned for her free thought and free speech, and who, in 1635, was banished, on this account, by the Massachusetts colony, and accompanied Roger Williams and his colony to the new settlement of Rhode Island. On September 18, 1634, William Bartholomew, in company with Rev. Zachary Symmes, Mrs. Ann Hutchinson, Rev. John Lathrop, and some thirty of the latter's congregation, of which he was probably a member, debarked from the sailing vessel Griffin at Boston, Mass., whence he went to Ipswich, where he took an active part in public affairs, represented the residents in the general court in Boston, and held several local offices of trust and honor. About March, 1670, he moved to Boston, where he followed mercantile pursuits, and filled several important offices, among them being that of treasurer of the colony. There his death took place January, 18, 1682, at the age of seventy-eight years, and his remains were interred in the Phipps street cemetery, beside those of John Harvard, famous as the founder of Harvard college. His old residence in Ipswich stood intact until 1894.

William Bartholomew (second), son of the colonist, William, was born in Ipswich, Mass., in 1640 or 1641, was married, December 17, 1663, in Roxbury, Mass., to May, daughter of Capt. Isaac and Elizabeth (Porter) Johnson, and a granddaughter of John Johnson, surveyor of all the armies of the king in America, and who was killed while leading his men over the bridge and fallen timber into the Indian fort of the Narragansetts-known in history as the battle of Fort Narragansett. Mr. Bartholomew was a carpenter by trade, and was working in Hatfield, Mass., when the Indians destroyed the town, killed twelve white men. captured thirteen, and wounded four. Of the prisoners, his daughter, Abigail, aged four years, with the other twelve, were carried through the forests to Canada, where they were ransomed, eight months later, by the payment of 200 pounds sterling. Mr. Bartholomew later removed to Branford (now in Connecticut), erected a saw-mill, was appointed ensign of a military company, then promoted to be lieutenant, and still later settled in Woodstock, which town he represented in the general court at Boston, and died in Woodstock in 1697.

Joseph Bartholomew, son of William (second), was born in Branford in 1682, married, November 12, 1713, Elizabeth, daughter of Nathaniel Sawyer, was a farmer of Woodstock, Conn., and died at the age of forty-two years. His son, Joseph, was a corporal in Capt. Cheney's company, Choat's regiment, and was in the expedition against Louisburg, on Cape Breton island, at the entrance of the gulf of St. Lawrence, which fortress had cost the French government millions of dollars to build, and was considered to be the strongest in the world, but which fell under an attack by a few thousand Yankee farmer boys, led by Col. Pepperrell, of Maine, who was knighted for its capture, by the government of England, the event taking place in 1745, during the war between England, George II being on the throne, and the French government, then in possession of Canada—the colonies of America, of course, being participants in the cause of the British.

Passing now to Joseph Bartholomew, the fifth of the name, and the great-grandfather of Chauncy A., it is proper to state that he was born in Wallingford, Conn., August 25, 1752, and married a widow, Mrs. Esther Cleveland. About 1790 he moved to Hamilton, and thence to Cornwall, Conn., and in 1793 settled in the town of Pompey, N. Y., where he built the first hotel in 1796; and conducted it until 1808. He was also a prosperous farmer and held the office of road overseer.

Chauncy Bartholomew, next in line, was born in Wallingford, Conn., April 15, 1776, married in Pompey, N. Y., Susannah Schofield, and died in Cornwall, N. Y., in 1808. He, like his father, was a prosperous farmer.

Jonathan P. Bartholomew, father of Chauncy A., was born in Cornwall, N. Y., September 26, 1799, and married, March 4, 1821, Mary Wilson, a daughter of Andrew and Mary Wilson. At the early age of fifteen he enlisted in the volunteer army, and in the war of 1812-15, took part in the battle at Sackett's Harbor, N. Y. He afterward learned blacksmithing, and in 1822 came to Ohio and built the first blacksmith shop in Auburn, Geauga county. He also owned several farms, and had born to him a family of twelve children, viz: Charity, Alvirus P., Nelson S., Julia A., Chauncy A., Betsy A., James D., Sarah, Mary L., Alonzo D., Thomas C. and Andrew -of whom nine lived to rear families of their own. Jonathan Bartholomew was in politics at first a whig, then a republican and abolitionist, and gave much attention to the management of the "underground railroad" in assisting runaway slaves to freedom. He held a captain's commission in the old Ohio state militia, was prominent as a member of the Methodist church, and died in that faith at Auburn, February 3, 1862.

Chauncy A. Bartholomew, son of Jonathan P. and May (Wilson) Bartholomew, was born in Auburn, Geauga county, Ohio, August 31, 1828, was reared a farmer, and married, November 25, 1852, in Mantua township, Portage county, Ohio, Miss Emily Winchel, who was born in Mantua township, September 21, 1832, a daughter of Chauncy and Perses (Parker) Winchel.

John Winchel, grandfather of Mrs. Bartholomew, was a native of Connecticut, born in Suffield, and there married Roxie Coombs. who bore him eight children—Ariel, John, Chauncy, Eli, George, Daniel, Roxie and Mr. Winchel was a well-to-do Clarissa. farmer in Connecticut, but late in life came to Ohio, and until his death resided with his son, Chauncy, the father of Mrs. Bartholomew. Chauncy Winchel was born in Suffield, Conn., in 1800, and on coming to Ohio, at the age of fourteen years, was accompanied by his brother George, aged twelve. They had a brother, Eli, living in Aurora, Portage county, with Zenas Kent, and trudged all the way on foot to visit him. He was the owner of one dollar on his arrival, but found work at clearing land, and before his marriage, in Aurora, to Perses Parker, had earned money enough to buy a comfortable home, and died, at the age of eighty-four years, the owner of 1,360 acres in Portage and Geauga counties, and the father of twelve children, who all grew to ma-John, Roxie, Alden, Daniel, turity, viz: Emily, Pamela, Chauncy, Abel, Henry, Horace, Luther and Caroline. Three of these sons served in the Civil war-Abel, Horace and Luther, and Henry also volunteered, but was rejected on account of his diminutive stature. Abel and Horace were students in Hiram college, under James A. Garfield, and enlisted in the Forty-second Ohio volunteer infantry, of which Garfield was the colonel; Abel died in Camp Chase, Ohio, of disease contracted in the service, and Horace was seized with typhoid fever while in the field at Big Sandy, and for want of medical attendance became insane, and now draws a pension of $72 per month, and on adjustment of his claim for back pay, etc., was awarded $14,-595.17. Luther was for three years in company B, Forty-first regiment, Ohio volunteer infantry, took part in all its engagements, and now lives in Geauga county, one mile north of the residence of Mr. Bartholomew, in Portage county.

Chauncy A. Bartholomew, after marriage, settled on his present farm, which he mainly cleared with his own hands, and built the residence he now occupies. Descending from a race of American patriots, who had served in the war of the Revolution and that of 1812, he and two brothers also became soldiers--Nelson S. serving for three years in the Fifth Michigan cavalry, and re-enlisting for three years longer; Alonzo D. was in the Twenty-third Wisconsin infantry, famous for its bearing the war eagle, Old Abe; was taken prisoner at Port Hudson, and for a long time was confined in Libby prison; Chauncy A. enlisted at Chardon, Ohio, September 22, 1862, in company B, Forty-first Ohio infantry, and served until honorably discharged at Nashville, Tenn., January 22, 1863, and took part in several battles and many severe marches, notably that from Lousiville, Ky., to Columbia, Tenn., at the rate of thirty-six miles daily. ville, Tenn., he was confined in hospital with malarial fever, pneumonia and chronic diarrhea, but on all other occasions was ever at his post, doing good and active service. Since the war he has lived on his farm in Mantua township. He is a member of Bentley post, G. A. R., at Mantua Station, and of the Masonic lodge at Twinsburg. In politics he is a republican, and has always been an industrious citizen, and is highly respected for his sterling integrity and many other excellent traits of character. To Mr. and Mrs. Bartholomew have been born no children, but they have reared and educated a legally-adopted son, Albertus C.

ASSIUS O. BALDWIN, carpenter and farmer of Twinsburg township, Summit county, Ohio, and one of the veteran soldiers of the Civil war, descends from old colonial Connecticut stock. On the maternal side, his grandfather, Hart Risley, was a soldier in the war of 1812, and Samuel Baldwin, his paternal grandfather, a native of Connecticut, became a surveyor, married in Connecticut, and the children born to him were Edward, Caroline, Lucretia, Emily, Jewett and Henry. Samuel Baldwin came as a pioneer among the early settlers of Cuyahoga county, Ohio, there being at that time but one log house at Cleveland, at the mouth of the Cuyahoga river. Mr. Baldwin settled in Newburg, where he was one of the early surveyors and at one time sheriff of Cuyahoga county. He prospered and owned a goodly property at Newburg and Cleveland, now covered by valuable buildings. He was a captain in the old state militia, and died at Newburg, Ohio, an aged man, much respected.

Henry Baldwin, father of Cassius O., was born in Ohio, in 1825, became a farmer and married Amanda Risley, of Aurora, Ohio, a daughter of Hart Risley. Hart Risley was born in Connecticut and was a pioneer at the earliest settlement of Aurora, Ohio. He became a prosperous farmer and was a soldier in the war of 1812. His children were Austin, Andrus, Freeman, Emily, Caroline, Amanda, Cordelia and Mary. Mr. Risley lived to be an aged man and died on his farm, two miles south of Aurora, a much-respected citizen.

Henry Baldwin settled in the northeast corner of Twinsburg township, on 130 acres of land, and cleared a farm from the heavy timber, making a good home. His children were Frank, Herman, Cassius O., Orsey and Mr. Baldwin passed all his active Cordelia. days on the farm, but retired to Solon, Ohio, where he died two years later, June 24, 1870. He and his wife were both members of the Disciples' church at Solon. He was a prominent office holder-a man of excellent character, was noted for his honesty, and his word could always be relied upon. In politics he was at first a democrat, but during the war became a republican.

Cassius O. Baldwin was born December 7, 1843, in Twinsburg township, on the farm, and received a common-school education, became a farmer and enlisted, at the early age of nineteen, August 2, 1862, in company G, Capt. D. N. Lowery, One Hundred and Fifteenth regiment, Ohio volunteer infantry, to serve three years or during the war, and served until honorably discharged at Cleveland, Ohio, July 5, 1865, the war being closed, having been promoted to first duty sergeant, in 1864, He was in the battles for meitorious conduct. of LaVergne, Tenn., Stone River, Cynthiana, Ky., Bowling Green, Ky., Nashville, Tenn., Franklin, Tenn., Greensboro, Tullahoma, Lookout Mountain, and he was in the famous Atlanta campaign. During this campaign he was for some time detailed as a scout. He was at the battles of Dallas, Dalton, Pumpkinvine Creek and Kenesaw Mountain, and after that battle he returned to his command at Murfreesboro, Tenn., and was detailed with thirty men of his company to guard a block house at LaVergne. Tenn., and on the twentyfourth of September, 1864, they were all captured by Hood's army and taken to prison at Cuyahaba, Ga. The prisoners were robbed of everything they had-clothing, boots, shoes and caps, and all money and trinkets, and were obliged to put on and wear the ragged and filthy clothing which the rebels threw aside. Mr. Baldwin was first approached by a roughlooking rebel, who leveled his revolver at him. and demanded his boots—they were a nice, new pair that his father had just sent him; but he looked the rebel in the eve and said, "Now, look her, you cannot wear these boots; they won't fit you." The rebel said, "Wa'all, I can trade them;" but showed hesitation in his eye. Just then a rebel officer rode up and ordered the would-be robber to his company. In another moment, a little, dirty rebel came up and leveled his revolver, and demanded the boots in no uncertain terms, and Mr. Baldwin could see, in his eye, that he would shoot unless he got them, and they were promptly given up. His extra clothing and blankets He was confined at were afterward taken. this prison two weeks, but was not badly treated. He was taken thence to Andersonville, and in that infamous rebel prison was nearly starved, and suffered greatly. Having no shelter, he and his comrades dug a hole in the ground and made a hut of sun-burned In his mess were two Summit county men-Julian Upson and John Cox. rations he received daily about one gill of cornmeal, ground cob and all, and sometimes even this was omitted for three days at a time. The had neither salt nor meat. A part of the time a thin bean soup was served. He would have died, but he fortunately had secreted a $20 greenback, which he changed among the prisoners, and traded a dollar at a time, sometimes receiving from $50 to $75 in Confederate bills for a one-dollar greenback. With this he would buy provisions from the guards and persons who came to the prison to trade, and thus kept himself alive. He was in this prison for about four months, in the fall of 1864, and was reduced almost to a skeleton. captured he weighed 202 pounds, and when exchanged, at the close of the war, he weighed ninety-two pounds. He reached home sick, weak and emaciated, but, having a remarkable constitution, recovered rapidly. learned the carpenter's trade, and married, on the place where he now lives, February 8, 1866, Miss Maria Goff, who was born in Ireland, a daughter of John and Betsy (Mallory) Goff. John Goff came from Ireland and settled south of Twinsburg, about 1856, and his children were James, John, Thomas, George, Maria and Ella. He was a hard-working, industrious man, much respected, and died an aged man, at Youngstown, Ohio, where his widow still lives.

After marriage Mr. Baldwin bought part of his father's farm, where he lived two years, and then moved to Twinsburg, and bought Mr. Goff's property, consisting of eighteen acres, with residence, and now has a pleasant home of twenty-two acres. Mr. Baldwin has worked at his trade many years in Summit and surrounding counties, and is still in active life. He received an injury to his left leg during the war, which renders him lame; otherwise he is strong and hearty.

Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin are both members of the Methodist Episcopal church, and in politics Mr. Baldwin is a republican. He was a good soldier and has a splendid military record. He served his country faithfully, and was always in active service. and was not sick an hour and did his full part promptly and cheerfully. He is a member of W. T. Sherman post, G. A. R., at Hudson, and of Summit lodge, No. 203, F. A. M., at Twinsburg, has held the office of master of the Blue lodge, and in the royal arch has been high priest. Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin were the parents of two children—John O. and Alton C. Mrs. Baldwin died June 29, 1876. Mr. Baldwin married, for his second wife, Miss Emma C. Lee, who died April 15, 1897.

■ ON. [ACOB ADAMS KOHLER, of Akron, Ohio, is a son of Henry and Mary (Slanker) Kohler, and was born near Reading, Pa., August 15, 1835. When four months old he was brought by his parents to Franklin township, Summit county, Ohio, was educated in district schools and Lodi academy, and in 1853 apprenticed himself to D. G. Sanford, cabinetmaker in Akron, later read law with N. W. Goodhue, and was admitted to the bar in 1859. He served as prosecuting attorney of Summit county two terms—from 1868 until 1872; was law partner of Hon. Sidney Edgerton several years, and later was with Rollin W. Sadler, and afterward with Harvey Musser. Mr. Kohler represented Summit county in the state legislature from 1889 to 1885, and served as attorney general of Ohio from 1886 to 1888; November 5, 1895, he was elected judge of the court of common pleas for Medina, Lorain and Summit counties, which position he now fills. His opinions upon the construction of statutes and their constitutionality have created wide and favorable comment among the judiciary of the state and the members of the legal profession.

Judge Kohler was married May 16, 1860, to Miss Frances H. Coburn (only child of the late Dr. Stephen H. Coburn), who has borne him two sons—Hurlbut Stephen, born July 20, 1868, and George Coburn, born November 17, 1870, both graduates of Yale college. In connection with Secretary of State Russell A.

Alger, of Detroit, Mich. (a former Akron boy), Mr. Kohler, in 1882, erected the Arcade block, a five-story brick building on Howard street, one of the largest and handsomest business blocks in the city; and, beside his fine residence on East Market street, as the manager of the Coburn estate has large landed interests in various portions of the city, being also one of the incorporators and president of the People's Savings bank on South Main street.

EWMAN CHAMBERLAIN, one of the substantial farmers of Stowe township, Summit county, Ohio, descends from sterling New England ancestry, the tradition being that several of the brothers of the name came from England in the Mayflower in 1620.

Moses Chamberlain, father of Newman, was born in Dalton, Mass., in May, 1709. was a farmer, and married Hannah Newell. who was born in Dalton, Mass., in 1761. Moses Chamberlain moved to Riga, N. township, Summit county, Ohio, in 1842, and married here September 29, 1844, Miss Charotte S. Stark, who was born in Stowe township, January 14, 1824, daughter of Benjamin and Hannah (Chapman) Stark.

The Stark family is of the same stock as Gen. Stark, of Vermont, the famous Revolutionary general, and hero of the battle of Bennington. Joseph Stark, grandfather of Mrs. Chamberlain, was born in Vermont, but died on his farm in Chazy, N. Y., about 1830. His children were Benjamin. James, Rebecca. Susan, Anna and Sallie.

Benjamin Stark was born in Vermont, May 16, 1793. He was a farmer, and married Hannah Chapman, January 3, 1817. She was born at Lake Champlain, N. He first located in Kent, Ohio, and then settled in Stowe township, and here developed a farm of 140 acres, and made a good home, becoming a substantial farmer. He reared his children well, and gave them all a fair education. Twelve of his children lived to maturity. He was a man of sterling worth, and much industry and integrity of character. He and wife were both members of the Disciples' church at Stowe Corners, in which he was a deacon, and in politics he was first a whig, and then a republican. He reached the venerable age of nearly eighty years and died October 19, 1872, a much respected citizen. When Benjamin Stark was a boy of but fourteen years old he did some service in the war, his father's house being filled with wounded soldiers from a battle, and at one of these battles he carried water to the soldiers in the field. Moses Chamberlain, father of the subject, moved from Dalton, Mass., with a three-horse team, and was obliged to cut his way through the woods.

Newman Chamberlain, after his marriage, lived on his father's homestead four years and then returned to Stowe township, and lived on a farm for awhile, and then lived in Akron, where he and wife kept a boarding house ten years. He next moved with his family to Stowe township, and settled on his present farm in 1854, having bought eighty acres. By thrift and economy he prospered, aided by his faithful wife, and they now have a good farm of 160 acres, with tasteful residence, substantial barns, etc.

Mr. and Mrs. Chamberlain are both members of the Methodist church, in which he has held the office of steward. In politics he is a republican. They have one son, Dr. Frederick N., of Akron, Ohio. Mr. and Mrs. Chamberlain are well known for their upright christian character, are very industrious and frugal, and by their patient labor and thrift they have acquired a goodly property. Mr. and Mrs. Chamberlain, in the kindness of their hearts, have brought up and given a good home to five children, viz: William P., Lillie O., Charles L. Wright, Harvey F. Wright and Chara E. Wright.

Moses Chamberlain, a brother of Newman, was a soldier of the Civil war, was captured and imprisoned in the infamous Libby prison, and finally died from the effect of the imprisonment. Merrick G., another brother, was a licensed Methodist exhorter. Of the sons of Benjamin Stark, two were prominent physicians—Dr. Frederick B. and Dr. Philander H., both of Detroit, Mich. William H. was a prominent commission merchant of Newton Falls, Ohio, where he died. Lewis V. was a soldier in the Civil war and served all through. Lucius, twin brother, died young. Carl J., is a Disciple minister of Hamilton, Ill., and Hon. George P., of Michigan, is the youngest.

The Chamberlain Family.—The first of this family of whom there is any account was William Chamberlain, who came to America from England, and whose record extended from 1620 to 1706. His wife was named Rebecca, and their children were William, Timothy, Isaac, John, Sarah, Jacob, Thomas, Edward, Rebecca, and Abraham. The children were Luther, Isaac, David, Elizabeth, Hannah, Jacob, Lydia, and Mary. Isaac was married twice, but the children were all by first wife.

He married December 26, 1829, his second wife, Anna Nutting, who bore the following children: Sarah, Emily G., Jane Hulda, Jacob, and William, second—all the children being born in Sharon, Conn. Anna Nutting was born at Groton, Mass., a sister of Prof. Rufus Nutting, of the Western Reserve college. Jacob and Sarah both went to the Arcat Mission, India.

The above is the line of lineal descent from the first Chamberlain in America to W. I. Chamberlain, the editor of the Ohio Farmer, now residing at Hudson, Ohio. It is believed that all the Chamberlains of the Western Reserve are of this same stock. J. Chester Chamberlain, No. 135 East Eighteenth street. New York city, nephew of W. I. Chamberlain, is investigating the Chamberlain genealogy.

Dr. Frederick Chamberlain, one of the leading dentists, and a respected citizen of Akron, is the only child of Newman and Charlotte (Stark) Chamberlain. He was born August 18, 1851, in Akron, Ohio. He received his education in the public schools and the high school, and attended the colleges at Alliance and Hudson four years. He studied dentistry in the dental college of Philadelphia, from which he graduated, in 1887, as D. D. S. MERY JOHN COE, of Garrettsville, a most respected citizen, and ex-soldier, and formerly a well known educator and teacher of vocal music, was born in Charlestown, Portage county, December 4, 1839, a son of Claudius and Nancy (Johns) Coe. The Coe family is of English descent, and several of the early male members of the family in America were soldiers in the war for American independence. Claudius Coe was born in Granville, Conn., and in 1808 came to Ohio, being one of the earliest settlers in Charlestown township, Portage county, where there were born to his marriage with Miss Johns eleven children, viz: Jacob, Sarah, Almeda, Phebe, Ransom, Nancy A., Rosaline, Emily, Emery J., Orinda and Elizabeth. The father lived to reach his sixty-eighth year and died a greatly respected citizen.

Emery I. Coe was reared on the home farm and also learned ropemaking under his Having received a good commonschool education, he began teaching at the age of twenty-one years, and at the age of twentytwo commenced giving instructions in vocal music, teaching, in all, 100 terms. In 1862 he made a tour of the west, teaching music in Angola, Kankakee, Iowa City, Cedar Rapids, Davenport, Rock Island and other cities, and on his return, in 1864, enlisted at Toledo. Ohio, August 18, in company D, Capt. W. W. Cooke, One Hundred and Eighty-second Ohio volunteer infantry, for one year, or during the war, and was honorably discharged at Nashville, Tenn., July 7, 1865, the war having Mr. Coe was a participator in been closed. the battles of Nashville and Franklin, Tenn., and on the night of the retreat from Franklin to Nashville, a distance of eighteen miles, Mr. Coe, on reaching the outskirts of the latter city, fell exhausted, with his comrades, and lay all night on the bare ground, under a cold, sleety rain, and woke up in the morning half covered with water and stiff with the rheumatism from which he has never recovered. Mr. Coe was also sick in the hospital at Louisville, Ky., about four weeks, having contracted fever from fatigue and exposure. His hardest or most severe service was, in his opinion, the cutting of logs for the building of Fort Butler, near Nashville, at which he was employed on a "rush" for eleven days and nights and greatly exposed to inclement weather. On another occasion the rebel general, Hood, tore up the railroad tracks and cut off the supplies for the Union troops, and for two weeks the Federal boys were fed on "hard tack" only, and nearly starved, and these hardships were doubtless the cause of Mr. Coe's illness. Outside of this, he was a true and faithful soldier, and ever ready and cheerful in the performance of his duty.

After the war was closed, Mr. Coe returned to Portage county, and located on a farm of eighty acres, which he purchased in the north part of Hiram township. December 15, 1865, he married, in Nelson township, Miss Arvilla Knowlton, who was born here June 25, 1845, a daughter of Williard and Hannah Knowlton-the former a substantial farmer and stock-dealer. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Knowlton were named Lavinia (deceased), Perenia, Cornelia, Valinda, Arvilla (Mrs. Coe, now deceased), and Ellen (also deceased). Mr. Knowlton was a greatly honored citizen, was for many years a justice of the peace in Norton township, Summit county, president of a bank in Garrettsville, and a thoroughgoing business man. marriage Mr. Coe lived on his farm, in Hiram township, for two years, then sold and bought a farm of seventy-six and a half acres in Charlestown township, to which he added a second tract of eighty-seven and a half acres. In 1888 he retired to Garrettsville, where he has since resided, honored and respected by all who know him. To Mr. and Mrs. Coe have been born the following-named children: Frantz E. and Frank A. (twins), Williard E. and Bert E. The mother of this family was called from earth October 10, 1897, a devout member of the Methodist church, and a lady of more than usual intelligence, and of many christian virtues, which endeared her to all who knew her. Mr. Coe, also a Methodist, was a Sunday-school teacher for many years, and for a long time its superintendent, and for sixteen years was choir leader in Charlestown. In politics he is a republican, and for twelve years was a trustee of Charlestown township.

Mr. Coe has given his children every educational advantage. Frantz A. and Frank E. are graduates of Mount Union college, Ohio, and are now postal clerks; Williard E. graduated from the Ohio State university, and is now a successful practicing physician at Troy, Ohio; Bert is at home with his father. Probably no resident of Garrettsville is more sincerely respected than Mr. Coe, who has done so much to advance the educational and moral interests of Portage county, and whose name stands, and has stood all these years, without taint or slur, and whose children have been reared to become, like himself, good and useful citizens.

Mr. and Mrs. Morgan are devoted members of the Congregational church at Wayland, of which Mr. Morgan has been clerk for several years. The family is one of the most respected in the township, and Mr. Morgan is individually esteemed for his strict integrity in all his transactions, and activity in his efforts to promote the public welfare.

► HE RAVENNA REPUBLICAN, one of the oldest county papers of the state of Ohio, was established, in 1830, as the Ohio Star. In 1854 it was known as the Portage County Democrat, being published by Hall, Herrick & Wadsworth. 1859, the Democrat passed into the hands of L. W. Hall & Son, and was published by them until September, 1882, when the paper was purchased by the Republican-Democrat Publishing company, with Arthur Mosley as editor. About three years afterward, John Meharg secured a controlling interest in the paper, then known as the Republican-Democrat, and became editor, changing the name to the Ravenna Republican. August 22, 1895, The Republican was purchased from Mr. Meharg by C. W. S. Wilgus, who, two months previously, had bought the Ravenna Graphic, which paper he consolidated with the Repubican. Roppel was a good soldier, prompt and cheerful in the discharge of his duty. He suffered a good deal from exposure, however, and injured his left arm at the elbow by a fall in the evening, after dark, on the railroad, and the arm is still stiff and can be used but little. Mr. Roppel returned, after his service, to Pittsburg, and again worked in the glass works. He married, in Pittsburg, April 26, 1864, Mary E. John Shoemaker, father of subject, was a native of Maryland, was born October 20, 1799, and was a son of Henry Shoemaker, a native of the same state, who came to Ohio in 1812 and settled in Stark county. There John Shoemaker was reared to manhood, and November 20, 1823, was married to Ann Brelsford, who was born in Henrico county, Va., in 1799, a daughter of Barney and Naomi John Shoemaker, after marriage, Brelsford. continued his vocation of farmer in Stark county until 1834, when he sold his farm and came to Bath township, Summit county, and bought the farm on which Jacob P., the subject of this article, now makes his home, and which he owns. John cleared up this land and erected a log cabin, in which he reared his family, advanced his fortunes, and died January 24, 1867, in comfortable circumstances, a member of the Disciples' church. HARLES SKINNER, a respected farmer of Richfield township, Summit county, Ohio, and an ex-soldier, descends from colonial families of Massachusetts and Vermont, and was born in Northfield, Ohio, September 3, 1842, a son of William and Diana (Lilly) Skinner.

William Skinner was born near Boston, Mass., and was first married there, to which marriage were born one son and two daughters. Mrs. Skinner died in the old Bay state, and subsequently Mr. Skinner came to Ohio, but left his children behind. He purchased a farm in Northfield township, Summit county, and here married Miss Diana Lilly, and to this union were born Charles and John. Mr. Skinner lived to be sixty-seven years old, and died on his farm, fully possessed of the respect of all his neighbors.

Charles Skinner received a good commonschool education in his native village, and was reared on his father's farm. August 2, 1862, he enlisted, at Northfield, in company C, One Hundred and Fifteenth Ohio volunteer infantry, to serve three years, if not sooner discharged on account of the cessation of hostilities, and for this reason was honorably discharged at Murfreesboro, Tenn., in July, 1865, and was mustered at Cleveland, Ohio, with the rank of corporal, having been promoted for meritorious conduct, and having served to within a few days of three years.

The military service rendered by Mr. Skinner was in Kentucky, Tennessee, Georgia and Mississippi, and at one time was detailed for one year, with others of his regiment, to hunt guerrillas. He was in many severe skirmishes with Wheeler's famous cavalry at Murfreesboro, Lavergn and elsewhere, and with Forrest, in Tennessee, and in pursuit of the pursuit of the notorious John Morgan and his raiders through Kentucky, Indiana and Ohio, capturing some of his men almost daily, and on the morning of Morgan's surrender cap-Within nine months Mr. Skinner's tured 300. detachment captured about 1,300 of these guerrillas—very dangerous and fatiguing work. He was himself once captured, but escaped the same night, which was very fortunate for him, as capture by these irregular troops meant, almost to a certainty, sure death. One of the most important events that happened to this detachment was the capture of Guerrilla Job, who had for years been a terror to the country, and who never gave quarter to his captives. A squad of twenty men, of whom

Mr. Skinner was one, had pursued him several days, and finally caught him asleep in the woods, his hiding place being pointed out by an old negro. When given his choice as to whether he should be hanged or shot, he was perfectly indifferent, and he was finally shot in the back by two soldiers, as the most merciful way of ending his existence. The Confederate general, Joe Wheeler, the cavalryman, offered a reward of $10,000 for the executors of Job, and swore that he would remain in Tennessee until they were captured, but the diminutive general was forced out of the state at a more rapid gait than he had entered it. Mr. Skinner was in all the marches and engagements in which his regiment took part, and was a brave and efficient soldier, who was never wounded nor a prisoner for more than one day, as has already been mentioned, but suffered, at one time. from a severe attack of chronic diarrhea, and was given a sick furlough home for thirty days, but was confined to his bed for four months.

After the war Mr. Skinner returned to Northfield and married Miss Martha Irwin. who was born in Perrysburg, Ohio, in August, 1847, a daughter of William and Hermie (Wilcox) Irwin. Mr. Irwin was the first marshal of the city of Cleveland, but removed to Perrysburg, where he died of cholera in middle life, with two of his children, and leaving two. who yet survive-Iulia and Martha. After marriage, Mr. Skinner engaged in farm work in several townships until 1889, when he purchased his present farm of thirty-six acres in Boston township, which he has converted into a most pleasant home, and he also rents 100 acres adjoining, being a practical farmer and an energetic and honest man. There have been born to his marriage three children-losephine, died aged eleven years, Sumner and In politics Mr. Skinner is a republican and cast his first presidential vote for Abraham Lincoln. He is a member of George L. Waterman post, G. A. R., No. 272, in which he has held the office of senior vice-commander and most of the other offices, and no man in the township is better known or more sincerely respected than Corporal Charles Skinner.

In his fraternal relations, Mr. Shuman is a member of Atwater lodge, No. 649, Knights of Pythias, of which he is the present vice-chancellor, and in which he has also filled the offices of outer-guard, master-at-arms and prelate. ON. IRA P. SPERRY, of Tallmadge, Ohio, and one of its representative and prominent citizens, descends from a long line of English Puritan ancestry, who were among the founders of the Connecticut colony.

Richard Sperry, who settled in New Haven, Conn., about 1640, was the sturdy Puritan who furnished aid, comfort and lodging to the judges who condemmed King Charles to death, during the reign of Cromwell. His children were John, Mary, Richard, Jr., Hester, Nathaniel, Thomas, Ebenezer, Daniel and Joseph. Richard Sperry was a Welshman, but his wife was an English lady. President Stiles, in his History of the Regicides, gives a very glowing account of the character, ability and shrewdness of Richard Sperry, and his descendants have good cause to congratulate themselves on being members of the Sperry family.

Ira P. Sperry the subject of this biography, is a son of Lyman and Lydia (Peck) Sperry. Lyman Sperry was born in Connecticut at Woodbury, and married there, the first time, Deborah Newton, also born in Connecticut, and by her he was the father of Asmodeus N., Mary Amonds, Phebe and Adna. Delorah died, and he married Lydia Peck, and their children were Lyman, Lydia, Elizabeth, Levinus, Lewis, Ira P., Samuel, Ebenezer and Dr. Willis.

Lyman Sperry moved with his family to Ohio in 1819, making the journey with horses and ox-teams—quite a party coming together. Mr. Sperry settled on the north line of Tall-madge township, a little east of Monroe Falls, and here bought a lot of 160 acres, which he cleared from the woods, aided by his sons. He and wife were both members of the Congregational church. His first wife died in Connecticut and he came to Ohio with his second wife and six of her children; three others were born in Ohio—Samuel, Ebenezer and Willis. He was a straightforward and respected pioneer of Tallmadge township, was well known for his integrity of character, and in politics was a whig.

Ira P. Sperry was born November 24, 1817, at Waterbury, Conn., and was brought when an infant by his parents, in 1819, to Tallmadge. He received a common-school education, and attended an academy a Cuyahoga Falls, learned when young the blacksmith trade and carriage business, and engaged in the manufacture of carriages, under the firm name of Oviatt & Sperry, and carried on an extensive business, the firm keeping a depository of carriages in Cincinnati for fourteen years. After this, Mr. Sperry engaged in the sewer pipe business for twenty years, the firm being changed several times, and doing a successful business. In 1850 he crossed the plains to Colorado, being ninety days on the way, and remained one year in the gold mines, meeting with gratifying success. Mr. Sperry has, throughout his career, been one of the most enterprising business men of Summit county. His carriage manufactory for many years was the most extensive in the western country, and added greatly to the prosperity of the county—the firm of Oviatt & Sperry continuing for nearly a quarter of a century. In addition to supplying a considerable portion of northern Ohio with fine carriages, from $20,000 to $25,000 worth of fine carriages were yearly sold at their depository in Cincinnati. In 1850, with his brother, Dr. Willis Sperry, and Samuel J. Ritchie, he established extensive sewer-pipe works in Tallmadge, which in connection with his son, George P. Sperry, was successfully conducted for about twenty years, or until the death of George P. Sperry, November 17, 1892, at which time the father retired from business on a competence.

Mr. Sperry was one of the original abolitionists of Tallmadge township and liberally assisted this cause with his means; he was also one of the original republicans of Summit county in the state legislature, having been elected in 1858 on the republican ticket and serving only two years.

September 27, 1841, Mr. Sperry married Miss Clarissa Carlton, of Portage county, a daughter of Peter and Clarissa (Ladd) Carlton. Their children were Willis C., born December 12, 1847, now a practicing physician; Charles O., who died in infancy; Mary A., who was born July 30, 1853, and died in Oberlin, Ohio, October 17, 1870, aged seventeen years; George P., born September 30, 1858, was a sewer pipe manufacturer of Tallmadge; Francis L., born October 22, 1861, is a chemist, and Henry B., who was formerly secretary and treasurer for the Sewer Pipe company at Huntington, Pa. Mrs. Sperry was a devout member of the Congregational church and died May 31, 1897, aged nearly seventy-seven years, a woman of many virtues and highly esteemed in the community.

It is related of this branch of the Sperry family that when the regicides, Gough and Whaley, were in hiding on the Sperry farm, that a maternal grandmother, who was also a Miss Sperry, carried food to them when she was a young girl. It is also stated that the Sperry family came from England with the Deavenport colony.

He has accumulated a valuable library during his long medical practice and is a patron of the leading medical reviews, both foreign and American.

Fraternally, the doctor is a member of the Northeastern Ohio Medical association, and also of lodge No. 83, F. & A. M., Akron, Ohio. Peter Carlton was of English ancestry and came from Connecticut. His wife was from Massachusetts and both families were of old colonial stock. Dr. Sperry and wife were the parents of Willis P., born September 23, 1856, and Emily Carlton, born October 25, 1859, both in California; Erasmus Darwin, born January 5, 1864; Rosaline Ladd, born February 10, 1867; Mary Amelia, born

AMES B. STAUFFER, the enterprising dairyman of Richfield township, Summit county, Ohio, was born in Salem, Columbiana county, October 9, 1847, a son of Abraham and Mary (Estry) The former was also a native of Co-Stauffer. lumbiana county, born September 12, 1815, of German descent, married June 7, 1838, and died April 30, 1878. Mrs. Mary (Estry) Stauffer, also of German extraction, was born in Huntingdon county, Pa., October 16, 1820, and died in Columbiana county, Ohio, December 27, 1894. The children of these parents were all born in Columbiana county, in the order here given: William H., March 9, 1840; Elizabeth M., June 22, 1844; James B., the subject; Celestia A., July 7, 1851; Sophia, December 23, 1853—died in California June 29, 1891; Cary H., October 8, 1856; Laura F., April 25, 1859; and Mary A., December 7, 1861.

James B. Stauffer remained with his parents until eighteen years of age, and then began business for himself by renting a coal bank, from which he mined and sold the mineral, making a success of his undertaking. January 1, 1867, he married Miss Sarah A. Buzby, who was born January 27, 1848, a daughter of Eleazer and Nancy (Grimes) Buzby, natives, respectfully, of New Jersey and Ohio. Mr. Buzby was a Quaker and school-

MAR C. STOCKING, of Hiram, Portage county, Ohio, was born October 14, 1828, in Waterbury, Conn., and is a son of Anson and Flora (Coe) Stocking. When five years old his parents settled on a farm in Litchfield county, Conn., and he here remained until he was about seventeen years of age. He early learned the trade of a painter, and when he was twenty he became a worker in brass, and in the manufacture of locks. in the works of the Russell & Irwin manufacturing company, of New Britain, He married, in Torrington, Litchfield county, Conn., Louisa M. Pierce, returned to New Britain and then to Torrington, about 1855, and worked on trunk locks, and afterward worked in a melodeon manufactory for some years. He then went to Ansonia, Conn... and worked at brass work on kerosene lamps. To Mr. and Mrs. Stocking were born Edwin C. and Albert P.

Mr. Stocking enlisted at Ansonia, Conn., August 4, 1862, in Capt. Sanford H. Chaffie's company B, Twentieth regiment, Connecticut volunteer infantry, to serve three years, or during the war, and was honorably discharged near Washington, D. C., at the end of his service, June 13, 1865, and was mustered out at New Haven, Conn. He was promoted, for meritorious conduct, to be corporal, from May 5, 1864, having previously acted as corporal for nearly one year. He was in the battles of Chancellorsville, Gettysburg, Lookout Mountain, Tracy City, Tenn., and Boyd's Trail, and was on the famous Atlanta campaign. He was in the battles of Resaca, Buzzard's Roost, Tunnel Hill, Rocky Faced Ridge, Snake Creek Gap, Peach Tree Creek, Turner Ferry, siege and general assault on Atlanta, and was one of the first men to enter that city after its fall, he being on a reconnoitering expedition, and fired at one of Wheeler's cavalrymen, engaged, with others, in the destruction

Stocking also was present and took part in the grand review at Washington, D. C. thinks that he saw the hardest service in the Gettysburg campaign, when he marched with his company from Dumfries, Va., thirty-five miles south of Fairfax Court House, making this march during a hot dry day in June, from 3 A. M. to 9 P. M., and thence to the battle field—twenty-four days on this forced march, and suffering greatly from rain, mud and hot weather. At night the tired soldier slept on his arms, with no shelter except a rubber blanket. He was in the battle of Gettysburg forty-eight hours, and kept his knapsack on his back all the time. He had nothing to eat except a little raw pork and hard tack. Stocking was not wounded but was struck with several spent balls, and at Chancellorsville one ball struck his knapsack and passed through the folds of his blanket, which saved his life. He was a good soldier and served his country faithfully. He is now much disabled from the exposure of sleeping on the ground, and is a sufferer from rheumatism. Mr. Stocking returned to Ansonia, Conn., and to his family. He had left his wife with two small boys, and during his long service he had received no furlough home.

In August, 1865, Mr. Stocking came to Hiram, Ohio, where his wife's father, Rodney Pierce, Sr., was then living. Here Mr. Stocking engaged in the small fruit business for twelve years and prospered, having now a pleasant home and a few acres of land. He then started a hack and express line from Hiram to Garrettsville, which he ran for fourteen years, and two years ago retired from active business.

In politics Mr. Stocking was first a whig and then a republican, casting his first presidential vote for Gen. Scott and then for John C. Fremont, and was one of the original republicans. Mr. Stocking has held the office of township trustee, and is a respected citizen. He is an honored member of the G. A. R., Mark Horton post, Garrettsville, and is an unaffiliating Odd Fellow. Mrs. Stocking is a member of the Congregational church.

Edwin Stocking, son of Omar C., married Bell Crawford, and is a machinist in Chicago. They have two children, viz: Edwin B. and Leroy. Albert P. Stocking, the younger son, married Mary Jones. He is a railroad man and lives in Cleveland, Ohio.

The Stocking family is of old English Puritan stock, the founders of the family in America settling in Connecticut on the foundation of the colony, and was a soldier in the Revolutionary war. Anson Stocking, the father of Omar C. Stocking, was a cabinetmaker and painter, and also a farmer of Torrington, Conn. He was a respected citizen and one of the board of selectmen of his town and a justice of the peace. His children by his marriage to Miss Coe were Flora, Omar C., Fannie, Phila and Eber. To his first marriage, to Phila Miles, were born John, Samuel, Marcia and Anson. All of these children by the first wife are now deceased, and Mr. Stocking died at the age of seventy-four years. He had two sons in the Civil war. Eber served in the first call of 1861 and was discharged on account of disability.

Rodney Pierce, the father of Mrs. Stocking, was a son of Thomas and Sarah (Green) Pierce, was from an old colonial Connecticut family, of the same original stock as President Mr. Pierce was three times married: the first time to Harriet Kelsey, and their children were Louise, Elizabeth, Charles, George and Henry; the second wife was Jane Dutton, and their children were Henry, John, Harriet, Jane and Rodney. There were no children by his third wife, Elizabeth Mulholland. the sons were in the Civil war-Henry and George, both in the Nineteenth regiment Connecticut volunteer infantry three years' service. Henry served out his time and was in several battles, his regiment having been formed into a battery of heavy artillery. George was killed at the battle of Cold Harbor. Mr. Pierce was a carpenter and joiner, and owned a farm of 200 acres in Torrington township, Conn. came, in 1864, to Hiram, Ohio, and bought a farm and here passed his remaining days. He was a member of the Congregational church, in which he was a deacon many years, and was an honored and industrious man of sterling worth.

RANK HALL SPIRES, druggist and storekeeper, in Atwater township, Portage county, Ohio, was born here January 1, 1866, a son of Thomas and Josephine (Hiddleson) Spires, both natives of the Buckeye state. He was educated in the common schools of his native town, and later for many years was his father's assistant in the lumber business and in stock raising, and also for some years clerked for him in a drygoods and notion store. In February, 1890, he purchased from Walter McConnery the drug store which he now owns, in which he carries a full and well-selected line of drugs and chemicals, as well as an assortment of groceries, tobacco, etc., and, being polite and affable, is doing an excellent trade.

Mr. Spires was united in marriage November 19, 1891, with Miss Addie Benjamin, who was born in Atwater township, January 12, 1868, a daughter of Platt and Ellen Benjamin. the former of whom is a native of New York state and the latter of Rootstown, Ohio. Spires was educated in the schools of Atwater and Ravenna, and after finishing her education, at the age of fifteen years, taught school herself for several years at various places throughout the county. Mr. Spires is a member of Atwater lodge, No. 649, Knights of Pythias, and also of the Portage county Gun club, in which he has several times won the championship medal, and has made a record, at trapshooting, of forty-seven out of fifty birds. is likewise an enthusiastic sportsman, owning two of the best bird-dogs in the county, and never misses a season to indulge in the hunt. He is very attentive to business, however; it is only on an occasion of a shoot going on that he takes a vacation. He and wife are great favorites in the social circles of the township and both are held in high estimation by all their neighbors and friends.

LBERT C. STOW is one of the most venerable and respected citizens of Summit county, Ohio, and the oldest native-born person living in Stowe township. He is from sterling English ancestry. The founders of the family came to New England in old colonial times and were among the founders of Connecticut. The grandfather of subject was a sea captain in the West India trade in early times, and it is believed that his name was William. Lord Thomas Stow, who recently died, leaving a large estate but no will, was of the same family. Rev. Dr. Stowe, husband of Harriet Beecher Stowe, the famous author, was of the same stock.

He sold 100 acres for $3 per acre to Squire Samuel Cheney, and retained 200 acres. Being a sailor, he was employed to rig the first vessel built at Cleveland in 1812, sailed this schooner a year and carried provisions to Sackett's Harbor. He was not accustomed to the hard work of a pioneer, but he learned fast and did a large amount of clearing. He finally sold his land, or what remained after he had given much to his sons, and moved to Brimfield, Portage county, and bought several small farms. He sold out and returned to Stowe township three years later, in 1839, and here passed his remaining days on his farm. He was early a member of the Congregational church and in later life a member of the Christian church, and in politics a whig. He died September 20, 1853, aged seventy-seven years and eight months. Albert C. Stow was born July 5, 1810, near Monroe Falls in the log house near the present site of the paper-mill on the original Stow farm, and is the only living member of his father's family. He received the limited common-school education of the district, was brought up a farmer, and at sixteen years went to work in a woolen-mill for one year, and then resumed farming on his father's farm. He married, at the age of twenty-four years, in Michigan, November 22, 1835, Almira Barret, who was born January 23, 1818, at Woodstock, Conn., a daughter of Simon and Lydia (Masscraft) Barret. The founder of the family in America came from England in old Puritan times. The family was mentioned in "Doomsday Book" and located in 1086. Another mention is made in London "Knights," 1381, and after this many knights and county families are named, down to the present, as scattered all over England and the colonies. Perhaps the "Baret," as it is spelled in "Doomsday Book," was Saxon, and probably the first Barretts were Normans and kin to the Barretts or Barrets of France and Italy, and came to England with the conqueror. Several Barretts located in Virginia and Massachusetts from 1620 to 1640—one or more in Boston, and one on the Concord. One Thomas Barrett, aged sixteen years, sailed from London in the ship Increase in 1635; a Thomas B. Barrett, with his wife, Frances, in 1635. A Thomas Barrett with his wife, Frances, were settled in Chelmsford in 1630. It has been, so far, impossible to trace them to any other family or locality in either old or New England.

Thomas and Frances Barrett of Chelmsford had three children--Margaret, Moses B., and Mehitable. Moses Barrett married a Miss Smith of Dorchester, September 10, 1684 and had a son, Moses. Moses Barrett, Jr., married and had born in Chelmsford the following children: Daniel, Hannah, Oliver, Smith, Moses and Benjamin (twins). Moses Barrett moved to Woodstock, Conn., about 1722. Smith Barrett married Mary Spalding. His children, born in Woodstock, were Samuel, Hannah, Daniel, Priscilla, Thomas, Ephraim. Martha, Priscilla (second), Ephraim (second) and Mary. Daniel Barrett married, the first time, Hulda Elothrop, March 14, 1765, and for his second wife, Mary Manly, in 1774 or 1775, and for third wife a widow, Mrs. Mary Miles Dodge in 1778, and his fourth wife, Jemima (Inman) Benson, November 16, 1780. His children, born on the Woodstock homestead, were, Smith, Anna, Daniel, Thomas Manly, Aldrich, Wiley, Edward Inman, Mary (Mrs. Nathan Barret), Simon and Andrew. Mrs. Jemima Benson, was a daughter of Edward Inman, born December 14, 1748; she had four children, by her former marriage: Isaac, Joseph, John and Inman. She died February 7, 1827, Daniel Barret died July 22, 1887.

Simon Barret, father of Mrs. Stow, was born February 21, 1784, in Woodstock, Conn., received his education at the academy at Woodstock, and taught school twenty-one seasons in Connecticut. Canada and New York state. He married, in Woodstock, Conn., October 12, 1809, Lydia, Masscraft, daughter of Jacob and Hannah (Austin) Masscraft, both of New England ancestry. Lydia was born in Woodstock, Conn., November 11, 1787. Jacob Masscraft, her father, was a farmer of Connecticut stock and was a soldier in the Revolutionary war. He died in Woodstock from consumption contracted by exposure in that war. The Austins were a Massachusetts family and seafaring people, and the greatgrandfather of Mrs. Stow was captured by Algerine pirates and never returned. Mr. and Mrs. Simon Barret had the following children: Newton, Milton, Almira, Martha E., Simon G., William P., Sarah and Frances L. Simon Barret came to Stowe township, Summit county, Ohio, May 20, 1835, and remained three months, and September 20 went to Michigan and settled at Spring Port, where he died in 1837. He was a man of high character, much respected by all. Mr. Stow's father was a second cousin to Judge Stowe, the owner of this township.

Albert C. Stow, when he was a boy, lived in almost a wilderness, and after marriage, Mr. Stow, with his wife, lived in Brimfield about three years and worked on his father's land, and in 1839 settled on fifty acres which his father gave him in Stowe township; in 1856 he sold this land, which he had improved, and came to his present farm. Mr. Stow has always been a hardworking and industrious man and prospered by his sterling thrift. When young he cleared a great deal of land and worked hard to make his home, assisted by his faithful wife. They have five children, viz: Lura A., who married Edwin Wetmore: Fannie M., who married William Cox; Mary T., who died, aged fourteen; Frank A. and Daisy.

ENRY P. STRAIGHT, a veteran of the Civil war, and a greatly respected citizen of Hudson township, Summit county, Ohio, was born in Erie county, N. Y., March 8, 1828, a son of Royal A. and Nancy (Dolph) Straight, and was brought to Ohio in 1835, by his parents, who settled in Rome, Ashtabula county.

Henry Straight, paternal grandfather of Henry P., was born in Rhode Island, of English descent, ran off from home when sixteen years old, enlisted, served all through the Revolutionary war, and also through the war of 1812, in which he was quartermaster of his regiment. He married Anna Powell, in Massachusetts, and located at Charlotte, Chittenden county, Vt., and there were born to him three children, viz: Henry P., Royal A., and Anna Elizabeth. He came to Ohio, with his son, Royal A., and here died at the advanced age of ninety-eight years.

Royal A. Straight, son of Henry, was born in Charlotte, Vt., and when young, went to Newstead, Erie county, N. Y., where he bought a farm, and married Miss Nancy Dolph, who was born in Kinderhook, N. Y., a daughter of Aaron and Catherine (Delong) Dolph, and to this union were born six children-Henry P., Allen M., George H., Elizabeth, In the spring of 1835, Mr. Ruth, and Anna. Straight came from Erie county, N. Y., to Ashtubula county, Ohio, and purchased 125 acres of partially cleared land, on which was a log house; this land he thoroughly cleared up, and converted into a comfortable home, and profitable farm. In 1857 he removed to White county, Tenn., and purchased an old plantation of 1,700 acres, but in 1861, being persecuted for not taking the oath of allegiance to the Confederate government, he was glad to sell it for $1,000-not a tithe of its value. He then went to Marion county, Ill., bought, and lived on eighty acres for a few years, and then moved to Kent county, Mich., where he passed the remainder of his life, dying March 2, 1876, at about seventy-six years of age, a member of the Baptist church. He was first a whig in politics, but became one of the original republicans, voted for John C. Fremont, its first candidate for the presidency, and was an ardent Union man, but too old, although he volunteered, to be accepted as a soldier; but he sent three sons—Henry P., Allen M. and George H.—to the defense of the Union, and also sent two sons-in-law-Edmond R. Allen and Charles Newman. Of these, Allen M. was in the One Hundred and Eleventh Illinois infantry, in the three-year service, was in the Atlanta campaign, and many battles beside, was captured at Peach Tree Creek, and was fifteen months in the Andersonville and Florence prison pens, but finally reached home alive; Charles Newman, who served in the same regiment, died in prison at Florence, where he had been transferred from Andersonville. Edmond R. Allen was in the same regiment for three years; George H. Straight was in the three-year service, in the Fortieth Illinois volunteer infantry, was severely wounded, and died at his home in Illinois a few months later.

Henry P. Straight received a good commonschool education and has always been a farmer. He married, September 25, 1849, at Hart's Grove, Ashtabula county, Ohio, Miss Mary J. Stevens, who was born April 20, 1831, at Detroit, Mich., a daughter of Weston and Elizabeth (Snedekor) Stevens, the former of whom was born in Rochester, N. Y., a son of Ebenezer and Hannah (Whaley) Stevens-the Stevenses being of English and the Whaleys The mother of Hannah of Scotch descent. Whaley was a daughter of Samuel Whaley, a Scotch peer, but she ran away from home, when young, to accompany a married sister to Rochester, N. Y., and thus her property became alienated. Weston Stevens was a brickmason by trade and died in Cleveland, Ohio, the father of the following children-Samuel W., Mary J., Caroline and Harriet.

After marriage, Mr. Straight settled in Rome, Ashtabula county, Ohio, bought fifty acres of land, partly cleared, and the remainder he cleared himself. In 1857, he removed to White county, Tenn., with his father, settled about eighty miles east of Nashville, remained there about a year, but owing to troublous times returned to Ohio, and enlisted at Chardon, Geauga county, December 4, 1861, in battery G, First Ohio light artillery, for three years, veteranized for three years longer and served until honorably discharged at Camp Chase, Ohio, August 31, 1863. Straight took an active part in the following Pittsburg Landing, April 6-7, 1862; Corinth, May 1 to 30, 1862; Franklin Pike, September 7, 1862; Stone River, December 31, 1862, to January 2, 1863; Tullahoma campaign, June 23 to 30, 1863; Dug Gap, September 11, 1863; Chickamauga, September 19 and 20, 1863; Missionary Ridge, November

At Pittsburg Landing, he sustained a flesh wound in the neck, but did not go to the hospital; he was also injured by being thrown from his horse, the gun on its carriage being discharged without being unlimbered; at Stone River he received a slight bullet wound in his right knee, and at a review at Murfreesboro was thrown from his horse and knocked senseless, and for a short time was in hospital. At New Orleans he served as corporal of his company, and as such his name is inscribed on the soldiers' monument at Cleveland. He made a splendid military record, although his health was permanently wrecked by his exposure in the service. the war, Mr. Straight returned to Portage county and rejoined his wife and five children. This number has now reached nine, viz: E., Martha E., Earnest R., Carrie A., Charles H., Wills J., Lillian A., Estella May (who died at sixteen years), and Eva J.

In 1867, Mr. Straight moved to Streetsboro township, Portage county, where he located on fifty-seven and one-half acres of land, where he lived until 1892, when he came to Hudson, where he now lives in retirement. He and wife are members of the Congregational church at Hudson and are consistent observers of its teachings. Mr. Straight was one of the original members of the republican party, and voted for its first nominee for the presidency of the United States-John C. Fremont; he was a guard at the state penitentiary of Ohio three years, and for many years was a member of his board of school directors in Streetsboro township, Portage county; he is an honored member of the Grand Army of the Republic and is past commander of William served three years in company G, Forty-second Ohio infantry. The army record of George G. will be given further on. Of the daughters, Eleanor, is married to Benjamin Lilly, of Cleveland, and Amelia is the wife of John Perry, who was a soldier in the Forty-second Ohio infantry. The parents passed their remaining days in Cleveland, Mr. Striker being respected as a hard-working and useful citizen, and Mrs. Striker as an active member of the Disciples' church.

George G. Striker was reared to farming when young, and at the age of twenty-one enlisted, October 22, 1861, at Cleveland, in company G, Forty-second Ohio volunteer infantry, to serve three years, if not sooner discharged on account of the war closing, but was honorably discharged October 15, 1863, at St. Louis, Mo., on account of wounds received in battle. He was an active participant in many engagements and skirmishes, the more important of which were the following: Middle Creek, Ky., January 1, 1862; Chickasaw Bluffs, Miss., December 9, 1862; Arkansas Post, Ark., January 11, 1863; Grand Gulf, Miss., April 29, 1863, and Port Gibson, Miss., May 1, 1863, and here his gallant career as a soldier met with a final check. A minie ball passed through the elbow of his left arm, and immediately afterward a one-and-onequarter ounce ball, called a Memphis yeager, passed through the middle of the same member. For a time he was held in field hospital, his arm having been amputated in the field, but as soon as transportation became available he was taken to Grand Gulf, and thence to St. Louis, Mo., where he was placed in the improvised hospital at the new house of refuge, a Catholic reformatory building, where he was confined from July until October 15, 1863, his arm having been very badly shattered. Until wounded, he had taken part in all the engagements and skirmishes in which his regiment had participated, with the exception of the engagement at Cumberland Gap, when he was detailed on provost duty at Cincinnati, having charge of a company of men.

On returning to Cleveland, Mr. Striker entered a commercial college, learned book-keeping and telegraphy, and was then employed in the general ticket office of the Atlantic & Great Western Railroad company at Cleveland, as clerk, and also traveled for the company as advertising agent. Later he became telegrapher for the same company (now the New York, Lake Erie & Western), at Newburg, Solon, Youngstown, Girard, Leavittsburg, and finally at Mantua Station, having been an operator for this company seventeen years and for more than twenty years in its employ—a fact that speaks well for his efficiency, capability and integrity.

Mr. Striker was united in marriage, in Mantua Station, April 14, 1870, with Miss Melissa A. Keyes, who was born here October 21, 1844, a daughter of B. F. and Nancy (Booth) Keyes—both families of English origin, but of American birth. B. F. Keyes was born in Mantua, of an old Ohio pioneer family, was a carpenter by trade, and married in Mantua; Nancy Booth was born in Vermont, a daughter of Israel Booth. Besides Mrs. Striker they were the parents of four other children, viz: Marcellus A., Alice M., Elva and Hettie R. Mr. Keyes lived to be sixty-seven years of age, and was a temperate, industrious and much respected citizen.

In politics Mr. Striker is a republican, and voted for Abraham Lincoln for president at each of his two nominations. He is a member of Bentley post, G. A. R., No. 294, in which he held the offices of commander, vice-commander, secretary, etc., and is a member of Mantua lodge, No. 752, I. O. O. F., in which he has served as noble grand and filled the intermediate chairs. Mrs. Striker is a member of the Disciples' church, and both are highly esteemed in Mantua, which has been their permanent home ever since marriage.

URTIS TAYLOR, one of the most prosperous native-born farmers of Deerfield township, Portage county, Ohio, and of the third generation of the family to occupy the present homestead, was born May 3, 1854, a son of Hiram and Jane (McConney) Taylor.

George Taylor, paternal grandfather of Curtis Taylor, was a native of Washington county, Pa., born October 19, 1764, came to Ohio in 1799, and bought the farm in the southeast part of Deerfield township, Portage county, which has ever since been occupied April 14, 1800, Mr. Tayby his descendants. lor settled on the new homestead and at once began the task of clearing-the work of improving and cultivating being carried on by his children until the present day, and it being now the most productive farm in the district. The marriage of George Taylor took place in Pennsylvania to Miss Elizabeth McConney, who was born October 9, 1762, the union resulting in the birth of the following children: Nancy, January 3, 1793; Matilda, December 10, 1794; John, November 27, 1796; Nellie, November 24, 1798; George, January 26, 1801 (the last named being the first white male child to be born in Deerfield township); Leoranda, May 9, 1803, and Hiram, September 18, 1805. George Taylor, the father of this family, attained considerable prominence in the township, was a justice of the peace for many years, and died on his farm, greatly respected.

David McConney, maternal grandfather of Curtis Taylor, was also a native of Pennsylvania, of Irish parentage, came to Ohio in 1817, and settled in Deerfield township, where for many years he followed his vocation of miller, but later became a farmer. He reared a family of five children, of whom John resides in Alliance, Ohio; William, who was killed by a horse; Matilda, deceased; Elizabeth, deceased wife of Seth Tunkery, and Jane, deceased wife of Hiram Taylor and the mother of Curtis Taylor, the subject of this biography. Both grandparents were members of the Methodist church.

Hiram Taylor was born on the homestead in Deerfield township September 18, 1805, and was reared a pioneer farmer. To his marriage, in 1835, with Jane McConney, were born nine children, five of whom survive, viz: Solomon, who lives in Indiana; Mary, wife of Addison Ferney; Samantha J., unmarried; Curtis, and Laura, wife of George Bundy. Of the deceased children, two died in infancy; Newton died November 3, 1864, at the age of twenty-four years, and Eliza, who was married to William Dramer, died May 3, 1879. when twenty-nine years old. Hiram Taylor, the father of these children, was greatly relied upon by his fellow-citizens, whom he served in various township offices, including those of school director and supervisor, for many years. He passed all his life on his native farm, and died September 18, 1883, aged seventy-seven years and seven months; his wife followed him to the grave May 4, 1891, in her seventyseventh year, and both were consistent members of the Disciples' church.

Curtis Taylor, the present honored occupant of the old homestead, remains a bachelor, his household being managed by his sister, Samantha J. He is a thoroughly practical farmer, and fully keeps up the reputation of the farm as being one of the best cultivated in the county; and here, in the enjoyment of the high esteem of their neighbors, as well as of the entire community, he and sister are peacefully passing the happy years away.

eFFERSON THOMAS, an ex-soldier of the Civil war, and an honored citizen of Streetsboro township, Portage county, Ohio, where he was born July 4, 1843, descends from a colonial New York family of Welsh extraction.

John Thomas, grandfather of Jefferson, was born in Adams, Jefferson county, N. Y., was a farmer, and a soldier of the war of 1812, and, among his other services in that struggle, hauled the cannons that were used in the defense of Sackett's Harbor. After this war he came by ox-team to Portage county, Ohio, and cleared up a farm in Streetsboro township from the wild forest, and later, with the assistance of his son, Osman, hewed a road through the forest from embryo Streetsboro to embryo Hudson, these now populous towns being then nonentities. He succeeded in wringing from the bosom of the dense forest a farm that afforded his family a good and comfortable home, but in his old age went to Connecticut to pass his declining years with his son, William, and there passed away at the advanced age of eighty-two years.

Osman Thomas, father of Jefferson Thomas, was also born in Adams, N. Y., and when twenty-one years old followed his father to Ohio, a year after the latter had settled here. He married, in Hiram township, Portage county, Lois J. Mathews, a school-teacher from Connecticut, and who came to Ohio with a foster brother. Osman Thomas, after marriage, settled on fifty acres of land in the woods of his township, but by hard work and good management increased his possessions to 343 acres, and at his death gave to each of his sons a farm of no diminutive dimensions. He was a deacon in the Baptist church for forty-five years, and as a whig and republican served twenty years as a justice of the peace, and filled, beside, other offices, such as member of the school board, township trustee, etc., and died, at the venerable age of eightytwo years, in Streetsboro, honored by all who knew him.

Jefferson Thomas, with whose name this biographical notice is opened, is a son of Osman and Lois J. (Mathews) Thomas, of whom mention has already been made. He received a good common-school education, was reared a farmer, and at the carly age of eighteen years enlisted, at Streetsboro, November 1, 1861, in company K, Capt. C. R. Bow, Sixth Ohio cavalry, to serve throughout the war, or, at most, three years, but was honorably discharged, at Windmill Point, Va., February 6, 1863, on annount of disability. He was a brave and unflinching soldier and fought at New Franklin, Tenn., at Strawberry Plains, and with Sheridan in his raid through the Shenandoah valley in Virginia; was also at Cross Keys and at Stoughton Mountain and Centerville, Va., and in the second battle of Bull Run. He has suffered much from diarrhea, which seized him at Camp Chase, Ohio, and afterward with typhoid fever, which confined him in regimental hospital near Fall's church, in Virginia, whence he was sent to Windmill Point, where he received his final discharge, weighing, at the time, but seventyfour pounds, having been reduced by chronic diarrhea from 194 pounds at the time of his enlistment, and it was a full year after his return to his father's house in Streetsboro township before he was able to perform any manual labor.

The marriage of Mr. Thomas took place November 4, 1866, at Warren, Ohio, to Miss Martha E. Joy, daughter of Eben and Mary H. (Green) Joy, and a native of Southington, Trumbull county, Ohio, born February 8, 1864. Eben Joy is a native of Vermont, and is a farmer by calling, and owns a good farm of 120 acres in Trumbull county, of which he was an early settler. To his marriage with Mary Green were born Martha E., Daniel and Mary E., and he and family are among the most respected residents of Trumbull county. To Osman Thomas and wife were born Willard, Juliette, Jefferson, Millicent M. and Delos—the last named being now deceased. Daniel Joy, brother of Mrs. Martha E. Thomas, is a farmer at Southington, Ohio, and is married; Mary E. Joy, sister, was the wife of David Blackburn, and died at about thirty-eight years of age.

Jefferson Thomas and wife, on marrying, settled on their present farm, then consisting of forty acres, which was given to him by his father, but which, by industry, thrift and sagacious management, he has increased to ninetythree acres, all nicely improved and in an excellent state of cultivation. Their marriage has been blessed with three children, born in the following order: Garrison, Mary J. (a graduate of the high school at Hudson), and Joy The parents are members of the Presbyterian church, and in politics Mr. Thomas is a republican and cast his first presidental vote in the ranks for Lincoln. He is a member of A. H. Day post, G. A. R., at Kent, and is an honorable, straightforward, industrious citizen.

ILLIAM THOMAS, of Palmyra township, Portage county, Ohio, was born November 1, 1851, in the house still occupied by him. His father, David Thomas, was born November 12, 1802, in Chester county, Pa., a son of David Thomas, who moved back to Wales, whence he came when he was but a small child, and lived in a place called Llandyssul, until in the early 'thirties he came to America, and worked at his trade of carpenter in Pennsylvania, and later near and at Youngstown, Ohio. David, father of 'subject, was married at Ravenna, Ohio, by 'Squire David John, to Miss Margaret

Jones, a native of Tregaron, Wales, and lived for a short time at Newport, now Wayland, Ohio, then moved to the farm now occupied by the subject of this sketch, where they reared a family of four children: Hannah (Mrs. Lloyd); Elizabeth (Mrs. J. E. Griffith, deceased); Sarah (Mrs. William D. Williams) and William Thomas. David Thomas, the father, traced his ancestry back to a landowner of Wales.

William Thomas, the subject of this sketch, received his early education in the district school until fourteen years of age, when he attended a select school taught by Dr. Cyrus Turnbull, of Edinburg, and later attended Mount Union College, the winter he was six-At seventeen he taught school at Edinburg, two miles north of Center, attending Alliance college in the intervals of teaching, and when that institution closed, prepared to attend and take a course at Michigan university at Ann Arbor, Mich., which he entered in September, 1871, graduating June 23, 1875, with the degree of B. S. The year following, 1875-6, he taught as principal of the high school at Bucyrus, Ohio. The following year, after a short period at the university, he accepted the position of superintendent of schools at Holly, Mich., and remained there until the summer after his father died in 1878. The next position secured was that of principal of the high school at Kent, Ohio, which position he held The winter of 1881-2 he for two years. taught at Randolph, and the following winter was spent at home, where he devoted some time to vocal music. The next two years he taught at Mantua station.

Mr. Thomas married, in July, 1884, Miss Ada E. Farnsworth, of Oakdale, Wis., the youngest daughter of Henry Holden and Elmina (Cooley) Farnsworth. He was elected township trustee in Palmyra in the early 'eighties, also held the office of school director under the first term of Workman law, acting as president of the school board during his term of office. In 1896 he was elected to the office of justice of the peace, which office he still holds. the spring of 1885 Mr. and Mrs. Thomas moved to Center of Palmyra, where they lived until March 1, 1893, when they moved to the farm now occupied by him. While living at Palmyra two sons were born to them: Vincent Cooley, August 4, 1886, and Carl Farnsworth, August 1, 1890. Mrs. Thomas's birthday was July 4, 1859, and his own birthday was November 1, making a coincidence with the birthdays of the children. The first year after moving to Palmyra, Mr. Thomas taught as principal of schools of the special district this being the last school work done by him. He was quite extensively engaged in buying and shipping wheat, and later potatoes, etc. While at Palmyra Center, in the spring of 1892, their house was entered on the night of May 30, entrance being gained through the pantry window, one slat being broken in the shutter, and the thieves came into the bedroom where they were sleeping, taking the purse out of the pocket of his pantaloons, which were on a chair at the foot of the bed. a light being left on the stand in the room, as was customary when the children were small. On the night of December 17, 1893, about two o'clock Sunday morning, eight masked men, having walked all the way from Leavittsburg, Ohio, a distance of twelve miles, broke in the door with a bar post, and at the point of drawn revolvers demanded their money. After ransacking the house for an hour or more and securing all the money (about $18) and his clothing-one whole suit-boots and shoes, razor and watch, they left, leaving a guard until they returned from the other houses in the vicinity, which was about five o'clock in the morning. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas and Vincent were bound hand and foot, and left in that condition, but they soon extricated themselves, Mrs. Thomas being the first to get loose and Vincent the next. Neighbors were soon aroused and a party started in pursuit, but the trail was lost at Leavittsburg. This affected Mrs. Thomas' health, and within a month she became seriously prostrated and was in feeble health all summer.

In the fall of 1894 the barn took fire, and all adjoining buildings were burned on October 19. This, adding to the shock already received, unbalanced Mrs. Thomas' mind, and the following January 22, 1895, she started west to visit her father, taking with her the youngest son, Carl. While there, about the latter part of February, she became violently insane and was taken to Mendota. course of a week or ten days she rallied and was brought home by her husband, who had sought her side on first hearing of her condition. She had not been home a month before her condition became serious again, and she was taken to the state hospital at Cleveland, where she died August 26, 1895, and was buried August 28, at Palmyra, Ohio. November following, his sister, Mrs. Lloyd, having lost her husband the 6th of August previous, came to keep house for him. past two winters he has been teaching vocal music in the schools and lays claim to the honor of being the first to secure the adoption of the study of vocal music in the country schools in his immediate section, having secured its adoption in Newton, the first township in Trumbull county, in June, 1897, and in Paris township, Portage county, in January, 1898, the second township in Portage county.

Mrs. Thomas was born at Black Creek, Allegany county, N. Y., July 4, 1859. Her father, Henry H., and his father, Holden, served in the war of 1812, and were of English descent, tracing back to Sir Holden Farnsworth. Her mother was Elmina Cooley, a sister of Judge Thomas M. Cooley, of Michigan. Her mother was named Rachel, and she was the daughter of Major Hubbard of Revolutionary fame. She married, at eighteen, Thomas Cooley, a widower with two children, and became the mother of thirteen children, among whom are the two above named.

The grandmother of David Thomas was the daughter of a landowner named Jones and was disinherited for marrying contrary to her father's will. Her name was Mary, and she lived to be 105 years old.

OBERT W. THOMPSON, one of the substantial and reliable citizens of Hudson, Ohio, descends from the pioneers of the Western Reserve and from the old colonial Massachusetts family of that name.

Isaac Thompson, grandfather of our subject, was born in Berkshire county, Massachusetts, December 10, 1774. He was a farmer and married in Berkshire county, Mass., Polly Campbell, of Scotch ancestry. She was a sister of Ely Campbell, a pioneer banker of Ra-Another brother was Gen. Campbell, of Campbellsport, Portage county, Ohio-the founder of that town; a sister, Sarah Campbell, married Col. Frazier of Ravenna. Thompsons were of sterling English ancestry and descended from the old Puritan family of colonial times in Massachusetts. In pioneer times murders were almost unknown on the Western Reserve. The first murder at Ravenna was that of a peddler by a man named Unks, who fled. The citizens were horrorstruck and a meeting was immediately called, and as a result Gen. Campbell and another citizen of Ravenna, started horseback after the murderer in hot haste. Unks had a good start, but they followed him patiently and crossed the Alleghany mountains, where they caught the murderer, tied him to a horse and brought him back to Ravenna. They were gone so long that their friends believed them to have been killed. Upon reaching Ravenna Unks made his escape, but being tied to his horse and handcuffed, he could not well guide the animal, and was stopped by Isaac Thompson and finally executed. This was the first white man ever executed in Portage county.

Isaac Thompson and wife were the parents of the following children, viz: Eliza, who married Dr. Swift, of Ravenna, a prominent pioneer physician; Harry C.; and Rev. Oren C., who married Alice Thompson of Hudson. Rev. Thompson was a graduate of the Western Reserve college—a missionary to Detroit at an early day, where he preached many years, and the church in which he preached in Detroit, bears his name. The daughter, Mary, married Dr. Sabine, of Michigan; Richard and Robert were twins; then there were Charles, and Charlotte who married Timothy Carnahan, of Ravenna.

Isaac Thompson was a farmer of Berkshire township, Berkshire county, Mass., and in the spring of 1808 he moved with his family to Ohio, making the journey with an oxteam with a horse in the lead, which was ridden by Harry C. Thompson, then a boy of seven years of age. When the pioneer family neared the town of Campbellsport, Ohio, they met Gen. Campbell, the founder of the town. Mr. Thompson had just taken his son, Harry C., into the bushes for some boyish misdemeanor, and applied a hickory sprout in the vigorous manner of the olden days, and was much abashed that Gen. Campbell should witness the loud effects. Mr. Thompson bought 200 acres of land on which a little had been cleared and a large two-story frame house had been built, and in which was held the first court in Portage county, which house is still standing in Ravenna. Mr. Thompson lived in this house until his death. This property is still in the hands of one of his descendants—Mrs. Julia Hall, of Cleveland, Ohio.

Mr. Thompson cleared up this farm from the wilderness, and here made a good home; the Mahoning river runs directly through the land. Mr. Thompson was a substantial farmer and one of the earliest settlers of Ravenna and a member of the old-school Presbyterian church. Politically he was a whig and one of the founders of the republican party. He lived to be a venerable man of over eighty years, and was noted for his straightforward and honest character and for his hospitality. He was a fine example of the early pioneers of the Western Reserve.

Harry C. Thompson, son of above, was the father of our subject. He was born in Berkshire county, Mass., November 24, 1801, and came with his father to Ohio, in 1808. ceived the usnal common-school education of his day in Ravenna, Ohio, and, when he was young, learned the tailor's trade in Ravenna, which he perfected in New York city. was one of the earliest and at one time the only tailor in Portage county, and was in this business twenty years. He married, in Hudson, Ohio, January 7, 1830, Harriet A. Ellsworth, born in Hudson, Ohio, November 23, 1809, daughter of Capt. Elisha and Betsey (Oviatt) Ellsworth. Betsey Oviatt was born April 23, 1786. Elisha Ellsworth was born at Torrington, Conn., November 22, 1785. Mr. Ellsworth was a pioneer of Hudson town-He cleared up his farm and made a good home one and a half miles north of Hudson on the old Cleveland road. He was a deacon in the Presbyterian church, and well known as Capt. Ellsworth, being a member of the old Ohio State militia. He was an honored citizen and a prominent man and died September 13, 1859. Harry C. Thompson and wife settled in Ravenna, Ohio, where he followed his trade. In 1839 he settled on a farm of 118 acres in Hudson township, now owned by his son-Robert W. Mr. Thompson lived on his farm until 1853, and then moved to the home where our subject now lives and here passed his remaining days. He was an excellent business man, clear headed, of sound judgment and of strictest honesty of character. He was an honored citizen, acted as justice of the peace for a long time and was also assess-He was consulted by the people in transacting legal business-the administrator of many estates and the trusted guardian of children, and in the transaction of all his legal business in settling estates out of which lawsuits frequently sprang, he acted as his own Among the estates which he settled was that of Owen Brown, father of the famous abolitionist. For many years he made a business of loaning money and his charges were always fair and reasonable. He had one rule, which he always followed, and that was six per cent. per annum and the taxes, as he usually loaned on real-estate security. and wife were both members of the Presbyterian church. Politically he was an old-line whig and later a republican. He stood very high throughout the county as one of the most honorable business men of his day. reached the age of seventy-six years, and died December 19, 1877, very suddenly, at his residence in Hudson. His children are Robert W., and Elisha, born March 30, 1842, and died September 6, 1853, aged about thirteen years.

Robert W. Thompson was born in Ravenna, Ohio, August 10, 1833, received a district-school education and came with his father to Summit county, Ohio, when he was six years old, in 1829, and learned farming when young, and when about sixteen years old engaged in the business of furnishing steamships at Detroit, Mich., for several years. He married at Twinsburg, Ohio, November 18, 1852, Eunice Turner, born at Blandford, Mass., February 28, 1830, daughter of Rev. Charles A. and Mary (Bailey) Turner. Rev. Charles A. Turner was born at Groton, Conn., May 20, 1796, son of Stephen and Lucretia (Wightman) Turner. Both the Turners and Baileys were of old colonial Puritan ancestry from To this marriage were born the England. following children: Hattie A., wife of Leonard C. Wallace, of Northfield, Summit county; he is a prosperous farmer. They have two children-Arthur W. and Mable E. receiving a good common-school education she was educated in music. Oren H., a practical farmer, who married Miss Mary Cady, a native of Portage county. They have only one child, Bertha B. Mary E. is the wife of Horace A. Chamberlain, of Northfield, Ohio. He is a farmer by occupation. They have only one son, Walter, who is a student of the Macedonia school. Charles R. is married to Miss Mathilda Whapham, a native of England. They reside on the old homestead and have two daughters-Florence and Irene. He is one of the most prosperous farmers in Hudson township. The youngest is Edwin B., who resides with his parents at Hudson, Ohio.

In Rev. Turner's times one of the Bailey women, a great-aunt of Mrs. Thompson's, when Benedict Arnold and the British made the attack on New London, Conn., the colonial troops becoming short of cartridges, tore up her red flannel petticoat for material with which to make cartridges. The Baileys were sea-faring men, and in the whaling business from New London. They were captains of whalers for generations. Capt. Giles Bailey, while pursuing a whale, had his leg smashed by the whale, which struck the boat with its tail. His leg was afterward amputated.

Mrs. Thompson's father was the eldest of a family of children born unto Stephen and Lucretia (Wightman) Turner. Lucretia Wightman was a daughter of Isaac and Lucretia (Parker) Wightman. Isaac Wightman was a grandson of Valentine Wightman, the founder of the first Baptist church in Groton, Conn., it being also the first in the state. Lucretia Parker's mother was Hannah Avery, a descendant of the Avery who was one of the first settlers of Groton. Stephen Turner's father's name was Amos Turner, who married Prudence Allyn, June 1, 1770. Humphrey Turner, a farmer, was born in England in 1593, and, with his wife, Lydia Garner, and eldest son, John (and perhaps other children), came to Plymouth, Mass., in 1628. years afterward he moved to Scituate, Mass., and was one of the founders of a church there in 1635. His eldest son, John, born in England, married, November 12, 1645, Mary Brewster, a granddaughter of Elder William Brewster, who crossed the Atlantic in the the historic Mayflower. They had several children; among them was Ezekiel, born January 7, 1651. He married, in New London, Conn., December 26, 1678, Susannah, daughter of John Keeney. He died January 16, 1703 or 1704, and left one son, Ezekiel, and ten daughters. This son, Ezekiel, married Boradil Denison, and settled in Groton. adil Denison, daughter of Joseph and Prudence (Minor) Denison, was born February 14, 1712, and was married to Young Brewster They lived in Groton, Conn., May 12, 1729. and had the following children, viz: Theodore, born August 14, 1730; Prudence, born March 8, 1732 (and married Moses Palmer); Ezekiel, born January 27, 1734; Eunice, born July 22, 1740; Amos, born September I, Amos Turner was the great-grandfather, who married Prudence Allyn in 1770. The children of Stephen and Lucretia (Wightman) Turner were: Charles A., born May 20, 1796; Alfred, June 4, 1798; Melinda, October 24, 1801; Isaac Wightman, June 13, 1805; Jane Emeline, October 21, 1810, and James Monroe, December 23, 1816. The children of Amos and Prudence (Allyn) Turner were: Stephen, Rufus, Betsey, David, Eunice and Young. The Wightmans claim descent from Edward Wightman, the last of the martyrs by fire in England.

Rev. Charles A. Turner was married to Mary Bailey, in Groton, Conn., March 8, 1818, by Ralph Hurlbuth, J. P., the Turners being of English descent. Rev. Turner was a Baptist minister. He lived for some time at Groton, Conn., and at Blanford, Mass. Turner later bought land in Twinsburg township, and cleared his farm from the woods, and here he remained until his death. Services were held in the school-houses and at their homes throughout the surrounding townships of Twinsburg, Aurora, Streetsboro, Hudson, Northampton, Stowe, and Boston. The pioneer Baptists were poor, and Rev. Turner never had a salary for his work. He supported his large family by his labor on the farm and gave all his children an excellent education at the famous pioneer academy of Rev. Bissell, of Twinsburg. Rev. Turner was one of the faithful pioneer ministers who preached the gospel in the wilderness without money and without price. His children were Mary A., who married Rev. Williams, a Baptist minister; Joel, who died in California; Lucy; Charles, attorney-at-law, who served throughout the Civil war, entering as captain and coming out as brigadier-general, afterward judge of court of common pleas at Pekin, Ills., where he died. Then there were Emeline, Eunice, Jerusha, whe died young, Elisha, attorney-at-law, and Alcalde, of Jackson, Cal., who was shot in the court house while making a political speech. Then Reuben, who died aged sixteen years; Cordelia, and Daniel, who served in the Civil war. Rev. Turner reared a remarkable and excellent family, his sons becoming prominent men. He died at Twinsburg, October 5, 1874, aged seventy-eight years. He was early a democrat, a strong anti-slavery man, and became a republican on the outbreak of the war.

Mr. and Mrs. Thompson, our subjects, settled on the Thompson homestead and lived there until they moved to Hudson in 1884. Their son, Charles, lives on the old homestead, and is a practical, prosperous farmer. To Mr. and Mrs. Thompson have been born Rosa, who died aged two years; Hattie A., Oren H., Mary E., Charles R., and Edwin B -all married except the last, who lives at Politically he is a republican. Thompson is a member of the Baptist church at Twinsburg. Mr. Thompson is a well-known citizen and has prospered by his thrift and practical business ability. He owns about 500 acres of land and is engaged in loaning money and looking after his farms. He is a straightforward man. Mrs. Thompson's mother lived to be ninety-three years old.

M. THORP, D. D. S., of Bath, Summit county, Ohio, was born in Ontario county, N. Y., November 25, 1833, and is a son of Manville B. and Fanny W. (Clark) Thorp, early settlers of Summit county.

Manville B. Thorp was a son of Jeremiah Thorp, a soldier of the war of 1812, and a son of Nathan Thorp, who served in the war of the Revolution. November 3, 1832, Manville B. Thorp married in Bristol, Ontario county, N. Y., Miss Fanny W. Clark, a native of Massachusetts, born March 7, 1811. Although unassuming in manner, he possesses the confidence of all the inhabitants of the district to which he confines his practice, and is as much esteemed as a gentleman as he is for his professional ability.

HARLES P. TOWNSEND, of West Richfield, Summit county, Ohio, and one of the old soldiers of the Civil war and a respected citizen, springs from sterling English ancestry of old Puritan, Massachusetts stock. William Townsend, founder of the family in America, came to Boston, Mass., in 1630 or 1640, and was of the same family as the councillor, Charles Townshend, as the name was then spelled. James, son of the founder, was the second in descent. Capt. William Townsend, the greatgrandfather of our subject, was a Revolutionary soldier, and commanded a company at Bunker Hill. He lived many years at either Bolton or Lancaster, Mass.

Levi Townsend, grandfather of subject, was born at Lancaster, Mass., and was called out in Shay's rebellion with the militia. He was married to Mehitable Chandler, daughter of 'Squire Joel Chandler, of Alstead, Cheshire county, N. H., and of English descent. was born in Connecticut. Levi was a farmer and died in Alstead, aged eighty-five years. His children were Joel, James, Charles and Abel. Levi Townsend was a much respected citizen and well-to-do. His son, Lieut. Joel Townsend, was a graduate of West Point and died at twenty-one years of age. James settled in Lowell, Mass., where he was a prominent man and superintendent of the Merrimac Cotton works for many years. He was commander of the Lowell guards and served in the Civil war three months.

Charles Townsend, father of subject, was born in Alstead, N. H., and married in Lowell, Mass., where he went when a young man. His children were Charles P., Edwin J. and Emma E. His wife died and he married Lucinda M. Messer, and the children were Eliza and James.

Mr. Townsend was a farmer of Alstead, N. H., where he had been one of the first settlers. The homestead consisted of about 600 acres and was cleared up from the woods by Joel Chandler. It originally consisted of 1,000 acres. When a young man Mr. Townsend had been an overseer in one of the large cotton mills of Lowell, Mass. He became a prosperous farmer and lived to be seventy-eight years old and died on his farm a member and firm supporter of the Universalist church. In politics he was a democrat and held the office of selectman, or trustee, in his town.

Charles P. Townsend received an academic education at the Alstead Normal school, and was reared to farming when a young man; he had earned an excellent reputation as a school-teacher at Alstead, N. H., where he taught three years, and after coming to Ohio taught three years in West Richfield, Summit county; and in Medina county, four years—a total of fifteen years. He married at Westmoreland, N. H., November 20, 1856, Roena M. Wilber, who was born January 1, 1836, at Westmoreland, N. H., a daughter of Nelson and Mary J. (Burt) Wilber. C., and afterward did garrison duty at Greensboro, N. C., to the end of the war.

Mr. Townsend was sick in hospital with typhoid fever and rheumatism at Raleigh, N. C., and came near death, partially recovered and was sent home on a furlough of thirty days; he rejoined his regiment at Cleveland, Ohio, but at that time the war had closed. Mr. Townsend was always an active soldier and was in all the battles, campaigns, skirmishes and marches in which his regiment was engaged, and was always prompt and cheerful in the discharge of his duties. He was promoted for meritorious service to be duty sergeant, and afterward to be orderly sergeant. Mr. Townsend, in one of his engagements, was slightly struck with spent buckshot, and a minie ball grazed his right temple in the action of Shelbyville Pike, Tenn.

Mr. Townsend, on returning to West Richfield, engaged in carriage painting and wagon-making and formed a partnership with Levi Carr, under the firm name of Carr & Townsend. Mr. and Mrs. Townsend's children are Cora, Mary and Emma. In politics he is a republican and is a member of A. N. Goldwood post, No. 104, G. A. R., in which he has held the offices of adjutant and senior vice-commander. He has been a township trustee six years, clerk of election board twenty-five years, a justice of the peace nine years, and is a notary public. He is a non-affiliating member of Meridian Sun lodge, F. & A. M., at West Richfield, and has been senior warden. Mr. Townsend is a well-known citizen and has always stood high in the esteem of his immediate community.

R. TOWNSEND, a highly-respected citizen of Richfield township, Summit county, Ohio, and an ex-soldier of the Civil war, is a son of Eli and Sarah (Kenyon) Townsend, and was born in West Richfield May 15, 1839.

Eli Townsend was born in Cattaraugus county, N. Y., was taught shoemaking, served as a soldier in the war of 1812, and was married in his native state. W. R. Townsend received a good commonschool education and was cast hither and yon until about seventeen years of age, when he went to Iowa, where he worked on a farm, and then engaged in rafting and steamboating on the Mississippi river two years, then in other lines of business, and, while in Illinois, had his hip dislocated. This was never properly set, but while young and strong it did not discommode him, but he now feels some inconvenience from the injury. Returning to Ohio, he enlisted, May 17, 1861, at Warren, Trumbull county, as wagoner in company F, Twenty-fourth Ohio volunteer infantry, and served until honorably discharged, June 17, He was in the battles of Lewisburg and Cheat Mountain, W. Va., Shiloh, first siege of Corinth and Stone River. His right foot and ankle were crushed by a wagon during a stampede at Stone River, and he was confined in hospital from January, 1863, until September, when he was transferred to the veteran reserve corps. To Mr. Townsend is given the credit of saving Stewart's Creek bridge, at Stone River, on an occasion when a Union ammunition wagon was stalled. rebels, aware of the difficulty, made an effort to fire the bridge, but Mr. Townsend shot three dead from a pile of stones; but the fire from the rebels became very rapid, yet he was protected from the severe fire, being across a gorge; nevertheless, he saved the bridge and Among his other experithe ammunition. ences, although he enlisted as a wagoner, Mr. Townsend frequently served in the ranks; at one time in 1861, he was detailed as teammaster in Virginia; was detailed in charge of ambulances and medical wagons in his regiment at another, of which he had charge when mustered, and while confined with his wound in hospital served a portion of the time as cook, and was always a true and faithful soldier.

After his return to Richfield, Mr. Townsend was variously employed, and May 18, 1865, married Miss Frances E. Chapman, a native of Richfield, and a daughter of Francis E. and Eleanor (Farnam) Chapman, the union resulting in the birth of four children, viz: Eleanor R., Walter P., Perry W. and Percy F. James A., who was but seventeen years old when he entered the service, afterward veteranized and was promoted corporal. He took part at Shiloh, Corinth, Stone River, and in the Atlanta campaign, and served through the entire struggle. Mr. Barr died at the age of sixtyfour years, in 1871, a respected and substantial farmer, a member of the Methodist church, and in politics a republican. His daughter, Mary E., was first married to Francis Mc-Bride, a gold miner. The wedding took place in California, whither she had gone with her brother Daniel and sister Sarah, and the latter's husband, John Aram. Three brothers of Mr. McBride served in the Civil war, of whom one was killed, and Mr. Townsend had three nephews in the same strife-Robert, Richard and Charles-children of William and Cynthia (Townsend) Tunwell. Robert and Richard were in company G, Eighteenth United States regulars, and Richard died in hospital; Charles was in the One Hundred and Fifteenth Ohio volunteer infantry, and was killed by bushwhackers near Murfreesboro,

M., No. 266, at West Richfield, and was made a member in 1865. He has served as deacon, junior and senior warden, and is now the present incumbent of the office of senior warden.

HARLES T. TRUESDALL, proprietor of the first livery barn established in Garrettsville, was born in Nelson township, Portage county, Ohio, October 20, 1837, a son of Charles Merritt and Betsey (Smith) Truesdall, also natives of the Buckeye state.

Asa Truesdall, grandfather of the subject, was a native of New York state, came to Ohio when a young man, settled in Nelson township, Portage county, and here married Miss Katie Stowe. He served through the war of 1812 as a substitute, and passed the remainder of his life in farming. He and wife both died in Nelson township, the parents of the following children: Mary, who married Alanson Morris, a carpenter, and died in Geauga county; Betsey became Mrs. Bell, and died in Iowa; Jane was married to a Mr. Wannemaker, and died at Albert Lea, Minn.; Charles M., father of subject; Jeremiah died in Walworth county, Wis.; Alexander died at some point unknown, and Sherburn sought a home in the west.

Charles M. Truesdall, father of subject, was born in Nelson township in February, about the year 1810, was here married, farmed all his life, and died, at the early age of forty-four years, May 8, 1854, an honored man and a substantial citizen. To him and wife were born five children, viz: Catherine, who died in infancy; Lydia Jane, who met with the same fate; William; Charles T., the subject of this notice, and Mason, who died at the age of six years. After the death of Mr. Truesdall his widow was married to J. H. Kelsey, removed to Austinburg, Ohio, and there died without further issue, a member of the Methodist Episcopal church.

Charles T. Truesdall was educated in a country school and remained on his father's farm until the death of the latter, when he went to the home of his maternal uncle. Timothy Smith, with whom he lived until he reached his majority. He then began dealing in live stock, and during the Civil war was largely engaged in purchasing horses for government use. Later he took a thorough course at Eastman's Business college, after which he engaged in the livery business; although prices at that time were exceedingly high, his first buggy costing him $285, and the value of an ordinary livery rig being estimated at $500. From that time until the present, with the exception of a few short intervals, devoted to live-stock speculation, his livery business has been his chief care, and, as he is fully posted in this particular line, success has naturally attended his efforts.

September 13, 1870, Mr. Truesdall married Miss Elma E. Dunn, daughter of James Dunn, and their only child, Carl, died at the age of fifteen years.

In politics Mr. Truesdall is a republican,

Orrin Tucker moved to Ohio, and settled in Twinsburg township, as a pioneer, and cleared up a farm from the woods, on the Joshua Post settled, in 1820, Tinker's creek. in Northfield township, and partly cleared up a farm, but died in 1822, leaving thirteen children, two sons and eleven daughters. His hardest battle was at Mur-Murfreesboro and the worst march was one of ten days from Nashville to Clifton, Tenn. After the war he returned to Twinsburg and married, December 27, 1866, Miss Amanda M. Crawford, whowas born in Twinsburg township, February 22, 1848, a daughter of Alexander and Sophronia (Wallace) Crawford.

RANK M. UDALL, a native of Hiram, Portage county, Ohio, which is still his place of residence, was born December 20, 1838, a son of George and Malinda (Hutchings) Udall, whose genealogy will be traced backward to the grandparents of Frank M. in lines which will follow this paragraph.

Frank M. Udall received a very good education in his youthful days, it being commenced in the district schools and concluded in the Western Reserve Eclectic institute at Hiram. September 20, 1861, he enlisted in company A, Forty-second Ohio volunteer infantry, which had been organized by Col. (afterward President) James A. Garfield, and was appointed drummer-boy of the regimental band.

The company was principally made up from students of Hiram college and took part in numerous battles, Mr. Udall being present at that of Middle Creek, Ky., but was shortly afterward seized with fever and was confined in a hospital at Louisville, Ky., a month or more, and at Camp Dennison, Ohio, nearly four months, and received an honorable discharge, November 8, 1862.

On his return from the war to the old homestead. Mr. Udall rested awhile, and then was united in marriage, December 12, 1864, at Cleveland, to Miss Clara Adelia Bishop, who was born in Cornwallis, Nova Scotia, January 2, 1847, a daughter of Elijah and Olivia (Webster) Bishop. The father of Miss Bishop was of French ancestry and came to America in 1847, landing in Nova Scotia, and coming thence to Ohio in the same year, but died in Cleveland a few days after his arrival. To Mr. and Mrs. Bishop were born the following children: Nancy, Dawson, Elizabeth, Andrew, Albert, Irene, Clara and Louvisa, and, of these, Andrew served four years in the Civil war, in the Second Ohio cavalry, and was wounded, and Albert served three years in the Nineteenth Ohio battery.

After marriage Mr. Udall settled on the old homestead, of which he inherited a portion, and later purchased the interests of the other heirs thereto. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Udall were Morton, who died at six and a half years of age; George F.; Jessie, who died at the age of ten years; Alevia; and Don B., who died in infancy.

He settled in the southwestern part of Hiram township, Portage county, but four years later moved to the homestead of 146 acres now occupied by his son, Frank M., and became a substantial and prominent citizen. His children were Eveline, Amanda, Roselle, George P., Louisa M. and DeLos A. He lived to be sixty-two years of age, and died one of the most respected residents of the township.

Samuel Udall, grandfather of Frank M., built the first dwelling—a log cabin—on the present homestead, but some years later moved to the northeastern part of the township. He cleared up several farms in the early days, became very wealthy, and, at his death, a venerable man, bequeathed to each of his children a farm of fair proportions. Mr. Vail laid on the battle field from nine o'clock

AMUEL R. VAN NOSTRAN, a well-known carpenter and dairyman of Aurora township, Portage county, Ohio, and an ex-soldier of the Civil war, was born in Jefferson township, Tuscarawas county, Ohio, on his father's farm, December 6, 1843, a son of John and Charity (Ridgway) Van Nostran, of whom mention will be further made toward the close of this memoir.

Samuel R. Van Nostran received the usual farmer-lad education, and learned all he could of agriculture until his enlistment, August 25, 1862, at New Philadelphia, Ohio, in Capt. John Robinson's company C, Eightieth Ohio volunteer infantry, for three years, provided the war should not sooner come to a close, which so happened, and he was honorably discharged at Washington, D. For several days Mr. Van Nostran lay senseless, and during this time was robbed of all his money—$30. On being rescued from the wreck, it was discovered that his collar-bone was broken, his left arm broken, his left ankle fractured and that his left hip had also suffered a frac-He was placed in a hospital at Huntsture. ville, Ala., where he remained five months. To the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Van Nostran have been born five children, viz.: Albert, John Edwin (who died in infancy), Charles R., Lulu E. D. and Beatrice D. David Mizer, a brother of John, was a soldier in the Civil war, was shot on board a gunboat, and his body buried in the Mississippi river.

Mr. and Mrs. Van Nostran's grandfathers were both active participants in the Revolutionary war.

MITH ELMER WADSWORTH, the genial proprietor of the Wadsworth House, at Garrettsville, has conducted this establishment for sixteen years, it being the only hotel in the village. He is a native of Windham township, Portage county, Ohio, was born October 15, 1848, and is a son of Elmer Dwight and Wealthy Emeline (Smith) Wadsworth, natives, respectively, of Portage county, and Becket, Mass.

Xenophon Wadsworth, grandfather of subject, was a native of Massachusetts and a pioneer of Windham township, where he owned a farm, on which he died at the age of forty-five years, his widow surviving him some years. They were the parents of nine children, of whom seven reached mature years, IRAM DENNIS WALKER, of Mantua Station, Portage county, Ohio, is a veteran of the Civil war, who lost an arm in the battle of Petersburg, Va., is a son of John and Sarah (Cline) Walker, and was born near Salem, Columbiana county, Ohio.

Alexander Walker, grandfather of Hiram D., was a farmer of considerable means in Lancaster county, Pa., was a Lutheran in religion, and passed all his life in his native state. His son, John Walker, was born in Lancaster county January 8, 1788, was a farmer and early came to Ohio. He married in Canfield, Mahoning hounty, Miss Sarah Cline, their union resulting in the birth of Mary S., Hettie, Annie, Lovina, Melissa, Rhynear, William, Frederick and Hiram D. On settling in Columbiana county he followed milling as a vocation, and there passed the remainder of his life, dying a member of the United Brethren church August 31, 1853, having come to the state when about twenty-one years of age, in 1809. Of his four sons, two, Frederick and Hiram D., were in the Civil war—Frederick serving three years in company F, Seventh Ohio volunteer infantry.

Peter Cline, father of Mrs. Sarah Walker, was born in Lancaster county, Pa., January 11, 1792, was a farmer, and came to Ohio, a young man, about 1809, and here passed most of his life as a farmer, but lived several years in Ravenna. He was first married to a Miss Haynes, who bore him five children—William, John, Ossie, Elizabeth and Susan. By a second marriage, with Miss Catherine Beard, were born Henry, Nancy and Mary. Mrs. Walker was also born to the last marriage. Mr. Cline died in Newton Falls, Trumbull county, May 21, 1854, a greatly respected citizen, as he had served in the war of 1812, and had suffered many hardships in the lake regions. One of his sons, John Cline, also became a soldier, and served in the Civil war for three years in a battery of Ohio artillery.

Hiram D. Walker, at the age of four years, was placed by his parents in charge of a Quaker, Daniel Bolton, of Salem, who sent him to the district school, taught him his own trade of machinist, and also had him instructed in the trades of blacksmithing and carpenter-In 1847 he went to Newton Falls, Ohio, to work as a blacksmith, and at the age of about twenty-one years, was married, May 9, 1848, at that place, to Miss Nancy Walker, who was born July 1, 1827, at Albany, Columbiana county, a daughter of Peter and Catherine (Beard) Cline, both families being of Pennsylvania-Dutch stock. Mr. and Mrs. Walker, some years after marriage, removed from Newton Falls to Paris, Portage county, where he worked at the carpenter's trade from 1856 until the breaking out of the Civil war, when he enlisted, August 22, 1861, in the Second Ohio cavalry, under Col. Robert Ratcliff and Capt. Henry L. Burnett, for three years, but was honorably discharged, on account of disability, October 2, 1862, having been injured in assisting to build a military bridge at Fort Scott, He then returned to Paris, Ohio, and having recovered from his injuries, re-enlisted as a veteran, May 9, 1864, in company K, One Hundred and Tenth Ohio volunteer infantry, Lieut. Traub having command of the company. During his two enlistments, ending with his second honorable discharge, July 3, 1865, on account of the close of the war, he took part in the battle of Sarcoxie, Mo., and in many shirmishes with bushwhackers in the same state—extra-dangerous there as elsewhere; was through the Shenandoah valley with Sheridan; fought at Winchester, and at Opequan Creek, Cedar Creek, Berryville, Va., Monocacy Creek, Md., and at the siege and fall of Petersburg, Va., where he was shot through the upper part of his left arm by a minie ball March 29, 1865. His arm was amputated the same night at field hospital, whence he was taken to City Point, Va., where he lay ten days, and was then transferred to Baltimore, Md., remaining there in hospital three days, then in hospital at Washington, D. C., two months; then in Chester Hill hospital, Pa., three weeks, whence he was transferred, via Pittsburg, to Camp Chase hospital, Columbus, Ohio, where he was finally mustered out, with the rank of sergeant, having been promoted for brave and meritorious conduct on the field, in the face of the enemy.

Mr. Walker arrived at his home in Paris, July 3, 1865, but has never been able to do anything in the way of labor, excepting in the superintendence of a few irregular jobs, now and again, as circumstances permit and his sufferings allow. In 1890 he moved with his family to Mantua Station, where he enjoys the deserved respect which every patriot who has been disabled in the service of his country is entitled to from great or small. He has been blessed with four children—Sarah E., Ella M., Eva A. and Ida A., all of whom are happily married and well settled in life.

Mr. Walker is a republican in politics; is a member of Bentley post, No. 294, G. A. R., at Mantua Station, of which he is chaplain, and is also a member of the Junior Order of American Mechanics. He and his wife are members of the Methodist church, and have fully lived up to its precepts, which, it may well be borne in mind, ever lead to the straight and narrow way that finds its end in eternal rest and bliss.

M. WANAMAKER, a rising young lawyer of Akron, is a native of North Jackson, Mahoning county, Ohio, was born August 2, 1866, and is a son of Daniel and Laura (Schoenberger) Wanamaker, of German descent. The father is now a resident of Akron, but the mother is deceased, and of their four children the subject is the eldest. Of the remaining three, Mamie was married to John A. Campbell, but is now deceased; Charles S. is assistant cashier for the Standard Oil company at Cleveland, and Gertrude C., a stenographer, resides with her brother, the subject of this review.

R. M. Wanamaker was born and reared on a farm and received his elementary education Farm work engaged in the common schools. his attention during vacations; work in a flaxmill and baling hay were a source of income with which he defrayed his college expenses during his first term at the Ohio Normal university, at Ada, Ohio; after this term he began teaching, at the age of sixteen, and alternated his time between teaching and attending school until twenty-one years of age, when he became principal of the high school at Ada; a year later he removed to Lima (1888), where, for three years, he was principal of the public schools on the west side, superintending fifteen rooms; he was then re-elected by the board the fourth year, but resigned in order to be more fully able to prosecute his study of the law under Ridenour & Halfhill, of Lima, and in the fall of 1891 entered the law department at Ada university, from which he graduated in the spring of 1893, and in March of the same year was admitted to the bar. In September, 1893, he came to Akron, and on October 1 the firm of Young & Wanamaker was established, and which still obtains. He at once entered upon a vigorous campaign to conquer a clientage, and at the same time to do all the work he could for the republican party. He was soon recognized as a young attorney of ability, both by the general public and his party. His first case as an attorney was the charge of a murder trial and he also conducted the prosecution in the Cotell murder case, which attracted a great deal of public attention at the time.

In 1895 Mr. Wanamaker was placed in nomination by his party for the office of prosecuting attorney of Summit county (having two contestants for the nomination) and at the ensuing election ran far ahead of his ticket—an indication of his popularity. As an orator he is choice in his language, logical in his deductions and convincing in argument, while his legal knowledge is highly creditable for one so lately admitted to the bar. He is a member of the State Bar association; of McPherson lodge, No. 63, K. of P.; of Akron lodge, No. 547, I. O. O. F.; Tiptop tent, K. of M.; also of the tribe of Ben Hur, and of the Akron club.

Mr. Wanamaker was most happily united in marriage, April 7, 1889, at Ada, Ohio, with Miss Fannie Snow, daughter of F. E. and Mary Snow, and this union has been blessed with two children — Mary Laurine and Walter Blaine. The parents are members of the First Congregational church and stand very high socially. Their residence is at No. 1078 South Main street, and Mr. Wanamaker's office is at No. 182 South Main street, in the Harter block.

ILLIAM A. WARNER, a highly respectable farmer of Coventry township, is a native of Green township, Summit county, Ohio, was born October 5, 1845, and is of English descent.

John Warner, great-grandfather of subject, while still a young man, came from his native England and located in Maryland, where he was married and shortly afterward came to Ohio, lived for a short time in Stark county, and then permanently settled on a tract of land in Coventry township, Summit county, among the Indians of the primeval forest, being one of the county's earliest pioneers. son, Henry Warner, grandfather of subject, was born in Maryland, married Catherine Kepler, and had a family of eight children, viz: John, Adam (deceased), Jacob, William, Ann. Abraham, Solomon, and Daniel-the last named also deceased. Henry Warner was also a pioneer of Coventry township, Summit county, Ohio, where he cleared up from the forest a farm of 105 acres, and became thoroughly identified with the development of the township, becoming a charter member of the East Liberty church, and a leader in local politics, being, himself, a Jackson democrat.

John Warner, son of Henry and father of subject, was born in Coventry township in March, 1821, on the farm on which subject still resides, and in 1844 married Elizabeth Weaver, who was born in 1824, a daughter of James P. Weaver. To Mr. and Mrs. Warner have been born six children, in the following order: William A., Henry, Samuel, John J., Adam, and Mary (the last named deceased). For many years the parents continued to reside in Coventry township, but finally removed to Norton township, generously presenting to each of the children a good farm and otherwise aiding them, and retaining for themselves only sufficient to sustain themselves in their old age. Mr. Warner has of late espoused the cause of the prohibition party, but was formerly a democrat and held many of the township offices of Coventry, as well as several offices in the Methodist Episcopal church of New Portage. He has been generous in his aid to this as well as to all the other churches of the neighborhood. He is still hale and hearty and is highly respected as an old settler, and for his charitable disposition, which has for years been made manifest in the county for miles around.

William A. Warner received a good common-school education and was reared to manhood on his father's farm. He married, February 18, 1866, Miss Sarah Spittler, who was born in Springfield township, Summit county, April 14, 1843, a daughter of Christian and Barbara (Weyrick) Spittler. Her parents were natives of Union township, Union county, Pa., were there married, and there had born to them four of their ten children, the others having been born in Ohio. They were named, in order of birth, as follows: Jacob, John, Elizabeth (Mrs. Jacob Sprigler), Catherine (Mrs. Fred Easler), Mary (Mrs. J. A. Van Vermer), Sarah (Mrs. Warner), George (deceased from effects of army life), Jacob (deceased) and Henry 1st, and Henry 2nd (both deceased). Mr. Spittler was a carpenter by trade and died in Plymouth, Ind., in 1877; his widow died in Munroe Falls, Ohio, December 31, 1891-both members of the English Reformed church. To Mr. and Mrs. William A. Warner have been born two children: William J., born July 22, 1868-died in December, 1868, and Mary E., born December 11, 1869. The latter was married, December 12, 1889, to William J. Farriss, a native of New York, and has had three children, viz: Lottie M., who died in 1890, in infancy, Sarah E. and Willie A.

Mr. Warner's farm consists of 100 acres, twenty-five of which were originally part of his father's homestead, and seventy-five of which have been the result of his own industry and frugality. He has improved his place with a modern house and barn, at a cost of $3,000, and has one of the most pleasant homesteads in the township. He and wife are members of the Pleasant Valley Methodist Episcopal church, in which Mr. Warner is a trustee. In politics Mr. Warner has chiefly voted with the democratic party, and by this party was elected township treasurer in 1880, which office he still continues to fill. He is respected wherever known, both as a liberal and public-spirited citizen and as a gentleman of strictly moral character.

ARON E. WARNER, the enterprising young blacksmith of Manchester, was born in East Liberty, Summit county, Ohio, March 11, 1871, and is of the third generation of the Summit county family bearing his name.

Adam Warner, grandfather of subject and a native of the county, married Elizabeth Reminger, and owned a farm in Coventry township; he was a substantial and highlyrespected citizen, in politics was a democrat, and with his wife a consistent member of the United Brethren church. His son, Henry R. Warner, the father of subject, was born on the Coventry township farm, on which he lived until twenty-one years of age, when he began learning the blacksmith's trade. His educational facilities were somewhat limited, but by self- instruction he mastered the common English branches of learning. He married Miss E. Bower, a daughter of Benjamin and Elizabeth Bower, and this union resulted in the birth of the following children: Aaron E. (subject), Ida E. (wife of William Richard), Homer E., Earl B., Ora B., Lillian M., and Stanley B., all still living to bless the declining years of the parents, who have lived in East Liberty for the past twenty-seven years, where Mr. Warner, by his industry, has secured a comfortable home. In his politics Mr. Warner was a democrat up to the fall of 1896, when he voted for McKinley for president of the United States, believing the republican party to be sound on the questions of tariff and finance. He has reared his family in respectability, and he and wife enjoy the esteem of all who know them.

Aaron E. Warner received a good commonschool education, notwithstanding the fact that he began learning his trade with his father at the early age of twelve years, and that he remained with him until two years ago, when he located in Manchester.

April 10, 1895, Mr. Warner married Miss Ella Warner, daughter of J. J. and Sarah (Kreigham) Warner. J. J. IMON B. WEARY, the well-known lumber manufacturer of Akron, Ohio, was born in Marlborough township, Stark county, July 29, 1823, a son of Samuel and Mary M. (Smith) Weary, natives of Pennsylvania and pioneers of Ohio, who first located in Canfield, Mahoning county, in 1817, but in 1823 removed to Marlborough township, Stark county, where the father was engaged in farming until his death, in 1840, at the age of forty-eight years, his widow surviving until 1884, when she died at the age of ninety. Samuel Weary came of German stock, and had served in the war of 1812; the father of Mrs. Weary was a soldier prior to the Revolution, and was at the capture of Fort Duquesne (Fort Pitt), now Pittsburg, Pa. To the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Weary were born twelve children, of whom eleven reached the years of maturity, viz: Margaret, now Mrs. Rue; Catherine, wife of Amos Johnson; John, killed by a falling tree, at the age of eighteen years; Sarah, wife of John P. Smith; Simon B., our subject; Daniel, Jacob, Henry; Mary, married to George Cook; Elizabeth; Benjamin, who was killed while on a scout during the late war, the day after Lee's sur-The maternal great-grandfather of Mr. Weary was George Smith, who was born in France of German parentage and came to America in 1764, when the maternal grandfather of Mr. Weary was about eight years of age, and settled in what is now known as Perry county, Pa.

Simon B. Weary grew to manhood in Stark county, received a fair common-school education in the frontier log school-house, and in the spring of 1841 began a three-year apprenticeship at the carpenter's trade, at the completion of which he worked in Stark county as a journeyman until the fall of 1847, when he came to Akron and worked until the spring of 1848; the next three years he followed his trade in Sheboygan, Wis., and in 1851 returned to Akron and worked as a journeyman until 1853, when he purchased an interest in a door, sash and blind factory, which interest he held for three years; he next alternated as journeyman and proprietor until January, 1864, when the firm of Weary, Snyder & Co. was organized, and a successful lumber manufacture, especially in the way of doors, sashes and blinds, was carried on until 1894, when a disastrous fire destroyed the plant, since which time the members of the firm have been engaged in settling up their business affairs.

In politics Mr. Weary has always been identified with the cause of freedom, having cast his first vote with the liberty party, espousing the abolition cause, and finally becoming a republican. He is a public-spirited citizen, and has always been industrious, thrifty and enterprising, and well deserves the great respect in which he is held by his fellowmen of all conditions.

In 1847 Mr. Weary was united in marriage, and as a result of this union three children are living, viz: Frank O., Flora C. (now Mrs. James Moore), and Edwin D., now a resident of Chicago.

HARLES B. WEBB, proprietor of the Garrettsville Journal, was born in Freedom township, Portage county, Ohio, May 28, 1848, and is a son of Dr. James Webb, deceased, of whom full mention is made in the biography of Rollin S. Webb, on another page.

Charles Bushnell Webb, our subject, was educated in the common schools of Freedom and at Hiram college, and for two winters taught school. He then chose the trade of printer for his life-work, with a view to journalism, and began learning the trade in the office of the Journal in Garrettsville, and later worked in the office of the Leader, in Cleveland, where he remained until 1873, when he returned to Garrettsville and purchased the Journal plant, "out and out."

The Garrettsville Journal was founded July 1, 1865, by Warren Peirce, who conducted it until purchased by Mr. Webb. It is one of the oldest papers in the county, and has never contained objectionable reading matter of any kind, either in its news, literary or advertising columns. It is a six-column eight-page paper, devoted to the interests of Garrettsville and surrounding country, and since Mr. Webb has been its owner has had the full confidence of the public, and has thus met with continuous success.

Mr. Webb was married, January 6, 1875, to Miss Ella McHenry, a native of Tuscarawas county, Ohio, and a daughter of Reuben and Adaline (Chase) McHenry. In politics Mr. Webb is of republican proclivities, but has never been an office-seeker, nor does he obtrude his personal political views upon the readers of the Journal, although he is a member of the James A. Garfield club, of the old Nineteenth congressional district of Ohio. Fraternally, Mr. Webb is an Odd Fellow, and his wife and one daughter are members of the Rebekah degree of that order.

Mr. Webb has been very successful in his management of the Journal, and not only owns his place of business, but his newly-built dwelling on High street. Like all the other members of this old family, he stands very high in the esteem of the public.

It is but a duty to me to add my recommendation to those of the principal officers of the Sixth, our regiment, of Dr. W. H. Weir, for promotion. He has in reality, during my absence from the regiment on detailed duty, more then any other person, attended to the wants of the sick in the regiment. He was present and with the regiment in all the battles in which it was engaged, constantly active, energetic and efficient. Of temperate habits, and well versed in his profession, he deserves a preferment, although I consider it as a loss to the regiment.

Benjamin Bissell was a soldier in the war of the Revolution and died of camp dysentery in middle life. He had three sons, viz: Israel; Justice, who settled in Aurora, Portage county, Ohio, where he died, aged seventy years, and Robert; also four daughters: Eunice, Roxanna, Prudence and Anna. ILLIAM M. HANSEL, an eminent educator of Suffield township, Portage county, Ohio, and an ex-soldier of the late Civil war, was born in Stark county, Ohio, April 6, 1848, and is a son of Thomas M. and Mary Ann (Nees) He spent his boyhood days in his native county until his eighth year, when he came to Portage county, receiving his elementary education in the public schools, later attending the Marlboro high school for one year, and then entering Mount Union college, where he remained two years. He next entered the Normal university for two years, and then spent a year of study at Hiram college, finishing his education at the Ohio State university at Columbus. He began teaching, in 1868, in Lake township, Stark county, Ohio, and also taught in Portage and Summit counties. In 1880, he began teaching in the city schools of Kent, and taught there until 1890, since when he has been teaching in the Uniontown high school, and ranks as one of the most progressive instructors of youth in this section.

Mr. Hansel, at the early age of sixteen years, manifested his patriotism by enlisting, May 2, 1864, and serving until the following February, when he was honorably discharged, and immediately re-enlisted in company H,

One Hundred and Eighty-fourth O. V. I., and served until October, when he was again honorably discharged, owing to the close of the war.

William M. Hansel was first married, December 25, 1887, to Miss Emma Myer, who had been his pupil when but seven years old and was a daughter of E. Y. and Matilda (Damer) Dyer. To this union was born one son, Clay Devailt, September 7, 1888. Mrs. Hansel died March 10, 1889, aged twenty-five years, and Mr. Hansel next married, November 20, 1891, Miss Laura Adams, daughter of Charles and Rachel (Reidenbach) Adams, who were natives of Lancaster, Pa.

The parents of our subject were natives of Stark county, Ohio. The father was born in August, 1818, and was engaged in farming all his life. He married Miss Mary Ann Nees, daughter of Jacob Nees, and to this marriage were born a family of eight children, six of whom still survive, viz: Peter, residing in Missouri; William M., our subject; Catherine E., wife of Frank Hoover; Joseph, residing in Thendon, Mich.; James Murrey, of Summit county, Ohio, and Ransom. Those passed away were John Wesley and Warren. mother was a member of the Reformed church, and passed away in 1886, aged sixty-six years. The father still survives, and resides at Uniontown, Stark county, with his daughter. has passed the allotted "three score and ten," by nine years, and is still a hale and hearty old gentleman.

Anthony Hansel, the grandfather of our subject, was born in Maryland, the son of a large slave holder there. Anthony came to Stark county, Ohio, about 1812, and bought the old homestead of about 280 acres, where he lived and died. He was married three times—the first time to a Miss Murrey, to which marriage were born nine children; his second marriage was to a Miss Hooven, and to this union was born ten children; his third marriage was with Miss Mary Carr, but to this union there was no issue. Mr. Hansel passed away in 1868, and his third wife died in 1864.

Jacob Nees, the maternal grandfather of William M. Hansel, was a native of Pennsylvania, and came to this state and settled in Stark county, where he engaged in farming. He held the office of justice of the peace of his township for thirty years. He also was married three times, his third wife having been a Mrs. Crestleaf. Mr. Nees died in 1866, aged sixty-eight years; his widow then married a William Myers, and still survives. Jacob Nees, great-grandfather on the maternal side, was a native of Pennsylvania and served as a soldier in the war of 1812.

The family of our subject's first wife were natives of Summit county. Her father, E. Y. Myer, had been a manufacturer and was also the inventor of eighty different patterns for potter's ware. He was married to Miss Matilda Crame, daughter of John Crame, and their union was blessed with seven children, four of whom are still living, viz: Ida, Mary, Carilla (wife of Charles Gibe, secretary of the A B C street railway, and residing at Cuyahoga Falls) and Bertha, residing at Mansfield; those passed away were Emma (wife of our subject), Elmer and Salvina. The parents of the second wife of our subject were natives of Lancaster county, Pa.

William M. Hansel, when a young man, learned the carpenter's trade, serving an apprenticeship of four years under Henry Miller, of Stark county, after which he followed the trade for two years. Beside his duties in teaching, Mr. Hansel is engaged in farming and breeding fine stock, owning some of the finest horses in the county, such as Eva Wilkes, by Robert Wilkes; Alba Hyle, bred by Hyle; also Hyle's Maid, by Hyle; also Bounding Boy, by Almatuna; Kitty Almatuna, and Maggie and Jerry Almatuna; also King Northlight, by Northlight, and Maud Northlight, by Northlight. Mr. Hansel also possesses two Morgan horses—Highland Boy and Highland Pearl, by Highland Boy; also some other stock, descendants of Bell Northlight.

Our subject, Mr. Hansel, has served as school director for a number of years, but, with all his multitudinous duties, he still finds opportunities to keep in touch with the outer world by taking extensive trips through the west and south during his vacations—in 1881 taking a journey of 8,000 miles, visiting California; in 1882 he visited the northwest, and in 1883 spent some time in Florida, but has finally settled in his pleasant home in Uniontown, a genial, enterprising and respected citizen.

APT. JAMES HORNER, of Garrettsville, Portage county, Ohio, and an ex-soldier of the Civil war, was born in Philadelphia, July 1, 1827, a son of Samuel and Jane Horner. He was educated in the public schools of Philadelphia and enlisted in the regular United States army in January, 1851, in company A, engineer corps, Capt. George B. He was stationed at West Point about one and a half years, and then was one of a detail of ten men from his company on the original survey of the Northern Pennsylvania railroad, crossed the continent on this survey, and passed the winter of 1853-4, at Olympia, on Puget Sound. left Fort Snelling, north of St. Paul, Minn., and saw no more of civilization until the surveying party reentered Olympia, on Puget When crossing the plains, the company met with different wild tribes of Indians, including the Chippewas, Sioux, Blackfeet, Horner saw, on the prairies in western Minnesota, one estimated to contain at least 1,000,000 buffalo, elk, deer and antelope. It was one year from the time he left West Point, until he returned. The expedition was about three months in crossing the great plains and the Rocky mountains. Capt. Horner was mustered out and honorably discharged in 1856, and came to Ohio in the spring of that year and engaged in the shoe business at Cleveland.

Mr. Horner married, in December, 1856, at Mesopotamia, Trumbull county, Ohio, Ella A. Moore, daughter of Watson W. Moore, from Connecticut. Capt. Horner then settled in Trumbull county, and enlisted in the Civil war, August 26, 1861, on the first call for three-year men, in company A, Forty-first Ohio volunteer infantry, to serve three years or during the war. R. post, No. 2, of Phildadelphia. Capt. Horner and wife are the parents of Lottie M., Nettie A. and Florence B.

Samuel Horner, father of the captain, settled in Philadelphia, about 1825. He became a manufacturer of carpets, and was a well-to-do man. His first wife died in Philadelphia, and he then married Jane E. and their children were Catherine L., Samuel, Jr., and Robert. Samuel, Jr., was a private in the Civil war in a Pennsylvania regiment and served three years. His regiment was stationed at Long Bridge and Washington, during the war and Samuel, Jr., was one of the guards when J. Wilkes Booth crossed the bridge, on horseback, on his flight after the assassination of Abraham Lincoln.

ILLIAM H. LINTON, trustee and superintendent of the Ravenna water-works, was born in this city December 23, 1853, and is a son of Isaiah and Mary (Riley) Linton, natives of Pennsylvania, Quakers in religion, and parents of three children, two of whom are still living, viz: William H., the subject of this memoir, and Edith, the wife of Arthur D. Knapp.

Mahlon Linton, the paternal grandfather of William H. Linton, was a descendant of the family of that name who came with William Penn to America in 1682 and settled in Bucks county, Penn. He settled in Washington county, in the same state, about 1800, and followed agricultural pursuits until his death, in the Quaker faith, after having reared the unusually large family of thirteen or fourteen children. John Riley, the maternal grandfather of subject, was a glassworker, reared a large family, and also ended his days in the Keystone state.

Isaiah Linton was early taught civil engineering in his native state and in 1847 came to Ohio, making his home in Ravenna. He was chief engineer of the Cleveland & Pittsburgh for over forty years, was county surveyor two terms, and for a number of terms was resident engineer of the Ohio board of public works, and enjoyed a widespread reputation for his wonderful accuracy in the science which was his life-long pursuit. His death took place at the age of seventy-four, in 1891, and his memory is still kept green by his numerous friends. His widow is still a resident of Ravenna—a revered and honored lady.

William H. Linton was principally educated in the public schools of Ravenna and graduated from the high school in 1872. He acquired the greater part of his knowledge as a civil engineer, his life profession, under the tuition of his accomplished father. He has held his present position of water-works trustee of Ravenna for over eleven years, and his profound knowledge of hydraulics is universally conceded to be a fixed fact.

The marriage of William H. Linton took place October 3, 1883, to Miss Clara A. Knapp, daughter of Robert and Elizabeth (Carson) Knapp, who rank among the most respected residents of the city. One child has blessed this union, and is named Robert Isaiah. Mr. and Mrs. Linton are always welcomed in the social circles of Ravenna, with whom they are held in high esteem, as they are both of genial, pleasant disposition and very corteous, having kind words for all, regardless of rank or station.

In politics Mr. Linton is a republican, but not a partisan in the office-seeking sense of the word, but is simply a republican from conscientious conviction that his party's principles are better adapted than those of any other of the leading parties for the proper government of the country.

OBERT G. MARSHALL, who is just entering upon his career as a farmer and stockbreeder in Northampton township, Summit county, was born in Akron, December 12, 1868, a son of Thomas C. and Rachel (Fuller) Marshall, who are the parents of three children, viz: Inez, who was born July 20, 1866, and is now a teacher in the public schools of Akron; Robert G., whose name opens this paragraph; and Thomas J., who was born December 12, 1874, and who resides with his parents in Akron, the latter being of Pennsylvania origin.

Thomas C. Marshall, the father of subejct, was a wagonmaker by trade, but for the last twenty-seven years has been in the employ of Altman, Miller & Co., manufacturers. In 1894 he purchased the farm of 216 acres on which subject now resides. He has made all the improvements on this place in the way of buildings, etc., so far made, and this farm will be one of the finest in the county when all the plans now under headway shall have been completed. The location is one of the most delightful to the eye in the township, overlooking, as it does, Cuyahoga Falls and Akron.

Robert G. Marshall was educated in the public schools of Akron, and in 1886 entered the employ of Altman, Miller & Co., and remained with them until the spring of 1896. March 30, of the same year, he married Miss Jessie Smetts, daughter of George A. Smetts, also of Akron. The young couple immediately went to housekeeping on the beautiful farm mentioned above, where their prospect for a happy future is most flattering. Mr. Marshall is fond of good horses and his stable is well supplied with blooded stock, and this will receive his special care, as it is his intention to devote his time to graded live stock as well as to farming:

Mr. Marshall is a prominent member of Atoclia lodge, No. 24, Knights of Pythias, and in politics is a republican. Mr. Marshall is of pleasing address and has many warm friends in Akron who esteem him most highly, and as he has always been an industrious and temperate young man, of broad intellect and comprehensive views, there can exist no doubt that he will make a success of life in his new field of industry.

The father of this family died in August, 1875, and the mother in June, 1885, the latter being aged seventy-nine years, and both were devout members of the German Baptist church.

Mr. Mishler has served as school director twenty-three years. He and family are all members of the German Baptist church, and fully live up to its precepts. He has led a truly good and useful life, has always been industrious and intelligent in the management of his affairs, and as a result is in quite comfortable circumstances, enjoying the good will and esteem of all who know him.

ALLACE SCOTT, a native of Northampton township, and a prosperous farmer, was born September 15, 1843, and is a son of Isaac and Fanny (Wallace) Scott, who were, as the name fully implies, of Scottish origin.

Isaac Scott, father of subject, was born in Muskingum county, Ohio, March 31, 1817, son of Banfield and Lydia (Norris) Scott, who were natives, respectively, of Massachusetts and Connecticut, and the parents of two children-Isaac and Sarah. Mrs. Lydia Scott was thrice married, her first husband having been Stephen Lamonyon, to whom she bore three children-Charles, Cornelius and Stephen; her second marriage was with Mr. Scott, with the result mentioned above, and after his death, in Medina county, Ohio, in 1832, she married Joseph Dean, by whom she became the mother of one child, James. father of subject, at the age of fifteen years, commenced the battle of life on his own responsibility, and until twenty-two years old worked at different employments in Summit and neighboring counties. Henry, the eldest child, married Miss Ida Bishop, in 1861, and then enlisted in company H, Twenty-ninth Ohio volunteer infantry, but was honorably discharged in 1862, on account of poor health; the next year he re-enlisted and entered company H, One Hundred and Seventyseventh volunteer infantry, as first corporal, was promoted to sergeant and served until the close of the war. Mrs. Isaac Scott was a native of Stowe township, Summit county, and was born April 14, 1822. Her grandfather, Theodore Strong, was a commander of a vessel of war under Admiral David Porter, in the war of 1812-15. He knew little, indeed, of ease and comfort until within a few years of his death, in the faith of the Methodist Episcopal church, of which his wife was also a member

Wallace Scott, the subject, was united in marriage, March 3, 1867, with Miss Mary E. Best, who was born June 17, 1857, a daughter of John and Rebecca (Watson) Best; of the seven children born to this marriage two died in infancy: the survivors are Charles, who was born Angust 9, 1875; Fannie, August 20, 1877; Florence, January 2, 1880; Mollie Z., March 3, 1882, and Frank W., March 25, 1886. Although his own education was acquired in the district schools, he believes in a higher class of education and has seen to it that his children have done and are doing better in this respect. His daughter, Fannie, is a graduate of the Cuyahoga Falls high school and is now teaching in school-district No. 3, Northampton township; Florence has also attended the high school at Cuyahoga Falls, and one term at Buchtel college. In politics Mr. Scott is a democrat, and has held several township offices, among them that of treasurer for eight years. REMUS STANFORD, a retired farmer and one of the oldest and most highly respected citizens of Randolph, Portage county. Ohio, is a native of the Buckeye state, and was born in Marietta, August 25, 1814, a son of Oliver and Olin (Mason) Stanford, natives of Massachusetts, who settled in Ohio in 1812.

Oliver Stanford was a carpenter by trade, but later became a farmer. To his marriage with Miss Olin, daughter of Andrew and Priscilla (Galop) Mason, were born nine children, three of whom are still living, viz: Oremus, the subject: Harry, of Nebraska, and Nesslie of Rootstown, Ohio: the deceased were William; Mary, who was the wife of William Lawrence; Orren, Leroy, Squire, and Jancley (wife of K. Redfield). The father of this family died in 1866, at the age of eighty years, two months, and seventeen days, and the mother at the age of eighty-four.

Andrew Mason, the maternal grandfather of Oremus Stanford, was a farmer, and also for many years a manufacturer of brick. He reared a family of ten children, named as follows: Olin, Squire, Lauren, Orrison, Ruby, Polly, Adaus, Emeline, Noble and Orrin.

Oremus Stanford received a good publicschool education, and learned carpentry and joining under his father, with whom he remained until 1832, when he came to Randolph and followed his trade twenty-five years, and also worked as a millwright, constructing a large number of water-wheels. 1836, he married Miss Sallie Chendon, daughter of Almon and Gertrude Chendon, who early came from one of the eastern states and first located in Atwater, Ohio, but later came to Randolph, the father being a farmer; they reared eight children, of whom only one is now living-Susanna, Mary, wife of Dr. Garlie; the deceased were named Victor, Hiram, Almon, Sallie (Mrs. Stanford), John, Henry and Mr. Chendon died at the age of Chancie. sixty-six years.

To Mr. and Mrs. Oremus Stanford were born two children—Frank, who resides in Brimfield township, Portage county, and Victor, who was killed in the army by the explosion of a gun in 1864. Mrs. Stanford was called to her final home February 14, 1893, at the age of seventy-six years, a devout Christian, a loving mother, and a loyal and affectionate wife and helpmate for fifty-six Mr. Stanford has always been a strong temperance man, and in politics is a repub-He has served his fellow-citizens in several official capacities, among them that of township trustee for many years. He had been, up to the date of his retirement, an industrious and skillful mechanic and intelligent agriculturist, and is now enjoying in peace and comfort the fruits of his long and useful life, deservedly honored by all his neighbors, and by the community in general, as an upright man and a conscientious Christian.

AMES S. SWEENEY, M. D., who has been in active practice in Kent, Portage county, for more than a quarter of a century, was born in Geauga county, Ohio, August 14, 1831, a son of John and Dolly (Brown) Sweeney, natives, respectively, of Ireland and Vermont (or New Hampshire), but married in Trumbull county, Ohio.

John Sweeney, father of subject, was born in Belfast, Ireland, in 1793, and before he had reached his majority was impressed into the British army and sent with the troops to America to aid in crushing the dearly-bought liberties of the United States by invading the country from 1812 to 1815. He took part in the battle of Pittsburg, and when the British army went into winter quarters Mr. Sweeney quietly left the army and went to Detroit, where he worked as a laborer. In 1814 or 1815 he came to Ohio, stopped for a while in Cleveland, and then removed to Painesville, in Lake county, where he purchased land. He was then prepared to take a wife and was married, in Trumbull county, to Dolly Brown, a native of New England (either of Vermont or New Hampshire), who came to Ohio with her brother, Ephraim Brown, and settled in Trumbull county. On his marriage Mr. Sweeney removed to Middlefield, Geauga county, and purchased a farm, and here lost his wife in 1865, his own death following in 1874. To John Sweeney and wife were born three children, viz: Edward J., born July 4, 1824, was educated for a physician but later became an attorney, and died at Painesville at the age of sixty-three years; Thomas, born in September, 1820, was a physician, and died at Chardon at the age of about sixty years; James S., the youngest, is the subject of this memoir.

James S. Sweeney was educated elementarily in the district and select schools while being trained to the hard labor of his father's farm. When fully prepared, he read medicine with his eldest brother, Edward J., at Nelson, and then with a Dr. Coulter, continuing his studies from 1850 until 1854. He then entered upon practice at Parkman, Geauga county, where he remained four years, and thence removed to Chardon, then to Stowe, in Summit county. In November, 1861, he enlisted in company A, One Hundred and Twenty-eighth Ohio volunteer infantry, and served until December, 1862, when he was honorably discharged on account of disability. On returning he suffered from ill health for two years and then resumed practice, finally settling in Kent, in 1871, where he has since built up one of the most respectable and lucrative lines of practice in the city.

The marriage of Dr. Sweeney took place June 20, 1854, to Miss Addia Rockwell, a native of and residing in Rome, Ashtabula county, and a daughter of Joseph Rockwell. Three children have blessed this marriage, viz: Dolly, wife of Byron Longcoy, residing near Kent; Edward J., who died April 21, 1886, at the age of twenty-two years, and Alice B., wife of C. W. Bales, of Marion county.

In politics the doctor is a democrat, and has served one term as mayor of Kent, and several terms as a member of the city council and as a member of the school board, and has done much toward promoting the many improvements that were so much needed a few years since in the way of electric lights, sidewalks and water-works. Fraternally, he is a member of A. H. Day post, G. A. R., of which he is a past commander. The doctor is a whole-souled, genial gentleman, ever ready to aid a friend or to advance a public improvement, and the first $500 he ever made went to satisfy a security note. He is thorough in his profession and has maintained his office and residence in the same locality since 1871. He has been a soldier, as has been seen; his father was a soldier, and his grandfather lost all his property by confiscation for the patriotic part he took in the Irish "rebellion" of 1708.

• HOMAS I. WILLIAMS, the able superintendent for the Hudson Coal company, in Palmyra township, Portage county, Ohio, and an enterprising business man, was born in Pontrahydfenddigaid, shire of Cardigan, Wales, February 27, 1848. His father was a miner, and came to America about 1848, and for a short time lived in Pittsburg, Pa., but later settled in Youngstown, Ohio, where he had charge of a blast furnace the remainder of his life. Of his eighteen children, four still survive, viz.: David, Thomas J., Lizzie (wife of John P. Williams) and Griffith. In 1852, while temporarily living at Crab Creek, Ohio, Mr. Williams, in company with his brother, drove from Palmyra to Paris Center, and while they were crossing the Mahoning river, the water being high, they missed the road and were both drowned, together with both horses. The mother of subject still survives and resides in Deerfield, at the advanced age of seventy-five years, and in excellent health.

Thomas I. Williams was but a trifle over a year old when brought to America by his parents, and was four months crossing the ocean. He received but little education in boyhood, as he was early set to work in the mines, and it is through his personal attention to his duties, perseverance and indomitable pluck, added to habits of the strictest integrity, that he has reached his present responsible position. After the death of his father, he lived with an aunt, Mrs. Davis, in Paris township, about six months, and then he, with a brother, went to Crab Creek, where he remained with his mother until twenty-two years old, being engaged, meanwhile, in different capacities, in the mines.

November 22, 1868, Mr. Williams was united in marriage to Miss Catherine Williams, daughter of Ebenezer and Everina (Howells) Williams, and this union has been blessed with seven children, viz: Lizzie, wife of William R. Williams; Everina, wife of William James; Catherine, wife of Rachers Lewis; Lavitta, wife of Henry Lewis; Thomas J., Jr.; Myrtle, and Elmira, who died September 27, 1885, at the age of one year and eight months.

Marriage seems to have energized Mr. Williams to greater exertion, as in 1872 he was promoted to be foreman of the Church Hill mine, in which he had been working, and held the position until 1885, when he went to Jackson county, Ohio, where he sank a coal-mine shaft, known as the Glenroy, which he worked one year, when he sold it to a syndicate and returned to Church Hill and opened a mine known as the Toddhouse, and remained one year. In 1887 he went to Center Point, Ind., opened a mine for Weaver, Todd & Co., stayed a year, and in 1888 returned to Church Hill, and opened a mine for the Vienna Coal company, but a short time afterward was sent to Pennsylvania to open the Royal shaft for the same company. Six months later he returned to Church Hill, where he was superintendent of the Toddhouse until the spring of 1889, then came to Palmyra township, where he held the position of "boss" for the Hudson Coal company until 1896. During this period of seven years, he sank a shaft for this company at Deerfield, which is now the best equipped in the district. In 1896 he was appointed superintendent of the Hudson Coal company, his present position, controlling mines No. 1 to 4, of which No. 3 was finished by Mr. Williams himself.

The proudest event in the life of Mr. Williams was probably that which happened when he left Church Hill, when the employees, numbering about 600, presented him with a gold watch that cost $135, as a token of their esteem for him as their foreman.

In politics Mr. Williams is a republican, and has served as township committeeman and school director, and also as a member of the executive board of Portage county. Fraternally he is a member of Western Star lodge, No. 21, F. & A. M., of Youngstown, of chapter No. 93, R. A. M., and St. John's commandery, No. 20, K. T.

Mrs. Catherine Williams, wife of our subject, was born in Romney, Wales, December 10, 1849, and was brought to America by her parents when two years of age. Her father was a miner, and to his marriage with Miss Everina Howells were born three children, two of whom are still living, viz: Mr. Williams and Elizabeth, wife of Edward Miller; the deceased child, William, died in 1857, aged one year. The father of Mrs. Williams died August 16, 1868, aged forty-four years, and the mother May 8, 1857, aged thirty-four, and both members of the Welsh Methodist church.

RS. ELIZA BRADFORD (PRICE)
WETMORE is a member of one of the most respected of the pioneer families of Cuyahoga Falls and one of the most venerable ladies living in the county.

Henry Wetmore, her husband was the son of Judge William and Anna Wetmore. Judge Wetmore was born in Hartford, Conn., in 1771. His wife, who was Anna Ogden, was born January 10, 1775, in Connecticut. both descended from good old Puritan colonial families, and were married November 28, 1795, at Hartford, Conn. Anna Ogden was the daughter of Jacob Ogden, a prominent merchant of Hartford. Judge Wetmore was engaged in business in early life in company with his father-in-law, as a contractor, and built the court house of Hartford. Ogden later moved to New Haven, and moved to Ohio in 1805, as the agent of Judge Joshua Stowe, of Middletown, Conn., the judge being a large owner of land on the Western Reserve. William Wetmore first settled in in the woods three miles from Silver Lake, now in Summit county, being the original pioneer in that part of the township, and the country around Silver Lake being then peopled by the Indians. Here he built a log cabin and lived a short time, and then moved to Ravenna, Ohio, where he was one of the first settlers, and held the office of recorder. resigned this office and settled on a large tract of land which he bought of Judge Stowe, at Silver Lake, the township being named Stowe after Judge Stowe. Judge Wetmore built a residence on the banks of the lake, which was then called Wetmore pond, and cleared up a large farm. At one time he established a store between the lake and Cuyahoga Falls, at what is now called the old village. His first wife, Anna Ogden, died, and on his return to Connecticut, to buy goods, he married at New Haven, her sister, Jerusha Ogden (born at Hartford, Conn., in March, 1777), but no children were born to this marriage. Judge William Wetmore was one of the organizers of Summit county. He was long circuit judge from the county and filled the office until he resigned. He died October 9, 1827, aged fifty-six. He was a man of great force of character and noble presence. His nearest neighbor was at Hudson, Ohio, were he traded. He was very friendly with the Indians and accustomed to deal with them, treating them kindly at all times, and was always at peace with them.

Henry Wetmore, son of above, and the husband of our subject, was born February 10, 1801, in Hartford, Conn., and was a child of four years when brought to Ohio by his par-He was brought up in the pioneer wilderness and gained his education at Tallmadge, Ohio, where a minister from Connecticut had a celebrated school in those days. He early engaged in mercantile business with his father, and married Eliza Bradford Price, December 8, 1830, at Kent, then Franklin, Portage county, Ohio. This lady was born October 2, 1810, at Caldwell's Manor, near Lake Champlain, Vt., a daughter of John and Hulda (Stillwell) Price. John Price, father, was the son of Dr. Price, a surgeon during the Revolutionary war in the British army, and a descendant from a family of English nobility--the family having a coat of arms. Dr. John Price married, in England, a Miss Mary Brownjohn, of New York city. Their children were John, William, George, Mary and Eliza. Dr. Price settled in New York city after the Revolutionary war, and his sons, William and John, bought property on lake Champlain at Caldwell's Manor. They built warehouses and stores at Plattsburg and Montreal, and did a large business during the war of 1812.

John Price, the father of the subject, married Hulda Stillwell, and their children were Eliza Bradford, Mary (who died aged twentyfive years) and John (who died young). Price died while engaged in the mercantile business on lake Champlain. His wife soon sickened and died, and our subject, Eliza, was reared by her uncle, William, who moved with his family to Kent, Ohio, probably about 1815, when she was very young, as Mrs. Wetmore, born in 1810, can remember but one incident of the journey. Mrs. Wetmore was brought up among the pioneers and received a limited education at Warren, Ohio. uncle was a merchant and miller at Kent and withal a prosperous farmer. He was killed by an accident in 1830. Mr. and Mrs. Wetmore, after marriage, settled in Cuyahoga Falls, where he and his brothers had built the first houses and where he engaged in the mercantile business and owned the first stone house in this place, and, in company with his brother, Ogden, Mr. Wetmore cut the first trees and marked out the town. They built the first bridge and dam and dug the first well, and built the first flouring-mill, paper-mill, saw-mill and grist-mill, and engaged in the manufacturing of tools, and did an extensive They were well known and enerbusiness. getic pioneers, and the real founders of the Mr. Wetmore always refused to hold office, although it was frequently offered him, but in politics was a whig and later a republican. He was a stanch temperance man, and, in company with Dr. Wilcox and E. N. Sill, organized the first temperance society in the state of Ohio. Mr. and Mrs Wetmore were both liberal in religious views and assisted to build, and aided with their means, all the different churches in Cuyahoga Falls, and assisted all other good causes. Mr. Wetmore lived to the great age of over ninety years and died January 10, 1892. He erected many buildings, among them the old part of the present hotel, which he used as a store, and in the back part his brother lived with his family. He accumulated a handsome property, but was always a public-spirited and liberal man, and was much respected for his honorable character. The children that blessed his marriage were Henry W., born November 16, 1834, and George Prentiss, born September 19, 1836. George Prentiss Wetmore married Harriet Tanner Hanford, September 1, 1862, and they had three sons all now deceased---who were named William H., born June 7, 1863; Henry Price, born July 21, 1866, and George Sackett, born February 1, 1868.

Mrs. Eliza B. Wetmore is now a venerable lady of eighty-seven years of age, but retains her faculties wonderfully. She made a trip, for pleasure, to California in 1896, and traveled six months with friends, enjoying the trip remarkably. In 1897 she made a trip to Florida. Mrs. Wetmore's reminiscences of pioneer days are of great interest, running over the entire settlement of the country.

The following genealogical record, found among Mr. Wetmore's private papers, in his own handwriting, is well worth the space it occupies in this volume:

Thomas Wetmore, born in England, 1615, came to America in 1635, when twenty years old, married Sarah Willock in December, 1645. His great-greatgrandfather, Benjamin Whipple was long a captain in the war for American independence, and a brother of Abraham Whipple, who was an admiral in the United States navy. Joseph Whipple, grandfather of the doctor, was born and reared, and farmed until his death, in Rutland county, Vt., and was a strong abolitionist in his politics.

Joseph Whipple, father of the subject, was born in the city of Fair Haven, Rutland county, Vt., August 22, 1813, and always followed the vocation of farming. He married, in Pultney, Rutland county, June 7, 1839, Miss Eliza A. Culver, a native of Vermont, born December 19, 1815. Some considerable time after marriage Mr. and Mrs. Whipple removed to Earlsville, N. Y., and later to Mansfield, Pa., where Mrs. Whipple ended her days February 1, 1885, and Mr. Whipple April 26, 1894.

The doctor has for fourteen years been a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and in this he has filled the office of steward; in his politics he is a prohibitionist, and fraternally he is a member of Knights of Pythias lodge, No. 486, in which he has filled all the chairs. Frank H. Wheeler was united in marriage, in January, 1890, with Miss Mary E. Draper, of Brooklyn, N. Y., and this happy union has been blessed by the birth of one child—Henry Stevens Wheeler. The pleasant home of Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler is at No. 114 South Summit street, where, the center of a coterie of genial friends and neighbors, they pass the too fleeting hours of leisure in tranquil happiness.

The Van Wart Liquor & Opium Cure company was incorporated, under the state laws of Ohio, in 1894, with a capital stock of $200,ooo. It was formed, as its name implies, for the treatment of the victims of the too prodigal use of either alcoholic beverages or of opium in any form, and for the annihilation of the appetite for, and the toxical effects of, and indulgence in their too frequent use. The preparations used for this treatment are entirely harmless, and the desired result is reached within ten days, improvement taking place immediately after the first portion or dose, with no consequent evil effect, after full treatment. The remedy is pleasant to the taste, and can be partaken of by the patient either at his own home or at the office of the company, at No. 2013 South High street, with no detention from business, nor any inconvenience whatever. The officers of the company are: W. C. Jacobs, M. D., president; B. F. Clark, vice-president; G. C. Berry, Jr., treasurer, and F. W. Wheeler, secretary.

Lemuel Wilcox, grandfather of Orlando, was the son of Joseph. He was born in Connecticut, and was a soldier in the war of 1812. He settled in New York state, after his marriage to Rhoda North, about 1800. His children were Orlando, Alanson, Evelyn, Lemuel, Adelia, Mary and Sarah. He reached the venerable age of eighty-four years and died a knight templar Mason.

Dr. Orlando Wilcox, father of our subject, was born February 22, 1802, at Broadalbin, in New York state. He received an excellent medical education in New York city, graduated about 1827, and settled for the practice at Cuvahoga Falls, about 1828. Her father moved to Burlington, Vt., and from there to Ohio, in 1817, and settled as a pioneer in the woods of Boston township, Summit county, but later moved to Hinckley, Medina county, Ohio, where he died, aged about seventy years.

Dr. Wilcox was one of the pioneer physicians, was a member of the early medical societies of Cuyahoga Falls, and well known throughout the surrounding country. He moved to Hinckley in 1831, where he practiced for many years. He died in Cuyahoga Falls, April 3, 1886. RANCIS ALBERT WILCOX, a leading business man of Akron, Ohio, was born in Richfield, Summit county, May 17, 1852, and is a son of Jeremiah C. and Julia A. (Wilder) Wilcox, the former of whom was a native of Connecticut and the latter of Vermont.

Jeremiah C. Wilcox descended from an English family that settled in America in 1636, but for the purposes of this narrative it will be only necessary to state that he was well educated and came to Ohio in 1808, locating in Trumbull county, and there married a Miss Bushnell, who bore him five children, viz: Harriet, the deceased wife of Rev. Daniel Emmerson; Maria, deceased wife of the late Judge Robert Clark, of Sacramento, Cal.; Jeremiah D., a retired merchant of Deadwood, S. D.; Jerusha, wife of Gen. S. D. Sturgis, of Minneapolis, Minn., and Amelia, who died in early childhood. The mother of these children was called away in due course of time, and then Mr. Wilcox married Mrs. Pettee, formerly Miss Wilder, who became the mother of the subject. The father of Mr. Wilcox died in 1872, at the age of eighty-two years, but the mother still survives, and has now attained her eighty-second year.

Francis A. Wilcox was educated in the common schools, then at the Richfield academy, and at the age of seventeen years began teaching school, by which effort he was able to pay his way through Oberlin college, from which he graduated in 1878. His school work extended through nineteen terms—the last three years of which were employed as superintendent of the Glenville schools. taken the opportunity, however, during the years he was employed as a teacher, to study law with T. E. Burton, of Cleveland, reading, under instruction, one year. In 1882 he located in Akron, bought a half-interest in the abstract business of W. W. Warner, and for two and a half years was associated with this gentleman in this specialty, then purchased his partner's interest, and for six months carried on the business on his own account. In 1885 he disposed of one-half of this business to Andrew H. Noah, and until January, 1896, it was carried on under the firm name of Wilcox & Noah, when C. I. Bruner was admitted and the name changed to Wilcox, Noah & Co., which has since done an abstract, insurance, real estate and general agency business, having in its supervision the affairs of the Akron Building & Loan association. Mr. Wilcox is, beside, treasurer of the Akron China company, is president of the Akron Electrical company, of which he was one of the organizers, and has been a director in the Akron Savings bank since its organization. His surplus capital is invested in the stock of various industrial concerns in the city, and he has done as much as any man of his age to advance the progress of Akron in its material, educational and moral prosperity, and is emphatically what is usually denominated a self-made man.

In politics Mr. Wilcox is a republican and has served as a member of the city council in Akron, as well as in Glenville. Fraternally he is a Knight of Pythias and an Odd Fellow, in the latter order having filled the office of past grand and having represented it in the grand encampment, and is, beside, the organizer of the lodge of Maccabees in Akron.

OLOMON C. WILD, a thrifty young farmer of Northampton township, Summit county, was born in Uniontown, Stark county, Ohio, December 7, 1865, a son of Frederick and Susan (Brumbaugh) Wild, the former a native of Switzerland.

......

Frederick Wild was born about 1839 and was the sixth child of Rudolph Wild, who died in his native land in 1844. Mrs. Wild came to America in 1854, landing in New York after a voyage of eighteen days, the quickest that had ever been made by a sailing vessel up to that date, and arrived at Uniontown, Ohio, on the first day of the following year. She brought with her the children she had borne to Rudolph Wild, who were named Jacob, Sophia, Samuel, Mary, Frana, Frederick, Rudolph and John. Of these, Frederick, father of our subject, worked as a day laborer for several years, and on reaching his majority married Miss Susan Brumbaugh, rented a farm in Lake township, Stark county, lived thereon seven years, and then purchased the farm of seventy-three acres on which his son, Solomon C., now resides. On this farm Mr. Wild made most of the improvements and placed it under good cultivation, and here passed the remainder of his life, dving June 19, 1892. His wife, Susan, was born in Stark county, Ohio, her parents having come from Pennsylvania. Her death took place September 10, 1886, leaving to mourn her loss her husband and three children—Clement, Solomon C. and Irene.

Solomon C. Wild has added considerably to the improvement and cultivation of the old home farm and has made it both attractive and profitable, being an industrious as well as a well-trained agriculturist, and having had possession of the premises ever since the death November 9, 1886, Mr. Wild of his father. married Miss Fannie Galloway, daughter of Adam and Almira (Cochran) Galloway, of Stowe township, the union resulting in the birth of one son and one daughter-Harold C., April 2, 1890, and Susan Almira, January 5, 1897. Adam Galloway, father of Mrs. Wild, was a brave soldier throughout the late Civil war, having served as second lieutenant in the Sixth Ohio volunteer artillery, and as a citizen was one of the most respected residents of Stowe township. In politics Mr. Wild has always acted with the democratic party, and while he has been true in his allegiance to the same and active in promoting its welfare, has never yet sought preferment at his party's hands nor been desirous of holding public He and wife active long been active and ardent members of the United Presbyterian church, at Metz, Ohio, and have lived consistently with its tenets and teachings. are likewise members of the Patrons of Husbandry order, and are socially classed among the most respectable in the society circles of Northampton township.

NDREW.J. WILHELM, one of the best known attorneys at law in Akron, Ohio, has his office at No. 111 South Howard street and has been a resident of the city since 1882. His birth took place in Canton, in Stark county, Ohio, November 19, 1863, and he is one of the three children born to Frederick and Matilda (Pontious) Wilhelm, the former of whom was born in Germany and the latter in Pennsylvania, of German extraction, and both are now deceased. Of the three children, Andrew J. is the only survivor. He was reared by his maternal grandparents, Samuel and Sarah Pontious, from his sixth until his fourteenth year, and he then began to take care of himself. was educated in the district and graded schools, and at the age of sixteen years began teaching, and in this vocation was employed two terms in Stark county, six terms in one school in Portage county, and one term at another school in the same county, and two terms in Summit county, making a total of eleven terms. During vacations he was employed as a clerk and also as a carpenter. In 1881 he entered Union college and defrayed his expenses entirely from the funds he had previously earned as teacher, carpenter and clerk. In 1887 he began the study of law with Voris & Voris and was admitted to the bar March 6, 1890, and soon afterward formed a partnership with Samuel Rogers, under the firm-name of Rogers & Wilhelm, but six months later the firm dissolved, and since then Mr. Wilhelm has been in practice alone, and has attained a proud distinction as a general attorney. During the period of self-instruction Mr. Wilhelm was first strongly inclined toward the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal church, of which he was and is now a member, and passed a successful examination as a candidate for ordination, delivered many sermons, and acted as a "supply," but circumstances led to the practice of the law, and in a financial sense the change was a fortunate one, as his abundant success as an attorney has since proven.

In politics Mr. Wilhelm is a member of the republican party, and as an attorney is equally popular with his fellow-practitioners as with the general public. He was married, May 30, 1888, to Miss Rose Anna Price, daughter of George Price, and this marriage has been blessed with three children—Earle P., Lillian A. (deceased) and Edith.

ILLIAM L. WILLIAMS, the oldtime blacksmith and wagonmaker of Palmyra, Portage county, Ohio, was born in Wales August 1, 1833, a son of William L. and Margaret (Jones) Williams, who came to America in 1839.

William L. Williams, the father, was also a wagonmaker and blacksmith, and on coming to America settled in Palmyra, where he followed his trade as long as strength permitted. To his marriage with Miss Jones were born seven children, of whom three are still living, viz: Ann, Elizabeth and William L. The deceased were named Isaac, John, Henry and Martin, the last named of whom died in Washington, D. C., May 10, 1894, at the age of sixty-four years. The father passed away November 18, 1861, when fifty-six years old, and the mother October 17, 1887, at the age of eighty-three years—both devout members of the Methodist church.

William L. Williams, in whose interest this biography is written, was but five years of age when brought to Palmyra, Ohio, here attended the district school and learned his trade under his father. When his father became invalided, he for some time managed the business, and in 1854 started a shop in Palmyra on his own account, and up to the present time has been very successful in this line, as well as in farming, which he carries on in conjunction with his trade.

June 1, 1867, Mr. Williams was united in marriage to Miss Maria M. Williams, daughter of William and Martha (Roberts) Williams, and this marriage has resulted in the birth of two children, viz: Warren B., who married Miss Kate Lewis, daughter of David and Mary Lewis, and William, who is still unmarried. Mrs. Maria M. Williams was born in Palmyra township July 18, 1840, of Welsh parentage. Her father was a painter, and to his marriage with Martha Roberts, daughter of Thomas Roberts, were born seven children, two of whom are still living—T. R., whose biography appears on another page, and Mrs. William L. The deceased were named Ann. Williams. William, David, John and Martin-of whom the last named died in Minneapolis, Minn., December 10, 1891, at the age of sixty years. The parents of Mrs. William L. Williams settled in Palmyra township in 1832, and herethe father died October 26, 1846, at the age of fifty-two years, and his widow died October 15, 1880, at the age of eighty, both in the faith of the Methodist church.

William L. Williams has always been an industrious mechanic and farmer and has consequently won the respect of all who know him. He and family are members of the Methodist church, of which he has been a trustee for many years, and to the support of which he liberally contributes, and the teachings of which constitute his guide and monitor in his walk through the paths of life.

of Portage county, and a greatly respected retired farmer of Palmyra township, was born in Wales, November 23, 1823, and was but eight years of age when brought to America by his parents, William and Martha (Roberts) Williams, who settled in this township, in 1832. Thomas R. is the eldest born in a family of five children, of whom two only are still living—he and a sister, Maria, wife of William L. Williams, of Palmyra. The deceased were David, who was killed by falling from a barn when nine years old; William, who died when quite young, and John, who was drowned in California. The father of this family was a painter by trade, but on coming to Portage county also engaged in farming, and here died in 1850, at fifty years of age; his widow, however, reached the advanced age of eighty-four years.

Thomas R. Williams was educated in the district school and assisted on the home farm until eighteen years of age and then served an apprenticeship of three years at painting and paperhanging with M. Carnahan, for whom he worked as a journeyman three years longer, and then bought him out and continued the business for six years on his own account, taking his stock to Ravenna. He then sold out to a Mr. Turby and returned to Palmyra and engaged in farming on the home place until 1858, when he was elected sheriff of Portage county on the republican ticket, and so well did he fill the duties of the office he was re-elected at the expiration of his term. At the conclusion of his second term he resumed farming, and in 1864 was elected coroner of Portage county for two years, and about 1868 was elected justice of the peace. Mr. Williams has also filled many township offices, such as constable, school director, etc., and in every position has given thorough satisfaction to his constituents and gained the approbation of the general public.

Mr. Williams was united in marriage October 28, 1850, to Miss Mary E. Merwin, daughter of William M. and Phebe (Vaughn) Merwin, and this union has been biessed with seven children, four of whom are still living, viz: Martin R., who lives in Anderson, Ind., and is manager of the strawboard works; A. J., an employee of the Muncie Land company of Ohio; Arthur E., with the strawboard works in Anderson, and Herman M., with the same company, with headquarters at Noble-The deceased children were: Nelson, who died at the age of twelve years; Alice, who died when eleven years old, and one child, who died in infancy. The mother of this family was called away July 27, 1896, at the age of fifty-five years, in the faith of the Methodist church, of which she had been a devout and exemplary member for many years. Her parents were both natives of Ohio and had born to them four children, all now de-Sarah, who died when small; ceased, viz: Cordie; Abigail, wife of David Force, and Mrs. Williams. The father had been a very prominent man in his day, and for fifteen years was a justice of the peace, dying in office in 1851, at the age of fifty years.

Fraternally, Mr. Williams has been a Free-mason since 1861, and is now a member, in good standing, of Charity lodge, No. 530, of Palmyra. He has been all his life a man of enterprise and public spirit, and has done much toward the development of Palmyra township, and no man stands higher in the esteem of its residents than he.

ULIUS T. WILLIAMS, a prosperous business man of Brimfield, Portage county, Ohio, is a native of the town, was born February 27, 1833, and is a son of the late James C. and Elizabeth (Newhour) Williams, pioneers of Portage county.

James C. Williams, father of subject, was born in Meadville, Pa.; Elizabeth Newhour was a native of Amsterdam, Holland, and when a child was brought to America by her parents. James C. was a farmer, early came to Portage county, Ohio, and to this union with Miss Newhour were born fourteen children, of whom four are still living, viz: Silas, James, Julius T., and Martha, wife of Samuel Fauser. The father died June 2, 1845, at the age of forty-eight years, a member of the Methodist church, but the mother survived until October 3, 1870, when she expired at the age of seventy-eight, in the same faith.

Julius T. Williams passed his early boyhood on the home farm, receiving but a limited education, as he was but twelve years of age when he lost his father. At the age of sixteen he began learning the shoemaker's trade, which he continued to follow, in all, sixteen years, studying, in the meanwhile, and greatly adding to the meager education acquired in boyhood. On relinquishing shoemaking he embarked in the grocery business, which he has conducted with marked success ever since, handling, also, wool, clover and timothy seed. In 1887 he erected a large cheese factory in Brimfield, which is still under his sole management and ownership.

In politics Mr. Williams has always been a democrat, and for four years filled the responsible office of township treasurer, and that of township-trustee four years, and for twenty years was postmaster of Brimfield, retiring from the latter office in the spring of 1897.

The marriage of Mr. Williams took place April 3, 1853, to Miss Sarah A. Moulton, daughter of Anson and Daphne Moulton, and to this union have been born five children, of whom three still survive, viz: Cora, a schoolteacher, and still unmarried; Millie, wife of Ralph Waldron, and Harry, who married Miss Nina Moulton. The deceased were Clarence, who died November 13, 1856, at the age of eight months, and an infant, who died un-The father of Mrs. Williams was a native of Massachusetts and was a farmer; her mother was born in Cincinnati, Ohio. They were married in 1820, and had born to their union fourteen children. The father of Mrs. Williams, who had held various public offices, died at the age of seventy-six years, and his wife at the age of seventy-eight. Jeremiah Moulton, paternal grandfather of Mrs. Williams, was of French descent, was a farmer and school-teacher, a justice of the peace and also a county judge, and died at the age of seventy-six years, a member of the Methodist church, in which faith his wife also died at about the same age. They reared a family of ten children, all now deceased.

Mr. Williams is emphatically a self-made man, and is highly esteemed in trade circles for his enterprise and integrity, and in social life he and family are among the most respected of the residents of Brimfield.

RVIN WILSON, one of the old soldiers of the Civil war, and a respected citizen of Hiram, Portage county, Ohio, was born February 19, 1817, at Tyringham, Mass., a son of Capt. Oliver and Patience (Thompson) Wilson. He received a common education and early began to work for himself, as he was but ten years old when his father died. He learned the forkmakers' trade, and afterward learned the trade of a blacksmith. He first married, in Massachusetts, May 28, 1840, in Sandersfield--Louisa B. Wolcott, who was born in Sandersfield, a daughter of Capt. Samuel and Rebecca (Markham) Wolcott. Mr. Wilson continued to live in Tyringham, where there were born two children to him, and then, in 1847, came to Ohio and settled in Shalersville, in Portage county, and worked at his trade of blacksmith until he moved to Freedom, Ohio--a short time before the breaking out the Civil war, and there enlisted, September 10, 1861, in Capt. A. J. Konkle's battery D, First Ohio light artillery, to serve three years, unless sooner discharged, and was honorably discharged at St. Louis, Mo., January 3, 1863, on account of disability. Shortly after his enlistment he was detailed as an artificer, or as one of the blacksmiths of his battery. He always marched with his battery and was on active duty until he was disabled by exposure and hardships in the mountains of Kentucky, where he took a severe cold, which finally caused valvular disease of the heart. He was in hospital at St. Louis, Mo., in 1862, from the middle of May until January 3 following, at which time he was discharged as not being fit for further duty. He returned to Freedom, Ohio, where he lived until he came to Hiram about December, 1863, and on partial recovery worked at his trade of a blacksmith, but for more than twenty years has been entirely disabled, and for some years he owned and lived on a small farm north of Hiram. The children by his first wife were Maria R., Alzadia L. and Mary S. Mrs. Wilson died at Shalersville and he next married, at Mantua Center, Lucella Reynolds, who was born in Mantua, April 5, 1835, a daughter of Robert G. and Elizabeth (Stevenson) Reynolds.

Robert G. Reynolds was born January 26, 1796, and his wife was born May 15, 1809. His children were Louisa, born August 27, 1824; Lucius, born February 13, 1826; Melissa, born February 3, 1828; Robert C., born July 25, 1829; Alvin V., born June 26, 1833; Orrin, born October 23, 1836; W. H. H., born July 15, 1840; Vincent, born December 19, 1841; Albert, born July 9, 1843; Walter, born March 15, 1845; Orville, born February 2, 1848; Emory, born July 25, 1851; Martha, born October 17, 1855, and two others. There were fifteen children, ten sons and five daughers, of whom all lived to maturity, and fourteen of them raised families. Of the Reynolds children five served as soldiers in the Civil war-Alvin, Vincent, W. H. H., Albert and Alvin served in an Illinois regiment; the remainder in Gen. Garfield's regiment, and all escaped without wounds, although in many battles. Mr. Reynolds was a whig in politics and was a strong Union man. He was well educated for his day, and taught school in Auburn a number of years—also at Kingville and Mantua. He was a straightforward and respected man, and died at the age of seventy years.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson have been settlers in Hiram since December, 1863. They were the parents of one daughter, Lora, who died at the age of eleven years. Mr. Wilson has always been known as a respected citizen and upright man, and he and wife are members of the Disciples' church. In politics he was first a democrat, but later became one of the original republicans, and was a justice of the peace two terms, and constable at Freedom.

Mr. Wilson is now a venerable man, but retains his mental faculties unimpaired, and has an excellent memory. His father, Capt. Oliver Wilson, died aged about forty-five years. He was the son of Joseph Wilson, and was a lieutenant in the militia. Capt. Oliver Wilson was a captain in the old Massachusetts state militia. His wife, Patience Thompson, was a daughter of James Thompson, a soldier in the Revolutionary war, and was a boy about sixteen years old when he was on the campaign against Lord Cornwallis. Capt. Oliver was the father of Charles, Abaline, Jarvis, Arvin, William, Harriet and Lovell.

Joseph Wilson, the grandfather of Arvin Wilson, was a farmer, and a strong member of the old republican party, and represented his town in the Massachusetts state legislature for several years.

ARREN A. WILLMOT, junior partner in the firm of Miller & Willmot, proprietors of the Actual Business college of Akron, was born in Massillon, Ohio, June 12, 1868. His parents, Joseph and Lucinda Willmot, were respectively natives of Brussels, France, born November 28, 1844, and Richville, Ohio, August 13, 1840.

The paternal grandparents of Warren A. Willmot, also natives of France, came to America in 1846, and settled in Massillon, Ohio, where the grandfather followed his trades of cooper and wagonmaker until his death, at the age of seventy-six years. Of the paternal great-grandparents of Mr. Willmot not much is remembered, but they were renowned for great physical strength, and the great-grandfather for longevity; he died at a great age, but his wife was killed in the bombardment of Luxembourg by being struck by a cannon-ball. The maternal great-grandparents were also noted for their longevity, the great-grandmother attaining an age of over 100 years. Grandmother Willmot, who bore the maiden name of Remy, was a native of France, was small of stature, but also noted for her great strength as well as longevity, as she lived to be eighty-one years of age. The maternal grandparents of Mr. Willmot were natives of Pennsylvania, came to Ohio early in the 'thirties, and settled at Richville, near Massillon, where Grandfather Wear followed his trade of weaver, but later moved to Canton, where he died at the advanced age of ninety-two years—his wife having died at the age of seventy-seven years.

Warren A. Willmot began his school career at the early age of four and one-half years in Canal Fulton, whither his parents had removed, and continued his studies until nineteen years old. He then learned telegraphy in the office of the Cleveland, Lorain & Wheeling Railroad company at Easton, Ohio, and then for seven years was employed in the telegraph and accounting service of the following railroad companies: Cleveland, Lorain & Wheeling; Cleveland, Canton & Southern; Cleveland & Marietta; Cleveland, Akron & Columbus; Northern Pacific; Erie, and Baltimore & Ohio.

December 27, 1894, Mr. Willmot relinquished the railroad service and took up the study of shorthand at the Akron school of Standard Phonography, which was then under the control of H. A. Miller, his present partner, and studied the art under the personal direction of that gedtleman until May, 1896, at which time he accepted a position with the N. C. Alten Hardware company, at Lorain, Ohio, which position he held three months. tember 1, 1896, he associated himself with H. A. Miller in the ownership and management of the Actual Business college of Akron, under the firm name already mentioned, and of which further information may be gained from a preceding review of the life of Mr. Miller.

ALVIN G. WILSON, traveling salesman for Voegle & Dinning, dealers in candies and cigars at Mansfield, Ohio, has been a resident of Akron since 1869, and has his residence at No. 418 West Center street, this city. He is a native of the Buckeye state, having been born at Wilson's Corners, Medina county, December 24, 1837, a son of John and Elizabeth Wilson, who were among the pioneers of the county named, where the father was first a farmer, but later engaged in the manufacture of matches, being one of the first to embark in that industry in that part of the country.

At the age of fourteen years Calvin G. Wilson was withdrawn from the public schools of his district and sent on the road by his father with a wagon to sell cigars and matches, and thus initiated into his present employment. At the death of his father in 1861, an elder brother of the subject succeeded to the business, for whom our subject continued in the same capacity until August, 1864, when he shipped on board the gunboat Argosy, No. 27, of the Mississippi river squadron, and served seven months as captain of the hold, on the lower river. After being honorably discharged he returned to his native county and town and conducted a small grocery store for one year; then went to Seville, and thence came to Akron, and for nine years was employed as traveling salesman by Collett & Carr, candy manufacturers, and for the following four and a half years traveled for Clark & Co., Elyria, Ohio, also manufacturers of candy. In 1882 he formed his present business connection, and the statement that he has been phenomenally successful and faithful is substantiated by the fact that he has held this position for over fourteen years, traveling all over the territory of northeastern Ohio.

Mr. Wilson was admitted as a member of Wadsworth lodge, No. 119, I. O. O. F., in 1866, and is at present a member of Akron lodge, No. 547; he is also a member of Akron encampment, No. 18, and a charter member of Akron canton, No. 2. He is likewise a member of the Cleveland Commercial Travelers' association, the Travelers' Preferred of Chicago, and of the United Travelers' council, No. 87, of Akron.

Mr. Wilson was united in marriage June 12, 1859, with Miss Emily E. Houghton, daughter of Oliver Houghton, and this union has resulted in the birth of three children—Charles L., Carl A., (deceased) and Frank C.

Frank C. Wilson, city clerk of Akron, and also clerk for the city commissioners, is the youngest child born to Calvin G. and Emily E. (Houghton) Wilson, who are spoken of in full above. He has been a resident of Akron since two years of age, having been brought to this city by his parents in 1869. His birth took place in River Styx, Medina county, Ohio, October 10, 1867. He was educated in the public schools of Akron, and at the age of fifteen years entered the city engineer's department, where he was employed nine years. April 25, 1893, he was appointed commissioners' clerk, which position he has most ably filled until the present time, through annual re-appointments. April 20, 1896, he was elected city clerk by the republican party, of which he is a stanch adherent in principle and active in support, and has also served as secretary of the city board of elections. He is a member of McPherson lodge, K. of P., Akron lodge, I. O. O. F., and is active in all things pertaining to the welfare of the city and county, having for the past two years been treasurer of the Union Charity association. He was married October 4, 1893, to Miss Mabel E. McGhee, and has his happy home at No. 416 West Center street.

OSEPH K. WISE, a representative farmer of Randolph township, Portage county, Ohio, was born in Lorraine, France, March 19, 1819, a son of John and Eva Wise, but was brought to the United States when only five years of age, his parents coming here early in 1832, and being seventythree days on the ocean. Their family consisted of six children, of whom three are still living, viz: Joseph K., John and Anthony; Catherine died at the age of twenty-six years, Eva at the age of thirty, and Theressa, who was married to Wendell Uhlem. The father died at the age of sixty-six and the mother at seventy years—all in the faith of the Catholic church. On coming to America the family lived one year in Canfield, Ohio, and then came to Randolph, Portage county, where they remained six years on a farm, when they sold the estate and moved to Knox county, where they lived four years, and then came back to Portage county. In 1841 the father bought the farm on which our subject now lives, and here passed the remainder of their days.

Joseph K. Wise was reared to agricultural pursuits and was well trained in pioneer farming. He has been twice married-first, in January, 1856, to Miss Elizabeth Earhart, a daughter of Lawrence Earhart, but this lady was called away in 1858, at the age of thirtynine years, leaving no issue. The second marriage of Mr. Wise took place May 2, 1859, to Miss Catherine Kline, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Knapp) Kline, and this union has been blessed with ten children, born in the following order: Mary, who is the wife of George Becks, of Kent; Eva, wife of Philip Seigfried: Joseph, who married Ella Bixler; Clara, married to John Kauffman; Louisa, wife of Michael Hoover, of Akron; Emma, now Mrs. William Colton, of Rootstown; Frank, who married Emma Maxon; George, manager of a machine shop in Kent; Rosie and Laura, still under the parental roof. Of their seven children five survive, viz: Adam; John; Elizabeth, wife of Harvey Ward; Nancy, widow of William Neff, and Betsey, wife of Peter Kline.

In politics Mr. Wise is independent, and votes for the man best fitted for the office. He has served as township supervisor and school director many years. He is a devout Catholic, being a member of Saint Joseph's congregation, and has been very liberal in his contributions to the church and in aid of all its charities and good works. He is greatly respected for his many excellent traits of character, and well deserves the high esteem in which he is held by his neighbors, with whom he has passed so many years of his useful life.

R. JOSEPH WINGERTER, veterinary surgeon, No. 804 South Main street, Akron, Ohio, is a native of this city, was born February 6, 1864, and is a son of Lewis and Mary (Smith) Wingerter, the former of whom was born in Paris, France, and the latter in the province of Alsace-Lorraine, Germany.

Lewis Wingerter, on reaching America with his wife and younger children, at once came to Akron and superintended the Wilcox pottery on Lock avenue until his removal to Coventry, Summit county, where he erected a pottery of his own in 1840, and operated it until 1891, when he retired from business. In politics, as a democrat, he served as postmaster of Coventry seven or eight years, and also filled several township offices. Having lost his wife in the spring of 1893, he has since made his home with his daughter, Mrs. Lewis Yeck. To Lewis Wingerter and wife were born six children, in the following order: Lena, wife of Lewis Yeck, of Coventry; Lewis, who is a potter in Coventry; Philip, who resides at No. 135 Wooster avenue, Akron, and is comb inspector at the Goodrich rubber works; Leo, a potter, residing at No. 205 Wooster avenue, Akron; Augustus, a horse-trader, residing in Coventry, and Joseph, the subject of this biography.

Joseph Wingerter was reared in Coventry, or Wingerger's Crossing, was educated in the common schools, and later entered the Ontario Veterinary college at Toronto, from which he graduated in 1894. On first quitting school, however, he became a shipping clerk in the

O. B. Hardin & Co. pottery, and afterward was for eight years connected with a brother in the livery and saloon business, but his livery barns having been destroyed by fire, he entered the veterinary college mentioned above, and since his graduation therefrom has been in active practice in Akron. In connection with his veterinary practice he conducts an infirmary for the treatment of unsound, sick or injured animals, and has, beside, a well equipped livery stable, and in all these he is doing a thriving business.

Mr. Wingerter is a member of the Veterinary Medical Association of Toronto, Canada, and is considered, by his fellow-members, and the public in general, to be an able veterinary surgeon. He is careful, tender and humane in his treatment of the animals confided to his care, inflicting no unnecessary pain in his surgical operations. He is, like all his family, a devout member of the Catholic church, and as a citizen is respected by all who know him. He was united in marriage February 6, 1897, to Miss Clara A. Serfass, a native of Summit county, Ohio, and daughter of Peter and Ansennetta Serfass.

HARLES L. WILSON, the accommodating and popular proprietor of the livery, feed and sales stables at No. 717 South Main street, Akron, was born June 24, 1860, at Wilson's corners, Medina county, Ohio, and is a son of Calvin G. Wilson, whose biography will be found above. He came to Akron in 1869, with the remainder of the family, as has already been mentioned in the biography of his father, and here he was educated in the excellent public schools of the city. At the age of eighteen years he entered the employ of the city in its engineering department, in which he remained seven years, reaching the position of assistant city engineer. His next position was with the Akron Knife works, in the shipping department of which he performed his responsible duties in a most satisfactory manner for five years. He then succeeded Mr. Buhrlee in the livery business on South Main street, and, in company with his brother, under the firm name of Wilson Bros., carried on a very satisfactory trade until the fall of 1895, when he assumed control in full of the establishment. ON. SIMON PERKINS WOLCOTT, of Kent, Portage county, was born in Summit county, Ohio, January 30, 1837, a son of Alfred and Mary Ann (Scovill) Wolcott, natives, respectively, of Ohio and New Haven, Conn., and paternally descends from Henry Wolcott, who came from England in 1633 and settled in New England.

Alfred Wolcott, grandfather of subject, was the first of the family to settle permanently in Ohio, was a school-teacher and surveyor, and founded his home in Summit county. To the parents of our subject were born eleven children, five dying in infancy and Andrew Augustus in the army; four are still living: Simon P., the subject of this memoir; John M., a resident of Grand Rapids, Mich.; Anna Angusta, wife of Rev. Lemuel C. Bissell, a Presbyterian minister of Monroe, Mich.; Alfred, an attorney of Grand Rapids, Mich.; Fremont C., was a manufacturer in Canton, Ohio, and died in that city in the fall of 1895.

Simon P. Wolcott, the subject proper of this memoir, received his elementary education in the country schools of Summit county, and at the age of fourteen years entered Hiram institute (now Hiram college), which he attended three winters. He then taught school a few terms, re-entered Hiram institute and was prepared for college, partly under the preceptorage of his former fellow-student, James A. Garfield—a life-long friend. He next entered the Western Reserve college at Hudson, Summit county, from which he was graduated in 1862, and then read law with Hon. H. B. Forrester, of Hudson, and later read with Judge N. D. Tibbals, of Akron, and in the latter city was admitted to the bar in 1864. He at once settled in Kent for the practice of his profession, and is now the oldest lawyer in the city, and for ten years was, and now is, the attorney for the Erie Railway company.

A stanch republican in politics, Mr. Wolcott has risen to prominence in his party and His first public office was that of member of the school board of Kent, which he filled ten years; was also city solicitor of Kent two terms; was elected the second mayor of the city in 1866, and was re-elected, serving two terms, and has also served as a member of the committee of school examiners. In the fall of 1881 he was elected to the state senate. to represent the senatorial district comprising the counties of Portage, Summit, Lake, Geauga and Ashtabula, and so satisfactorily did he perform the ardnous duties of this office, he was re-elected to succeed himself in the fall of 1883. During these two terms he served on the railroad committee, the judiciary committee, was chairman of the committee on soldiers and sailors' orphans' homes, and of the committee on the school for feeble-minded vouths, at Columbus. As a member of the railroad committee one grand speech made his name famous throughout the state, and this was an argument before the committee of the whole senate in opposition to the Brigham bill (senate bill, No. 10) for the regulation of transportation rates by railways, and this was so fair and convincing that the railway companies printed and circulated 5,000 copies of the argument in pamphlet form. years Mr. Wolcott has also served as deputy state supervisor of elections of Ohio for Portage county, having been appointed to the office by the secretary of state. April 28, 1884, he was appointed by Gov. McKinley one of the board of managers of the reformatory at Mansfield, and under this administration there was erected one of the finest buildings of its kind in the country. Mr. Wolcott has also been appointed attorney for Ohio to represent the county of Portage and five or six adjoining counties, under Dr. B. F. McNeil, food commissioner of Ohio, in 1894, and still holds this office.

Mr. Wolcott was happily married, July 17, 1866, to Miss Mary Helen Brewster, daughter of Anson A. and Sally P. (White) Brewster, the former a merchant of Hudson, Ohio, and a direct descendant of Eider Brewster, who came to America with the Puritans. The union of Mr. and Mrs. Wolcott has been blessed with three children, named as follows: Nellie B., who is a teacher in Kent; Jennie B., married to E. S. Parsons, of Kent, and Duncan B., who graduated from the Western Reserve college in June, 1896, was his class orator, and is now a law student.

Mr. Wolcott has not only won the reputation of being one of the foremost lawyers and statesmen of the state of Ohio, but is recognized in his community as being one of the most energetic citizens of Kent, the prosperity of which city has always been one of his chief aims and the promotion of the material interests of which has been his constant study.
